Near that bituminous lake where Sodom flam'd:
This more delusive, not the touch, but taste
Deceiv'd; they fondly thinking to allay
Their appetite with gust, instead of fruit
Chew'd bitter ashes, which th' offended taste
With spattering noise rejected.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. x, l. 560.

Like Dead-Sea fruits that tempt the eye
But turn to ashes on the lips.

MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.
The reference is to the so-called apples of Sodom, a yellow fruit which grows on the shores of the Dead Sea, beautiful to the eye, but bitter to the taste and filled with minute black seeds not unlike ashes.

Oh! ever thus, from childhood's hour,
I've seen my fondest hopes decay;

I never lov'd a tree or flow'r,
 But 'twas the first to fade away.
 I never nurs'd a dear gazelle,
 To glad me with its soft black eye,
 But when it came to know me well,
 And love me, it was sure to die!
 THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Work-shippers, l. 279.

I never nursed a dear Gazelle to glad me with its soft black eye, but when it came to know me well, and love me, it was sure to marry a market-gardener.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 56.

I never had a piece of toast,
 Particularly long and wide,
 But fell upon the sanded floor,
 And always on the buttered side.
 JAMES PAYN [?], After Tom Moore. (HAMILTON, Parodies. Vol. iii, p. 268.)

1 And still they dream that they shall still succeed,
 And still are disappointed.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 128.

2 Nothing is so good as it seems beforehand.
 GEORGE ELIOT, Silas Marner. Ch. 18.

3 As for disappointing them, I should not so much mind; but I can't abide to disappoint myself.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i.

DISCONTENT

I—Discontent: Definitions

4 And sigh that one thing only has been lent
 To youth and age in common—discontent.
 MATTHEW ARNOLD, Youth's Agitations.

On every stage from youth to age
 Still discontent attends.
 SOUTHEY, Remembrance, l. 3.

5 Who hath so entire happiness that he is not in some part offended with the condition of his estate? (Quis est enim tam compositae felicitatis ut non aliqua ex parte cum status sui qualitate rixetur?)

BOËTHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. ii,
 sec. 4, l. 41.

6 Does he paint? he fain would write a poem,—
 Does he write? he fain would paint a picture.
 ROBERT BROWNING, One Word More.

7 Discontent is the want of self-reliance: it is infirmity of will.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

The more discontent the better we like it.

EMERSON, Papers from the Dial: A Letter.

8 There are two kinds of discontent in this world: the discontent that works, and the discontent that wrings its hands. The first gets what it wants, and the second loses what it had. There is no cure for the first but success, and there is no cure at all for the second.

GORDON GRAHAM. (ELBERT HUBBARD, Scrap-book, p. 78.)

9 One who likes another's lot, of course dislikes his own. (Cui placet alterius, sua nimi-rum est odio sors.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 11.

Admiring others' lots, our own we hate.

HORACE, Epistles, i, 14. (Conington, tr.)

The fat ox desires the trappings of the horse;
 the horse desires to plough. (Optat ephippia bos piger, optat arare caballus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 43.

We love in others what we lack ourselves,
 And would be everything but what we are.

R. H. STODDARD, Arcadian Idyl, l. 30.

10 Our discontent is from comparison:
 Were better states unseen, each man would like his own.

JOHN NORRIS, The Consolation. St. 2.

11 Now is the winter of our discontent
 Made glorious summer by this sun of York.
 SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

You've been to "Richard." Ah, you've seen
 A noble play: I'm glad you went;
 But what on earth does Shakespeare mean
 By "winter of our discontent"?

THOMAS CONSTABLE, Old October.

12 Content you in my discontent.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
 i, sc. 1, l. 80.

In pale contented sort of discontent.

KEATS, Lamia. Pt. ii, l. 135.

13 Dissemble all your griefs and discontents.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1,
 l. 443.

Let thy discontents be thy secrets.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

II—Discontent: Its Virtues

14 Man is not so far lost but that he suffers ever the great Discontent which is the elegy of his loss and the prediction of his recovery.

EMERSON, Papers from the Dial: Thoughts on Modern Literature.

15 To be discontented with the divine discontent, and to be ashamed with the noble shame, is the very germ of the first upgrowth of all virtue.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Health and Education.

16 Can you make no use of your discontent?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
 i, sc. 3, l. 40.

1
The thirst to know and understand,
A large and liberal discontent:
These are the goods in life's rich hand,
The things that are more excellent.
WILLIAM WATSON, The Things That Are More Excellent. St. 8.

The splendid discontent of God
With Chaos, made the world; . . .
And from the discontent of man
The world's best progress springs.
ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Discontent.

Discontent is the first step in the progress of a man or a nation.
OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act ii.

III—Discontent: Its Faults

A perverse and fretful disposition makes any state of life unhappy. (Importunitas autem et inhumanitas omni ætati molesta est.)
CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 3, sec. 7.

A man's discontent is his worst evil.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
Men are suspicious; prone to discontent.
ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 922.

A discontented man knows not where to sit easy.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The discontented Man finds no easy Chair.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1753.

Fickle as the wind, at Rome loving Tibur, at Tibur Rome. (Romæ Tibur amem ventosus, Tibure Romam.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 8, l. 12.

At Rome you long for the country; in the country you extol to the stars the distant town.
(Romæ rus optas; absentem rusticus urbem Tollis ad astra levis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 28.

At Rome you hanker for your country home;
Once in the country, there's no place like Rome.
HORACE, Satires, ii, 7, 28. (Conington, tr.)

The fastidious are unfortunate: nothing can satisfy them. (Les délicats sont malheureux, Rien ne saurait les satisfaire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1.

Save me alike from foolish pride
Or impious discontent.
POPE, Universal Prayer.

10
For what's more miserable than discontent?
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 201.

The murmuring lips of discontent.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 53.

Happy thou art not;

For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,

And what thou hast, forget'st.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii,
sc. 1, l. 21.

Brawling discontent.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 9.

11
Thou art the Mars of malcontents.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act i, sc. 3, l. 113.

I see your brows are full of discontent,
Your hearts of sorrow and your eyes of tears.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 331.

Happiness courts thee in her best array;
But, like a misbehav'd and sullen wench,
Thou pou'st upon thy fortune and thy love:
Take heed, take heed, for such die miserable.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 142.

I know a discontented gentleman,
Whose humble means match not his haughty mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 36.

13
To waste long nights in pensive discontent.

Poor in abundance, famish'd at a feast.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 44.

DISCORD

For Discord as related to Music, see Music and Discord

And Doubt and Discord step 'twixt thine and thee.
BYRON, The Prophecy of Dante. Canto ii, l. 140.

16
The daughter of debate,
That discord aye doth sow.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, A Sonnet. (PERCY, Reliques.
Ser. ii, bk. ii, 15.) The reference is to Mary Queen of Scots.

Concord can never join Minds so divided.
JOHN FLETCHER, Rollo. Act i, sc. 1.

Their discords sting through Burns and Moore

Like hedgehogs dressed in lace.
O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.

19
A discordant concord. (Concordia discors.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 12, l. 19. A reference to the main principle of Empedocles' philosophy that the life of the world is due to the perpetual conflict of the two principles of Love and Strife.

Inharmonious harmony. (Discors concordia.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 433.

Agreement consists in disagreement. (Mansit concordia discors.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 98.

All concord's born of contraries.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 2.

All discord, harmony not understood.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 291.

<sup>1</sup> When dreadful Discord bursts her brazen bars,
And shatters locks to thunder forth her wars.
(Postquam Discordia tetra Belli ferratos postis portasque reffregit.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iv, l. 60.

<sup>2</sup> Is it, O man, with such discordant noises,
With such accursed instruments as these,
Thou drownest Nature's sweet and kindly voices,
And jarrest the celestial harmonies?
LONGFELLOW, The Arsenal at Springfield.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha. Pt. i, l. 113.

<sup>4</sup> If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand.
New Testament: Mark, iii, 25.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 967.

And of their vain contest appeared no end.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 1189.

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 707. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. vii, sec. 27.

<sup>8</sup> How, in one house,
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold amity?
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 243.

<sup>9</sup> The Demon of Discord, with her sooty wings, had breathed her influence upon our counsels.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 33.
Discord seemed to clap her sooty wings in expectation of battle.

SMOLLETT, Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 3.
TACITUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 37.

Her viper-locks with bloody fillets bound.
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 300.

<sup>12</sup> Discord, a sleepless hag who never dies,
With Snipe-like nose, and Ferret-glowing eyes,
Lean sallow cheeks, long chin with beard supplied,

Poor crackling joints, and wither'd parchment hide,
As if old Drums, worn out with martial din,
Had clubb'd their yellow heads to form her skin.

JOHN WOLCOT, The Louisiad. Canto iii, l. 121.

DISCRETION

See also Prudence

I—Discretion and Valor

<sup>13</sup> You put too much wind to your sail; discretion and hardy valour are the twins of honour.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act i, l. 14.
He had a natural aversion to danger, and thought it below a man of wit or common sense to be guilty of that brutal thing called Courage, or Fighting. His philosophy told him, "It was safe sleeping in a whole skin."
APHRA BEHN, The Lucky Mistake.

<sup>16</sup> Valour would fight, but discretion would run away.

<sup>17</sup> He led his regiment from behind
(He found it less exciting).
W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act i.

<sup>18</sup> Discreet women have neither eyes nor ears.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

She that could think, and ne'er disclose her mind,
See suitors following, and not look behind.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 157.

<sup>19</sup> While the discreet advise, the fool doth his business.

<sup>20</sup> There are things in the breast of mankind which are best

In darkness and decency hid,
For you never can tell, when you've opened a hell,

How soon you can put back the lid.
RUDYARD KIPLING.

The reticent volcano keeps
His never slumbering plan;
Confided are his projects pink
To no precarious man.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 107.

<sup>21</sup> Know not what you know, and see not what you see. (Etiam illud quod scies nesciveris Ne videris quod videris.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 572. (Act ii, sc. 6.)
You, in truth, if you are wise, will not know what you do know. (Tu pol, si sapis, quod scis nescis.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 721. (Act iv, sc. 4.)

Discretion shall preserve thee.

Old Testament: Proverbs, ii, 11. (Consilium custodiet te.—Vulgate.)

An ounce of discretion is worth a pound of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Valour can do little without discretion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Let fools the name of loyalty divide:

Wise men and gods are on the strongest side.

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Death of Marc Antony. Act iv, sc. 2.

Therefore use thy discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 1, l. 152.

Let your own discretion be your tutor.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 19.

The better part of valour is discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 122.

It shew'd discretion, the best part of valour.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, A King and No King. Act iv, sc. 3.

Even in a hero's heart

Discretion is the better part.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 233.

Covering discretion with a coat of folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 38.

Thou pigeon-egg of discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 75.

I have seen the day of wrong through the little hole of discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 734.

Lysander: This lion is a very fox for his valour.

Theseus: True; and a goose for his discretion.

Demetrius: Not so, my lord; for his valour cannot carry his discretion; and the fox carries the goose.

Theseus: His discretion, I am sure, cannot carry his valour, for the goose carries not the fox. It is well: leave it to his discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act v, sc. 1, l. 233.

Dogberry: You are to bid any man stand, in the prince's name.

Watchman: How if a' will not stand?

Dogberry: Why, then, take no note of him, but let him go; and presently call the rest of the watch together and thank God you are rid of a knave.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 26.

Let's teach ourselves that honourable stop Not to outsport discretion.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 2.

Ever since I came to years of discretion.

RICHARD STEELE, Tender Husband. Act ii, sc. 1.

Shoot not beyond the mark, as the proverb says. (Ita fugias ne præter casam.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 768. (Act v, sc. 2.)

O discretion, thou art a jewel!

UNKNOWN, The Skylark. (1772)

II—Discretion: They That Fight and Run Away

And by a prudent flight and cunning save A life, which valour could not, from the grave.

A better buckler I can soon regain; But who can get another life again?

ARCHILOCHUS, Fragments. No. 6.

Cowardice?

I only know we don't live twice, Therefore—shun death, is my advice.

ROBERT BROWNING, Arcades Ambo.

In all the trade of war no feat Is nobler than a brave retreat:

For those that run away and fly Take place at least o' the enemy.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 607.

Then as wise and discreet he withdrew him saying that more is worth a good retreat than a foolish abiding.

WILLIAM CAXTON, Jason, 23. (c. 1477)

To retire is not to flee, and there is no wisdom in waiting when danger outweighs hope, and it is the part of wise men to preserve themselves today for tomorrow, and not risk all in one day.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 23.

There are worser ills to face Than foemen in the fray;

And many a man has fought because— He feared to run away.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere. Act iv, sc. 3.

There's some say that we wan, some say that they wan,

Some say that nane wan at a', man, But one thing I'm sure that at Sheriff-Muir, A battle there was which I saw, man.

And we ran and they ran, and they ran and we ran,

And we ran, and they ran awa' man.

MURDOCH McLENNAN, Sheriff-Muir. The reference is to the indecisive battle known as "The Bob of Dunblane" fought near Stirling, 12 Nov., 1715.

<sup>1</sup> The man who runs away may fight again.

MENANDER, Monostikoi. No. 45.

Demosthenes sought safety in flight from the battlefield [of Chæronea, 338 B.C.], and when he was bitterly taunted with his flight he jestingly replied in the well-known verse, "The man who runs away will fight again."

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. xvii, ch. 21, sec. 31.

He who flees will fight again. (Qui fugiebat, rursus præliabitur.)

TERTULLIAN, De Fuga in Persecutione. Sec. 10. The proverb is quoted by many authors.

That same man that runneth away
May fight again another day.

ERASMUS, Adagia. No. 372. Quoted as a saying of Demosthenes.

May live to fight another day.

The above couplet appeared in Musarum Deliciæ, a collection made by Sir John Mennes and Dr. James Smith, and published in 1656. No author was given. The lines were ascribed to Sir John Suckling, but no confirmation of this ascription was ever given.

For those that fly may fight again,
Which he can never do that's slain.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 243. (1668)

For those that save themselves and fly
Go halves at least i' the victory.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 269.

<sup>3</sup> He that fights and runs away
May turn and fight another day;
But he that is in battle slain
Will never rise to fight again.

JAMES RAY, A Complete History of the Rebellion, p. 48. (1749)

For he who fights and runs away
May live to fight another day;
But he who is in battle slain
Can never rise to fight again.

This quatrain appeared without ascription of authorship in a book published by Newbery, in 1761, entitled, The Art of Poetry on a New Plan. ii, 147. It had been revised by Goldsmith, and it is thought he wrote the lines.

<sup>4</sup> He can return who flies:
Not so with him who dies.
(Qui fuit peut revenir aussi:
Qui meurt, il n'en est pas ainsi.)

PAUL SCARRON, Epigram.

<sup>5</sup> It is not seemly for any man who has weapons in his hands to resort to the help of his unarmed feet. (Nec quemquem decere, qui manus armaverit, ab inermis pedibus auxilium petere.)

SULLA. (SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. cvii, sec. 1.)

<sup>7</sup> Poor John was a gallant captain,
In battles much delighting;

He fled full soon

On the first of June—

But he bade the rest keep fighting.

UNKNOWN, Elegy on the Death of Jean Bon Saint-André. (Anti-Jacobin, 14 May, 1790.)

Saint-André was beheaded at Algiers by the Dey's orders for forming a revolutionary club there, and this bit of doggerel is said to be the joint production of Canning, Ellis and Frere.

<sup>8</sup> It is an old saw, he fighteth well that flyeth fast.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum: The Wolf and Hare.

<sup>9</sup> Oft he that doth abide
Is cause of his own pain;

But he that fieth in good tide
Perhaps may fight again.

(Celui qui fuit de bonne heure Peut combattre derechef.)

UNKNOWN, Satyre Menippée. (1595)

II—Disease: Cause and Effect

14 [Diseases] crucify the soul of man, attenuate our bodies, dry them, wither them, shrivel them up like old apples, make them so many anatomies.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 10.

15 Self-contemplation is infallibly the symptom of disease.

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

If the man thinks about his physical or moral state he nearly always discovers that he is ill.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

16 Diseases of the soul are more dangerous and more numerous than those of the body.
(Morbi perniciosiores pluresque sunt animi quam corporis.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii,
ch. 3, sec. 5.

Philosophers apply the term disease to all disorders of the soul, and they say that no foolish person is free from such diseases; sufferers from disease are not sound, and the souls of all unwise persons are diseased.

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii,
ch. 4, sec. 9.

A bodily disease which we look upon as whole and entire within itself, may, after all, be but a symptom of some ailment in the spiritual part.

HAWTHORNE, The Scarlet Letter. Ch. 10.

17 Disease is caused by mind alone. . . . The basis of all disease is error or belief; destroy the belief and the sick will recover. . . .
Sickness is a belief, which must be annihilated by the divine Mind. . . . Disease is an experience of so-called mortal mind. It is fear made manifest on the body.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health. Pages
334, 418, 493.

Sickness, sin, and death, being inharmonious, do not originate in God nor belong to His government. His law, rightly understood, destroys them.

472. See also under MEDICINE.

18 Languor seizes the body from bad ventilation. (Aëre non certo corpora languor habet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 318.

19 As man, perhaps, the moment of his breath,
Receives the lurking principle of death,
The young disease, that must subdue at length,

Grows with his growth, and strengthens with his strength.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 133.

1 Diseases are the interests of pleasures.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 7. (1670)

Diseases are the price of ill pleasures.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1297.

But just disease to luxury succeeds,
And ev'ry death its own avenger breeds.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 165.

2 A disease is farther on the road to being cured when it breaks forth from concealment and manifests its power.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lvi, sec. 10.

3 Disease is not of the body but of the place.
(Non corpore esse, sed loci morbum.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 1.

4 Will he steal out of his wholesome bed,

TENNYSON, The Village Wife.

6 My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1, l. 189.

7 See the wretch, that long has tost
On the thorny bed of pain,
At length repair his vigour lost,
And breathe and walk again:
The meanest flow'ret of the vale,
The simplest note that swells the gale,
The common sun, the air, the skies,
To him are opening Paradise.

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 215.

13 He has a rupture, he has sprung a leak.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

14 A lazar-house it seem'd, wherein were laid
Numbers of all diseases'd, all maladies
Of ghastly spasm or racking torture, qualms
Of heart-sick agony, all feverous kinds,
Convulsions, epilepsies, fierce catarrhs,
Intestine stone and ulcer, colic pangs,
Demoniac phrenzy, moping melancholy,
And moon-struck madness, pining atrophy,
Marasmus, and wide-wasting pestilence,

15 Fever, the eternal reproach to the physicians.
MILTON, Reason of Church Government: Preface.

If you feed a cold, as is often done, you frequently have to starve a fever.

BERNARR MACFADDEN, When a Cold is Needed. (Physical Culture, Feb., 1934.) Mr. Macfadden's interpretation of the old adage, "Feed a cold and starve a fever," is undoubtedly the correct one.

He had a fever when he was in Spain,
And when the fit was on him, I did mark
How he did shake; 'tis true, this god did shake:
His coward lips did from their colour fly,
And that same eye whose bend doth awe the world
Did lose his lustre.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 119.

I've known my lady (for she loves a tune)
For fevers take an opera in June:
And, though perhaps you'll think the practice
bold,
A midnight park is sov'reign for a cold.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 185.

A person's age is not dependent upon the number

This apoplexy is, as I take it, a kind of lethargy, an't please your lordship; a kind of sleeping in the blood, a whoreson tingling.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 125.

The rotten diseases of the south, the guts-griping, ruptures, catarrhs, loads o' gravel i' the back, lethargies, cold palsies, raw eyes, dirt-rotten livers, wheezing lungs, bladders full of im-posthume, sciaticas, limekilns i' the palm, incurable bone-ache.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 18.

A whoreson tisick, a whoreson rascally tisick so

DISILLUSION

There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,

When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;

'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast,

But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

BYRON, Stanzas for Music.

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 14.

They were called Sceptics or inquirers because they were always looking for a solution and never finding one.

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 70.

What loneliness is more lonely than distrust?

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Bk. v, ch. 44.

Be sober and remember to distrust: these are the very mainsprings of understanding.

EPICHRMUS. (AHREUS, De Dialecto Dorico, 119.)

Hear all men speak; but credit few or none.

ROBERT HERRICK, Distrust.

Once to distrust is never to deserve.

RICHARD SAVAGE, Volunteer Laureate. No. 4.

I hold it cowardice
To rest mistrustful where a noble heart
Hath pawn'd an open hand in sign of love.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 7.
Distrust that man who tells you to distrust.

Agelaus killed Acestorides by operating on him, saying, "If he had lived, the poor fellow would have been lame."

CALLICTER. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 121.)

Few physicians live well.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, 322. (1605)

Will kicked out the doctor; but when ill indeed,

E'en dismissing the doctor don't always succeed.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Lodgings for Single Gentlemen.

The first physicians by debauch were made: Excess began, and sloth sustains the trade.
DRYDEN, To John Dryden. Epis. xiv, l. 73.

A good bedside manner.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, under a picture in Punch, 15 March, 1884. The complete text was: "What sort of a doctor is he?" "Well, I don't know much about his ability, but he has a very good bedside manner."

Every physician, almost, hath his favourite disease.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

1 From the physician and lawyer keep not the truth hidden.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 27. (1578)

From your confessor, lawyer and physician, Hide not your case on no condition.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Metamorphosis of Ajax, 98. (1596)

2 God heals, and the Doctor takes the Fee.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

God heals, and the physician hath the thanks.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Kill thy physician, and the fee bestow Upon thy foul disease.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 164.

3 Physicians, like beer, are best when they are old.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, 50. (1642)

Beware of the young doctor and the old barber.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

Talk of your science! after all is said There's nothing like a bare and shiny head; Age lends the graces that are sure to please; Folks want their doctors mouldy, like their cheese.

O. W. HOLMES, Rip Van Winkle, M. D. Pt. ii.

4 After death the doctor. (Après la mort le médecin.)

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 While the doctors consult, the patient dies.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs.

Who shall decide when doctors disagree, And soundest casuists doubt, like you and me?

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 1. (1733)

Well, doctors differ.

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer. Act i, sc. 1. (1677)

6 Doctor So-much-the-Worse and Doctor-all-the-Better. (Le médecin Tant-pis et le médecin Tant-mieux.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 12.

Good is a good doctor, but Bad is sometimes a better.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

7 Diophantus saw Hermogenes, the doctor, in his sleep, and never woke up again, although he was wearing an amulet.

LUCILIUS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, ep. 257.)

8 Physician, heal thyself. (Ἰατρὲ, θεράπευσον σεαυτόν.)

New Testament: Luke, iv, 23. (Vulgate: Medice, cura teipsum); JOHN COLET, Sermon. (DUNTON, Phenix, ii, 8. 1511); THOMAS BECON, Early Works, 385. (1543); JOHN LYLY, Euphues, 118. (1579) In frequent use thereafter.

Good leech is he that can himself recure.

JOHN LYDGATE, Daunce of Machabree, l. 424. (c. 1430)

He is a good physician who cures himself.

TORRIANO, Piazza Univ., 148. (1666)

Not one amongst the doctors, as you'll see,

For his own friends desires to prescribe.

PHILEMON, Fabulæ Incertæ. Frag. 46.

Do not imitate those unskilful physicians who profess to possess the healing art in the diseases of others, but are unable to cure themselves.

SULPICIUS. (CICERO, Ad Familiares, iv, 5.)

9 Remember how many physicians are dead after puckering up their brows so often over their patients.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 48.

10 They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.

New Testament: Matthew, ix, 12.

The physician is superfluous amongst the healthy. (Supervacuum . . . inter sanos medicus.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 41.

11 The book of Nature is that which the physician must read; and to do so he must walk over the leaves.

PARACELSUS, (Encyclopædia Britannica. Vol. xviii, p. 234. Ninth ed.)

12 A physician is nothing but a consoler of the mind. (Medicus nihil aliud est quam animi consolatio.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 42.

13 A physician can sometimes parry the scythe of death, but has no power over the sand in the hourglass.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, Letter to Fanny Burney, 12 Nov., 1781.

14 Banish'd the doctor, and expell'd the friend.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 330.

15 A sick man does ill for himself who makes the doctor his heir. (Male secum agit æger, medicum qui hæredem facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 366; FRANCIS BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 31.

He's a fool that makes his doctor his heir.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

That patient is not like to recover who makes the doctor his heir.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4368.

16 A hundred devils leap into my body, if there be not more old drunkards than old doctors.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 41; FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

17 Happy the physician who is called in at the end of the illness.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 41. Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>1</sup> The physician cannot prescribe by letter, he must feel the pulse. (Non potest medicus per epistulas eligere, vena tangenda est.)

SENECA, Epistula ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 1.

The physician prescribes hesitatingly out of his few resources . . . If the patient mends, he is glad and surprised.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

If you must listen to his doubtful chest,
Catch the essentials and ignore the rest. . . .
So of your questions: don't, in mercy, try
To pump your patient absolutely dry;
He's not a mollusk squirming in a dish,
You're not Agassiz, and he's not a fish.

O. W. HOLMES, The Morning Visit.

<sup>2</sup> If thou couldst, doctor, cast
The water of my land, find her disease,
And purge it to a sound and pristine health,
I would applaud thee to the very echo,
That should applaud again.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 50.

<sup>3</sup> There are worse occupations in this world than feeling a woman's pulse.

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Pulse.

And medical friction is, past contradiction,
Much better performed by a She than a He.

R. H. BARHAM, The Black Mousquetaire.

EMPEROR TIBERIUS. (PLUTARCH, De Sanitate, ii; Suetonius, Lives of the Cæsars: Tiberius, 68.)

He was wont to mock at the arts of physicians, and to ridicule those who, after the age of thirty, needed counsel as to what was good or bad for their bodies.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. vi, sec. 46. Of Tiberius.

Every man is a fool or a physician at forty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1428.

<sup>5</sup> A physician is a person who pours drugs of which he knows little into a body of which he knows less.

VOLTAIRE. (Helps, Friends in Council. Ser. ii, ch. 10.)

He's the best physician that knows the worthlessness of the most medicines.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

<sup>6</sup> Medicine men have always flourished. A good medicine man has the best of everything and, best of all, he doesn't have to work.

JOHN B. WATSON, Behaviorism, p. 4.

In a good surgeon, a hawk's eye: a lion's heart: and a lady's hand.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, 37. (1589)

The knife was still, the surgeon bore
The shattered arm away;

Upon his bed in painless sleep
The noble hero lay.

GEORGE COOPER, Good-Bye, Old Arm.

"What! don't you know what a Sawbones is, Sir?" inquired Mr. Weller. "I thought everybody know'd as a Sawbones was a Surgeon."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 30.

II—Doctors: Their Merits

<sup>8</sup> Learn'd he was in medic'nal lore,
For by his side a pouch he wore,
Replete with strange hermetic powder
That wounds nine miles point-blank would solder.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 223.

A skilful leech is better far
Than half a hundred men of war.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 245.

<sup>9</sup> This is the way physicians mend or end us,
Secundum artem: but although we sneer
In health,—when ill, we call them to attend us,

Without the least propensity to jeer.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 42.

There will be nothing else spoken about . . . till this is either ended or mended.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 3.

<sup>10</sup> Even as a Surgeon, minding off to cut
Some cureless limb, before in use he put His violent Engines on the vicious member,
Bringeth his Patient in a senseless slumber,
And grief-less then (guided by use and art),
To save the whole, saws off th' infected part.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6, l. 1018. (Sylvester, tr.)

<sup>11</sup> Honour a physician with the honour due unto him for the uses which ye may have of him: for the Lord hath created him. For of the most High cometh healing, and he shall receive honour of the king. The skill of the physician shall lift up his head: and in the sight of great men he shall be in admiration.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 1-3.

<sup>12</sup> In the hands of the discoverer, medicine becomes a heroic art. . . . Wherever life is dear he is a demigod.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Resources.

<sup>13</sup> Physicians are the cobblers, rather the botchers, of men's bodies; as the one patches our tattered clothes, so the other solders our diseased flesh.

<sup>14</sup> In misery's darkest cavern known,
His useful care was ever nigh. . . .
His virtues walk'd his narrow round,
Nor made a pause, nor left a void;

And sure th' Eternal Master found
The single talent well employ'd.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Dr. Robert Levet.

You behold in me
Only a travelling Physician;
One of the few who have a mission
To cure incurable diseases,
Or those that are called so.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

How the Doctor's brow should smile,
Crown'd with wreaths of camomile.

THOMAS MOORE, Wreaths for Ministers.

It is not the same thing to feel diseases and to cure them; all men can feel, but the evil is removed only by skill. (Non eadem ratio est sentire et demere morbos; Sensus inest cunctis, tollitur arte malum.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 9, l. 15.

To the sick man, the physician when he enters seems to have three faces, those of a man, a devil, and a god. When the physician first comes and announces the safety of the patient, then the sick man says: "Behold a god or a guardian angel." (Intrantis medici facies tres esse videntur Ægrotanti; hominis, Daemonis, atque Dei. Cum primum accessit medicus dixitque salutem, "En Deus aut custos angelus," æger ait.)

JOHN OWEN, The Physician. (1647)

A country doctor needs more brains to do his work passably than the fifty greatest industrialists in the world require.

WALTER B. PITKIN, The Twilight of the American Mind, p. 118.

There are men and classes of men that stand above the common herd: the soldier, the sailor, and the shepherd not unfrequently;
the artist rarely; rarer still, the clergyman;
the physician almost as a rule. He is the flower (such as it is) of our civilisation.

R. L. STEVENSON, Underwoods: Dedication.

Removed from kind Arbuthnot's aid,
Who knows his art but not his trade,
Preferring his regard for me
Before his credit or his fee.

SWIFT, In Sickness. Oct., 1714.

8
To preserve a man alive in the midst of so many chances and hostilities, is as great a miracle as to create him.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Dying. Ch. i, sec. 1.

But nothing is more estimable than a physician who, having studied nature from his youth, knows the properties of the human body, the diseases which assail it, the remedies which will benefit it, exercises his art with caution, and pays equal attention to the rich and the poor.

VOLTAIRE, A Philosophical Dictionary: Physicians.

III—Doctors: Their Faults

10

The crowd of physicians has killed me.

EMPEROR ADRIAN, when dying. (MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 37.)

But, when the wit began to wheeze,
And wine had warm'd the politician,
Cur'd yesterday of my disease,
I died last night of my physician.

MATTHEW PRIOR, The Remedy Worse than the Disease.

Physicians kill more than they cure.

EDWARD WARD, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 328.

11

Nor bring, to see me cease to live,
Some doctor full of phrase and fame,
To shake his sapient head, and give
The ill he cannot cure a name.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, A Wish.

A single doctor like a sculler plies,
And all his art and all his physic tries;
But two physicians, like a pair of oars,
Conduct you soonest to the Stygian shores.

JOHN BOOTH, Epigrams Ancient and Modern, p. 144.

One doctor, singly like the sculler plies,
The patient struggles, and by inches dies;
But two physicians, like a pair of oars,
Waft him right swiftly to the Stygian shores.

SAMUEL GARTH, The Dispensary. Quoted.

Though patients die, the doctor's paid.
Licens'd to kill, he gains a place
For what another mounts the gallows.

So liv'd our sires, ere doctors learn'd to kill,
And multiplied with theirs the weekly bill.

DRYDEN, To John Driden, Esq., l. 71.

15

Ignorance is not so damnable as humbug, but when it prescribes pills it may happen to do more harm.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt.

16

The body is well, but the purse is sick. (Corpus valet sed ægrotat crumena.)

ERASMUS, Adagia.

"Is there no hope?" the sick man said;
The silent doctor shook his head,
And took his leave with signs of sorrow,
Despairing of his fee to-morrow.

The sun doth always behold your good success, and the earth covers all your ignorance.

SIR JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster, 17. (1620)
For Greek original of this saying, which was used by many of the seventeenth century writers, see Notes and Queries, Ser. viii, vol. 6, p. 246.

If the doctor cures, the sun sees it; if he kills, the earth hides it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs.

Physicians, of all men, are most happy; whatever good success soever they have the world proclaimeth, and what faults they commit the earth covereth.

QUARLES, Hieroglyphics of the Life of Man.

<sup>7</sup>
That happens because you were never my doctor.

PAUSANIAS, to a physician who remarked on his great age. (PLUTARCH, Apotheisms: Of Pausanias.)

<sup>8</sup>
You tell your doctor, that y' are ill,
And what does he, but write a bill,
Of which you need not read one letter:
The worse the scrawl, the dose the better.
For if you knew but what you take,
Though you recover, he must break.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 97.

<sup>9</sup>
I do remember an apothecary,—
And hereabouts he dwells,—which late I noted

In tatter'd weeds, with overwhelming brows,
Culling of simples; meagre were his looks,
Sharp misery had worn him to the bones:
And in his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuff'd, and other skins
Of ill-shaped fishes; and about his shelves

A beggarly account of empty boxes,
Green earthen pots, bladders and musty
seeds,
Remnants of packthread and old cakes of roses,

Were thinly scatter'd, to make up a show.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 37.

So modern 'pothecaries, taught the art
By doctors' bills to play the doctor's part,
Bold in the practice of mistaken rules,

At this rate a dead dog would indeed be better than a living lion.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 257.)

<sup>3</sup> So, when two dogs are fighting in the streets,
 With a third dog one of the two dogs meets;
 With angry teeth he bites him to the bone,
 And this dog smarts for what that dog has done.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 5.

Thus when a barber and a collier fight,
 The barber beats the luckless collier—white;
 The dusty collier heaves his ponderous sack,
 And big with vengeance beats the barber—black.
 In comes the brick-dust man, with grime o'er spread,

And beats the collier and the barber—red:
 Black, red and white in various clouds are tost,
 And in the dust they raise the combatants are lost.

Her new bark is worse than ten times her old bite.

<sup>16</sup> If the old dog bark, he gives counsel.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>17</sup> A dog will bark ere he bite.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

Dogs ought to bark before they bite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1316.

<sup>18</sup> Those dogs bite least that greatest barkings keep.

THOMAS HOWELL, H. His Devises, 30. (1581)

<sup>19</sup> They are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark.

JAMES MABBE, Celestina: Dedication. (1631)

It is a common proverb, "Dogs bark more for custom than fierceness."

SIR GEORGE WHARTON, Merlini Anglici: Preface. (1647)

<sup>22</sup> What! keep a dog and bark myself!

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. (1670)

I won't keep a dog and bark myself.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Dogs bark at me as I halt by them.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 23.

Let dogs delight to bark and bite,
For God hath made them so;
Let bears and lions growl and fight,
For 'tis their nature. too.
ISAAC WATTS, Divine Songs. No. 16.

The slowest barker is the surest biter.
D. TUVILL, Vade Mecum, 130. (1638)
It is the mute hound that bites the hardest.
A. CONAN DOYLE, Sir Nigel. Ch. 14. (1906)

III—Dogs: Friends and Companions

<sup>4</sup>
People who lived here long ago
Did by this stone, it seems, intend
To name for future times to know
The dachs-hound, Geist, their little friend.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Geist's Grave.

<sup>5</sup>
He was such a dear little cock-tailed pup.
R. H. BARHAM, Mr. Peter's Story.

<sup>6</sup>
Nay, brother of the sod,
What part hast thou in God?
What spirit art thou of?
It answers, "Love."
KATHARINE LEE BATES, Laddie.

<sup>7</sup>
But the poor dog, in life the firmest friend,
The first to welcome, foremost to defend.
BYRON, Inscription on a Newfoundland Dog.

<sup>8</sup>
On the green banks of Shannon, when Shee-lah was nigh,
No blithe Irish lad was so happy as I;
No harp like my own could so cheerily play,
And wherever I went was my poor dog Tray.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Harper.
Old dog Tray's ever faithful,
Grief cannot drive him away;
He's gentle, he is kind; I'll never, never find
A better friend than old dog Tray.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Old Dog Tray.
<sup>9</sup>
His faithful dog salutes the smiling guest.
CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 86.

<sup>10</sup>
And still I like to fancy that,
Somewhere beyond the Styx's bound,
Sir Guy's tall phantom stoops to pat
His little phantom hound!

PATRICK R. CHALMERS, "Hold."

He's dead. Oh! lay him gently in the ground!
And may his tomb be by this verse renowned:

Here Shock, the pride of all his kind, is laid,

Who fawned like man, but ne'er like man betrayed.

JOHN GAY, An Elegy on a Lap-Dog.

<sup>12</sup>
In dreams I see them spring to greet,
With rapture more than tail can tell,
Their master of the silent feet
Who whistles o'er the asphodel,
And through the dim Elysian bounds
Leads all his cry of little hounds.

JOHN HALSHAM, My Last Terrier.

<sup>13</sup>
There is sorrow enough in the natural way
From men and women to fill our day;
And when we are certain of sorrow in store
Why do we always arrange for more?
*Brothers and Sisters, I bid you beware
Of giving your heart to a dog to tear.*

RUDYARD KIPLING, "The Power of the Dog."

Into the Presence, flattening while I crawl—
From head to tail, I do confess it all.
Mine was the fault—deal me the stripes—but spare

The Pointed Finger which I cannot bear!
The Dreadful Tone in which my Name is named,
That sends me 'neath the sofa-frill ashamed!
(Yet to be near thee I would face the woe.)
If Thou reject me, whither shall I go?

RUDYARD KIPLING, Supplication of the Black Aberdeen.

<sup>14</sup>
The curate thinks you have no soul;
I know that he has none.

ST. JOHN LUCAS, The Curate Thinks.

But in some canine Paradise
Your wraith, I know, rebukes the moon.
ST. JOHN LUCAS, To a Dog.

<sup>15</sup>
Fierce in the woods, gentle in the home.
(Silvis aspera, blanda domi.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 69, l. 2.

<sup>16</sup>
To be, contents his natural desire,
He asks no angel's wing, no seraph's fire;
But thinks, admitted to that equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 109.

<sup>17</sup>
Histories are more full of examples of the fidelity of dogs than of friends.

POPE, Letters to and from H. Cromwell, Esq.
Letter 10, 9 Oct., 1709.

<sup>18</sup>
I have a dog of Blenheim birth,
With fine long ears and full of mirth;
And sometimes, running o'er the plain,
He tumbles on his nose:

But quickly jumping up again,
Like lightning on he goes!

JOHN RUSKIN, My Dog Dash.

<sup>19</sup>
Two dogs of black St. Hubert's breed,
Unmatched for courage, breath, and speed.
SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 7.

1 The little dogs and all,
Tray, Blanche, and Sweetheart, see, they bark at me.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 65.

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,
Hound or spaniel, brach or lym,
Or bobtail tyke or trundle-tail.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 71.

Ay, in the catalogue ye go for men;
As hounds, and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels,
curs,

Shoughs, water-rugs and demi-wolves, are cleft
All by the name of dogs: the valued file
Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
The housekeeper, the hunter, every one
According to the gift which bounteous nature
Hath in him closed.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 92.

2 Mine is no narrow creed,
And He who gave thee being did not frame
The mystery of life to be the sport
Of merciless Man. There is another world
For all that live and move,—a better one!
Where the proud bipeds, who would fain confine

Infinite goodness to the little bounds
Of their own charity, may envy thee.

SOUTHEY, On the Death of a Favourite Spaniel.

3 And the young man's dog [went] with them.
Apocrypha: Tobit, v, 16.

4 We are two travellers, Roger and I.
Roger's my dog.—Come here, you scamp!
Jump for the gentlemen,—mind your eye!
Over the table,—look out for the lamp!—
The rogue is growing a little old;
Five years we've tramped through wind and weather,

And slept out-doors when nights were cold,
And ate and drank—and starved—together.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, The Vagabonds.

5 The stone tells that it covers the white
Maltese dog, Eumelus' faithful companion.
They called him Bull while he still lived, but now the silent paths of night possess his voice.

TYMNES, Epitaph on a Dog. (Greek Anthology.
Bk. vii, No. 211.)

6 Gentlemen of the Jury: The one, absolute, unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog.

SENATOR GEORGE GRAHAM VEST, Eulogy on the Dog. (ELBERT HUBBARD, Pig-Pen Pete, p.
178.)

7 His friends he loved. His fellest earthly foes—

Cats—I believe he did but feign to hate.
My hand will miss the insinuated nose,
Mine eyes the tail that wagged contempt at Fate.

WILLIAM WATSON, An Epitaph.

8 My little old dog:
A heart-beat At my feet.

EDITH WHEARTON, A Lyrical Epigram.

9 Once he passed by as a dog was being beaten, and pitying it, spoke as follows: "Stop and beat it not; for the soul is that of a friend."

XENOPHANES, Of Diogenes. (Greek Anthology.
Bk. vii, epig. 120.)

DOLLAR, THE

10 The Americans have little faith. They rely on the power of the dollar.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures:
Man the Reformer.

11 You know a dollar would go much farther in those days.

W. M. EVARTS, to Lord Coleridge, during a visit to Mount Vernon, when the latter remarked that he had heard that Washington was able to throw a dollar across the Potomac. (LUCY, Diary of Two Parliaments.)

12 "The American nation in the Sixth Ward is a fine people," he says. "They love th' eagle,"
he says, "on the back iv a dollar."

F. P. DUNNE, Mr. Dooley in Peace and War:
Oratory on Politics.

13 The almighty dollar, that great object of universal devotion throughout our land, seems to have no genuine devotees in these peculiar villages.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Wolfert's Roost: The Creole Village. First appeared in the Knickerbocker Magazine, Nov., 1836.

As we swept away from the shore I cast back a wistful eye upon the moss grown roofs and ancient elms of the village and prayed that the inhabitants might long retain their happy ignorance—their absence of all enterprise and improvements—their respect for the fiddle and their contempt for the Almighty Dollar.

<sup>15</sup> I took thought, and invented what I conceived to be the appropriate title of "agnostic." It came into my head as suggestively antithetic to the "Gnostic" of Church history who professed to know so much about the very things of which I was ignorant, and I took the earliest opportunity of parading it at our society, to show that I, too, had a tail like the other foxes. To my great satisfaction, the term took; and when the Spectator had stood godfather to it, any suspicion in the minds of respectable people that a knowledge of its parentage might have awakened was, of course, completely lulled.

7 I love the doubt, the dark, the fear,
That still surroundeth all things here.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Hymn to Death.

8 Who never doubted never half believed;
Where doubt, there truth is,—'tis her shadow.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

9 Rather I prize the doubt
Low kinds exist without,
Finished and finite clods, untroubled by a spark.

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 3.

I love not mystery or doubt.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 11.

10 Doubt charms me no less than knowledge.
(Non menche saver, dubbiar m' aggrata.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xi, l. 93.

11 The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Last Conversation.

By doubting we come at the truth. (Dubitando ad veritatem pervenimus.)

CICERO.

12 Doubt is the beginning, not the end, of wisdom.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings.

13 Too much doubt is better than too much credulity.

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL, How to Reform Mankind.

14 The man that feareth, Lord, to doubt,
In that fear doubteth thee.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Disciple. Pt. xxxii, st. 15.

15 To doubt is safer than to be secure.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A Very Woman. Act i, sc. 1.

16 William James used to preach the "will to believe." For my part, I should wish to preach the "will to doubt." . . . What is wanted is not the will to believe, but the wish to find out, which is the exact opposite.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 155.

17 To be once in doubt Is once to be resolv'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 179.

The road to resolution lies by doubt.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iv, emb. 2.

18 Modest doubt is call'd The beacon of the wise.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
2, l. 15.

19 To believe with certainty we must begin with doubting.

STANISLAUS, KING OF POLAND, Maxims. No. 61.

20 There lives more faith in honest doubt,
Believe me, than in half the creeds.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xcvi, st. 3.

21 Ever insurgent let me be,
Make me more daring than devout;
From sleek contentment keep me free,
And fill me with a buoyant doubt.

LOUIS UNTERMAYER, Prayer.

III—Doubt: Its Penalties

22 I hope, I fear, resolved, and yet I doubt,
I'm cold as ice, and yet I burn as fire;
I wot not what, and yet I much desire,
And trembling too, am desperately stout.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING, Aurora. Sonnet lxxviii.

23 Doubt is the accomplice of tyranny.

AMEL, Journal, 30 Dec., 1866.

24 Through doubt error acquires honour; truth suffers repulse.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt.
i, Bk. 4, ch. 1.

25 There are minutes that fix the fate
Of battles and of nations,
(Christening the generations,)

When valor were all too late,
If a moment's doubt be harbored.

HENRY HOWARD BROWNELL, The Bay Fight.

26 Melt, and dispel, ye spectre-doubts, that roll
Cimmerian darkness on the parting soul!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 263.

O Incredulity! the wit of fools,
That slovenly will split on all things fair;
The coward's castle, and the sluggard's cradle.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, De Guiana, l. 86.

Uncertain ways unsafest are,
And doubt a greater mischief than despair.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Cooper's Hill.

You prove only too clearly that seeking to know is often but learning to doubt. (Vous ne prouvez que trop que chercher à connaître n'est souvent qu'apprendre à douter.)

ANTOINETTE DE DESHOULIÈRES, Epigram. Elaborating the French proverb: "Chercher à connaître c'est chercher à douter."

4
Doubt indulged soon becomes doubt realized.

FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL, Royal Bounty.

Knowledge of divine things is lost to us by incredulity.

HERACLITUS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Coriolanus.)

Chase Anguish and doubt and fear and sorrow and pain

From mortal or immortal minds.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 557.

7
But the gods are dead—
Ay, Zeus is dead, and all the gods but Doubt,
And doubt is brother devil to Despair!

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Prometheus: Christ.

Now conscience chills her, and now passion burns,

And atheism and religion take their turns;
A very heathen in the carnal part,
Yet still a sad, good Christian at her heart.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 65. Referring to the Duchess of Hamilton.

He that doubteth is damned.

New Testament: Romans, xiv, 23.

He who doubts is damned: See AMERICA: FAMOUS PHRASES.

We talk of a credulous vulgar without always recollecting that there is a vulgar incredulity, which . . . finds it easier to doubt than to examine.

SCOTT, Fair Maid of Perth: Introduction.

11
I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in
To saucy doubts and fears.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 24.

Doubts, horrors, superstitious fears
Saddened and dimmed descending years.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 17.

12
Our doubts are traitors

And make us lose the good we oft might win

By fearing to attempt.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc. 4, l. 77.

13
You tell me, doubt is Devil-born.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xcvi, st. 1.

Leave thou thy sister, when she prays,
Her early heaven, her happy views;
Nor thou with shadowed hint confuse
A life that leads melodious days.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxxiii, st. 2.

DOVE

See also Eagle

14
And there my little dove did sit
With feathers softly brown.

E. B. BROWNING, My Doves.

Of doves I have a dainty pair
Which, when you please to take the air,
About your head shall gently hover,
Your clear brow from the sun to cover,
And with their nimble wings shall fan you
That neither cold nor heat shall tan you,
And like umbrellas, with their feathers
Shield you in all sorts of weathers.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, My Doves.

As when the dove returning bore the mark
Of earth restor'd to the long lab'ring ark,
The relics of mankind, secure of rest,
Oped every window to receive the guest,
And the fair bearer of the message bless'd.

DRYDEN, To Her Grace of Ormond, l. 70.

But the dove found no rest for the sole of her foot.

Old Testament: Genesis, viii, 9.

18
Listen, sweet Dove, unto my song,
And spread thy golden wings in me;
Hatching my tender heart so long,
Till it get wing and fly away with Thee.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church: Whitsunday.

19
But who does hawk at eagles with a dove.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sacrifice.

See how that pair of billing doves
With open murmurs own their loves
And, heedless of censorious eyes,
Pursue their unpolluted joys:
No fears of future want molest
The downy quiet of their nest.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Verses Written in a Garden.

21
The Dove,
On silver pinions, wing'd her peaceful way.
MONTGOMERY, The Pelican Island. Canto i, l. 173.

1 As the hawk is wont to pursue the trembling dove. (Ut solet accipiter trepidas agitare columbas.)

OID, Metamorphoses. Bk. v, l. 606.

2 Doves have made a nest in the soldier's helmet: see how Venus loveth Mars. (Militis in galea nidum fecere columbæ: Apparet Marti quam sit amica Venus.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 96.

3 Not half so swift the trembling doves can fly,

When the fierce eagle cleaves the liquid sky;
Not half so swiftly the fierce eagle moves,
When thro' the clouds he drives the trembling doves.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 185.

And mine to fly like doves whom th' eagle doth affray.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto xii, st. 5.

4 Oh that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest.

Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 6.

The Wings of the Dove.

HENRY JAMES. Title of novel.

5 As patient as the female dove.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 309.

Thou wilt be as valiant as the wrathful dove, or most magnanimous mouse.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 171.

The dove and very blessed spirit of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 46.

6 I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act i, sc. 2, l. 84.

Modest as the dove.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 295.

7 Doves will peck in safeguard of their brood.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 18.

8 Who will not change a raven for a dove?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act ii, sc. 2, l. 114.

So shows a snowy dove trooping with crows.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, 5, 50.

9 In the spring a livelier iris changes on the burnish'd dove.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 19.

10 And oft I heard the tender dove
In firry woodlands making moan.

TENNYSON, The Miller's Daughter, l. 41.

I heard a Stock-dove sing or say
His homely tale, this very day;
His voice was buried among trees,
Yet to be come at by the breeze:

He did not cease; but cooed—and cooed;
And somewhat pensively he wooed:
He sang of love, with quiet blending,
Slow to begin, and never ending;
Of serious faith, and inward glee;
That was the song,—the song for me!

WORDSWORTH, O Nightingale! Thou Surely Art.

DOWRY

See also Marriage and Money

11 Often in marriage the dowry, if overlarge, becomes a cause of offense. (Sæpe in conjugis fit noxia, si nimia est dos.)

AUSONIUS, Monosyllab. Inconnexa, i.

12 Then hey for a lass wi' a tocher,
The nice yellow guineas for me!

BURNS, Hey for a Lass wi' a Tocher.

Oh, gie me the lass that has acres o' charms,
Oh, gie me the lass wi' the weel-stockit farms.

BURNS, Hey for a Lass wi' a Tocher.

13 He who gets a dowry with his wife, sells himself for it.

EURIPIDES, Phæthon: Fragment.

I sold myself for a dowry. (Dote imperium vendidi.)

16 A great dowry is a bed full of brambles.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

17 I would rather be poor a thousand times over than grow wealthy through my wife.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Marriages as They Were and as They Are, ii, 355.

18 Nor has he pined under the darts of Venus; he was never burnt by her torch. It was the dowry that lighted his fires, the dowry that shot those arrows. (Nec pharetris Veneris macer est aut lampade fervet; Inde faces ardent, veniunt a dote sagittæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 138.

19 Alas that I took Crobyle to wife,
With sixteen talents and a foot of nose.

MENANDER, Plocium. Frag. 402.

20 I do not consider that my dowry is that which people call a dowry, but purity and modesty and quiet desire.

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 839. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

She is herself a dowry.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 244.

1 Money is a beautiful dowry. (Pulchra edepol dos pecuniast.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 180. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

2 I'll give thee this plague for thy dowry.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 140.

3 A dowry for a queen.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 8.

Her dowry shall weigh equal with a queen.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 486.

4 I tell you, he that can lay hold of her Shall have the chinks.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 118.

5 Only this thing is said;
That white and gold and red,
God's three chief words, man's bread
And oil and wine,
Were given her for dowers.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Madonna Mia. St. 8.

11 It is the fault of dreamers to fear fate.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i.

12 Dreams grow holy put in action.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, Philip and Mildred.

13 As a dream when one awaketh.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxiii, 20.

We are near awakening when we dream that we dream.

NOVALIS, Fragment. (Carlyle, tr.)

14 Foolish men have foolish dreams.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

15 A dream itself is but a shadow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 266.

Half our daylight faith's a fable;

Sleep disports with shadows too.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, A Dream, l. 5.

A dream's but the ghost of a shadow.

JOSEPH DEVLIN, The Girl That I Loved When a Boy.

16 Dreams are true while they last, and do we not live in dreams?

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism.

17 So runs my dream.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liv, st. 5.

II—Dreams: Their Cause

18 If ever I ate a good supper at night,
I dreamed of the Devil, and waked in a fright.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEE, The New Bath Guide.

Like the dreams,
Children of night, of indigestion bred.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Candidate, l. 784.

19 Dreams in their development have breath,
And tears, and tortures, and the touch of joy;

They leave a weight upon our waking thoughts;

They take a weight from off our waking toils;

They do divide our being; they become
A portion of ourselves as of our time,
And look like heralds of eternity.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 1.

20 All dreams, as in old Galen I have read,
Are from repletion and complexion bred,
From rising fumes of indigested food,
And noxious humours that infect the blood.

DRYDEN, Fables: The Cock and the Fox, l. 140.

Dreams are but interludes which fancy makes:
When Monarch-Reason sleeps, this mimic wakes;
Compounds a medley of disjointed things,
A mob of cobblers and a court of kings:
Light fumes are merry, grosser fumes are sad;
Both are the reasonable soul run mad:

And many monstrous forms in sleep we see,
That neither were, nor are, nor e'er can be.

DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 325. The fourth line is probably a misprint for "A court of cobblers and a mob of kings."

21 Two diverse gates there are of bodiless
dreams,

These of sawn ivory, and those of horn.

Such dreams as issue where the ivory gleams Fly without fate, and turn our hopes to scorn.

But dreams which issue through the burnished horn,

What man soe'er beholds them on his bed,
These work with virtue and of truth are born.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 562. (Worsley, tr.)

Two gates of Sleep there are, whereof the one is said to be of horn, and thereby an easy outlet is given to true shades; the other gleaming with the sheen of polished ivory, but false are the dreams sent by the spirits to the world above.
(Sunt geminæ Somni portæ; quarum altera
fertur

Cornea, qua veris facilis datur exitus umbris,
Altera candenti perfecta nitens elephanto,
Sed falsa ad cælum mittunt insomnia Manes.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 893.

Sleep gives his name to portals twain:

One all of horn they say,
Through which authentic spectres gain

Quick exit into day,
And one which bright with ivory gleams,
Whence Pluto sends delusive dreams.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 893. (Conington, tr.)

Two gates the silent house of Sleep adorn:
Of polished ivory this, that of transparent horn:
True visions through transparent horn arise;
Through polished ivory pass deluding lies.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 893. (Dryden, tr.)

1 Some dreams we have are nothing else but
dreams,

Unnatural and full of contradictions;
Yet others of our most romantic schemes
Are something more than fictions.

THOMAS HOOD, The Haunted House. Pt. i, st. 1.

2 How light
Must dreams themselves be; seeing they're more slight
Than the mere nothing that engenders them!

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 754.

3 For what one has dwelt on by day, these things are seen in visions of the night. ("Α γὰρ μεθ' ἡμέραν τις ἐσπούδα ταύτ' εἶδε νύκτωρ.)
MENANDER, Fragments. No. 734.

4 It is not the shrines of the gods, nor the powers of the air, that send the dreams which mock the mind with flitting shadows: each man makes his own dreams. (Somnia quæ mentes ludunt volitantibus umbris, Non de-lubra deum nec ab æthere numina mittunt:
Sed sibi quisque facit.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 121.

Dreams, which, beneath the hov'ring shades of
night,

Sport with the ever-restless minds of men,
Descend not from the gods. Each busy brain
Creates its own.

PETRONIUS, Fragments. 121. (Peacock, tr.)

Those dreams, that on the silent night intrude,
And with false flitting shades our minds delude,
Jove never sends us downward from the skies;
Nor can they from infernal mansions rise;
But all are mere productions of the brain,
And fools consult interpreters in vain.

SWIFT, On Dreams.

5 You eat, in dreams, the custard of the day.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 92.

6 I talk of dreams,
Which are the children of an idle brain,
Begot of nothing but vain fantasy;
Which is as thin of substance as the air
And more inconstant than the wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, 96.

7 Dreams sport at random in a deceiving night, filling affrighted souls with false alarm.
(Somnia fallaci ludunt temeraria nocte Et pavidas mentes falsa timere jubent.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 7.

8 From dreams, where thought in fancy's maze runs mad.

9 So the visions of the night do often chance contrary.

APULEIUS, The Golden Ass. Bk. iv.

For commonly of these dreams the contrary men shall find.

UNKNOWN, Beryn: Prologue, l. 108. (c. 1400)

O strange! to see how dreams fall by contraries.

ROWLEY, Match at Midnight. Act iv. (1633)

Dreams go by the contraries.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Gentleman Dancing-Master. Act iv, sc. 1. (1673)

Dreams, you know, go always by contraries.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. No. 46.

"Now, Rory, I'll cry if you don't let me go;
Sure I drame ev'ry night that I'm hating you
so!"

"Oh," says Rory, "that same I'm delighted to hear,

For drames always go by conthraries, my dear."

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More.

Ground not upon dreams; you know they are ever contrary.

MIDDLETON, The Family of Love. Act iv, sc. 3.

Oh! the perjury of men! I find that dreams do not always go by contraries.

HENRY FIELDING, Grub-Street Opera. Act i,
sc. 11.

10 [Dreams and predictions] ought to serve but for winter talk by the fireside.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Prophecies.

Man is but an ass, if he go about to expound this dream.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 210.

Till their own dreams at length deceive 'em,
And oft repeating, they believe 'em.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 13.

1 That children dream not the first half-year;
that men dream not in some countries, with many more, are unto me sick men's dreams; dreams out of the ivory gate, and visions before midnight.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, On Dreams.

Some dreams I confess may admit of easy and feminine exposition: he who dreamed that he could not see his right shoulder, might easily fear to lose the sight of his right eye. . . . But why to dream of lettuce should presage some ensuing disease, why to eat figs should signify foolish talk, why to eat eggs great trouble, . . . I shall leave unto your divination.

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 195.

Oft morning dreams presage approaching fate,
For morning dreams, as poets tell, are true.

MICHAEL BRUCE, Elegy on Spring.

At break of day when dreams, they say, are true.

DRYDEN, Spanish Friar. Act iii, sc. 2.

And all the morning dreams come true.

BEN JONSON, Love Restored, last line.

This morn, as sleeping in my bed I lay,
I dreamt (and morning dreams come true they say).

W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

In the morning, there happen more pleasant and certain dreams.

REGINALD SCOT, Witchcraft. Bk. x, ch. 7.

5 Dreams are the true interpreters of our inclinations, but art is required to sort and understand them.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13.

6 There is some ill a-brewing towards my rest,

For I did dream of money-bags to-night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 5, l. 17.

7 I have had a dream past the wit of man to say what dream it was.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not seen, man's hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report,
what my dream was.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 216.

8 If I may trust the flattering truth of sleep,
My dreams presage some joyful news at hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, l.

IV—Dreams: The Land of Dreams

9 Let us go in and dance once more
On the dream's glimmering floor,

CONRAD AIKEN, *Nocturne of Remembered
Spring*.

10 When to soft Sleep we give ourselves away,
And in a dream as in a fairy bark
Drift on and on through the enchanted dark
To purple daybreak—little thought we pay
To that sweet bitter world we know by day.

T. B. ALDRICH, Sonnet: Sleep.

11 Sweet sleep be with us, one and all!
And if upon its stillness fall
The visions of a busy brain,
We'll have our pleasure o'er again,
To warm the heart, to charm the sight.
Gay dreams to all! good night, good night.

JOANNA BAILLIE, The Phantom: Song.

12 If there were dreams to sell,
Merry and sad to tell,
And the crier rung his bell,
What would you buy?

THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES, Dream-Pedlary.

13 But I jumped to feel how sharp had been
The pain when it did live,
How the faded dreams of Nineteen-ten
Were Hell in Nineteen-five.

RUPERT BROOKE, The One Before the Last.

14 Nosegays! leave them for the waking,
Throw them earthward where they grew;
Dim as such, beside the breaking Amaranths he looks unto:
Folded eyes see brighter colours than the open ever do.

E. B. BROWNING, A Child Asleep. St. 2.

15 We shall start up, at last awake
From Life, that insane dream we take
For waking now, because it seems.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter-Day. Canto xiv.

We wake in a dream, and we ache in a dream,
And we break in a dream, and die!

ROBERT BUCHANAN, *Balder the Beautiful:
Proem*.

16 [Her] sweet lips murmur'd like a brook

A wordless music, and her face so fair Stirr'd with her dream, as rose-leaves with the air.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 29.

1 The fisher droppeth his net in the stream,
And a hundred streams are the same as
one;

And the maiden dreameth her love-lit dream;
And what is it all, when all is done?

The net of the fisher the burden breaks,
And always the dreaming the dreamer wakes.

ALICE CARY, The Lover's Diary.

2 Ah, how the years exile us into dreams.
JAMES CASSIDY, Fire Island.

3 Into the land of dreams I long to go.
Bid me forget!

MARY E. COLERIDGE, Mandragora.

In the music-land of dreams.
FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Sleeper.

Ah, give us back our dear dead Land of Dreams!
HENRY MARTYN HOYT, The Land of Dreams.

4 This tale's a fragment from the life of dreams.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Phantom or Fact?

5 A crooked street goes past my door, entwining love of every land;

It wanders, singing, round the world, to Ashkelon and Samarkand.

To roam it is an ecstasy, each mile the easier it seems,

And yet the longest street on earth is this—the Street of Dreams.

CHARLES DIVINE, The Crooked Street of Dreams.

6 There's a long, long trail a-winding
Into the land of my dreams,
Where the nightingales are singing,
And a white moon beams.

There's a long, long night of waiting
Until my dreams all come true,

Till the day when I'll be going down
That long, long trail with you.

STODDARD KING, There's a Long, Long Trail.
(1915) Music by Zo (Alonzo) Elliott.

7 Whence comes Solace? Not from seeing
What is doing, suffering, being;
Not from noting Life's conditions,
Not from heeding Time's monitions;
But in cleaving to the Dream
And in gazing at the Gleam Whereby grey things golden seem.

THOMAS HARDY, On a Fine Morning.

8 In thoughts from the visions of the night, when deep sleep falleth on men.

Old Testament: Job, iv, 13.

In a dream, in a vision of the night, when deep sleep falleth upon men.

Old Testament: Job, xxxiii, 15.

9 O Thou, the Father of us all,
Whose many mansions wait,
To whose dream welcome each must come

A child, at Heaven's gate:

In that fair house not made with hands

Whatever splendor beams,

Out of Thy bounty keep for me

A little room of dreams.

R. U. JOHNSON, The Little Room of Dreams.

10 A house of dreams untold,
It looks out over the treetops,

And faces the setting sun.

EDWARD MACDOWELL, From a Log Cabin:

Heading. These lines are inscribed on a memorial tablet at MacDowell's grave.

11 The dream that fires man's heart to make,
To build, to do, to sing or say

A beauty Death can never take.

An Adam from the crumbled clay.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Fragments.

12 But that a dream can die will be a thrust
Between my ribs forever of hot pain.

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Here is a Wound.

13 A thousand creeds and battle-cries,
A thousand warring social schemes,

A thousand new moralities,
And twenty thousand thousand dreams!

ALFRED NOYES, Forward.

Enough of dreams! No longer mock
The burdened hearts of men!

Not on the cloud, but on the rock.

ALFRED NOYES, The Secret Inn.

14 That holy dream—that holy dream,
While all the world were chiding,

Hath cheered me as a lovely beam

A lonely spirit guiding.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, A Dream.

15 All that we see or seem
Is but a dream within a dream.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, A Dream Within a Dream.

And did not dream it was a dream.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 213.

16 I shall be satisfied
If only the dreams abide.

CLINTON SCOLLARD, If Only the Dreams Abide.

Yet after brick and steel and stone are gone,
And flesh and blood are dust, the dream lives on.

ANDERSON M. SCRUGGS, Only the Dream is Real.

Dream abides. It is the only thing that abides;
vision abides.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 237.

17 I'll dream no more—by manly mind

Not even in sleep is will resigned.
My midnight orisons said o'er,
I'll turn to rest, and dream no more.
SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 35.

<sup>1</sup>
To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
For in that sleep of death what dreams may come,
When we have shuffled off this mortal coil,
Must give us pause.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 65.

<sup>2</sup>
Ah, the strange, sweet, lonely delight
Of the Valleys of Dream.
WILLIAM SHARP, Dream Fantasy.

From the dim blue Hills of Dream
I have heard the west wind blow.
WILLIAM SHARP, From the Hills of Dream.

<sup>3</sup> A dream
Of youth, which night and time have quenched forever,
Still, dark, and dry, and unremembered now.
SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 669.

<sup>4</sup>
Dreams and the light imaginings of men,
And all that faith creates, or love desires,
Terrible, strange, sublime and beauteous shapes.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 200.

<sup>5</sup>
In an ocean of dreams without a sound.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 26.

<sup>6</sup>
A place of dream, the Holy Land
Hangs midway between earth and heaven.
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, The Holy Land.

<sup>7</sup>
In the world of dreams I have chosen my part.

To sleep for a season and hear no word
Of true love's truth or of light love's art,
Only the song of a secret bird.
SWINBURNE, A Ballad of Dreamland: Envoi.

I have put my days and dreams out of mind,
Days that are over, dreams that are done.
SWINBURNE, The Triumph of Time. St. 7.

<sup>8</sup>
Moreover, something is or seems,
That touches me with mystic gleams,
Like glimpses of forgotten dreams.
TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 379.

<sup>9</sup>
The chambers in the house of dreams
Are fed with so divine an air,
That Time's hoar wings grow young therein,
And they who walk there are most fair.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Dream-Tryst. St. 3.

<sup>10</sup>
A pleasing land of drowsyhed it was,
Of dreams that wave before the half-shut
eye;
And of gay castles in the clouds that pass,

For ever flushing round a summer sky.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 6.

<sup>11</sup>
In dreams the exile cometh home;
In dreams the lost is found;
In dreams the captive's feet may roam
The world around.
WILLIAM WATSON, In Dreams.

<sup>12</sup>
Don't you ever try to go there—
It's to dream of, not to find.
Lovely things like that is always Mostly in your mind.
JOHN V. A. WEAVER, Legend.

<sup>13</sup>
You might as well
Hunt half a day for a forgotten dream.
WORDSWORTH, Hart-Leap Well. Pt. ii, st. 9.
Whither is fled the visionary gleam?
Where is it now, the glory and the dream?
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 56.

V—Dreams: Pleasant Dreams

<sup>14</sup>
It was a dream of perfect bliss
Too beautiful to last.
T. H. BAYLY, It Was a Dream.

<sup>15</sup>
One of those passing, rainbow dreams,
Half light, half shade, which Fancy's beams
Paint on the fleeting mists that roll
In trance or slumber round the soul!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers. Pt. iii, l. 273.

Oh! that a dream so sweet, so long enjoy'd,
Should be so sadly, cruelly destroy'd!
MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Veiled Prophet of Khorassan. Pt. ii, l. 404.

None thrives for long upon the happiest dream.
COVENTRY PATMORE, Tired Memory.

<sup>16</sup>
O dream, how sweet, too sweet, too bitter
sweet,
Whose wakening should have been in Paradise.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Echo.

<sup>17</sup>
This is the rarest dream that e'er dull sleep
Did mock sad fools withal.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act v, sc. 1, l. 164.

All this is but a dream,
Too flattering-sweet to be substantial.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 140.

<sup>18</sup>
If it be thus to dream, still let me sleep!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, Act iv, sc. 1, l.
67.

Is this a dream? Oh, if it be a dream,
Let me sleep on, and do not wake me yet!
LONGFELLOW, Spanish Student. Act iii, sc. 5.

<sup>19</sup>
The dream
Dream'd by a happy man, when the dark
East,

Unseen, is brightening to his bridal morn.
TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 71.

VI—Dreams: Unpleasant Dreams

<sup>1</sup> Hence, babbling dreams! you threaten here
in vain!

COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (Alt.). Act v, sc. 3.

<sup>2</sup> Dreams that bring us little comfort, heavenly promises that lapse
Into some remote It-may-be, into some forlorn Perhaps.

S. R. LYSAGHT, A Confession of Unfaith.

<sup>3</sup> Dreams affright me, that mimic real dangers, and my senses wake to my misfortunes.
(Somnia me terrent veros imitantia casus, Et vigilant sensus in mea damna mei.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 43.

<sup>4</sup> Deep into that darkness peering, long I stood there, wondering, fearing,
Doubting, dreaming dreams no mortal ever dared to dream before.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Raven.

<sup>5</sup> 'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen
Tongue, and brain not.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 4, l. 146.

<sup>6</sup> O God! I could be bounded in a nut-shell and count myself a king of infinite space, were it not that I have had dreams.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 260.

But as the fierce vexation of a dream.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 72.

In the affliction of these terrible dreams
That shake us nightly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 17.

O, I have pass'd a miserable night,
So full of ugly sights, of ghastly dreams,
That, as I am a Christian faithful man,
I would not spend another such a night,
Though 't were to buy a world of happy days.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 2.

For never yet one hour in his bed
Have I enjoy'd the golden dew of sleep,
But have been waked by his timorous dreams.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 83.

Lord! Lord! methought, what pain it was to drown!

What dreadful noise of waters in mine ears!
What ugly sights of death within mine eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 21.

Sometime she driveth o'er a soldier's neck,
And then dreams he of cutting foreign throats.
Of breaches, ambuscadoes, Spanish blades,
Of healths five-fathom deep; and then anon
Drums in his ear, at which he starts and wakes,
And being thus frighted, swears a prayer or two
And sleeps again.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4, 82.

<sup>7</sup> May the dream never prove true which an evil sleep brought me yesternight. (Nec sint mihi somnia vera, Quæ tulit hesterna pessima nocte quies.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 4, l. 1.

VII—Dreams of Love

<sup>8</sup> Come to me in my dreams, and then
By day I shall be well again.

For then the night will more than pay
The hopeless longing of the day.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Longing. St. 1.

Come to me, darling; I'm lonely without thee;
Daytime and nighttime I'm dreaming about thee.

JOSEPH BRENNAN, The Exile to His Wife.

<sup>9</sup> The glory dropped from their youth and love,

And both perceived they had dreamed a dream.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Statue and the Bust.

<sup>10</sup> That just as her young lip began to ope
Upon the golden fruit the vision bore,
A bee flew out and stung her to the heart.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 77.

<sup>11</sup> A damsel with a dulcimer
In a vision once I saw:
It was an Abyssinian maid,
And on her dulcimer she played,
Singing of Mount Abora.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

Adieu! adieu!

Love's dreams prove seldom true.

S. T. COLERIDGE, II Zapholya. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>12</sup> The house of dreams in which I live
Has beamed old ceilings high,
It sits far back amid the trees
And a brook runs laughing by;
It has a quaint old-fashioned hall,
Where soft light filters through,
Red roses on the newel-post
And on the staircase, You.

ELIZABETH GORDON, House of Dreams.

<sup>13</sup> Thou lovest what thou dreamest her;
I am thy very dream!

THOMAS HARDY, The Well-Beloved. St. 13.

<sup>14</sup> In blissful dream, in silent night,
There came to me, with magic might,
With magic might, my own sweet love,
Into my little room above.

HEINE, Youthful Sorrows. Pt. iv, st. 1.

<sup>15</sup> In dreams she grows not older
The lands of Dream among,
Though all the world wax colder,
Though all the songs be sung,

In dreams doth he behold her
Still fair and kind and young.
ANDREW LANG, Lost Love.

Ever of thee I'm fondly dreaming,
Thy gentle voice my spirit can cheer.
GEORGE LINLEY, Ever of Thee.

With the first dream that comes with the first sleep,
I run, I run, I am gathered to thy heart.
ALICE MEYNELL, Renouncement.

We that are twain by day, at night are one.
A dream can bring me to your arms once more.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Compensation.

Thou comest as the memory of a dream,
Which now is sad because it hath been sweet.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.

And all my days are trances,
And all my nightly dreams
Are where thy gray eye glances
And where thy footstep gleams—
In what ethereal dances
By what eternal streams.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, To One in Paradise.

Still on that breast enamour'd let me lie,
Still drink delicious poison from thy eye,
Pant on thy lip, and to thy heart be press'd;
Give all thou canst—and let me dream the
rest.
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 121.

5
I arise from dreams of thee
In the first sweet sleep of night,
When the winds are breathing low,
And the stars are shining bright.
SHELLEY, Lines to an Indian Air.

Meet me in Dreamland, sweet dreamy
Dreamland,
There let my dreams come true.
BETH SLATER WHITSON, Meet Me To-night in Dreamland. (1909)

But I, being poor, have only my dreams.
I have spread my dreams under your feet;
Tread softly, because you tread on my
dreams.
W. B. YEATS, Wind Among the Reeds.

VIII—Dreams: The Dreamer

8
Back of the Job—the Dreamer
Who's making the dream come true.
BERTON BRALEY, The Thinker.

The soul hath need of prophet and redeemer:
Her outstretched wings against her pris-
oning bars,
She waits for truth; and truth is with the dreamer,—

Persistent as the myriad light of stars!
FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Dream the Great Dream.

10
Behold, this dreamer cometh.
Old Testament: Genesis, xxxvii, 19.

11
All men of action are dreamers.
JAMES HUNEKER, Pathos of Distance, p. 111.

12
Yet to have greatly dreamed precludes low ends.
J. R. LOWELL, Columbus.

13
Dreamer of dreams, born out of my due time,
Why should I strive to set the crooked straight?
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: Apology.

14
For a dreamer lives forever,
And a toiler dies in a day.
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, The Cry of the Dreamer.

15
He whom a dream hath possessed knoweth
no more of doubting.
SHAEMAS O'SHEEL, He Whom a Dream Hath Possessed.

16
Some must delve when the dawn is nigh;
Some must toil when the noonday beams;
But when night comes, and the soft winds sigh,
Every man is a King of Dreams.
CLINTON SCOLLARD, The King of Dreams.

IX—Dreams: Day-Dreams

17
Thou shalt make castles then in Spain,
And dream of joy all but in vain.
CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 2573.
CASTLES IN SPAIN, CASTLES IN THE AIR, see under CASTLE.

My eyes make pictures, when they are shut.
S. T. COLERIDGE, A Day-Dream.
Divert her eyes with pictures in the fire.
POPE, Epistle to Mrs. Blount.

19
I walked beside the evening sea
And dreamed a dream that could not be;
The waves that plunged along the shore
Said only: "Dreamer, dream no more!"
GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Ebb and Flow.

I strongly wish for what I faintly hope;
Like the day-dreams of melancholy men,
I think and think on things impossible,
Yet love to wander in that golden maze.
DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act iii, sc. 1.

21
He dreams awake. (Vigilans somniat.)
PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 697. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

- 5 It is only when mind and character slumber that the dress can be seen.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.
- 6 Though manners make, yet apparel shapes.
JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 115. (1591)
The hood makes not the monk, nor the apparel the man.
ROBERT GREENE, Works. Vol. ix, p. 19.
- 7 We are all Adam's children, but silk makes the difference.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5425.
- 8 They stript Joseph out of his coat, his coat of many colours.
Old Testament: Genesis, xxxvii, 23.
How his eyes languish! how his thoughts adore That painted coat, which Joseph never wore! He shows, on holidays, a sacred pin, That touch'd the ruff, that touched Queen Bess' chin.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 119.
- 9 Nowadays, if men are more serious than women, it's because their clothes are darker.
ANDRÉ GIDE, The Counterfeiters. Pt. i, ch. 7.
The world must be getting old, I think; it dresses so very soberly now.
JEROME K. JEROME, Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow: On Dress and Deportment.
- 10 The nakedness of the indigent world may be clothed from the trimmings of the vain.

- 12 All thing is the worse for the wearing.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1.
- 13 I know it is a sin
For me to sit and grin
At him here;
But the old three-cornered hat,
And the breeches and all that,
Are so queer!
O. W. HOLMES, The Last Leaf.
- 14 Art may make a suit of clothes; but nature must produce a man.
DAVID HUME, Essays: The Epicurean.
- 15 Glorious in his apparel.
Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiii, 1.
I saw among the spoils a goodly Babylonish garment.
Old Testament: Joshua, vii, 21.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 9.
- 19 I say, beware of all enterprises that require new clothes, and not rather a new wearer of clothes.
HENRY DAVID THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.
- 20 Dress does not give knowledge. (La ropa no da ciencia.)
YRIARTE, Fables. No. 27.

II—Dress: Its Philosophy

- 21 We must present an appearance of neatness, not too punctilious or exquisite, but just enough to avoid slovenliness. (Adhibenda præterea munditia est non odiosa necque exquisita nimis, tantum quæ fugiat agrestem.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 36, sec. 130.
- 22 Any man may be in good spirits and good temper when he's well dressed. There ain't much credit in that.
DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 5.
The sense of being perfectly well-dressed gives a feeling of inward tranquillity which religion is powerless to bestow.
EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social

Aims. Quoted as by a lady of his acquaintance, said to have been Mrs. Helen Bell.

1 Plain without pomp, and rich without a show.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 187.

2 The least mistake in sentiment takes all the beauty out of your clothes.

EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

3 Good clothes open all doors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1705.

There is one other reason for dressing well, namely that dogs respect it, and will not attack you in good clothes.

EMERSON, Journal, 1870.

4 Eat to please thyself, but dress to please others.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

5 Fine clothes are good only as they supply the want of other means of procuring respect.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1776)

6 For he that's out of clothes is out of fashion, And out of fashion is out of countenance, And out of countenance is out of wit.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

7 A peasant's dress befits a peasant's fortune.

SCOTT, The Doom of Devorgoil. Act iii, sc. 4.

Honest mean habiliments.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 172.

8 Dress doth make a difference, David.

'Tis all in all, I think.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4.

9 As for Clothing, . . . perhaps we are led oftener by the love of novelty and a regard for the opinions of men, in procuring it, than by a true utility.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

10 Costume is not dress.

J. MCNEILL WHISTLER, "Ten O'Clock."

III—Dress: Its Vanity

11 Thy clothes are all the soul thou hast.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act v, sc. 3, l. 170.

The soul of this man is his clothes.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well That Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 45.

All his reverend wit

Lies in his wardrobe.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act ii, sc. 1.

12 Our bravery's but a vain disguise,
To hide us from the world's dull eyes,

The remedy of a defect,
With which our nakedness is deckt.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire Upon the Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 88.

13 Let him wear brand-new garments still,
Who has a threadbare soul, I say.

BLISS CARMAN, The Mendicants.

No man ever stood the lower in my estimation for having a patch in his clothes; yet I am sure that there is a greater anxiety, commonly, to have fashionable, or at least clean and unpatched clothes, than to have a sound conscience.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

14 And just when evening turns the blue vault grey,
To spend two hours in dressing for the day.

COWPER, Hope, l. 81.

Let the world go dine and dress.

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente.

15 We sacrifice to dress, till household joys
And comforts cease. Dress drains our cellar dry,

And keeps our larder lean; puts out our fires,
And introduces hunger, frost, and woe,
Where peace and hospitality might reign.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 614.

Many a one, for the sake of finery on the back, has gone with a hungry belly, and half-starved their families. "Silks and satins, scarlets and velvets, put out the kitchen fire," as Poor Richard says.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

16 Fond pride of dress is sure a very curse;
Ere fancy you consult, consult your purse.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth.

17 He that is proud of the rustling of his silks, like a madman, laughs at the rattling of his fetters. For indeed, Clothes ought to be our remembrances of our lost innocence.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Apparel.

18 Those who make their dress a principal part of themselves, will, in general, become of no more value than their dress.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Political Essays: On the Clerical Character.

Not caring, so that sumpter-horse, the back
Be hung with gaudy trappings, in what coarse,
Yea, rags most beggarly, they clothe the soul.

J. R. LOWELL, Cambridge Thirty Years Ago.

Quoted. This essay was originally called Fireside Travels.

19 Here everyone dresses above his means. (Hic ultra vires habitus nitor.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 180.

20 What madness to carry whole incomes on one's body! (Quis furor est census corpore ferre suos!)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 172.

A silk suit which cost me much money, and I pray God to make me able to pay for it.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 1 July, 1660.

1 Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor;

For 'tis the mind that makes the body rich;
And as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,

So honour peereth in the meanest habit.
What is the jay more precious than the lark,

Because his feathers are more beautiful?
SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 173.

2 The tulip and the butterfly
Appear in gayer coats than I:
Let me be dressed fine as I will,
Flies, worms, and flowers exceed me still.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Pride in Clothes.

IV—Dress: For Women

3 There is not so variable a thing in Nature as a lady's head-dress.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 98.

4 Miss Flora McFlimsey, of Madison Square, Has made three separate journeys to Paris, And, her father assures me, each time she was there,

That she and her friend, Mrs. Harris . . . Spent six consecutive weeks without stopping

In one continuous round of shopping . . . For all manner of things that a woman can put

On the crown of her head or the sole of her foot,

Or wrap round her shoulders, or fit round her waist,

Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on, or laced,

Or tied on with a string, or stitched on with a bow,

In front or behind, above or below;
For bonnets, mantillas, capes, collars, and shawls;

Dresses for breakfasts and dinners and balls;
Dresses to sit in and stand in and walk in;

Dresses to dance in and flirt in and talk in;
Dresses in which to do nothing at all;
Dresses for winter, spring, summer, and fall; . . .

And yet, though scarce three months have passed since the day

This merchandise went, on twelve carts, up Broadway,

This same Miss McFlimsey, of Madison Square,

The last time we met was in utter despair
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER, Nothing to Wear.
Authorship claimed without foundation by Hattie (?) Peck. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

5 I for one venerate a petticoat.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 26.

A petticoat is no great shakes after all, when it hangs fluttering on a clothes line.

LORENZO DOW, Potent Sermons, iii, 133.

Without a whole tatter to her tail, but as ragged as one of the Muses.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

6 Th' adorning thee with so much art
Is but a barbarous skill;

'Tis like the poisoning of a dart
Too apt before to kill.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Waiting-Maid.

7 The woman shall not wear that which pertaineth unto a man.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxii, 5.

8 Each ornament about her seemly lies,
By curious chance, or careless art composed.

EDWARD FAIRFAX, Godfrey of Bullogne. (From TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered.)

9 If you wear your cambric ruffles as I do, and take care not to mend the holes, they will come in time to be lace; and feathers, my dear girl, may be had in America from every cock's tail.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to his Daughter, 3 June, 1779.

10 They sewed fig-leaves together and made themselves aprons.

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 7.

All the costumes since Adam's, right or wrong,
From Eve's fig-leaf down to the petticoat,
Almost as scanty, of days less remote.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 66.

11 But when those charms are past,—for charms are frail,—

When time advances, and when lovers fail,
She then shines forth, solicitous to bless,
In all the glaring impotence of dress.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 291.

12 A sweet disorder in the dress
Kindles in clothes a wantonness.

ROBERT HERRICK, Delight in Disorder.

A winning wave, (deserving note,)
In the tempestuous petticoat,
A careless shoe-string, in whose tie
I see a wild civility,—
Do more bewitch me than when art

Is too precise in every part.

ROBERT HERRICK, Delight in Disorder.

Whenas in silks my Julia goes,
Then, then, methinks, how sweetly flows
That liquefaction of her clothes!

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Julia's Clothes.

And ye sall walk in silk attire,
And siller hae to spare,
Gin ye'll consent to be his bride,
Nor think o' Donald mair.

SUSANNA BLAMIRE, The Siller Crown.

To show the form it seemed to hide.
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto i, st. 5.

Silk was invented so that women could go naked in clothes.

MAHOMET.

'Tis not the robe or garment I affect;
For who would marry with a suit of clothes?
THOMAS HEYWOOD, *Royal King and Loyal
Subject*. Act ii, sc. 2.

3
For gowns, and gloves, and caps, and tippets,
Are beauty's sauces, spice, and sippets.
THOMAS HOOD, A Recipe.

4
Plain in neatness. (Simplex munditiis.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 5, l. 5.

We are charmed by neatness. (Munditiis capimur.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 133.

Still to be neat, still to be drest,
As you were going to a feast;
Still to be powder'd, still perfumed:
Lady, it is to be presumed,
Though art's hid causes are not found,
All is not sweet, all is not sound.

Give me a look, give me a face,
That makes simplicity a grace;
Robes loosely flowing, hair as free:
Such sweet neglect more taketh me
Than all th' adulteries of art;
They strike mine eyes, but not my heart.

BEN JONSON, Epicæne, or, The Silent Woman.
Act i, sc. 1. An imitation of a Latin poem commencing "Semper munditiis," printed at the end of the variorum edition of Petroniæ.

5
It's not the skirt that breaks papa, it's the chiffon ruffles.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

Dwellers in huts and in marble halls—
From Shepherdess up to Queen—
Cared little for bonnets, and less for shawls,
And nothing for crinoline.
But now simplicity's not the rage,
And it's funny to think how cold
The dress they wore in the Golden Age
Would seem in the Age of Gold.

H. S. LEIGH, The Two Ages. St. 4.

In tea-cup times of hood and hoop,

Or while the patch was worn.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 63.

A bevy of fair women, richly gay
In gems and wanton dress.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 578.

A lady so richly clad as she—
Beautiful exceedingly.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. i, l. 67.

But who is this, what thing of sea or land?
Female of sex it seems,
That so bedeck'd, ornate, and gay,
Comes this way sailing
Like a stately ship
Of Tarsus, bound for th' isles
Of Javan or Gadier
With all her bravery on, and tackle trim,
Sails fill'd, and streamers waving,
Court'd by all the winds that hold them play.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 710.

9
Let him be inflamed by the love of your dress. (Uratur vestis amore tuæ.)
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 448.

We are captivated by dress; all is concealed by gems and gold; a woman is the least part of herself. (Auferimur cultu; gemmis auroque teguntur Omnia; pars minima est ipsa puella sui.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 343.

10
Who wishes to give himself an abundance of business let him equip these two things, a ship and a woman. These two things are never sufficiently adorned, nor is any excess of adornment enough for them.
(Negoti sibi qui volet vim parare, Navem et mulierem, hæc duo compara-
to. . . .)

Neque unquam satis hæc duæ res ornatur,
Neque eis ulla ornandi satis satietas est.)
PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 210. (Act i, sc. 2.)

A ship is sooner rigged by far than a gentlewoman made ready.

UNKNOWN, Lingua; or, The Five Senses. Act iv, sc. 5. Often erroneously attributed to Anthony Brewer.

Clothes introduced sewing, a kind of work which you may call endless; a woman's dress, at least,
is never done.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

11
To fifty chosen sylphs, of special note,
We trust th' important charge, the petticoat;
Oft have we known that sev'n-fold fence to fail,
Tho' stiff with hoops, and arm'd with ribs of whale.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 117.

12
At sermons, too, I shone in scarlet gay:

The wasting moth ne'er spoil'd my best array:
The cause was this, I wore it every day.

POPE, Wife of Bath: Prologue, l. 287.

1 No longer shall the bodice aptly laced
From thy full bosom to thy slender waist,
That air and harmony of shape express,
Fine by degrees, and beautifully less.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 429.

2 She bears a duke's revenues on her back,
And in her heart she scorns our poverty.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 83.

See where she comes, apparell'd like the spring.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 12.

3 Set not thy sweet heart on proud array.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 84.

4 So tedious is this day,
As is the night before some festival
To an impatient child, that hath new robes,
And may not wear them.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 28.

With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and fardingales, and things;

With scarfs, and fans, and double change of bravery,

With amber bracelets, beads, and all this knavery.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 55.

5 Thy gown? Why, ay: come, tailor, let us see't.
O mercy, God! what masquing stuff is here?
What's this? a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon:
What, up and down, carv'd like an apple-tart?

Here's snip and nip and cut and slish and slash,

Like to a censer in a barber's shop:
Why, what i' devil's name, tailor, call'st thou this!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 86.

6 Lawn as white as driven snow.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, 220.

Her cap, far whiter than the driven snow,
Emblem right meet of decency does yield.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, The Schoolmistress. St. 6.

7 Never teach false morality. How exquisitely absurd to tell girls that beauty is of no value, dress of no use! Beauty is of value;
her whole prospects and happiness in life may often depend upon a new gown or a becoming bonnet, and if she has five grains of common sense she will find this out.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, ch. 11, p. 297.)

8 She wears her clothes as if they were thrown on her with a pitchfork.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

Will she pass in a crowd? Will she make a figure in a country church?

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 9 Feb., 1710.

Looked as if she had walked straight out of the Ark.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 7.)

9 So for thy spirit did devise
Its Maker seemly garniture,
Of its own essence parcel pure, . . .
Which woven vesture should subserve.

For outward robes in their ostents
Should show the soul's habiliments.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, Gilded Gold.

10 By God, those are bastard-concealers!

BRIAND DE VALLÉE, referring to hoopskirts.
(LAMANDÉ, Montaigne, p. 22.)

11 All such dresses are forbidden, which incite irregular desires.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 6.

12 Bloomers.

Named from Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer, an American dress reformer, who first wore them in 1851. The garment consisted of a skirt reaching to the knees, over trousers cut full and gathered at the ankle.

Rainy-day skirt.

A skirt ending at the ankle for street wear in bad weather. Hence "rainy-daisies." (1900)

V—Dress: Beauty Unadorned

13 Who seems most hideous when adorned the most. (Che quant' era piu ornata, era piu brutta.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xx, l. 116.

14 A gaudy dress and gentle air,
May slightly touch the heart,
But it's innocence and modesty
That polishes the dart.

BURNS, My Handsome Nell.

She just wore
Enough for modesty—no more.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, White Rose and Red.

15 Lack of adornment is said to become some women. (Mulieres esse dicuntur nonnullæ inornatæ.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Ch. xxiii, sec. 78.

Ornate for the very reason that ornaments had been neglected. (Ornata hoc ipso, quod ornamenta neglexerunt.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis.
1, sec. 1.

16 Beauty when most unclothed is clothed best.
PHINEAS FLETCHER, Sicelides. Act ii, sc. 4.

In naked beauty more adorn'd,
More lovely than Pandora.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 713.

1 If she is beautiful, she is overdressed. (Si pulchra est, nimis ornata est.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria. Act i, sc. 3, l. 134.

2 Attired to please herself: no gems of any kind

She wore, nor aught of borrowed gloss in Nature's stead.

(Sine auro; tum ornatum ita uti quæ ornantur sibi, Nulla mala re interpolltam mulierbri.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 288.

3 O fair undress, best dress! it checks no vein,
But every flowing limb in pleasure drowns,
And heightens ease with grace.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.
Canto i, st. 26.

4 Her polished limbs,
Veiled in a simple robe, their best attire,
Beyond the pomp of dress; for Loveliness
Needs not the foreign aid of ornament,
But is, when unadorned, adorned the most.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 202.

5 She's adorned
Amplly, that in her husband's eye looks lovely,—

The truest mirror that an honest wife
Can see her beauty in!

JOHN TOBIN, The Honeymoon. Act iii, sc. 4.

VI—Dress: For Men

6 A civil habit Oft covers a good man.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Beggars' Bush. Act ii, sc. 3.

7 Without black velvet breeches, what is man?

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste.

The things named "pants" in certain documents,
A word not made for gentlemen, but "gents."

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 422.

8 His very serviceable suit of black
Was courtly once, and conscientious still.

ROBERT BROWNING, How It Strikes a Contemporary.

Whose coat was as bare of nap as a frog's is of feathers.

J. G. LOCKHART, Reginald Dalton, vi, 345.

His two-year coat so smooth and bare,
Through every thread it lets in air.

SWIFT, Progress of Poetry.

"Ah, now, Laigle of the funeral oration, your coat is old." "I should hope so," retorted Laigle. "That's why we agree so well, my coat and I. It has got all my wrinkles, it doesn't bind me anywhere, it has fitted itself to all my deformities, it is complaisant to all my movements; I am only conscious of it because it keeps me warm. Old coats are just like old friends."

VICTOR HUGO, Les Misérables: Saint Denis.
Bk. xii, sec. 11.

9 Take great care always to be dressed like the reasonable people of your own age, in the place where you are; whose dress is never spoken of one way or another, as either too negligent or too much studied.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1746.

Any affectation whatsoever in dress implies, in my mind, a flaw in the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Dec., 1748.

A man of sense carefully avoids any particular character in his dress.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 30 Dec., 1748.

10 A wig that flowed behind,
A hat not much the worse for wear,
Each comely in its kind.

COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 46.

11 They [the English] think him the best dressed man, whose dress is so fit for his use that you cannot notice or remember to describe it.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 89.

I hold that gentleman to be the best dressed whose dress no one observes.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Thackeray. Ch. 9.

12 That garment best the winter's rage defends,
Whose shapeless form in ample plaits depends;

By various names in various counties known,
Yet held in all the true Surtout alone;
Be thine of kersey firm, though small the cost,

Then brave unwet the rain, unchill'd the frost.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 55.

Be thou, for every season, justly drest,
Nor brave the piercing frost with open breast;
And when the bursting clouds a deluge pour,
Let thy surtout defend the drenching shower.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 128.

13 I'd a swallow-tail coat of a beautiful blue,
A brief which I bought of a booby,
A couple of shirts, and a collar or two,
And a ring that looked like a ruby.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury.

14 Wear seemly gloves; not black, nor yet too light,
And least of all the pair that once was white; . . .

Shave like a goat, if so your fancy bids,
But be a parent,—don't neglect your kids.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 444.

15 A vest as admired Vortiger had on,

Which from this Island's foes his grandsire won,

Whose artful colours pass'd the Tyrian dye,
Obliged to triumph in this legacy.

EDWARD HOWARD, The British Princes, p. 96. (1669)

A painted vest Prince Vortiger had on,
Which from a naked Pict his grandsire won.

This burlesque of Howard's lines is said to have been attributed to Sir Richard Blackmore by his enemies, as from his epic, The Creation, suppressed by him because of the outcry it occasioned. Boswell and Johnson discussed it (29 Oct., 1769), Boswell defending "Blackmore's supposed lines," as "a poetical conceit. A Pict being painted, if he is slain in battle, and a vest made of his skin, it is a painted vest won from him, though he was naked." They were quoted by Maria Edgeworth as an example of an Irish bull by an English writer. For discussion of authorship see The European Magazine, April, 1792.

They were attempting to put on Raiment from naked bodies worn.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen. Referring to the parody attributed to Blackmore.

If the Kings of Mexico changed four times a day, it was but an upper vest which they used to honour some meritorious servant with.

JOHN EVELYN, Tyrannus.

Let thy attire be comely but not costly.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 39. (1579)

Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 70.

Neat, not gaudy.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 11 June, 1806.

The admiration of the "neat but not gaudy," which is commonly reported to have influenced the devil when he painted his tail pea-green.

JOHN RUSKIN, Architectural Magazine, Nov., 1838.

A negligent dress is becoming to men.
(Forma viros neglecta decet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 509.

An old suit, a battered hat, a perfect tie, and a good collar—that's what makes a well-dressed man.

BARON DE MEYER, International style expert, Newspaper Interview, 1930.

The essential thing for a necktie is style. A well-tied tie is the first serious step in life.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

Let your person please by cleanliness and be made swarthy by the campus; let your toga fit and be spotless; do not let your shoe-strap be wrinkled; let your teeth be free of rust, and your foot not float about in a shoe too large for you; nor let your stubborn locks be spoiled by bad cutting; let hair and beard be dressed by a skilled hand. Do not let your nails project, and keep them free of dirt, nor let any hair be in the hollow of your nostrils. Let not your breath be sour, nor permit the lord and master of the herd to offend the nose.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 513.

My galligaskins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury, and encroaching frosts,
By time subdued (what will not time subdue?)

An horrid chasm disclosed.

JOHN PHILLIPS, The Splendid Shilling, l. 121.

5
Thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloak, is nothing to a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 127.

6
King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown;
He held them sixpence all too dear,
With that he call'd the tailor lown.

He was a wight of high renown,
And thou art but of low degree:

'Tis pride that pulls the country down;
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 92. This is a variation of an old ballad, Take Thy Auld Cloak About Thee, given in Percy, Reliques. "Lown" is probably a misprint for "clown," as given in the Percy manuscript.

7
He will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors; and cross-gartered, a fashion she detests.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 216.

8
Where did you get that hat?
Where did you get that tile?

Isn't it a nobby one,
And just the proper style?

JOSEPH J. SULLIVAN, Where Did You Get That Hat? A popular song, written in 1888:

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 34. A derivative of the phrase of Alcæus.

So was her jolly whistle well y-wet.

CHAUCER, The Reeves Tale, l. 235. (c. 1386)

All with wine their whistles wet.

BARNABE GOOGE, Popish Kingdom, 50. (1570)

Well may I my whistle wet, for sure the subject's dry.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, 64. (1685)

For, whether we're right or whether we're wrong,
There's a rose for every thistle.

Here's luck!

And a drop to wet your whistle!

It seems to me that that rule which holds in the feasts of the Greeks, is to be observed, too, in life: "Either let him drink," they say, "or depart." And with justice. For either let a man enjoy with others the pleasure of drinking; or let him first depart. (Aut bibat, aut abeat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. 5, ch. 41, sec. 118. The Greek proverb to which Cicero refers is: "ἢ πῖν' ἢ ἀπέρχ'."

We'll teach you to drink deep ere you depart.

<sup>16</sup>
I pray thee let me and my fellow have
A hair of the dog that bit us last night.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 11. Inebriates were always advised to drink in the morning some of the same liquor they had drunk to excess the night before.

'Twas a hot night with some of us last night,
John: shall we pluck a hair of the same wolf to-day, proctor John?

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i.

If they, in the morning, did fall to drinking again, taking a hair of the old dog.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, English Rogue. iii, 91.

A hair of the same dog next morning
Is best to quench our fev'rish burning.

EDWARD WARD, Brit. Wonders, 17.

He poured out a large bumper of brandy, exhorting me to swallow "a hair of the dog that bit me."

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 12.

If any so wise is, that sack he despises,
Let him drink his small beer and be sober;
And while we drink and sing, as if it were spring,
He shall droop like the trees in October.
But be sure overnight, if this dog do you bite,
You may take it henceforth for a warning;
Soon as out of your bed, to settle your head,
Take a hair of his tail in the morning.

5 The dew was falling fast, the stars began to blink;

I heard a voice; it said, "Drink, pretty creature, drink!"

WORDSWORTH, The Pet Lamb.

6 It's a long time between drinks.

The expression, "It is too long between drinks," "It's a long time between drinks," is undoubtedly an invention. There is no record of its having occurred in any conference between governors of the Carolinas. My guess is that when a convivial party was having a good time one night and matters became a little slow, some booster of the party asked the question, "What did the governor of North Carolina say to the Governor of South Carolina?" And when they all gave it up, he furnished the answer, "It is too long between drinks."—A. S. Salley, Secretary Historical Commission of South Carolina, in a letter to the compiler, 28 May, 1932. The expression antedates the Civil War, and many stories have been invented to explain it. John Motley Morehead states that there is a legend in his family that his grandfather was the governor of North Carolina who made the historic remark. Another legend credits it to Zebulon B. Vance, governor of North Carolina at the time Wade Hampton was governor of South Carolina. There are several other explanations, none of which has any historical foundation.

II—Drinking: Its Pleasures

7 Fill up the goblet and reach to me some!

Drinking makes wise, but dry fasting makes glum.

W. R. ALGER, Oriental Poetry: Wine Song of Kaitmas.

8 The thirsty Earth soaks up the Rain,
And drinks, and gapes for Drink again;
The Plants suck in the Earth, and are
With constant drinking fresh and fair. . . .
Nothing in Nature's sober found,
But an eternal Health goes round.
Fill up the Bowl then, fill it high,
Fill all the Glasses there; for why
Should every Creature drink but I?
Why, Men of Morals, tell me why?

ANACREON, Odes. No. 21. (Cowley, tr.)

9 Weak withering age no rigid law forbids,
With frugal nectar, smooth and slow with balm,

The sapless habit daily to bedew,
And give the hesitating wheels of life
Gliblier to play.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Pt. ii, l. 484. (1744)

10 We also had drink of three kinds, all wholesome and good; wine of the grape; a drink of grain, such as is with us our ale but more clear; and a kind of cider made of a fruit of that country, a wonderful pleasing and refreshing drink.

FRANCIS BACON, New Atlantis. Sec. 3.

11 We'll tak' a right gude-willie waught
For Auld Lang Syne.

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. Frequently misquoted "gude willie-waught." "Gude-willie waught" means good-will draught. The other is nonsense.

Just a wee deoch-an-doris, just a wee yin, that's a'.

Just a wee deoch-an-doris before we gang a-wa',
There's a wee wife waitin', in a wee but-an-ben;
If you can say "It's a braw bricht moon-licht nicht,"

Y're a 'richt ye ken.

HARRY LAUDER, Just a Wee Deoch-an-Doris.

12 Food fills the wame, an' keep us livin'; . . .
But, oiled by thee,

The wheels o' life gae down-hill scievin',
Wi' rattlin' glee.

ROBERT BURNS, Scotch Drink. St. 5.

Leeze me on drink! it gies us mair
Than either school or college:

It kindles wit, it waukens lair,
It pangs us fou o' knowledge.

ROBERT BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 19.

13 Fill the goblet again! for I never before Felt the glow which now gladdens my heart to its core;

Let us drink!—who would not?—since,
through life's varied round,

In goblet alone no deception is found.
BYRON, Fill the Goblet Again.

Unknown to the Turk or the Persian.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 2.

<sup>2</sup>
Then trust me there's nothing like drinking
So pleasant on this side the grave;
It keeps the unhappy from thinking,
And makes e'en the valiant more brave.
CHARLES DIBDIN, Nothing Like Grog.

<sup>3</sup>
"Mrs. Harris," I says, "leave the bottle on the chimley-piece, and don't ask me to take none, but let me put my lips to it when I

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 19.

<sup>4</sup>
The peculiar charm of alcohol lies in the sense of careless well-being and bodily and mental comfort which it creates. It unbur-dens the individual of his cares and his fears. . . . Under such conditions it is easy to laugh or to weep, to love or to hate, not wisely but too well.

DR. HAVEN EMERSON, Alcohol and Man.

Bacchus ever fair and young,
Drinking joys did first ordain;
Bacchus' blessings are a treasure,
Drinking is the soldier's pleasure:
Rich the treasure, Sweet the pleasure,
Sweet is pleasure after pain.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 49.

<sup>7</sup>
Drink to-day, and drown all sorrow;
You shall perhaps not do it to-morrow:
Best, while you have it, use your breath;
There is no drinking after death.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother. Act ii,
sc. 2.

<sup>8</sup>
Let's warm our brains with half-a-dozen

There are two reasons for drinking: one is,
when you are thirsty, to cure it; the other,
when you are not thirsty, to prevent it. . . .
Prevention is better than cure.

T. L. PEACOCK, Melincourt. Ch. 16.

If all be true that I do think,
There are five reasons we should drink;
Good wine—a friend—or being dry—
Or lest we should be by and by—
Or any other reason why.

(Si bene commemini, causæ sunt quinque bi-spent since I began to earn my living, of the expenditure of which I am less ashamed, or which gave me better value in return, than the price of the liquids chronicled in this booklet.

GEORGE SAINTSBURY, Notes on a Cellar-Book,
p. 14.

There is absolutely no scientific proof of a trustworthy kind, that moderate consumption of sound alcoholic liquor does a healthy body any harm at all; while on the other hand there is the unbroken testimony of all history that alcoholic liquors have been used by the strongest, wisest, handsomest, and in every way best races of all times.

I cannot eat but little meat,
My stomach is not good;
But sure I think that I can drink
With him that wears a hood.
JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act ii, l. 1. Said to be from a song older than the play. It is also uncertain whether Bishop Still wrote the play, which has been attributed to Nicholas Udall and to John Bridges, Dean of Salisbury. The authorship of the song has been claimed for William Stevenson, of Durham.

He that drinks well, sleeps well.
THOMAS WILSON, Rule of Reason. (1551)
He that eateth well, drinketh well; he that drinketh well, sleepeth well; he that sleepeth well, sinneth not; he that sinneth not goeth straight through Purgatory to Paradise.
WILLIAM LITGOW, Rare Adventures. (1609)

He that drinks well, does sleep well;
He that sleeps well, doth think well;

He that thinks well, doth do well;
He that does well, must drink well.
UNKNOWN, Loyal Garland. Song 65. (1686)

Drinking will make a man quaff,
Quaffing will make a man sing,
Singing will make a man laugh,
And laughing long life doth bring,
Saith old Simon the King.
UNKNOWN, Old Simon the King. (D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy.) The reference is said to be to Simon Wadloe, keeper of the Devil Tavern, in Fleet Street, about 1621.

And we're no very fou, but we're gaily yet;
Then sit ye a while, and tippie a bit,
For we're no very fou, but we're gaily yet.
UNKNOWN. Introduced into the third act of Vanbrugh's The Provoked Wife, apparently by Fowler, the printer of the play, and called a Scotch medley.

III—Drinking: Its Penalties

10
Beware the deadly fumes of that insane elation
Which rises from the cup of mad impiety,
And go, get drunk with that divine intoxication
Which is more sober far than all sobriety.
W. R. ALGER, Oriental Poetry: The Sober Drunkenness.

11
For when the wine is in, the wit is out.
THOMAS BECON, Catechism, 375. (1558)
Where the drink goes in, there the wit goes out.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

When the wine's in, murder will out.
Talmud. Erubin 65.

12
There's Death in the cup—so beware!
Nay, more—there is danger in touching;
But who can avoid the fell snare?
The man and his wine's so bewitching!
BURNS, On a Goblet.

For though within this bright seductive place
My dollars go not far,
I never more shall see them face to face,
When they have crossed the bar!
BLISS CARMAN, Crossing the Bar.

14
Ha! see where the wild-blazing Grog-Shop appears,
As the red waves of wretchedness swell,
How it burns on the edge of tempestuous years
The horrible Light-House of Hell!
M'DONALD CLARKE, The Rum Hole.

15
Ten thousand casks,
Forever dribbling out their base contents,
Touch'd by the Midas finger of the state,

Bleed gold for ministers to sport away.
Drink, and be mad then; 'tis your country
bids!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 504.

1 Drink not the third glass, which thou canst not tame,
When once it is within thee; but before Mayst rule it, as thou list; and pour the shame,
Which it would pour on thee, upon the floor.

It is most just to throw that on the ground,
Which would throw thee there, if I kept the round.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 5.

2 But they also have erred through wine, and through strong drink.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 7.

3 Their sinfulness is greater than their use.
The Koran. Ch. 2. Of wine and gambling.

4 Dread the delight of drink and thou shalt do the better.

Though thou long for more, Measure is Medicine.

What the belly asketh is not all good for the ghost,

What the soul loveth is not all food for the body.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman: The Vision of Holy Church, l. 29.

5 Touch the goblet no more!
It will make thy heart sore
To its very core!
Its perfume is the breath
Of the Angel of Death,
And the light that within it lies
Is the flash of his evil eyes.

Beware! Oh, beware!
For sickness, sorrow, and care
All are there!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

6 Long quaffing maketh a short lyfe.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues.

7 Soon as the potion works, their human count'nance,
Th' express resemblance of the gods, is chang'd

Into some brutish form of wolf or bear,
Or ounce or tiger, hog, or bearded goat,
All other parts remaining as they were;
And they, so perfect is their misery,
Not once perceive their foul disfigurement.
MILTON, Comus, l. 68.

O madness, to think use of strongest wines
And strongest drinks our chief support of health,

When God with these forbidden made choice to rear

His mighty Champion, strong above compare,
Whose drink was only from the liquid brook.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 553.

8 Indeed the Idols I have loved so long
Have done my credit in the World much wrong:

Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup,
And sold my Reputation for a Song.

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. St. 93. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

9 It has passed into a proverb that wisdom is clouded by wine. (In proverbium cessit, sapientiam vino obumbrari.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxiii,
sec. 1, l. 23.

10 They never taste who always drink.

MATTHEW PRIOR, On a Passage in the Scaligerana.

11 In vain I trusted that the flowing bowl
Would banish sorrow, and enlarge the soul.
To the late revel, and protracted feast,
Wild dreams succeeded, and disorder'd rest.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 106.

And in the flowers that wreath the sparkling bowl

Fell adders hiss and poisonous serpents roll.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 140.

Thou sparkling bowl! thou sparkling bowl!
Though lips of bards thy brim may press . . .
I will not touch thee; for there clings
A scorpion to thy side, that stings!

JOHN PIERPONT, The Sparkling Bowl.

12 Men fished for women, and women for men, in muddy water, and drink was the bait they used.

WILLIAM ROTHENSTEIN, Men and Memories,
1872-1900, p. 71.

WINE AND WOMEN, see under WINE.

13 Just as I do not care to live in a place of torture, neither do I care to live in a café.
(Quemadmodum inter tortores habitare nolim, sic ne inter popinas quidem.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 4.

14 I have very poor and unhappy brains for drinking: I could well wish courtesy would invent some other custom of entertainment.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 35.

15 O God, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! that we should, with joy, pleasance, revel and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 291.

16 Much drinking, little thinking.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Feb., 1711.

1 The vials of summer never made a man sick, but those which he stored in his cellar. Drink the wines, not of your bottling, but Nature's bottling; not kept in goat-skins or pig-skins, but the skins of a myriad fair berries.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 23 Aug., 1853.

2 Drink makes men hungry, or it makes them lie.

GEORGE WILKINS, The Miseries of Enforced Marriage. Act ii.

3 There's some are fou o' love divine, There's some are fou o' brandy.

ROBERT BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 27.

4 I always had on my journeys a pocket pistol loaded with brandy and lemon juice.

EDWARD BURT, Letters from a Gentleman in the North of Scotland.

5 Mynheer Vandunck, though he never was drunk,

Sipped brandy and water gayly.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Mynheer Vandunck.

6 Call things by their right names. . . . Glass of brandy and water! That is the current but not the appropriate name: ask for a glass of liquid fire and distilled damnation.

REV. ROBERT HALL, to a man who asked for a glass of brandy. (GREGORY, Life of Hall.)

Liquid Madness sold at tenpence the quatern.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Chartism. Ch. 4.

A drunkard clasp his teeth and not undo 'em, To suffer wet damnation to run through 'em.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, Revenger's Tragedy. Act iii, 1.

7 If wine tells truth,—and so have said the wise,—

It makes me laugh to think how brandy lies!

O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret, 1. 161.

8 As for the brandy, 'nothing extenuate;' and the water, put naught in in malice.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Shakespeare Grog.

9 Claret is the liquor for boys; port for men; but he who aspires to be a hero must drink brandy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, at dinner with Sir Joshua Reynolds. (BOSWELL, Life, 1779.)

If I had a thousand sons, the first human principal I would teach them should be—to forswear thin potations.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 133.

10 Did ye iver try a brandy cocktail, Cornel?

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 13.

11 What makes the cider blow its cork With such a merry din?

What makes those little bubbles rise And dance like harlequin?

It is the fatal apple, boys,

The fruit of human sin.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, A Glee Upon Cider.

12 While briskly to each patriot lip Walks eager round the inspiring flip; Delicious draught, whose pow'rs inherit The quintessence of public spirit!

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto iii, l. 21.

13 Meanwhile, my friend, 'twould be no sin To mix more water in your gin.

We're neither saints nor Philip Sidneys, But mortal men with mortal kidneys.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy.

The shortest way out of Manchester is notoriously a bottle of Gordon's gin.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Cagliostro (and Seraphina).

14 'Tis grog, only grog, Is his rudder, his compass, his cable, his log; The sailor's sheet anchor is grog.

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Sailor's Sheet Anchor.

15 He drinketh strong waters which do bemuse a man, and make him even as the wild beasts of the desert.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

16 This cordial julep here, That flames and dances in his crystal bounds. MILTON, Comus, l. 672.

17 There's nought, no doubt, so much the spirit calms

As rum and true religion; thus it was,

Some plunder'd, some drank spirits, some sung psalms.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 34.

18 Oh some are fond of red wines, and some are fond of white,

And some are all for dancing by the pale moonlight;

But rum alone's the tippie, and the heart's delight

Of the old bold mate of Henry Morgan.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy.

But I'm for right Jamaica till I roll beneath the bench,

Says the old bold mate of Henry Morgan.

JOHN MASEFIELD, Captain Stratton's Fancy.

19 The great utility of rum has given it the medical name of an antifogmatic. The quantity taken every morning is in exact proportion to the thickness of the fog.

UNKNOWN, Massachusetts Spy, 12 Nov., 1789.

V—Drinking Healths

<sup>11</sup> Waes-hael! for Lord and Dame!
O! merry be their Dole;
Drink-hael! in Jesu's name,
And fill the tawny bowl.
King Arthur's Waes-Hael.

<sup>12</sup> Here's a health to them that's awa,
Here's a health to them that's awa;
And wha winna wish guid luck to our cause,
May never guid luck be their fa'!
ROBERT BURNS, Here's a Health.

<sup>13</sup> My boat is on the shore,
And my bark is on the sea;
But, before I go, Tom Moore,
Here's a double health to thee! . . .

Were 't the last drop in the well,
As I gasp'd upon the brink,
Ere my fainting spirit fell,
'Tis to thee that I would drink.
BYRON, My Boat is On the Shore.

<sup>14</sup> Drink ye to her that each loves best,
And, if you nurse a flame
That's told but to her mutual breast,
We will not ask her name.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Drink Ye to Her.

<sup>15</sup> To drink healths is to drink sickness.
THOMAS DEKKER, II The Honest Whore. Act
iv, sc. 3. (1635)

We drink one another's healths and spoil our own.

JEROME K. JEROME, *Idle Thoughts of an Idle
Fellow: On Eating and Drinking*.

So the sailors in this ship [the Carouse] have taken a use to drink other men's healths, to the amplifying of their own diseases.

JOHN TAYLOR, Navy of Land Ships. (c. 1650)

<sup>16</sup> But the standing toast that pleased the most
Was, "The wind that blows, the ship that goes,
And the lass that loves a sailor!"

CHARLES DIBDIN, The Standing Toast. From the comic opera, The Round Robin, produced 21 June, 1811.

To the young, all health and pleasure.

BEN JONSON, Metamorphosed Gipsies: Third Song.

4 Give me the cups;
And let the kettle to the trumpet speak,
The trumpet to the cannoneer without,
The cannons to the heavens, the heavens to earth,

"Now the king drinks to Hamlet."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 285.

I drink to the general joy o' the whole table.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 89.

Here, with a cup that's stored unto the brim
. . . We drink this health to you.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 50.

5 Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen;
Here's to the widow of fifty;

Here's to the flaunting, extravagant quean;
And here's to the housewife that's thrifty.
Let the toast pass,—
Drink to the lass,

I'll warrant she'll prove an excuse for the glass.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iii, sc. 3.

6 A health to the nut-brown lass,
With the hazel eyes: let it pass. . . .

As much to the lively grey
'Tis as good i' th' night as day: . . .
She's a savour to the glass,
An excuse to make it pass.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Goblins. Act iii.

7 Wine fills the veins, and healths are understood

To give our friends a title to our blood.

EDMUND WALLER, The Drinking of Healths.

8 Here's a health to all those that we love,
Here's a health to all those that love us,
Here's a health to all those that love them that love those

That love them that love those that love us.

Falls with the leaf still in October.
JOHN FLETCHER, Bloody Brother. Act ii, sc. 2.

He who goes to bed, and goes to bed sober,
Falls as the leaves do, and dies in October;
But he who goes to bed, and goes to bed mellow,

Lives as he ought to do, and dies an honest fellow.

UNKNOWN, an amplification of Fletcher's song, which was for a time a popular glee.

I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking;
So full of valour that they smote the air
For breathing in their faces; beat the ground
For kissing of their feet.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 171.

III—Drunkenness: Its Penalties

<sup>12</sup>
Where drunkenness reigneth in any route,
There is no counsel hid, withouten doubt.
CHAUCER, Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 776.

For drunkenness is very sepulture
Of manne's wit and his discretion.
CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 230.

And drunkenness is eke a foul record
Of any man, and namely in a lord.
CHAUCER, The Sumnours Tale, l. 341.

But who drinks on, to hell may go.
GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

<sup>18</sup>
He that is drunken, may his mother kill
Big with his sister: he hath lost the reins,
Is outlaw'd by himself: all kind of ill
Did with his liquor slide into his veins.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 6.

Shall I, to please another wine-sprung mind,
Lose all mine own?
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 7.

Be not a beast in courtesy, but stay,
Stay at the third cup, or forego the place.
Wine above all things doth God's stamp deface.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 8.

1 What does drunkenness not accomplish? It unlocks secrets, confirms our hopes, urges the indolent into battle, lifts the burden from anxious minds, teaches new arts. (Quid non ebrietas designat? Operta recludit, Spes jubet esse ratas, in proelia trudit inertem, Sollicitis animis onus eximit, addocet artes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 16.

2 Racked by wine and anger. (Vino tortus et ira.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 38. Thus induced to reveal another's secrets.

3 Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink.

4 They lay and slept like drunken swine.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 2369. (c. 1440)

5 Whatsoever is in the heart of the sober man, is in the mouth of the drunkard.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 146.

6 Your drunken banquets tell your vileness. (Nequitiam vinosa tuam convivia narrant.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. i, l. 17.

Till the half-drunk lean over the half-dressed.

ALFRED AUSTIN, The Season.

7 There, with the wine before you, you will tell of many things. (Illic adposito narrabis multa Lyæo.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. xi, l. 49.

8 Drunkenness is an expression identical with ruin.

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras.)

9 Drunkenness is nothing but voluntary madness. (Nihil aliud est ebrietatem quam voluntariam insaniam.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxiii, 18.

10 Drunkenness does not create vice; it merely brings it into view. (Non facit ebrietas vitia, sed protrahit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxiii, 20.

There is more of turn than of truth in a saying of Seneca, 'That drunkenness does not produce but discover faults.' Common experience teaches the contrary. Wine throws a man out of himself, and infuses qualities into the mind which she is a stranger to in her sober moments.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 569.

11 His two chamberlains
Will I with wine and wassail so convince,

That memory, the warder of the brain,
Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
A limbeck only.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 63.

Boundless intemperance

In nature is a tyranny; it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne
And fall of many kings.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.

Drunk? and speak parrot? and squabble? swagger? swear? and discourse fustian with one's own shadow?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 280.

To be now a sensible man, by and by a fool, and presently a beast! O strange! Every inordinate cup is unblessed and the ingredient is a devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 309.

12 Olivia: What's a drunken man like, fool?
Clown: Like a drowned man, a fool and a mad man: one draught above heat makes him a fool; the second mads him; and a third drowns him.

Olivia: Go thou and seek the crowner, and let him sit o' my coz; for he's in the third degree of drink, he's drowned.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 136.

13 No fool is silent over his cups.

SOLON, when asked whether he was silent over his cups for want of words, or because he was a fool. (EPICTETUS, Fragments, lxxvi.)

14 Drunkenness is an immoderate affection and use of drink. That I call immoderation that is besides or beyond that order of good things for which God hath given us the use of drink.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living: Of Drunkenness. Pt. ii, ch. 2.

IV—Drunkenness: The Morning After

15 A dark brown taste, a burning thirst,
A head that's ready to split and burst.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu.

It is no time for mirth or laughter—

The cold gray dawn of the morning after.

GEORGE ADE, Remorse, from The Sultan of Sulu.

16 Who drinks one bowl hath scant delight; to poorest passion he was born;

Who drains the score must e'er expect to rue the headache of the morn.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 11.

17 Man, being reasonable, must get drunk;
The best of life is but intoxication:

Glory, the grape, love, gold, in these are sunk
The hopes of all men and of every nation;

Without their sap, how branchless were the trunk

Of life's strange tree, so fruitful on occasion:

But to return,—Get very drunk; and when You wake with headache, you shall see what then.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 179.

1 A drunken night makes a cloudy morning.
SIR WILLIAM CORNWALLIS, Essays. Pt. ii. (1601)

2 How gracious those dews of solace that over my senses fall

At the clink of the ice in the pitcher the boy brings up the hall.

EUGENE FIELD, The Clink of the Ice.

I've a head like a concertina: I've a tongue like a button-stick.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Cells, l. 1.

3 On his weary couch
Fat Luxury, sick of the night's debauch,
Lay groaning, fretful at the obtrusive beam
That through his lattice peeped derisively.
POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. vii, l. 69.

4 Will the cold brook,
Candied with ice, caudle thy morning taste,
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit?

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 225.

5 Drunken days have all their tomorrows.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 167.

DRYDEN, JOHN

6 Dryden's genius was of that sort which catches fire by its own motion: his chariot-wheels got hot by driving fast.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

7 Behold, where Dryden's less presumptuous car,

Wide o'er the fields of glory bear
Two coursers of ethereal race,
With necks in thunder cloth'd and long-resounding pace.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 103.

8 I told him [Johnson] that Voltaire, in a conversation with me, had distinguished Pope and Dryden thus: "Pope drives a handsome chariot, with a couple of neat trim nags; Dryden, a coach and six stately horses." Johnson.—"Why, sir, the truth is, they both drive coaches and six; but Dryden's horses are either galloping or stumbling: Pope's go at a steady even trot."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, Feb., 1766.)

The father of English criticism.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Dryden.

9 We feel that he [Dryden] never heartily and sincerely praised any human being, or felt any real enthusiasm for any subject he took up.

JOHN KEEBLE, Lectures on Poetry.

10 Waller was smooth, but Dryden taught to join

The varying verse, the full resounding line,
The long majestic march, and energy divine.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 267.

Ev'n copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
The last and greatest art,—the art to blot.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 280.

DUELLING

11 It has a strange, quick jar upon the ear,
That cocking of a pistol, when you know
A moment more will bring the sight to bear
Upon your person, twelve yards off or so.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 41.

12 Some fiery fop, with new commission vain,
Who sleeps on brambles till he kills his man;
Some frolic drunkard, reeling from a feast,
Provokes a broil, and stabs you for a jest.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 226.

13 Who dares this pair of boots displace
Must meet Bombastes face to face.
W. B. RHODES, Bombastes Furioso. Act i, sc. 4.

14 I never in my life
Did hear a challenge urg'd more modestly,
Unless a brother should a brother dare
To gentle exercise and proof of arms.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 2, l. 52.

15 The passado he respects not, the duello he regards not.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 185.

He fights as you sing prick-song, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests me his minim rest, one, two, and the third in your bosom: the very butcher of a silk button, a duellist, a duellist; a gentleman of the very first house, of the first and second cause: ah, the immortal passado! the punto reverso! the hai!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, iv, 20.

16 If I were young again, the sword should end it.

SHAKESPEARE, Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 41.

There I throw my gage,
To prove it on thee to the extremest point
Of mortal breathing.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 46.

17 Plague on't; an I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in fence, I'd have seen him damned ere I'd have challenged him.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 311.

<sup>1</sup>
When you meet your antagonist, do everything in a mild and agreeable manner. Let your courage be as keen, but at the same time as polished, as your sword.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 4.

DUTY

Thanks to the gods! my boy has done his duty.
JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

I've done my duty, and I've done no more.
FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 3.

It is my duty, and I will.
W. S. GILBERT, Captain Reece.

Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty.

SIR HENRY LAWRENCE, Epitaph. Lawrence,
one of the heroes of the defence of Lucknow, desired this sentence engraved on his tomb.

I am quite happy, thank God, and, like Lawrence,
I have tried to do my duty.

GENERAL CHARLES GEORGE GORDON, Postscript, to his last letter from Khartoum, 29 Dec., 1884.

Thank God, I have done my duty.
HORATIO NELSON, his last words. (HUME, History of England.)

<sup>3</sup>
In doing what we ought we deserve no praise, because it is our duty.
ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x.

<sup>4</sup>
He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw
when he may have forgotten its cause.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

<sup>5</sup>
Thine heart should feel what thou mayst hourly see,
That Duty's basis is humanity.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, The Farmer's Boy: Winter, l. 105.

<sup>6</sup>
To do my duty in that state of life unto which it shall please God to call me.
Book of Common Prayer: Catechism.

<sup>7</sup>
He trespasses against his duty who sleeps upon his watch, as well as he that goes over to the enemy.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents.

<sup>8</sup>
No phase of life, whether public or private, can be free from duty. (Nulla vitæ pars neque publicis neque privatis . . . vacare officio potest.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 4.

<sup>9</sup>
Ponder not what you might do, but what you should do, and let regard for duty control your mind. (Nec tibi quid liceat, sed quid fecisse decebit Occurat, mentemque domet respectus honesti.)

CLAUDIAN, *Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu
Honorii Augusti*, l. 267.

<sup>10</sup>
God has never failed to make known to me
the path of duty.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter, 18 March, 1906.

<sup>11</sup>
And rank for her meant duty, various,
Yet equal in its worth, done worthily.

GEORGE ELIOT, Agatha.

<sup>12</sup>
When a duty ceases to be a pleasure, then it ceases to exist.

NORMAN DOUGLAS, Good-bye to Western Culture.

<sup>13</sup>
What I must do is all that concerns me, not what the people think.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

<sup>14</sup>
So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man,
When Duty whispers low, Thou must,
The youth replies, I can.

EMERSON, Voluntaries. St. iii, l. 13.

<sup>15</sup>
Slight not what's near through aiming at what's far. (Μή νυν τὰ πόρρω ταγγύθεν μεθεῖς σκόπει.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 482.

Do well the duty that lies before you. (Τὸ παρὸν εὖ ποιεῖν.)

PITTACUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk.
i, sec. 77.)

Do the duty that lies nearest thee; which thou knowest to be a duty! The second duty will already become clearer.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. ix.

The only way to regenerate the world is to do the thing which lies nearest us, and not hunt after grand, far-fetched ones for ourselves.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Letters and Memories.

<sup>16</sup>
For duty, duty must be done;
The rule applies to everyone,
And painful though that duty be,
To shirk the task were fiddle-de-dee!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

When stern Duty calls, I must obey.

W. S. GILBERT, The Pirates of Penzance. Act ii.

<sup>17</sup>
What, then, is your duty? What the day demands. (Was aber ist deine Pflicht? Die Forderung des Tages.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa, iii, 151.

No one will consider the day as ended, until the duties it brings have been discharged.

GENERAL JOSEPH HOOKER, Order, assuming command of the Department of the Northwest, 1865.

1 He were n't no saint,—but at jedgment
I'd run my chance with Jim,
'Longside of some pious gentlemen
That wouldn't shook hands with him.
He seen his duty, a dead-sure thing,—
And went for it thar and then;
And Christ ain't a-going to be too hard
On a man that died for men.
JOHN HAY, Jim Bludso.

2 Then on! then on! where duty leads,
My course be onward still.
REGINALD HEBER, Journal.

3 The straightest path perhaps which may be sought,
Lies through the great highway men call
"I ought."
ELLEN STURGIS HOOPER, The Straight Road.

4 I slept, and dreamed that life was Beauty;
I woke, and found that life was Duty.
Was thy dream then a shadowy lie?
Toil on, sad heart, courageously,
And thou shalt find thy dream to be
A noonday light and truth to thee.
ELLEN STURGIS HOOPER, Beauty and Duty.

Hath the spirit of all beauty
Kissed you in the path of duty?
ANNA KATHERINE GREEN, On the Threshold.

Straight is the line of Duty;
Curved is the line of Beauty;
Follow the straight line, thou shalt see
The curved line ever follow thee.
WILLIAM MACCALL, Duty.

Beauty, strength, youth, are flowers but fading seen;
Duty, faith, love, are roots, and ever green.
GEORGE PEELE, A Farewell to Arms.

5 The trivial round, the common task,
Would furnish all we ought to ask;
Room to deny ourselves; a road
To bring us, daily, nearer God.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.

6 Duty then is the sublimest word in our language. Do your duty in all things. You cannot do more. You should never wish to do less.

ROBERT E. LEE. Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

7 Thet tells the story! Thet's wut we shall git
By tryin' squirtguns on the burnin' Pit;
For the day never comes when it'll du
To kick off Dooty like a worn-out shoe.
J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 11.

8 You would not think any duty small
If you yourself were great.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Willie's Question. Pt. iv.

9 Duty determines destiny.
WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Speech, Chicago, 19 Oct., 1898.

10 Truth is a divine word. Duty is a divine law.
DOUGLAS C. MACINTOSH. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 142.)

11 Every mission constitutes a pledge of duty.
Every man is bound to consecrate his every faculty to its fulfilment. He will derive his rule of action from the profound conviction of that duty.

MAZZINI, Life and Writings: Young Europe.

12 If a sense of duty tortures a man, it also enables him to achieve prodigies.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. i, p. 64.

God helps us do our duty and not shrink,
And trust His mercy humbly for the rest.
OWEN MEREDITH, Imperfection.

13 When Duty comes a-knocking at your gate,
Welcome him in; for if you bid him wait,
He will depart only to come once more
And bring seven other duties to your door.
EDWIN MARKHAM, Duty.

14 Knowledge is a steep which few may climb,
While Duty is a path which all may tread.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Epic of Hades: Heré.

15 To an honest man, it is an honor to have remembered his duty.
PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 71.

16 Thy sum of duty let two words contain;
(O may they graven in thy heart remain!)
Be humble, and be just.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World. Bk. iii, l. 867.

17 And I read the moral—A brave endeavor
To do thy duty, whate'er its worth,
Is better than life with love forever,
And love is the sweetest thing on earth.
JAMES JEFFREY ROCHE, Sir Hugo's Choice.

18 God never imposes a duty without giving time to do it.
JOHN RUSKIN, Lectures on Architecture. No. 2.

19 A categorical imperative crying in the wilderness, a duty which nobody need listen to, or suffer for disregarding, seemed rather a forlorn authority.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, Essays: Kant.

20 Alas! when duty grows thy law, enjoyment fades away.
SCHILLER, The Playing Infant.

21 'Tis praiseworthy to do not what one may,

but what one ought. (Id facere laus est quod decet, non quod licet.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 454. Quoted by Cicero, Pro Rabirio. Sec. 5.

1 I owe him little duty and less love.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 34.

2 My ever esteemed duty pricks me on.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 268.

And in the modesty of fearful duty
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 101.

3 It is a man's office, but not yours.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iv, sc. 1, l. 268.

I do perceive here a divided duty.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 181.

4 Of all the ways of life but one—
The path of duty—leads to happiness.

SOUTHEY, Carmen Nuptiale. St. 65.

There's life alone in duty done,
And rest alone in striving.

WHITTIER, The Drovers.

5 That peace
Which follows painful duty well perform'd.
SOUTHEY, Roderick. Pt. vii, l. 185.

6 Yea, let all things good await
Him who cares not to be great,
But as he saves or serves the state.
Not once or twice in our rough island-story,
The path of duty was the way to glory.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. St. 8.

7 I will perform a useless duty. (Fungar inani Munere.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 885.

8 A sense of duty pursues us ever. It is omnipresent, like the Deity. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us, for our happiness or our misery. If we say the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light our obligations are yet with us.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Argument on the Murder of Captain White.

Simple duty hath no place for fear.

WHITTIER, Abraham Davenport. Last line.

9 Duty is what one expects from others.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act ii,

10 There is no question what the roll of honor in America is. The roll of honor consists of the names of men who have squared their conduct by ideals of duty.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 27 Feb., 1916.

11 A light of duty shines on every day
For all; and yet how few are warmed or cheered!

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. v, l. 383.

The primal duties shine aloft like stars.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 236.

12 Stern Daughter of the Voice of God!
O Duty! if that name thou love
Who art a light to guide, a rod
To check the erring, and reprove;
Thou, who art victory and law
When empty terrors overawe;
From vain temptations dost set free;
And calm'st the weary strife of frail humanity!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 1.

Left that command Sole daughter of his voice.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 652.

13 There are who ask not if thine eye
Be on them; who, in love and truth,
Where no misgiving is, rely
Upon the genial sense of youth:
Glad Hearts! without reproach or blot;
Who do thy work, and know it not:
Oh! if through confidence misplaced
They fail, thy saving arms, dread Power!
around them cast.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 2.

Serene will be our days and bright,
And happy will our nature be,
When love is an unerring light,
And joy its own security.
And they a blissful course may hold
Even now, who, not unwisely bold,
Live in the spirit of this creed;
Yet seek thy firm support, according to their need.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 3.

Stern Lawgiver! yet thou dost wear
The Godhead's most benignant grace;
Nor know we anything so fair
As is the smile upon thy face:
Flowers laugh before thee on their beds
And fragrance in thy footing treads;
Thou dost preserve the stars from wrong;
And the most ancient heavens, through Thee, are fresh and strong.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 6.

The confidence of reason give;
And in the light of truth thy Bondman let me live!

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 7.

1 And 'tis an added grief that with my own feathers I am slain. (Καὶ τοῦτό μοι ἑτέρα λύπη, τὸ τοῖς ἰδίοις πτεροῖς ἐναποθνῆσκειν.)

ÆSOP, Fables: The Eagle and the Arrow. The idea of the eagle slain by a feather from his own wing is repeated many times in classical literature.

So, in the Libyan fable it is told
That once an eagle, stricken with a dart,
Said, when he saw the fashion of the shaft,
"With our own feathers, not by others' hand
Are we now smitten."

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 63.

2 So the struck eagle, stretch'd upon the plain,
No more through rolling clouds to soar again,
View'd his own feather on the fatal dart,
And wing'd the shaft that quiver'd in his heart:

Keen were his pangs, but keener far to feel
He nursed the pinion which impell'd the steel,
While the same plumage that had warm'd his nest

Drank the last life-drop of his bleeding breast.
BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 841.

Like a young eagle, who has lent his plume
To fledge the shaft by which he meets his doom,
See their own feathers pluck'd, to wing the dart
Which rank corruption destines for their heart!

THOMAS MOORE, Corruption, l. 95.

That eagle's fate and mine are one,
Which, on the shaft that made him die,
Espied a feather of his own,
Wherewith he went to soar so high.

EDMUND WALLER, To a Lady Singing a Song of His Composing.

3 The eagle never lost so much time as when he submitted to learn of the crow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

4 When thou seest an eagle, thou seest a portion of Genius; lift up thy head!

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

5 Perched on the eagle's towering wing
The lowly linnet loves to sing.

COLLEY CIBBER, Birthday Ode.

Fool that I was! upon my eagle's wings
I bore this wren, till I was tired with soaring,
And now he mounts above me.

DRYDEN, All for Love, Act ii, sc. 1.

Thus the fable tells us, that the wren mounted as high as the eagle, by getting upon his back.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 224.

6 As if an eagle flew aloft, and then—

Stoop'd from his highest pitch to pounce a wren.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 552.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 1, l. 132.

3 But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no track behind.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 4, 49.

4 The eagle suffers little birds to sing,
And is not careful what they mean thereby.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 4, 83.

5 Around, around, in ceaseless circles wheeling
With clang of wings and scream, the Eagle sailed

Incessantly—sometimes on high concealing
Its lessening orbs, sometimes as if it failed,
Drooped thro' the air.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto i, st. 10.

6 He clasps the crag with crooked hands;
Close to the sun in lonely lands,
Ring'd with the azure world, he stands.

The wrinkled sea beneath him crawls:
He watches from his mountain walls,
And like a thunderbolt he falls.

TENNYSON, The Eagle.

7 Shall eagles not be eagles? wrens be wrens?
If all the world were falcons, what of that?
The wonder of the eagle were the less,
But he not less the eagle.

I suppose her ladyship plays sometimes for an egg at Easter.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

A kiss at Christmas and an egg at Easter.

UNKNOWN, Denham Tracts, ii, 92.

13 Neither might the gates of death, nor the tomb's dark portal,

Nor the watchers nor the seal, hold Thee as a mortal.

But today amidst the Twelve Thou didst stand, bestowing

That Thy peace, which evermore passeth human knowing.

JOHN OF DAMASCUS, Come, Ye Faithful. (Neale, tr.)

The day of resurrection! Earth tell it out abroad;
The Passover of gladness, the Passover of God.
From death to life eternal, from this world to the sky,

Our Christ hath brought us over, with hymns of victory.

JOHN OF DAMASCUS, The Day of Resurrection. (Neale, tr.)

14 Thou art the Sun of other days,
They shine by giving back thy rays.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Easter Day.

15 Come, ye saints, look here and wonder,
See the place where Jesus lay;

He has burst His bands asunder;
He has borne our sins away;

Joyful tidings,

Yes, the Lord has risen to-day.

THOMAS KELLY, Come, Ye Saints.

16 At Easter let your clothes be new,
Or else be sure you will it rue.

LEAN, Collectanea. Pt. i, p. 378.

Didst thou not fall out with a tailor for wearing his new doublet before Easter?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 30.

<sup>1</sup> 'Twas Easter Sunday. The full blossomed trees

Filled all the air with fragrance and with joy.
LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>2</sup> O chime of sweet Saint Charity,
Peal soon that Easter morn
When Christ for all shall risen be,
And in all hearts new-born!
J. R. LOWELL, Godminster Chimes. St. 7.

<sup>3</sup> In the bonds of Death He lay
Who for our offence was slain;
But the Lord is risen to-day,
Christ hath brought us life again,
Wherefore let us all rejoice,
Singing loud, with cheerful voice,
Hallelujah!
MARTIN LUTHER, In the Bonds of Death.

<sup>4</sup> In vain with stone the cave they barred;
In vain the watch kept ward and guard;
Majestic from the spoiled tomb.
In pomp of triumph Christ is come.
JOHN MASON NEALE, Lift Up Your Voices.

<sup>5</sup> The fasts are done; the Aves said;
The moon has filled her horn,
And in the solemn night I watch
Before the Easter morn.
EDNA DEAN PROCTOR, Easter Morning.

I think of the garden after the rain;
And hope to my heart comes singing,
"At morn the cherry blooms will be white,
And the Easter bells be ringing!"
EDNA DEAN PROCTOR, Easter Bells.

<sup>6</sup> Spring bursts to-day,
For Christ is risen and all the earth's at play.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Easter Carol.

<sup>7</sup> Angels, roll the rock away;
Death, yield up thy mighty prey:
See, He rises from the tomb,
Glowing with immortal bloom.
Al-le-lu-ia! Al-le-lu-ia!
Christ the Lord is risen to-day!
THOMAS SCOTT, Easter Angels.

<sup>8</sup> God expects from men . . . that their Easter devotions would in some measure come up to their Easter dress.
ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons. Vol. ii, No. 8.

<sup>9</sup> Lift your glad voices in triumph on high,
For Jesus hath risen, and man cannot die.
HENRY WARE, JR., Lift Your Glad Voices.

<sup>10</sup> Hail the day that sees Him rise
To His throne above the skies;
Christ, awhile to mortals given,
Reascends His native Heaven.
CHARLES WESLEY, Ascension.

"Christ the Lord is risen to-day,"
Sons of men and angels say:
Raise your joys and triumphs high;
Sing, ye heavens, and earth, reply.
CHARLES WESLEY, Christ the Lord Is Risen.

<sup>11</sup> Christ is risen, Christ the first-fruits
Of the holy harvest-field,
Which will of its full abundance
At His second coming yield.
CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, Christ Is Risen.

He who on the cross a victim
For the world's salvation bled,
Jesus Christ, the King of Glory,
Now is risen from the dead.
CHRISTOPHER WORDSWORTH, The Resurrection.

<sup>12</sup> Jesus Christ is risen to-day,
Our triumphant holy day;
Who did once upon the cross
Suffer to redeem our loss.

Hallelujah!
UNKNOWN, Jesus Christ Is Risen To-day.

3 I wish that every peasant may have a chicken in his pot on Sundays. (Je veux que le dimanche chaque paysan ait sa poule au pot.)

HENRY IV of France, when he was crowned king.

4 The table robs more than a thief.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 In order to know whether a human being is young or old, offer it food of different kinds at short intervals. If young, it will eat anything at any hour of the day or night. If old, it observes stated periods.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3.

6 A handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruse.

Old Testament: I Kings, xvii, 12.

And the barrel of meal wasted not, neither did the cruse of oil fail.

Old Testament: I Kings, xvii, 16.

The smallest grain of meal would suit my necessity better (than this pearl). (Le moindre grain de mil Seroit bien mieux mon affaire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 20.

7 He hath a fair sepulchre in the grateful stomach of the judicious epicure—and for such a tomb might be content to die.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Dissertation upon Roast Pig.

8 What is food to one man may be fierce poison to others.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 637.

What's one man's poison, signor,
Is another's meat or drink.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 2.

The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as colocynthida.

13 Unquiet meals make ill digestions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v, sc. 1, l. 73.

To feed were best at home;
From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 35.

14 But mice, and rats, and such small deer,
Have been Tom's food for seven long year.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 143.

A quotation of a song found in the medieval manuscript, Sir Bevis of Hamtoun, l. 1427.

Titania: Or say, sweet love, what thou desirest to eat.

Bottom: Truly a peck of provender: I could munch your good dry oats. Methinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay, hath no fellow.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 32.

15 The nearest.

H. D. THOREAU, when asked at table which dish he preferred. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

16 The eye, can it feast when the stomach is starving?

Pray less of your gilding and more of your carving.

EGERTON WARBURTON, On a Mean Host.

Your supper is like the hidalgo's dinner, very little meat, and a great deal of tablecloth.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 4.

17 I were eaten out of house and of harbour.

UNKNOWN. (Towneley Plays, xiii, 124. c. 1400.)

Till we have eat him out of house and home.

JOHN DAY, Blind Beggar. Act iv, sc. 1. (1600)

They would eat me out of house and home, as the saying is.

SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc. 3.

He hath eaten me out of house and home.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 80.

II—Eating to Live, Living to Eat

18 Other men live to eat, while I eat to live.
("Ἄλλοις ἀνθρώποις ζῆν ἵν' ἐσθίωεν αὐτὸς δὲ ἐσθίειν ἵνα ζῶῃ.")

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 34; STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xvii, 22.)

Bad men live that they may eat and drink, whereas good men eat and drink that they may live.

SOCRATES. (PLUTARCH, How a Young Man Ought to Hear Poems.)

19 Thou shouldst eat to live, not live to eat.
(Esse oportet ut vivas, non vivere ut edas.)
CICERO, Rhetoricorum. Bk. iv, sec. 7.

Do not live to eat, but eat that you may live.
(Non vivas ut edas, sed edas ut vivere posses.)
DIONYSIUS, Fragments. Frag. 13.

Eat to live, and not live to eat.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

1 Cloyed with ragouts you scorn my simple food,

And think good eating is man's only good;
I ask no more than temperance can give;
You live to eat, I only eat to live.

RICHARD GRAVES, Diogenes to Aristippus.

2 One should eat to live, and not live to eat.
(Il faut manger pour vivre, et non pas vivre pour manger.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Avare. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 140.

We must eat to live and live to eat.

FIELDING, The Miser. Act iii, sc. 2. It will be noted that Fielding, either wilfully or inadvertently, omits the "not" in this translation of Molière's line.

3 In compelling man to eat that he may live,
Nature gives an appetite to invite him, and pleasure to reward him.

BRILLAT-SAVAREN, Physiologie du Goût. Ch. 36.

4 Not for renewal, but for eating's sake,
They stuff their bellies with to-morrow's ache.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, From the Book of Extemporations: Lazarus.

5 Let the stoics say what they please, we do not eat for the good of living, but because the meat is savory and the appetite is keen.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Nature.

6 Their sole reason for living lies in their palate.
(In solo vivendi causa palato est.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 11.

III—Eating: Eat, Drink and Be Merry

See also Life and Living

7 Drink, sport, for life is mortal, short upon earth our days;

But death is deathless, once a man is dead.

AMPHIS, Gynæcocratia: Fragment.

8 Eat, drink, and love; the rest's not worth a flip.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 1.

"Eat, drink, and love, what can the rest avail us?"

So said the royal sage, Sardanapalus.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 207.

9 "Eat, drink, and sport; the rest of life's not worth a flip," quoth the King;

Methinks the saying saith too much: the swine would say the selfsame thing.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. ii, st. 15.

10 Eat, drink, and play, and think that this is bliss.

There is no heaven but this;

There is no hell

Save earth, which serves the purpose doubly well.

ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Easter Day. St. 9.

11 Although they say, "Come let us eat and drink;

Our life is but a spark, which quickly dies,"
Though thus they say, they know not what to think;

But in their minds ten thousand doubts arise.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Nosce Teipsum. Sec. 30, st. 4.

12 Then I commended mirth, because a man hath no better thing under the sun, than to eat, and to drink, and to be merry: for that shall abide with him of his labour the days of his life.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, viii, 15.

Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry.

New Testament: Luke, xii, 19.

13 Yet some must swim when others sink;
And some must sink when others swim;
Make merry, comrades, eat and drink—
The lights are growing dim.

A. L. GORDON, Sunlight on the Sea.

14 Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we shall die.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxii, 13.

Let us eat and drink; for to-morrow we die.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 32.

Eat thou and drink; to-morrow thou shalt die.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The House of Life: The Choice.

15 Drink and dance and laugh and lie,
Love, the reeling midnight through,
For tomorrow we shall die!

(But, alas, we never do.)

DOROTHY PARKER, The Flaw in Paganism.

16 It is good to be merry at meat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18.

IV—Eating: Its Pleasures

17 Irks care the crop full bird? Frets doubt the maw-crammed beast?

ROBERT BROWNING, Rabbi Ben Ezra. St. 4.

18 No prince fares like him; he breaks his fast with Aristotle, dines with Tully, drinks tea at Helicon, sups with Seneca.

COLLEY CIBBER, Love Makes the Man. Act i, 1.

He breaks his fast

With Aristotle, dines with Tully, takes His watering with the Muses, sups with Livy.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Elder Brother. Act i, 2.

19 Taking food and drink is a great enjoyment for healthy people, and those who do not enjoy eating seldom have much capacity for enjoyment or usefulness of any sort.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Happy Life.

1 Plain fare gives as much pleasure as a costly diet, while bread and water confer the highest possible pleasure when they are brought to hungry lips.

EPICURUS, Letter to Menæceus. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 130.)

We have water and porridge; let us rival Jove himself in happiness. (Habemus aquam, habemus polentam, Jovi ipsi controversiam de felicitate faciamus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cx, 18.

2 Not in the costly savour lies the greatest pleasure [in eating], but in yourself. So earn your sauce with sweat. (Non in caro nidore voluptas Summa, sed in te ipso est. Tu pulmentaria quære Sudando.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 19.

3 The whole of nature, as has been said, is a conjugation of the verb to eat, in the active and passive.

WILLIAM RALPH INGE, Outspoken Essays: Ser. ii, Confessio Fidei.

4 They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet Quaff immortality and joy.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 637. (Ed. 1674)

5 Timid roach, why be so shy?
We are brothers, thou and I.
In the midnight, like thyself,
I explore the pantry shelf!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, Nursery Rhymes for the Tender-Hearted.

6 Fame is at best an unperforming cheat;
But 'tis substantial happiness to eat.

POPE, Prologue for Mr. D'Urfey's Last Play.

7 Who satisfieth thy mouth with good things;
so that thy youth is renewed like the eagle's.
Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 5.

8 Breakfast makes good memory. (Le déjeuner fait bonne mémoire.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 21.

A good, honest, wholesome, hungry breakfast.
WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 5.

A meagre, unsubstantial breakfast causes a sinking sensation of the stomach and bowels. Robert Browning truly remarks that

"A sinking at the lower abdomen Begins the day with indifferent omen."

PYE HENRY CHAVASSE, Advice to a Wife.

9 And men sit down to that nourishment which is called supper.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 239.

10 Their tables were stor'd full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 4, l. 28.

11 There is no love sincerer than the love of food.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

V—Eating: Abstemiousness

12 And famish'd people must be slowly nurst,
And fed by spoonfuls, else they always burst.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 158.

13 I'm not voracious; only peckish.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 41.

14 Just enough food and drink should be taken to restore our strength, and not to overburden it. (Tantum cibi et potionis adhibendum, ut reficiantur vires, non opprimantur.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 11, sec. 36.

15 If, after exercise, we feed sparingly, the digestion will be easy and good, the body light-some, the temper cheerful, and all the animal functions performed agreeably.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Art of Procuring Pleasant Dreams.

16 To lengthen thy life, lessen thy meals.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

A little in the morning, nothing at noon, and a light supper doth make to live long.

UNKNOWN, Reliq. Antiquæ. Vol. i, p. 208. (c. 1550)

17 We never repent of having eaten too little.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111.

If you wish to grow thinner, diminish your dinner,

And take to light claret instead of pale ale;

Look down with an utter contempt upon butter,
And never touch bread till it's toasted—or stale.

H. S. LEIGH, A Day for Wishing.

18 Many dishes make many diseases.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Healths Improvement, 272.

19 Stop short of your appetite; eat less than you are able. (Desine citra Quam capis; es paulo quam potes esse minus.)

OVIM, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 757.

20 Their best and most wholesome feeding is upon one dish and no more and the same plain and simple: for surely this huddling of many meats one upon another of divers tastes is pestiferous. But sundry sauces are more dangerous than that.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xi, ch. 53.

VI—Eating: Gluttony

1 He who eats too much knows not how to eat.
BRILLAT-SAVARIN, Physiologie du Goût. Ch. 36.

2 To kindle and blow the fire of lechery,
That is annexed unto gluttony.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 153.

O gluttony, full of cursedness,
O cause first of our confusion,
O original of our damnation.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 170.

3 He needs no more than birds and beasts to think,

All his occasions are to eat and drink.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 423.

4 Who dainties love, shall Beggars prove.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

5 He that banquets every day never makes a good meal.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 2043.

See also under APPETITE.

6 He will never have enough till his mouth is full of mould.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

7 Who hastens a glutton, chokes him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

With eager feeding, food doth choke the feeder.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 37.

8 The first in banquets, but the last in fight.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 401. (Pope, tr.)

Born but to banquet and to drain the bowl.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 622. (Pope, tr.)

9 Clogged with yesterday's excess, the body drags the mind down with it, and fastens to the ground this fragment of divine spirit.

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 77.

10 Greediness closed Paradise; it beheaded John Baptist. (Gula paradisum clausit; decollavit Baptistam.)

POPE INNOCENT III, De Contemptu Mundi.
Bk. ii, ch. 18.

Herodes, (whoso well the story sought,)
When he of wine was réplete at his feast,
Right at his own table he gave his hest
To slay the baptist John full guiltless.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 160.

11 I will eat exceedingly, and prophesy.

BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair. Act i, sc. 6.

I eat and eat, I swear.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 1, l. 50.

12 O what gluttony is his who has whole boars served up for himself, an animal born for banquets. (Quanta est gula quæ sibi totos Ponit apros, animal propter convivia natum!)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 140.

13 Afterward he wisheth that he had neck of crane and belly of cow, that the morsels might remain longer in the throat and be digested more.

FRÈRE LORENS, *Le Somme des Vices et des
Vertus*. (1279)

I do not know who it was, in ancient days, who wished for a gullet lengthened out like a goose's neck, so that he might taste for a longer space of time what he devoured. (Je ne sçais qui, anciennement, desiroit le gosier allongé comme le col d'une grue, pour savourer plus longtemps ce qu'il avalloit.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

14 Although Annius has almost three hundred tables, he has servants instead of tables;
dishes run hither and thither and plates fly about. Keep such banquets to yourselves, ye pompous! We are annoyed by a dinner that walks.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 48.

Ingenious is gluttony! (Ingeniosa gula est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 62.

15 Swinish gluttony
Ne'er looks to heav'n amidst his gorgeous feast,

But with besotted base ingratitude
Crams, and blasphemes his feeder.

MILTON, Comus, l. 776.

16 Ever a glutton, at another's cost,
But in whose kitchen dwells perpetual frost.

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 58. (Dryden, tr.)

17 Greediness is rich and shame poor. (Est aviditas dives, et pauper pudor.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 1, l. 12.

18 When the tired glutton labours thro' a treat,
He finds no relish in the sweetest meat;
He calls for something bitter, something sour,
And the rich feast concludes extremely poor.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat.
2, l. 31.

19 A greedy man God hates.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

20 Let him herd with the dumb brutes—an animal whose delight is in fodder. (Mutis ad-gregetur animal pabulo lætum.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcii, 7.

What is a man
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed? a beast, no more.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 33.

21 They are as sick that surfeit with too much,
as they that starve with nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 6.

A surfeit of the sweetest things

The deepest loathing to the stomach brings.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 137.

1 He is a very valiant trencherman; he hath an excellent stomach.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 51.

He was a man Of an unbounded stomach.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 33.

You would eat chickens i' the shell.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc. 2, l. 147.

2 All day long they ate with the resolute greed of brutes.

R. L. STEVENSON, Song of Rahéro. Pt. ii.

3 The fool that eats till he is sick must fast till he is well.

WALTER THORNBURY, The Jester's Sermon.

4 Young children and chickens would ever be eating.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Points of Housewifery: Supper Matters.

VII—Eating: Digging One's Grave

5 They have digged their grave with their teeth.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 108. (1630)

Who by intemperance in his diet, in some sort, digged his grave with his own teeth.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. iv, sec. 3. (1655)

How many people daily dig their own graves, either with their teeth, their tongues, or their tails.

DYKES, English Proverbs. No. 173. (1709)

We each day dig our graves with our teeth.

SAMUEL SMILES, Duty, p. 418. (1880)

6 I saw few die of hunger; of eating, a hundred thousand.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1736.

7 Hence [from gluttony] come sudden deaths and intestate old age. (Hinc subitæ mortes atque intestata senectus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 144.

8 There is death in the pot.

Old Testament: II Kings, iv, 40. It should be noted that in this well-known quotation the reference is to eating and not to drinking, the pottage having been poisoned.

9 I have heard it remarked by a statesman of high reputation, that most great men have died of over-eating themselves.

HENRY TAYLOR, Sermons, p. 230.

10 Surfeit has killed many more men than famine. (Πολλῶ τοι πλεόνας λιμοῦ κόρος ὤλεσεν ἄνδρας.)

THEOGNIS, Sententiæ.

Gluttony kills more than the sword. (Gula plures occidit quam gladius.)

Attributed to PATRICIUS, Bishop of Gæta.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

More perish by a surfeit than the sword.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 275.

The board consumes more than the sword.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.

More are slain by suppers than the sword.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Surfeit slays more than the sword.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

Many more people by gluttony are slain

Than in battle or in fight, or with other pain.

UNKNOWN, Dialogues of Creatures, p. 128. (c. 1535)

VIII—Eating and Drinking

11 Eat when you're hungry, and drink when you're dry.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 52.

12 Never spare the parson's wine, nor the baker's pudding.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

13 Eat-well is drink-well's brother.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1357.

He that eats well and drinks well should do his duty well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2095.

14 Eat less and drink less,

And buy a knife at Michaelmas.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 6. (1659)

15 Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 25.

There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things that cometh out of him, those are they that defile a man.

New Testament: Mark, vii, 15.

16 Their beer was strong; their wine was port; Their meal was large; their grace was short.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epitaph.

17 A truce with thirst, a truce with hunger; they're strong, but wine and meat are stronger.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iv, ch. 65.

18 Eat thy meat and drink thy drink, And stand thy ground, old Harry.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 343. (1678)

Eat at pleasure, drink by measure.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Eat and drink measurely and defy the mediceans.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>1</sup> Eat without surfeit: Drink without drunkenness.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture. See also under MODERATION.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 23.

<sup>3</sup> It is meat and drink to me.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 1, 11.

<sup>4</sup> I told him . . . that we ate when we were not hungry, and drank without the provocation of thirst.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to the Houyhnhnms.

This eating and drinking takes away a body's stomach.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

IX—Eating: Table Manners

<sup>5</sup> Leave off first for manners' sake; and be not unsatiable, lest thou offend.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxxi, 17.

<sup>6</sup> The man who bites his bread, or eats peas with a knife, I look upon as a lost creature.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

<sup>7</sup> Now when someone asked him how it was possible to eat acceptably to the gods, he said, If it is done graciously and fairly and restrainedly and decently, is it not also done acceptably to the gods?

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

New Testament: John, vi, 12.

He that keeps nor crust nor crum,
Weary of all, shall want some.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 216.

<sup>9</sup> Manners in eating count for something. (Est quiddam gestus edendi.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 755.

<sup>10</sup> At table it becomes no one to be bashful. (Verecundari neminem apud mensam decet.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iii, sc. 4.

<sup>11</sup> Eat slowly; only men in rags
And gluttons old in sin

Mistake themselves for carpet-bags
And tumble victuals in.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Stans Puer ad Mensam.

<sup>12</sup> They say fingers were made before forks, and hands before knives.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

<sup>13</sup> The frightful manner of feeding with their knives, till the whole blade seemed to enter into the mouth; and the still more frightful manner of cleaning the teeth afterwards with a pocket-knife.

FRANCES TROLLOPE, Domestic Manners of the Americans. Ch. 3.

X—Eating: Food for the Gods

EMPEROR NERO, referring to mushrooms, by means of which Agrippina killed Claudius. The Latin form is "Deorum cibus."

A dish fit for the gods.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 173.

Oh, dainty and delicious!

Food for the gods! Ambrosia for Apicius!
Worthy to thrill the soul of sea-born Venus,
Or titillate the palate of Silenus!

W. A. CROFFUT, Clam Soup.

There's food for gods!

There's nectar! there's ambrosium!

There's food for Roman Emperors to eat!

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles.

<sup>15</sup> For he on honey-dew hath fed,
And drunk the milk of Paradise.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Kubla Khan.

To eat the lotus of the Nile
And drink the poppies of Cathay.

WHITTIER, The Tent on the Beach.

<sup>16</sup> The pet of the harem, Rose-in-Bloom,
Orders a feast in his favorite room—
Glittering squares of colored ice,
Sweetened with syrup, tintured with spice,
Creams, and cordials, and sugared dates,
Syrian apples, Othmanee quinces,
Limes and citrons and apricots,
And wines that are are known to Eastern princes.

T. B. ALDRICH, When the Sultan Goes to Isphahan.

<sup>17</sup> Yielding more wholesome food than all the messes

That now taste-curious wanton plenty dresses.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 1. (Sylvester, tr.)

<sup>18</sup> When I demanded of my friend what viands
he preferred,
He quoth: "A large cold bottle, and a small hot bird!"

EUGENE FIELD, The Bottle and the Bird.

<sup>19</sup> What will not luxury taste? Earth, sea, and air,
Are daily ransack'd for the bill of fare.
Blood stuffed in skins is British Christian's food,

And France robs marshes of the croaking brood.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 199.

1 Yet shall you have, to rectify your palate,
An olive, capers, or some better salad
Ushering the mutton; with a short-legged hen,
If we can get her, full of eggs, and then,
Limons, and wine for sauce: to these a coney
Is not to be despaired of for our money;
And though fowl now be scarce, yet there are clerks,

The sky not falling, think we may have larks.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 101.

2 And lucent syrops, tinct with cinnamon.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 30.

3 Cornwall squab-pie, and Devon white-pot brings;

And Leicester beans and bacon, food of kings.

WILLIAM KING, Art of Cookery.

4 If my opinion is of any worth, the fieldfare is the greatest delicacy among birds, the hare among quadrupeds. (Inter aves turdus, si quid me iudice certum est, Inter quadrupedes mattea prima lepus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 92.

When I can have a fat turtle-dove, good-bye, lettuce; and keep the snails for yourself. I have no wish to spoil my appetite. (Cum pinguis mihi turtur erit, lactuca, valebis; Et cocleas tibi habe. Perdere nolo famem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 53.

5 Some pigeons, Davy, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws, tell William cook.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. i, l. 27.

6 Though we eat little flesh and drink no wine,
Yet let's be merry: we'll have tea and toast;
Custards for supper, and an endless host
Of syllabubs and jellies and mince-pies,
And other such lady-like luxuries.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 302.

Now to the banquet we press;

Now for the eggs, the ham,

Now for the mustard and cress,

Now for the strawberry jam!

Now for the tea of our host,

Now for the rollicking bun,

Now for the muffin and toast,

Now for the gay Sally Lunn!

W. S. GILBERT, The Sorcerer. Act i.

XI—Eating: Individual Foods

7 Asparagus

C— holds that a man cannot have a pure mind who refuses apple-dumpling. . . . Only I stick to asparagus, which still seems to inspire gentle thoughts.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: Grace Before Meat.

8

Beans

If pale beans bubble for you in a red earthenware pot, you can often decline the dinners of sumptuous hosts. (Si spumet rubra conchis tibi pallida testa, Lautorum cenis sæpe negare potes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 7.

9

Beef

When mighty roast beef was the Englishman's food

It ennobled our hearts and enriched our blood—

Our soldiers were brave and our courtiers were good.

Oh! the roast beef of England,

And Old England's roast beef.

HENRY FIELDING, Grub Street Opera. Act iii, sc. 2.

10

What say you to a piece of beef and mustard?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 23.

There's nothing picturesque in beef.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xiv.

11

One fat Sir Loin possesses more sublime

Than all the airy castles built by rhyme.

JOHN WOLCOT, Bozzy and Piozzi. Pt. ii.

For its merit, I will knight it and make it sir-loin!

CHARLES II, on being told that a piece of beef which particularly pleased him was called the loin. Attributed also to James I. A humorous invention, for the word is derived from sur-loin, the upper part of the loin.

12

Bouillabaisse

This Bouillabaisse a noble dish is—

A sort of soup, or broth, or brew,

Or hotchpotch of all sorts of fishes,

That Greenwich never could outdo;

Green herbs, red peppers, mussels, saffron,

Soles, onions, garlic, roach, and dace;

All these you eat at Terré's tavern

In that one dish of Bouillabaisse.

THACKERAY, Ballad of Bouillabaisse.

13

Butter

She brought forth butter in a lordly dish.

Old Testament: Judges, v, 25.

14

Cheese

Cheese, that the table's closing rites denies,
And bids me with the unwilling chaplain rise.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 255.

As after cheese, nothing to be expected.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. vi, 5.

1
Digestive cheese.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 101.

My cheese, my digestion.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 44.

2
Cress

Eat well of the cresses.

JOHN GRANGE, The Golden Aphroditis. Sig. F3. (1577) Cress was supposed to help the memory.

3
Duck

Let a duck certainly be served up whole; but it is tasty only in the breast and neck: the rest return to the cook. (Tota quidem ponatur anas, sed pectore tantum Et cervice sapit: cetera redde coco.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 52.

4
Leeks

Well loved he garlic, onions, and eke leeks, And for to drincken strong wine, red as blood.

CHAUCE, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 634.

5 As often as you have eaten the strong-smelling shoots of Tarentine leeks, give kisses with shut mouth. (Fila Tarentini graviter redolentia porri Edisti quotiens, oscula clusa dato.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 18. Nero ate them in oil to improve his voice. (PLINY, Historia Naturalis, xix, 33.)

6
Lettuce

After wine, lettuce rises on the acid stomach. (Lactuca innatat acri Post vinum stomacho.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 59.

7 Tell me, why is it that lettuce, which used to end our grandsires' dinners, ushers in our banquets? (Cludere quæ cenas lactuca solebat avorum, Dic mihi, cur nostras inchoat illa dapes?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 14.

First, there will be given you lettuce, useful for relaxing the bowels. (Prima tibi dabitur ventri lactuca movendo Utilis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 52.

If the bowels be costive, limpet and common shell-fish will dispel the trouble, or low-growing sorrel. (Si dura morabitur alvus, Mitulus et voles pellent obstantia conchæ Et lapathi brevis herba.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 27.

8
Liver

See how the liver is swollen larger than a fat goose! In wonder you will say, "Where, I ask, did this grow?" (Aspice quam tumeat magno jecur ansere majus! Miratus dices "Hoc, rogo, crevit ubi?")

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 58.

9
Meat

And nearer as they came, a genial savour Of certain stews, and roast-meats, and pilaws, Things which in hungry mortals' eyes find favour.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 47.

Yet smelt roast meat, beheld a clear fire shine, And cooks in motion with their clean arms bared.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 50.

10 A friendly swartry, consisting of a boiled leg of mutton with the usual trimmings.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 37.

There are wholesale eaters who can devour a leg of mutton and trimmings at a sitting.

THOMAS HOOD, Review of Arthur Coningsby, 1838.

11 Strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age.

Old Testament: Hebrews, v, 14.

Such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.

New Testament: Hebrews, v, 12.

12 Out-did the meat, out-did the frolick wine.

ROBERT HERRICK, Ode for Ben Jonson.

13 You require flesh if you want to be fat. (Carne opus est, si satur esse velis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 2.

14 This dish of meat is too good for any but anglers, or very honest men.

WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 8.

15
Mulberries

A man will pass his summers in health, who will finish his luncheon with black mulberries. (Ille salubris Æstates peraget, qui nigris prandia moris Finiet.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 4, l. 21.

16
Mutton

Of all birds give me mutton.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3695.

17
Partridge

Whether woodcock or partridge, what does it matter, if the flavor be the same? A partridge is dearer, and thus has better flavor. (Rustica sim an perdix quid refert, si sapor idem est? Carior est perdix; sic sapit illa magis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 76.

18 An honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

19
Pheasant

Pheasant exceedeth all fowls in sweetness and wholesomeness, and is equal to capon in nourishment.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Castle of Helth. Ch. 8. (1530)

1 Pudding

I sing the sweets I know, the charms I feel,
My morning incense, and my evening meal,
The sweets of Hasty Pudding.

JOEL BARLOW, The Hasty Pudding. Canto i.

2
Hallo! A great deal of steam! the pudding was out of the copper. A smell like a washing-day! That was the cloth. A smell like an eating-house and a pastrycook's next door to each other, with a laundress's next door to that. That was the pudding.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol: Stave Three.

One solid dish his week-day meal affords,
An added pudding solemniz'd the Lord's.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 345.

"Live like yourself," was soon my lady's word,
And lo! two puddings smok'd upon the board.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 359.

4 Salad

According to the Spanish proverb, four persons are wanted to make a good salad: a spendthrift for oil, a miser for vinegar, a counsellor for salt, and a madman to stir all up.

ABRAHAM HAYWARD, The Art of Dining.

5
Salad, and eggs, and lighter fare,
Tune the Italian spark's guitar;
And, if I take Dan Congreve right,
Pudding and beef make Britons fight.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 246.

Oh, herbaceous treat!
'Twould tempt the dying anchorite to eat;
Back to the world he'd turn his fleeting soul,
And plunge his fingers in the salad bowl.

SYDNEY SMITH, A Receipt for a Salad.

7 Tripe

How say you to a fat tripe finely broil'd?

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 20.

8 Turbot

However wide the dish that bears the turbot, yet the turbot is wider than the dish. (Quamvis lata gerat patella rhombum, Rhombus latior est tamen patella.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 81.

9 Turtle

A plate of turtle green and glutinous.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper of Hamelin.

10
"Of all the things I ever swallow,—

Good well-dress'd turtle beats them hollow,—

It almost makes me wish, I vow,
To have two stomachs, like a cow!"

And lo! as with the cud, an inward thrill
Upheaved his waistcoat and disturb'd his frill,

His mouth was oozing, and he work'd his jaw—

"I almost think that I could eat one raw."

THOMAS HOOD, The Turtles.

11 Venison

Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 202.

12
One cut from ven'son to the heart can speak
Stronger than ten quotations from the Greek.

JOHN WOLCOT, Bozzy and Piozzi. Pt. ii.

13 Vermicelli

Ceres presents a plate of vermicelli,—

For love must be sustained like flesh and blood,—

While Bacchus pours out wine, or hands a jelly:

Eggs, oysters, too, are amatory food.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 170.

14 Wood-pigeon

Wood-pigeons check and blunt the manly powers: let him not eat this bird who wishes to be amorous. (Inguina torquati tardent hebetantque palumbi: Non edat hanc volucrem qui cupit esse salax.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 67.

XII—Eating: Vegetarianism

15
I once ate a pea.

GEORGE (BEAU) BRUMMELL, when asked at dinner if he never ate vegetables.

16
If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

New Testament: I Corinthians, viii, 13.

But from the mountain's grassy side

A guiltless feast I bring;

A scrip with herbs and fruits supplied,

And water from the spring.

GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield, ch. 8.)

17
Oh, how criminal it is for flesh to be stored away in flesh, for one greedy body to grow fat with food gained from another, for one live creature to go on living through the destruction of another living thing! And so in the midst of the wealth of food which Earth, the best of mothers, has produced, it is your pleasure to chew the piteous flesh of slaughtered animals!

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 88.

Kill creatures that work you harm, but even in the case of these let killing suffice. Make not their flesh your food, but seek a more harmless nourishment. (Perdite siqua nocent, verum hæc quoque perdite tantum: Ora vacent epulis alimentaque mitia carpant.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 477.

Take not away the life you cannot give:

For all things have an equal right to live.

Kill noxious creatures, where 'tis sin to save;

This only just prerogative we have:

But nourish life with vegetable food,

And shun the sacrilegious taste of blood.

OVID, Metamorphoses, xv, 477. (Dryden, tr.)

1
It engenders choler, planteth anger;
And better 'twere that both of us did fast,
Since, of ourselves, ourselves are choleric,
Than feed it with such over-roasted flesh.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 175.

2
But man is a carnivorous production,
And must have meals, at least one meal a day; . . .

Although his anatomical construction
Bears vegetables in a grumbling way,
Your labouring people think, beyond all question,

Beef, veal, and mutton, better for digestion.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 67.

ECHO

3
Let echo, too, perform her part,
Prolonging every note with art;
And in a low expiring strain,
Play all th' concert o'er again.

ADDISON, Ode for St. Cecilia's Day.

4
In shade affrighted Silence melts away.
Not so her sister.—Hark! for onward still,
With far-heard step, she takes her listening way,
Bounding from rock to rock, and hill to hill:
Ah, mark the merry maid, in mockful play,
With thousand mimic tones the laughing forest fill!

SIR EGERTON BRYDGES, Echo and Silence.

Hark! to the hurried question of Despair:
"Where is my child?" An Echo answers—
"Where?"

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, st. 27.

I came to the place of my birth and cried: "The friends of my youth, where are they?"—And an echo answered, "Where are they?"

SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i, l. 17, note. Quoted from an Arabic manuscript.

6
Mysterious haunts of echoes old and far,
The voice divine of human loyalty.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, l. 149.

Echo waits with art and care
And will the faults of song repair.

EMERSON, May-day, l. 439.

8
Echo the mimic, the lees of the voice, the tail of a word. ('Ηχώ μιμολόγον, φωνῆς τρύγα, ῥήματος οὐρήν.)

EVODUS, On a Statue of Echo. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 155.)

9
Echo is the voice of a reflection in the mirror.
HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books.

10
And when the echoes had ceased, like a sense of pain was the silence.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, l. 56.

11
Sweet Echo, sweetest Nymph, that liv'st unseen

Within thy airy shell,

By slow Meander's margent green,
And in the violet-embroidered vale.

MILTON, Comus, l. 230.

12
How sweet the answer Echo makes
To music at night,
When, roused by lute or horn, she wakes,
And far away, o'er lawns and lakes,
Goes answering light.

THOMAS MOORE, Echo.

13
And all with pearl and ruby glowing
Was the fair palace door,
Through which came flowing, flowing, flowing,
And sparkling evermore,

A troop of Echoes, whose sweet duty
Was but to sing,

In voices of surpassing beauty,
The wit and wisdom of their king.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, The Haunted Palace.

14
And more than echoes talk along the walls
POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 306.

15
It seemed the harmonious echo
From our discordant life.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Lost Chord.

16
Even Echo speaks not on these radiant moors.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, Sea in Calm. Pt. iii.

17
True as the echo to the sound.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. ii, l. 8.

18
But her voice is still living immortal,
The same you have frequently heard,
In your rambles in valleys and forests,
Repeating your ultimate word.

J. G. SAXE, The Story of Echo.

1 Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction. Sc. 2, l. 47.

The babbling echo mocks the hounds,
Replying shrilly to the well-tun'd horns,
As if a double hunt were heard at once.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, 17.

2 Halloo your name to the reverberate hills,
And make the babbling gossip of the air
Cry out, "Olivia."

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, 291.

3 Lost Echo sits among the voiceless mountains,
And feeds her grief.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 15.

4 The shadow of a sound,—a voice without a mouth, and words without a tongue.

HORACE SMITH, The Tin Trumpet: Echo.

5 Never sleeping, still awake,
Pleasing most when most I speak;
The delight of old and young,
Though I speak without a tongue.

SWIFT, An Echo.

6 I heard . . . the great echo flap
And buffet round the hills from bluff to bluff.

TENNYSON, The Golden Year, l. 75.

And a million horrible bellowing echoes broke
From the red-ribb'd hollow behind the wood,
And thunder'd up into Heaven.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. ii, sec. 1, l. 24.

7 Our echoes roll from soul to soul,
And grow for ever and for ever.
Blow, bugle, blow, set the wild echoes flying,
And answer, echoes, answer, dying, dying,
dying.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 362.

8 What would it profit thee to be the first
Of echoes, tho' thy tongue should live forever,

A thing that answers, but hath not a thought
As lasting but as senseless as a stone.

FREDERICK TENNYSON, Isles of Greece: Apollo, l. 367.

9 Like,—but oh how different!

WORDSWORTH, Yes, It Was the Mountain Echo.

ECONOMY

See also Moderation: Living on Little;
Thrift; Trifles

10 Men do not realise how great a revenue economy is. (Non intelligunt homines quam magnum vectigal sit parsimonia.)

CICERO, Paradoxa, vi, 3.

Frugality is a handsome income.

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies, 491. (Bailey, tr.)

Economy is a great revenue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Economy, the poor man's mint.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Society, l. 191.

11 A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters; FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757.

12 Frugality embraces all the other virtues. (Reliquas etiam virtutes frugalitas continet.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 8, sec. 16.

13 Though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 8.

14 As much wisdom may be expended on a private economy as on an empire, and as much wisdom may be drawn from it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

15 Mend your clothes and you may hold out this year.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16 Without frugality none can be rich, and with it very few would be poor.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 57.

17 In enterprises like theirs parsimony is the worst profusion.

MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam's Constitutional History.

18 Frugality is good, if liberality be joined with it. The first is leaving off superfluous expenses; the last bestowing them to the benefit of others that need. The first without the last begets covetousness; the last without the first begets prodigality.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

The man who saves the pennies is a dandy and a duck—if he always has a quarter for the guy that's out of luck.

WALT MASON, The Penny Saved.

19 Frugality is misery in disguise. (Frugalitas miseria est rumoris boni.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententie. No. 193.

20 To balance Fortune by a just expense,
Join with Economy, Magnificence.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 223.

A creative economy is the fuel of magnificence.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Aristocracy.

<sup>1</sup> Economy is the science of avoiding unnecessary expenditure, or the art of managing our property with moderation.

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 34.

<sup>2</sup> Economy is too late at the bottom of the purse. (Sera parsimonia in fundo est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 5.

<sup>3</sup> Economy is the art of making the most of life. The love of economy is the root of all virtue.

I—Education: Definitions

<sup>4</sup> What sculpture is to a block of marble, education is to the soul.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 215.

Then take him to develop, if you can,
And hew the block off, and get out the man.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 269. Pope is referring to a notion of Aristotle's that every block of marble contained a statue, which would appear when the superfluous parts were chipped away.

<sup>5</sup> Education makes a people easy to lead, but difficult to drive; easy to govern, but impossible to enslave.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons, 29 Jan., 1828.

<sup>6</sup> The secret of education lies in respecting the pupil.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: Education.

<sup>7</sup> Most Americans do value education as a business asset, but not as the entrance into the joy of intellectual experience or acquaintance with the best that has been said and done in the past. They value it not as an experience, but as a tool.

W. H. P. FAUNCE, Letter, 16 Jan., 1923, to Abraham Flexner. (FLEXNER, Universities.)

<sup>8</sup> Without ideals, without effort, without scholarship, without philosophical continuity, there is no such thing as education.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 97.

<sup>9</sup> Technical education is the exaltation of manual labour, the bringing of manual labour up to the highest excellence of which it is susceptible.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, Chester, 12 Sept., 1890.

and unfold the seed of immortality already sown within us; to develop, to their fullest extent, the capacities of every kind with which the God who made us has endowed us.

ANNA JAMESON, Education.

<sup>11</sup> Finally, education alone can conduct us to that enjoyment which is, at once, best in quality and infinite in quantity.

HORACE MANN, Lectures and Reports on Education. Lecture 1.

<sup>12</sup> That's what education means—to be able to do what you've never done before.

GEORGE HERBERT PALMER, Life of Alice Freeman Palmer. The above sentence was the exclamation of the cook when Mrs. Palmer went to the kitchen, and baked a loaf of bread, without previous experience.

<sup>13</sup> Education is the only interest worthy the deep, controlling anxiety of the thoughtful man.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speeches: Idols.

<sup>14</sup> The essence of education is that it is a change effected in the organism to satisfy the desires of the operator.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 210.

<sup>15</sup> True education makes for inequality; the inequality of individuality, the inequality of success; the glorious inequality of talent, of genius; for inequality, not mediocrity, individual superiority, not standardization, is the measure of the progress of the world.

FELIX E. SCHELLING, Pedagogically Speaking.

<sup>16</sup> Education has for its object the formation of character.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics: Pt. ii, ch. 17, sec. 4.

Education makes the man.

JAMES CAWTHORN, Birth and Education of Genius.

Impartially their talents scan:

Just education forms the man.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Owl, Swan, Cock, Spider, Ass, and Farmer, l. 9.

<sup>17</sup> Only the refined and delicate pleasures that come from research and education can build up barriers between different ranks.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. ix, ch. 1.

II—Education: Apothegms

<sup>18</sup> Observation more than books, experience rather than persons, are the prime educators.

A. B. ALCOTT, Table Talk. Pt. ii.

The best university that can be recommended to a man of ideas is the gauntlet of the mob.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

1 Where do you suppose he got that high brow?
(Πόθεν ἡμῖν αὕτη ἡ ὀφρὺς?)

EPICETUS, Encheiridion. Sec. 22. A jeering question asked concerning a person who has turned philosopher.

A highbrow is the kind of person who looks at a sausage and thinks of Picasso.

A. P. HERBERT, The Highbrow.

A highbrow is a person educated beyond his intelligence.

BRANDER MATTHEWS, Epigram.

What is a highbrow? He is a man who has found something more interesting than women.

EDGAR WALLACE, Interview, at Hollywood, Calif., Dec., 1931.

2 There is no royal road to geometry.

EUCLED, to Ptolemy I, when the latter asked if there was not some easier way to master the science. (PROCLUS, Commentaria in Euclidem. Bk. ii, ch. 4.)

The prevailing philosophy of education tends to discredit hard work.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 47.

3 All uneducated people are hypocrites.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table-Talk: On the Knowledge of Character.

4 Men of polite learning and a liberal education.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries: Acts, x.

Of good natural parts and of a liberal education.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8.

'Tis grand! 'tis solemn! 'tis an education of itself to look upon!

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The Deerslayer. Ch. 2.

To love her is a liberal education.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 49.

5 Now we must educate our masters.

DR. ROBERT LOWE, after the Conservative party took the leap in the dark of passing in the late sixties the Household Suffrage bill.

6 'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 149. See also under TREE.

7 It is only the ignorant who despise education.
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 571.

III—Education: Its Virtues

8 The roots of education are bitter, but the fruit is sweet.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 18.)

Education is an ornament in prosperity and a refuge in adversity.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, 19.)

Educated men are as much superior to uneducated men as the living are to the dead.

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, 19.)

Education is the best provision for old age.
ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle, 21.)

9 Education is a controlling grace to the young, consolation to the old, wealth to the poor, and ornament to the rich.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes, 68.)

10 Only the educated are free. (Μόνους τοὺς παιδευθέντας ἐλευθέρους εἶναι.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 23.

11 Instruction increases inborn worth, and right discipline strengthens the heart. (Doctrina sed vim promovet insitam, Rectique cultus pectora roborant.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 33.

12 The right path of a virtuous and noble education, laborious indeed at the first ascent, but else so smooth, so green, so full of goodly prospect, and melodious sounds on every side, that the harp of Orpheus was not more charming.

MILTON, On Education.

13 Education is a treasure, and culture never dies. (Litteræ thesaurum est, et artificium nunquam moritur.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 47.

14 The very spring and root of honesty and virtue lie in the felicity of lighting on good education.

PLUTARCH, On the Training of Children.

15 Hence you see why "liberal studies" are so called: it is because they are studies worthy of a free-born gentleman. But there is only one really liberal study,—that which gives a man his liberty. (Quare liberalia studia dicta sint, vides: quia homine libero digna sunt. Ceterum unum studium vere liberale est: quod liberum facit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 2.

IV—Education: Its Faults

16 The chief wonder of education is that it does not ruin everybody concerned in it, teachers and taught.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 55.

17 There's a new tribunal now,
Higher than God's—the educated man's!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Bk. x, l. 1976.

18 A set o' dull, conceited hashes
Confuse their brains in college-classes!
They gang in stirks, and come out asses,
Plain truth to speak;
An' syne they think to climb Parnassus
By dint o' Greek!

BURNS, First Epistle to J. Lapraik. St. 12.

Gie me ae spark o' Nature's fire!
That's a' the learning I desire.

BURNS, First Epistle to J. Lapraik. St. 13.

1
What's a' your jargon o' your schools,
Your Latin names for horns an' stools;
If honest Nature made you fools.

BURNS, First Epistle to J. Lapraik. St. 11.

To them the sounding jargon of the schools
Seems what it is—a cap and bells for fools.

COWPER, Truth, l. 368.

What's all the noisy jargon of the schools,
But idle nonsense of laborious fools,
Who fetter reason with perplexing rules?

JOHN POMFRET, Reason.

All jargon of the schools.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Ode on Exodus iii, 14.

2
Natural gifts without education have more often attained to glory and virtue than education without natural gifts. (Sæpius ad laudem atque virtutem naturam sina doctrina quam sine natura valuisse doctrinam.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. vii, sec. 15.

Nature has always been stronger than education.
(La Nature a toujours été en eux plus forte que l'éducation.)

VOLTAIRE, Life of Molière; BENJAMIN DIS-
RAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 13.

3
By education most have been misled;
So they believe, because they so were bred.
The priest continues what the nurse began,
And thus the child imposes on the man.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 389.

4
After the education has gone far, such is the expensiveness of America, that the best use to put a fine person to is, to drown him to save his board.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

In alluding just now to our system of education,
I spoke of the deadness of its details. . . . It is a system of despair.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

We are students of words: we are shut up in schools and colleges and recitation-rooms for ten or fifteen years, and come out at last with a bag of wind, a memory of words, and do not know a thing.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

"Whom are you?" said he, for he had been to night school.

GEORGE ADE, Bang! Bang: The Steel Box.

5
Can a girl's trained intelligence be trusted to learn how to wash, feed, or clothe a baby?
Certainly not: there is apparently no fund of experience upon which an educated person may draw! The girl's education may therefore be interrupted, suspended, or confused, in order that under artificial conditions she may be taught such things, probably by spinsters. Can the trained intelligence of a young man be trusted to learn salesmanship, marketing or advertising? Certainly not: the educational process has once more to be interrupted, suspended or confused, in order that he may learn the "principles" of salesmanship from a Ph.D. who has never sold anything, or the "principles" of marketing from a Ph.D. who has never marketed anything.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 71.

6
They [academies] commit their pupils to the theatre of the world, with just taste enough of learning to be alienated from industrious pursuits, and not enough to do service in the ranks of science.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 150.

7
My foolish parents taught me to read and write. (Me literulas stulti docuere parentes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, epig. 74, l. 7.

Smith: He can write and read and cast accompt.

Cade: O monstrous!

Smith: We took him setting of boys' copies.

Cade: Here's a villain!

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 92.

God hath blessed you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man is the gift of fortune, but to write and read comes by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 3, l. 13.

8
A little of everything, and nothing at all.
(Un peu de chaque chose, et rien de tout.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. Of the Education of Children.

A smattering of everything, and a knowledge of nothing.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: Sentiment.

9
Too much and too little education hinder the mind.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 72.

Tell schools they want profoundness,

And stand too much on seeming.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie.

There is nothing so stupid as an educated man,
if you get off the thing that he was educated in.

WILL ROGERS. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 61.)

We are faced with the paradoxical fact that education has become one of the chief obstacles to intelligence and freedom of thought.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 163.

10
The sentiments of an adult are compounded of a kernel of instinct surrounded by a vast husk of education.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 206

11
I respect no study, and deem no study good, which results in money-making. (Nullum suspicio, nullum in bonis numero, quod ad æs exit.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. 88, sec. 1.

1 Wisdom is ever a blessing; education is sometimes a curse.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt From My Attic, p. 29.

2 The school which they have set up may properly be called the Satanic school.

SOUTHEY, A Vision of Judgment: Pt. iii, Preface.

3 What does education often do? It makes a straight-cut ditch of a free, meandering brook.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, Oct., 1850.

4 Soap and education are not as sudden as a massacre, but they are more deadly in the long run.

MARK TWAIN, The Facts Concerning My Recent Resignation.

V—Education: Public Education: Its Virtues

5 Surely, of all "rights of man" this right of the ignorant man to be guided by the wiser, to be, gently or forcibly, held in the true course by him is the indisputablest.

CARLYLE, Chartism. Ch. 6.

6 Better build schoolrooms for "the boy,"
Than cells and gibbets for "the man."

ELIZA COOK, A Song for the Ragged Schools.

7 The foundation of every state is the education of its youth.

DIOGENES. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium.)

8 Nations have recently been led to borrow billions for war; no nation has ever borrowed largely for education. Probably no nation is rich enough to pay for both war and civilization. We must make our choice; we cannot have both.

ABRAHAM FLEXNER, Universities, p. 302.

9 Next in importance to freedom and justice is popular education, without which neither freedom nor justice can be permanently maintained.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Letter, accepting nomination for Presidency, 12 July, 1880. There is a tradition that Garfield was the author of the phrase, "My definition of a University is Mark Hopkins at one end of a log and a student at the other," and that he used it during a speech at an Alumni dinner in New York in 1872, but this has never been verified.

The most significant fact in this world today is, that in nearly every village under the American flag, the school-house is larger than the church.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, at Thirteen Club Dinner, 13 Dec., 1886.

Still sits the school-house by the road,

A ragged beggar sleeping;

Around it still the sumachs grow

And blackberry-vines are creeping.

WHITTIER, In School-Days. St. 1.

10 By far the most important bill in our whole code, is that for the diffusion of knowledge among the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and happiness. If anybody thinks that kings, nobles, priests are good conservators of the public happiness, send him here [to Europe].

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 394.

Enlighten the people generally and tyranny and oppressions of both mind and body will vanish like evil spirits at the dawn of day.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Du Pont de Nemours, 1816. (Works, xiv, 491.)

11 I desire to see the time when education, and by its means, morality, sobriety, enterprise and industry, shall become much more general than at present.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Communication, Sangamon Journal, 1832.

12 But it was in making education not only common to all, but in some sense compulsory on all, that the destiny of the free republics of America was practically settled.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: New England Two Centuries Ago.

13 In our country and in our times no man is worthy the honored name of statesman who does not include the highest practicable education of the people in all his plans of administration.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. Lect. 3. The Common School is the greatest discovery ever made by man.

HORACE MANN. Inscribed beneath his bust in Hall of Fame.

14 Public instruction should be the first object of government.

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

15 Slavery is but half abolished, emancipation is but half completed, while millions of free-men with votes in their hands are left without education. Justice to them, the welfare of the States in which they live, the safety of the whole Republic, the dignity of the elective franchise,—all alike demand that the still remaining bonds of ignorance shall be unloosed and broken, and the minds as well as the bodies of the emancipated go free.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Yorktown Oration, 19 Oct., 1881.

VI—Education: Public Education: Its Faults

<sup>1</sup> Public schools are becoming a nuisance, a pest, an abomination; and it is fit that the eyes and noses of mankind should, if possible, be open to perceive it.

COWPER, Tirocinium: Preface.

Would you your son should be a sot or dunce, Lascivious, headstrong, or all these at once; That, in good time, the stripling's finish'd taste For loose expense and fashionable waste, Should prove your ruin, and his own at last, Train him in public with a mob of boys.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 201.

<sup>3</sup> With universal cheap education, we have stringent theology, but religion is low.

EMERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches: The Man of Letters.

<sup>4</sup> The cult of the public schools, and the curious sentiment now attached to them, are fruits of the complicated emotionalism of the mid-Victorian epoch.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Anthology of Invective and Abuse, p. 108.

<sup>5</sup> The idea that going to college is one of the inherent rights of man seems to have obtained a baseless foothold in the minds of many of our people.

A. LAWRENCE LOWELL, Address, Haverford College, 17 April, 1931.

<sup>6</sup> He was the product of an English public school and university. . . . He had little education and highly developed muscles—that is to say, he was no scholar, but essentially a gentleman.

H. S. MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar-school.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 37.

Public schools are the nurseries of all vice and immorality.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

<sup>8</sup> There is nothing on earth intended for innocent people so horrible as a school. To begin with, it is a prison. But it is in some respects more cruel than a prison. In a prison, for instance, you are not forced to read books written by the warders and the governor. . . . In prison they may torture your body; but they do not torture your brains.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

<sup>9</sup> You call this education, do you not?

Why, 'tis the forced march of a herd of bullocks

Before a shouting drover. The glad van Move on at ease, and pause awhile to snatch A passing morsel from the dewy greensward, While all the blows, the oaths, the indignation, Fall on the croupe of the ill-fated laggard That cripples in the rear.

UNKNOWN. (Quoted by Scott, The Monastery, as from an old play.)

VII—Education: Self-Education

<sup>10</sup> The only really educated men are self-educated.

JESSE LEE BENNETT, Culture and A Liberal Education.

<sup>11</sup> The Self-Educated are marked by stubborn peculiarities.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. 6.

<sup>12</sup> Self-education is largely book-education.

CHARLES A. DANA, The Making of a Newspaper Man. Maxim 5.

There is always a best way of doing everything, if it be to boil an egg.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

There be many that will have both the egg and the hen.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites. Fo. 33.

It is very hard to shave an egg.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The more the eggs, the worse the hatch.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Courtship.

Alas! my child, where is the Pen
That can do justice to the Hen?

Like Royalty she goes her way,
Laying foundations every day,
Though not for Public Buildings, yet
For Custard, Cake and Omelette.

Or if too old for such a use

I—Eloquence: Definitions

<sup>1</sup> He is an eloquent man who can treat humble subjects with delicacy, lofty things impressively, and moderate things temperately. (Is enim est eloquens qui et humilia subtiliter, et magna graviter, et mediocria temperate potest dicere.)

CICERO, Orator. Sec. 29.

<sup>2</sup> Eloquence is the child of Knowledge.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Young Duke. Bk. v, ch. 6.

<sup>3</sup> Eloquence is the power to translate a truth into language perfectly intelligible to the person to whom you speak.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Eloquence.

<sup>4</sup> Eloquence is a great and diverse thing: nor did she yet ever favour any man so much as to become wholly his.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Eloquentia.

Talking and eloquence are not the same: to speak and to speak well, are two things. A fool may talk, but a wise man speaks.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Eloquentia.

<sup>5</sup> Eloquence is to the sublime what the whole is to its part. (L'Éloquence est au sublime ce que le tout est à sa partie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 1.

<sup>6</sup> There is no less eloquence in the tone of the voice, in the eyes and in the air of the speaker, than in his choice of words. (Il n'y a pas moins d'éloquence dans le ton de la voix, dans les yeux, et dans l'air de la personne, que dans le choix des paroles.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 249.

Often there is eloquence in a silent look. (Sæpe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 574.

<sup>7</sup> True eloquence consists in saying all that is necessary, and nothing but what is necessary. (La véritable éloquence consiste à dire tout ce qu'il faut, et à ne dire que ce qu'il faut.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 250.

<sup>8</sup> The finest eloquence is that which gets things done; the worst is that which delays them.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, Speech, at the Peace Conference, Paris, Jan., 1919.

ways false eloquence, though it will ever impose on some sort of understandings.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Lady Bute, 20 July, 1754.

<sup>10</sup> True eloquence scorns eloquence.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 4.

Eloquence, which persuades by sweetness, not by authority.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 15.

<sup>11</sup> Eloquence is the art of saying things in such a way that those to whom we speak may listen to them with pleasure.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 16.

Eloquence is a painting of thought; and thus those who, after having painted it, add something more, make a picture instead of a portrait.

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 26.

<sup>12</sup> Eloquence, smooth and cutting, is like a razor whetted with oil.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

<sup>13</sup> Mistress of all the arts. (Omnium artium domina.)

TACITUS, De Oratoribus. Sec. 32. Referring to eloquence.

<sup>14</sup> Great eloquence, like a flame, must have fuel to feed it, motion to excite it, and brightens by burning. (Magna eloquentia, sicut flamma, materia alitur, et moribus excitatur, et urendo clarescit.)

TACITUS, De Oratoribus. Sec. 36.

It is with eloquence as with a flame; it requires fuel to feed it, motion to excite it, and brightens as it burns.

WILLIAM PITT THE YOUNGER, Paraphrase of Tacitus.

<sup>15</sup> Eloquence, the foster-child of license, which fools call liberty. (Eloquentia, alumna licentiæ, quam stulti libertatem vocabant.)

TACITUS, De Oratoribus. Sec. 46.

His eloquence is that of a drunken man, twisting, turning, and full of licence. (Eloquentiam ebrii hominis involutam et errantem et licentiæ plenam.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiv, 4.

II—Eloquence: Apothegms

<sup>16</sup> He adorned whatever subject he either wrote or spoke upon, by the most splendid eloquence.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Character of Bolingbroke.

He adorns all that he touches. (Il embellit tout ce qu'il touche.)

FÉNÉLON, Lettre sur les Occupations de l'Académie Française. Sec. 4.

He touched nothing that he did not adorn. (Nullum quod tetigit non ornavit.)

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph on Goldsmith.

1 I grew intoxicated with my own eloquence.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. i, ch. 7.

2 One of our statesmen said "The curse of this country is eloquent men."

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.

3 Their own eloquence is fatal to many. (Sua mortifera est facundia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 9.

4 Profane eloquence is transferred from the Bar, where it has become obsolete, to the Pulpit, where it is out of place.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 16.

The deep soul-moving sense
Of religious eloquence.

WORDSWORTH, Odes. No. 45.

5 Till the sad breaking of that Parliament
Broke him, as that dishonest victory
At Chæronea, fatal to liberty,
Kill'd with report that old man eloquent.

MILTON, Sonnet: To the Lady Margaret Ley.

Milton's reference is to Isocrates, the Athenian orator, who died four days after hearing of the defeat of the Athenians at Chæronea. The term was afterwards applied to John Quincy Adams and to W. E. Gladstone.

6 Everyone was eloquent in behalf of his own cause. (Proque sua causa quisque disertus erat.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 112.

In an easy cause any man may be eloquent. (In causa facili cuivis licet esse disertus.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 21.

7 He is eloquent enough for whom truth speaks. (Satis est disertus, e quo loquitur veritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 681.

He who has the truth at his heart need never fear the want of persuasion on his tongue.

JOHN RUSKIN, Stones of Venice. Vol. ii, ch. vi, sec. 99.

Can there be a more horrible object in existence than an eloquent man not speaking the truth?

CARLYLE, Address, University of Edinburgh, 1866.

8 There would be no eloquence in the world if we were to speak only with one person at a time.

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, 2.

9 It is the heart which makes men eloquent. (Pectus est quod disertos facit.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. x, 7.

It is a man's own breast that makes him eloquent. (Pectus est quod disertum facit.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

10 So much the more eloquent as I was less sincere. (D'autant plus éloquent que j'étais moins sincère.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Cyrano de Bergerac. Act iii, sc. 1.

11 Plenty of eloquence, but little wisdom. (Satis eloquentiæ sapientiæ parum.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Sec. 5.

Eloquence may exist without a proportionable degree of wisdom.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

III—Eloquence: Its Power

12 Tully was not so eloquent as thou,
Thou nameless column with the buried base.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 110.

13 Such was his force of eloquence, to make
The hearers more concerned than he that spake;

Each seemed to act the part he came to see,
And none was more a looker-on than he.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, On the Earl of Strafford's Trial and Death, l. 11.

14 Him of the Western dome, whose weighty sense

Flows in fit words and heavenly eloquence.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 868.

15 Eloquence a hundred times has turned the scale of war and peace at will.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

16 A man whose eloquence has power

To clear the fullest house in half an hour.

SOAME JENYNS, Imitations of Horace. Bk. ii, epis. 1.

17 A woman, no less than a populace, a grave judge, or a chosen senate, will surrender, defeated, to eloquence. (Quam populus judex-que gravis lectusque senatus, Tam dabit elo-quio victa puella manus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 461.

Ulysses was not beautiful, but he was eloquent.
(Non formosus erat, sed erat facundus Ulixes.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 123.

18 Pour the full tide of eloquence along,
Serenely pure, and yet divinely strong.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 171.

19 I have neither wit, nor words, nor worth, Action, nor utterance, nor the power of speech,

To stir men's blood: I only speak right on.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 225.

Which his fair tongue, conceit's expositor,
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,

That aged ears play truant at his tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 72.

Every tongue that speaks
But Romeo's name speaks heavenly eloquence.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 32.

1 A full-cell'd honeycomb of eloquence
Stored from all flowers. Poet-like he spoke.
TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 26.

2 How the heart listened while he pleading spoke!
While on the enlightened mind, with winning art,
His gentle reason so persuasive stole,
That the charmed hearer thought it was his own.

THOMSON, To Memory of Lord Talbot, l. 103.

3 While listening senates hang upon thy tongue,
Devolving through the maze of eloquence
A roll of periods, sweeter than her song.
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 15.

4 But to a higher mark than song can reach,
Rose this pure eloquence.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vii, l. 24.

EMERSON, RALPH WALDO

5 O monstrous, dead, unprofitable world,
That thou canst hear, and hearing, hold thy way!

A voice oracular hath peal'd to-day,
To-day a hero's banner is unfurl'd.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Written in a Volume of Emerson's Essays.

6 Voice of the deeps thou art! . . . Light of the deeps thou art!
CRAVEN LANGSTROTH BETTS, Emerson.

7 His thought rounded the spheres, his dreams topped the Cosmos. He walks in ether and is part of the barred and crimson sunset.
BENJAMIN DE CASSERES, Emerson. (The Philistine. Vol. xx, No. 10.)

8 Dry lighted soul, the ray that shines in thee,
Shot without reflex from primeval sun.
ELLEN HOOPER, To R. W. E.

9 There comes Emerson first, whose rich words,
every one,
Are like gold nails in temples to hang trophies on.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 527.

For though he builds glorious temples, 'tis odd
He leaves never a doorway to get in a god.
'Tis refreshing to old-fashioned people like me
To meet such a primitive Pagan as he,
In whose mind all creation is duly respected

As parts of himself—just a little projected;
And who's willing to worship the stars and the sun,

A convert to—nothing but Emerson.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 557.

10 A great interpreter of life ought not himself to need interpretation.

JOHN MORLEY, Miscellanies: Emerson.

11 A foul mouth is so ill-matched with a white beard that I would gladly believe the newspaper-scribes alone responsible for the bestial utterances which they declare to have dropped from a teacher whom such disciples as these exhibit to our disgust and compassion as performing on their obscene platform the last tricks of tongue now possible to a gap-toothed and hoary ape, carried at first into notice on the shoulder of Carlyle, and who now in his dotage spits and chatters from a dirtier perch of his own finding and fouling: coryphæus or choragus of his Bulgarian tribe of auto-coprophagous baboons, who make the filth they feed on.

All is well that ends well.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

All's well that ends well; still the fine's the crown;

Whate'er the course, the end is the renown.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, Act
iv, sc. 4, l. 35. (1602)

13 Who keeps one end in view makes all things serve.

ROBERT BROWNING, In a Balcony.

14 With mortal crisis doth portend,
My days to appropinque an end.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 589.

15 Some time an end there is of every deed.

CHAUCER, The Knights Tale, l. 1778.

Everything hath end.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, l. 615.

Everything hath an end, and a pudding hath two.

THOMAS NASHE, Strange Newes.

A pudding merits double praise,

A pudding hath two ends.

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros. Bk. iii, ep. 12. (1598)

All things have end,

And that we call a pudding hath his two.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act i, sc. 2.

Around the man who seeks a noble end,
Not angels but divinities attend.

R. W. EMERSON, Life.

2
He who has put a good finish to his undertaking is said to have placed a golden crown to the whole.

EUSTATHIUS, Commentary on the Iliad.

3
A morning Sun, and a Wine-bred child, and a Latin-bred woman seldom end well.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4
The end of things is at hand. (Finis adest rerum.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 328.

The end is not yet.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 6.

5
Her end is bitter as wormwood.

Old Testament: Proverbs, v, 4.

We rode with two anchors ahead, and the cables
veered out to the better end.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Ch. 1. The "better end" of a cable is the end which is secured within the vessel and little used. It is alleged by some authorities that "bitter end" is a corruption of this.

A bitter is but the turn of a cable about the bitts, and the bitter end is that part of the cable which doth stay within board.

CAPTAIN JOHN SMITH, Seaman's Grammar.
(1627) This is another explanation of "bitter end."

6
All things move on to their end. (Toutes choses se meuvent à leur fin.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

And so on to the end of the chapter.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 10.

7
Let the end try the man.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 50.

Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and Truth's.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 447.

8
O, that a man might know

The end of this day's business ere it come!

But it sufficeth that the day will end,

And then the end is known.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 1, l. 123.

9
Matters be ended as they are be-friended.

THOMAS STARKEY, England in the Reign of Henry VIII. Bk. i, ch. 3.

10
Big-endians and Little-endians.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Lilliput.
Pt. i, ch. 4. In the empire of Lilliput, the Big-endians belonged to the party which made it a matter of conscience to break their eggs at the big end, and were regarded as heretics by the orthodox party, who broke their eggs at the little end.

11
Thy works and mine are ripples on the sea.
Take heart, I say: we know not yet their end.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Locrine. Act iii, sc. 1.

12 Things will work to ends the slaves o' the world

Do never dream of.

WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act ii, l. 936.

II—End: The End Crowns All

13
It is the end that crowns us, not the fight.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 309.

14
The end crowns the work. (Finis coronat opus.)

LEHMANN, Florilegium Politicum. (1630)

15
The last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Respice Finem. (1640)

'Tis the last act which crowns the play.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Death. (1780)

16
The end crowns every action, stay till that;
Just judges will not be prejudicate.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, *The Muses' Looking-
Glass*. Act iii, sc. 1.

17
The end crowns all.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv,
sc. 5, l. 224.

La fin couronne les œuvres.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 28.

18
Integrity of Life is fame's best friend,
Which nobly, beyond death, shall crown the end.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act v, sc. 5.

III—End: Means and End

19
When the end is lawful, the means are also lawful. (Cum finis est licitus, etiam media sunt licita.)

H. BUSENBAUM, Medulla Theologiæ. (1650)
Busenbaum was a Jesuit. Hence the doctrine that the end justifies the means.

20
He who does evil that good may come, pays a toll to the devil to let him into heaven.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, ii, 213.

21
Be virtuous ends pursued by virtuous means,

Nor think th' intention sanctifies the deed.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene.

1 Ill comes from ill,
And as a thing begins, so ends it still.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: The Stealing of the Coif, l. 140.

2 Whether with Reason or with Instinct blest,
Know all enjoy that power which suits them best;
To bliss alike by that direction tend,
And find the means proportion'd to their end.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 79.

3 The end must justify the means:
He only sins who ill intends:
Since therefore 'tis to combat evil,
'Tis lawful to employ the devil.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Hans Carvel.

4 As some affirm that we say, Let us do evil, that good may come.
New Testament: Romans, iii, 8.

5 No man is justified in doing evil on the ground of expediency.
THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The Strenuous Life.

6 The doing evil to avoid an evil
Cannot be good.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act iv, 6. (Coleridge, tr.)

Perish with him the folly that seeks though evil good.
WHITTIER, Brown of Ossawatimie.

7 Nothing can seem foul to those that win.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 8.

8 A little harm done to a great good end
For lawful policy remains enacted.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 528.

9 The result justifies the deed. (Exitus acta probat.)
GEORGE WASHINGTON, Motto.

10 The end directs and sanctifies the means.
SIR JOHN WILMOT, Collins v. Blantern, 1762. (2 Wils. Rep. 351.)

11 Him only pleasure leads, and peace attends,
Him, only him, the shield of Jove defends,
Whose means are fair and spotless as his ends.
WORDSWORTH, Dion. St. 6.

IV—End: Remember the End

12 Remember the end. (Τέλος σκοπεῖν.)
CHILON, the Spartan philosopher, and one of the seven wise men of Greece, who died 597 B. C. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the wall of the temple at Delphi.

Quoted by Solon to Cræsus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 28. See under LIFE: COUNT NO MAN HAPPY.)

13 Whatsoever thou takest in hand, remember the end, and thou shalt never do amiss.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, vii, 36.

14 In every separate thing you do, consider the matters which come first and those which follow after, and only then approach the thing itself.
EPICTETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 15, sec. 1.

15 When any great design thou dost intend, Think on the means, the manner, and the end.
SIR JOHN DENHAM, Of Prudence, l. 186.

16 In every thing one must consider the end. (En toute chose il faut considérer la fin.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 5.

17 In every enterprise consider where you would come out. (Quicquid conaris, quo pervenias cogites.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 777.

ENDURANCE

18 An anvil to receive the hammer's blows and to forge the red-hot ore, he, without a groan, endured in silence.
ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 167.

19 Behold, we live through all things,—famine; thirst,
Bereavement, pain; all grief and misery,
All woe and sorrow; life inflicts its worst
On soul and body,—but we can not die,
Though we be sick and tired and faint and worn,—
Lo, all things can be borne!
ELIZABETH AKERS ALLEN, Endurance.

20 'Tis the world the same
For my praise or blame,
And endurance is easy then.
ROBERT BROWNING, Lovers' Quarrel. St. 17.

21 The victory of endurance born.
BRYANT, The Battle-Field. St. 8.

22 'Tis not now who's stout and bold,
But who bears hunger best, and cold;
And he's approv'd the most deserving,
Who longest can hold out at starving.
BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 353.

23 Sorrow and silence are strong, and patient endurance is godlike.
LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. 1, l. 60.

24 Endurance is the crowning quality,

And patience all the passion of great hearts.
J. R. LOWELL, Columbus.

1 Nothing befalls any man which he is not fitted to endure. (Οὐδέν οὐδενὶ συμβαίνει, δ' οὐχὶ πέφυκε φέρειν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 18.

2 He that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

New Testament: Matthew, xxiv, 13.

He that endures is not overcome.

GEORGE HERBERT, Outlandish Proverbs.

3 Much and long have I endured. (Multa diuque tuli.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 1.

Endure and persist; this pain will turn to your good by and by. (Perfer et obdura; dolor hic tibi proderit olim.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 7.

4 O vile, Intolerable, not to be endured!

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act v, sc. 2, l. 94.

5 Such was his life, gently to bear with and endure all men. (Sic vita erat; facile omnes perferre ac pati.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 62. (Act i, sc. 1.)

6 Endure, and keep yourselves for days of happiness. (Durate, et vosmet rebus servate secundis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 207.

7 Whatsoe'er it be, every fortune is to be overcome by bearing it. (Quidquid erit, superanda omnis fortuna ferendo est.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 710.

Every lot is to be overcome by endurance. (Omnis sors ferendo superanda est.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

8 More able to endure,
As more exposed to suffering and distress.

WORDSWORTH, Character of the Happy Warrior.

II—Endurance: What Can't Be Cured

9 What cannot be repaired is not to be regretted.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas.

10 What can't be cured were best endured. (Optimum est pati, quod emendare non possis.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, sec. 9.

11 What cannot be cured must be endured.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 15; BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3.

12 What cannot be eschew'd, must be embraced.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act v, sc. 5, l. 251.

13 Better it were a little to feign,
And cleanly cover that cannot be cured:
Such ill as is forced must needs be endured.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 137.

What's past help is beyond prevention.

MASSINGER, Unnatural Combat: Act ii, sc. 1.

14 I'll not willingly offend,

Nor be easily offended:

What's amiss I'll strive to mend,
And endure what can't be mended.

ISAAC WATTS, Good Resolutions.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 499.

The truly civilized man has no enemies.

C. F. DOLE, The Smoke and the Flame.

He has no enemy, you say;
My friend your boast is poor,
He who hath mingled in the fray
Of duty that the brave endure
Must have made foes. If he has none
Small is the work that he has done.
He has hit no traitor on the hip;
Has cast no cup from perjured lip;
Has never turned the wrong to right;
Has been a coward in the fight.

ANASTASIUS GRÜN, No Enemies.

The man who has no enemies has no following.

DOWN PIATT, Memories of the Men Who Saved the Union: Preface.

<sup>2</sup> A wise man fears his enemy, however insignificant. (Inimicum quamvis humilem docti est metuere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ.

Scorn no man's love, though of a mean degree; . . .

Much less make any one thine enemy.
As guns destroy, so may a little sling.

12 It smarts not half so ill as the phrase, Every body's friend but his own.

CHARLES CORNWALLIS, Essays. No. 7. (1600)

Tom, though an idle, thoughtless, rattling rascal, was nobody's enemy but his own.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

13 Let me hack at my own vines. (Ut vineta egomet cædam mea.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 220.

He is not harmless who harms himself. (On n'est point innocent quand on nuit à soi-même.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 134.

14 None but yourself, who are your greatest foe.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. ii, sec. 3.

15 None but myself ever did me any harm.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, at St. Helena, 6 April, 1817. (O'MEARA, Napoleon in Exile.)

16 Formidable is that enemy that lies hid in a man's own breast. (Gravis est inimicus is, qui latet in pectore.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 229.

III—Enemy: The Bridge of Silver

17 Instead of destroying that bridge, we should build another, that he may retire the more quickly from Europe.

ARISTIDES, referring to the proposal to destroy Xerxes' bridge of boats across the Hellespont. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 16, sec. 3.)

18 I tell thee, be not rash; a golden bridge Is for a flying enemy.

BYRON, The Deformed Transformed. Act ii, 2.

To a flying enemy, a bridge of silver.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 58.

Build a bridge of gold for a flying enemy.

LOUIS II of France, to Brantôme. (BRANTÔME, Memoirs. Vol. i, p. 83.)

For a flying foe
Discreet and provident conquerors build up
A bridge of gold.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act i, sc. 1.

1 Open unto your enemies all your gates and ways, and make for them a bridge of silver, rather than fail to get quit of them. (Ouvrez toujours à vos ennemis toutes les portes et chemins, et plutôt leurs faites un pont d'argent. afin de les renvoyer.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 43.

2 Give the enemy not only a road for flight, but also the means of defending it. (Hosti non solum dandam esse viam fugiendi verum etiam muniendam.)

SCIPIO AFRICANUS. (FRONTINUS, Strategy. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 16.)

ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH

I—England: Familiar Phrases

3 There are no countries in the world less known by the British than these self-same British Islands.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro: Preface.

What should they know of England who only England know?

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag.

4 Ah! perfidious England! (Ah! la perfide Angleterre!)

JACQUES BOSSUET, Sermon on the Circumcision. His first sermon, preached at Metz, in 1652. The phrase was quoted by Napoleon on leaving England for St. Helena.

5 England is the mother of parliaments.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, at Birmingham, 18 Jan., 1865. (THOROLD ROGERS, Speeches of John Bright. Vol. ii, p. 112.)

The king, and his faithful subjects, the Lords and Commons of this realm—the triple cord, which no man can break.

EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord.

England is not governed by logic, but by Acts of Parliament.

UNKNOWN, Saying, quoted in King's Bench, London, 13 April, 1923.

6 Still amorous, and fond, and billing,

Like Philip and Mary on a shilling.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 687. The reference is to coins struck in 1555, in which Mary and her consort were placed face to face and not cheek by jowl, as was customary.

Like Will. and Mary on the coin.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 197.

7 Be England what she will,

With all her faults, she is my country still.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 27. (1760)

England, with all thy faults, I love thee still.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 206. (1783)

8 The cat, the rat, and Lovell our dog,

Ruleth all England under a hog.

The which was meant that Catesby, Ratcliffe and the Lord Lovell ruleth the land under the king [Richard III].

ROBERT FABYAN, The Concordance of Histories. Fo. 463. (1542)

9 In these troublous days, when the great Mother Empire stands splendidly isolated in Europe.

HON. GEORGE EULAS FOSTER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 16 Jan., 1896.

Whether splendidly isolated or dangerously isolated, I will not now debate; but for my part, I think splendidly isolated, because this isolation of England comes from her superiority.

SIR WILFRID LAURIER, Speech, Canadian House of Commons, 5 Feb., 1896.

We have stood alone in that which is called isolation—our splendid isolation, as one of our Colonial friends was good enough to call it.

SIR WILLIAM EDWARD GOSCHEN, Speech, at Lewes, 26 Feb., 1896.

He was careful not to tear England from the splendid isolation in which she had wrapped herself.

RAYMOND POINCARÉ, Speech, at Cannes, 13 April, 1912. Referring to King Edward VII.

10 He whom I favor wins. (Cui adhæreo præest.)

HENRY VIII of England, Motto, on his tent in the Field of the Cloth of Gold, June, 1520.

11 God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget—lest we forget!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional.

12 England expects every man to do his duty.

LORD NELSON, Signal, to the fleet at the battle of Trafalgar, 21 Oct., 1805. (SOUTHEY, Life of Nelson. Ch. 9.) There are several versions of this famous sentence. In the London Times, 26 Dec., 1805, it was given: "England expects every officer and man to do his duty this day." William Pryce Cunby, First Lieutenant of the Bellerophon, reported it: "England expects that every man will do his duty." Captain Pasco, Nelson's flag-lieutenant, stated that Nelson's order was: "Say to the fleet, England confides that every man will do his duty," and that he suggested the substitution of "expects" for "confides." (See Notes and Queries. Ser. vi, vol. ix, pp. 261, 283.)

13 It cannot be made, it shall not be made, it will not be made; but if it were made there would be a war between France and England for the possession of Egypt.

LORD PALMERSTON, Speech, 1851, during the debate in Parliament concerning the Suez Canal. An outstanding example of indiscreet prophecy.

<sup>1</sup> From old Bellerium to the northern main.

RICHARD I of England, at the battle of Gisors, in 1198, chose this phrase as his parole, or battle-word, meaning that he was not a vassal of France, but owed his royalty to God alone. He won a great victory, in memory of which the phrase was made the motto of the royal arms of England.

<sup>3</sup> It is beginning to be hinted that we are a nation of amateurs.
LORD ROSEBERY, Rectorial Address, Glasgow, 16 Nov., 1900.

<sup>4</sup> Child Rowland to the dark tower came,
His word was still,—Fie, foh and fum,
I smell the blood of a British man.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 187.
With fi, fi, fo, and fum,
I smell the blood of a Christian man.
UNKNOWN, Old Scottish Ballad. (JAMIESON, Illustrations of Northern Antiquities.)

<sup>5</sup> The spacious times of great Elizabeth.
TENNYSON, A Dream of Fair Women, l. 7.

<sup>6</sup> In this country they put an admiral to death from time to time to encourage the others. (Dans ce pays-ci il est bon de tuer de temps en temps un admiral pour encourager les autres.)
VOLTAIRE, Henriade: Preface. Candide. Ch. 23. Referring to the execution of the English admiral, John Byng, for failing to relieve Minorca, besieged by the French, in 1756.

<sup>7</sup> My good associates, by whose light and leading I have walked.
SIR HENRY WOTTON, Letter to James I, 1651. (Reliquiæ Wottonianæ.)
The men of England, the men, I mean, of light and leading in England.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. Disraeli used the expression, "men of light and leading," a number of times: Speech, House of Commons, 28 Feb., 1859; Letter to Duke of Marlborough, 10 March, 1880; Sybil. Bk. v, ch. i.

<sup>8</sup> St. George he was for England: St. Dennis was for France.

Sing, Honi soit qui mal y pense.
UNKNOWN, St. George He Was for England. (Black-Letter Ballad, London, 1512.)

Thou Saint George shalt called be,
Saint George of Merry England, the sign of victory.
SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto x, st. 61. (1594)

Romulus and Remus were those that Rome did build,
But St. George, St. George, the dragon he hath killed.
THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy. (1661)

II—England: John Bull

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The History of John Bull. (1712) A political allegory designed to ridicule the Duke of Marlborough and to render the Continental War, then raging, unpopular. Each European nation was given a nickname by Arbuthnot: "Lewis Baboon" for the French; "Nicholas Frog" for the Dutch, and so on; but "John Bull" for the British was the only one which stuck. It caught the British imagination and has been in use ever since.

Law is a bottomless pit. Exemplified in the case of Lord Strutt, John Bull, Nicholas Frog, and Lewis Baboon, who spent all they had in a lawsuit.
DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The History of John Bull. Ch. 24.

<sup>10</sup> The world is a bundle of hay,
Mankind are the asses who pull;
Each tugs in a different way,—
And the greatest of all is John Bull!
BYRON, Epigram.

<sup>11</sup> Not a Bull of them all but is persuaded he bears Europa upon his back.
J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

<sup>12</sup> John Bull was in his very worst of moods,
Raving of sterile farms and unsold goods.
SCOTT, The Search After Happiness, l. 230.

III—England: God Save the King

<sup>13</sup> God save our gracious king,
Long live our noble king,
God save the king.

HENRY CAREY [?], God Save the King. Said to have been first sung by Carey, as his own composition, in 1740. (Gentleman's Magazine, ii, 1075.) Also credited, both words and music, to Dr. John Bull (1563?–1628), composer and singer. Claimed also by James Oswald, chamber composer to George III, 1742. The earliest known version was printed in Harmonia Anglicana (1742), and the three verses usually sung appeared in the Gentleman's Magazine, Oct., 1745. They began, "God save great George our King."

<sup>14</sup> Now let us sing long live the King.
COWPER, History of John Gilpin. St. 63.

<sup>15</sup> That Bogie, the National Anthem!

centh century. In it you find us ordering God about to do our political dirty work.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

IV—England: On Which the Sun Never Sets

1
Till now the name of names, England, the name of might,
Flames from the austral fires to the bounds
of the boreal night,
And the call of her morning drum goes in a girdle of sound,
Like the voice of the sun in song, the great globe round and round.

W. E. HENLEY, Rhymes and Rhythms. No. 2.

2
Old England is our home and Englishmen are we,
Our tongue is known in every clime, our flag
on every sea.

MARY HOWITT, Old England is Our Home. See also FLAG: BRITISH.

3
The martial airs of England
Encircle still the earth.

AMELIA B. RICHARDS, The Martial Airs of England.

Take 'old o' the Wings o' the Mornin',
An' flop round the earth till you're dead;
But you won't get away from the tune that they play

To the bloomin' old rag over'ead.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Widow at Windsor.

A power which has dotted over the surface of the whole globe with her possessions and military posts, whose morning drum-beat, following the sun, and keeping company with the hours, circles the earth with one continuous and unbroken strain of the martial airs of England.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, 7 May, 1834. Works.
Vol. iv, p. 110.

4
Never was isle so little, never was sea so lone,
But over the scud and the palm-trees an English flag was flown.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag.

5
That island queen who sways the floods and lands
From Ind to Ind.

TENNYSON, Buonaparte.

6
His Majesty's dominions, on which the sun never sets.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 42,
April, 1829.

"The sun never sets on his empire" was applied originally to the King of Spain. See HOWELL,
Familiar Letters, (1623), and THOMAS FULLER,
Holy State, p. 107. (1642) See also under SPAIN.
Claudian (see under ROME) applied the idea to Rome.

V—England: Britannia Rules the Waves

7
Britain's best bulwarks are her wooden walls.

THOMAS AUGUSTINE ARNE, Britain's Best Bulwarks. (c. 1760)

The royal navy of England has ever been its greatest defence and ornament; it is its ancient and natural strength; the floating bulwark of the island.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries.
Vol. i, bk. 1, ch. 13. (1765)

The dominion of the sea, as it is an ancient and undoubted right of the crown of England, so is it the best security of the land. The wooden walls are the best walls of this kingdom.

THOMAS COVENTRY, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, Speech, 17 June, 1635. (GARDINER, History of England, iii, 79.)

You truly have fortified Britain with wooden walls. (Tu certe Ligneis Muris Britanniam munivisti.)

UNKNOWN, Latin Address, sent to Samuel
Pepys by the Univ. of Oxford, Oct., 1702.

See also under SHIP: APOTHEGMS.

8
Britannia needs no bulwarks,
No towers along the steep;
Her march is o'er the mountain waves,
Her home is on the deep.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ye Mariners of England.

9
And trident-bearing queen of the wide seas.
COWPER, Expostulation, l. 275.

10
The British cannon formidably roars,
While starting from his oozy bed,
Th' asserted Ocean rears his reverend head,
To view and recognise his ancient lord again;
And, with a willing hand, restores
The fasces of the main.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 512.

11
When Britain first, at Heaven's command,
Arose from out the azure main,
This was the charter of the land,
And guardian angels sung this strain—
"Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves."

JAMES THOMSON, Rule, Britannia! This ode appeared originally in the last scene (Act ii, sc. 5) of Alfred, A Masque, a dramatic piece in which David Mallet collaborated and which was published in 1740. The ode has sometimes been attributed to Mallet, but the evidence is in favor of Thomson's authorship.

With Freedom's lion-banner

Britannia rules the waves.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Ode to the Germans.
(1832)

Englishmen never will be slaves; they are free to do whatever the Government and public opinion allow them to do.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

1 Providence has given to the French the empire of the land; to the English that of the sea; to the Germans that of—the air!

JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH RICHTER, as reported by Madame de Staël. (CARLYLE, Essays: Richter.) A better prophecy than Richter supposed.

The English, a nation over-proud, claim the empire of the sea; the French, a flighty nation, assume that of the air.

(Les Anglais, nation trop fière,
S'arrogent l'empire des mers;
Les Français, nation légère,
S'emparent de celui des airs.)

LOUIS XVIII of France, when Comte de Provence in 1783, Impromptu Sur Nos Découvertes Aérostatiques. Referring to the balloon flights of Montgolfier and other Frenchmen. The attribution has been questioned.

2 Others may use the ocean as their road,
Only the English make it their abode, . . .
Our oaks secure, as if they there took root,
We tread on billows with a steady foot.

EDMUND WALLER, Of a War with Spain, l. 25.

They that the whole world's monarchy designed,
Are to their ports by our bold fleet confined.

EDMUND WALLER, Of a War with Spain, l. 21.

Guarded with ships, and all our sea our own.

EDMUND WALLER, Epistle to My Lord of Falkland.

3 Oh, Britannia, the pride of the ocean,
The home of the brave and the free,
The shrine of the sailor's devotion,
No land can compare unto thee.

The authorship and even the inception of this song is in dispute. It is generally held to be an adaptation of Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, a song written in 1843 by Thomas à Becket, a young English actor playing at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, and sung there by another English actor named David Taylor Shaw, who afterwards claimed its authorship. It is said to have been taken to London by E. L. Davenport and sung there under the title, Britannia, the Pride of the Ocean. Some authorities assert that the British version was the first, and was sung by Shaw in England before he came to America. (See BANKS, Immortal Songs of Camp and Field, p. 77; Notes and Queries, 26 Aug., 1899.) For Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, see AMERICA: SONGS OF PRAISE.

VI—England: A Nation of Shopkeepers

4 A shopkeeper will never get the more custom by beating his customers, and what is true of a shopkeeper is true of a shopkeeping nation.

JOSIAH TUCKER, Four Tracts on Political and Commercial Subjects. (1766)

5 To found a great empire for the sole purpose of raising up a nation of shopkeepers, may at first sight appear a project fit only for a nation of shopkeepers. It is, however, a project altogether unfit for a nation of shopkeepers, but extremely fit for a nation whose government is influenced by shopkeepers.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Vol. ii, bk. iv, ch. 7. (1775)

6 A nation of shopkeepers.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Oration, delivered in the State House at Philadelphia, 1 Aug., 1776. Referring to England. There is some doubt as to whether this oration was really delivered. It exists only in a professed English reprint (Philadelphia, printed; London, reprinted for E. Johnson, No. 4 Ludgate Hill, 1776), of which a number of copies are known. W. V. Wells, in his life of Adams, states that "No such American edition has ever been seen."

7 Let Pitt then boast of his victory to his nation of shopkeepers. (Nation boutiquière.)

BERTRAND BARÈRE, Speech, before French National Convention, 11 June, 1794. Scott attributes the phrase to Napoleon in his Life of Napoleon, but without giving his authority.

8 We are indeed a nation of shopkeepers.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. i, ch. 11.

The Continent will not suffer England to be the workshop of the world.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 15 Mar., 1838. This sentence has also been attributed to Edward Stanley, Lord Derby.

9 Governments of nations of shopkeepers must keep shop also.

EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

10 The first of all English games is making money.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: Work.

It may be doubted whether nature intended the Englishman to be a money-making animal.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 194.)

11 We are not cotton-spinners all,
But some love England and her honour yet.

TENNYSON, The Third of February.

12 Tartuffe has emigrated to England and opened a shop.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 17.

13 Down the river did glide, with wind and with tide,
A pig with vast celerity;

And the Devil look'd wise as he saw how the while

It cut its own throat. "There!" quoth he, with a smile,

"Goes 'England's commercial prosperity.'"

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. St. 8.

VII—England: The Paradise of Women

1 England is the paradise of women, the purgatory of men, and the hell of horses,

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 205. (1591)

England, they say, is the only hell for horses, the only paradise for women.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Act ii, sc. iv. (1604)

England is termed by foreigners the paradise of women, as it is by some accounted the hell of horses, and purgatory of servants.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 51. (1619)

2 England is a paradise for women, and hell for horses: Italy is a paradise for horses, hell for women.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 1, subs. 2. (1621)

3 England is a prison for men, a paradise for women, a purgatory for servants, a hell for horses.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy State. (1642) Quoted as a proverb.

4 The wife of every Englishman is counted blessed.

THOMAS DELONEY, Works, p. 377. (c. 1593)

5 How often have I told you that English women are not to be treated like Circassian slaves. We have the protection of the world; we are to be won by gentle means only, and not to be hector'd, and bullied, and beat into compliance.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. x, ch. 8.

VIII—England: Fast-Anchor'd Isle

6 And now last, this most happy and glorious event, that this island of Britain, divided from all the world, should be united in itself.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

7 Through many a storm His isles had floated on the abyss of time; For the rough virtues chose them for their clime.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 42. "His" refers to George III.

8 Fast-anchor'd isle.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 151. (1783)

The silver-coasted isle.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 136,

9 O, it's a snug little island!

A right little, tight little island!

Search the globe round, none can be found So happy as this little island.

THOMAS DIBDIN, The Snug Little Island.

10 Our Isle, indeed, too fruitful was before; But all uncultivated lay

Out of the solar walk and heaven's highway.

DRYDEN, Threnodia Augustalis, l. 351.

11 This, in England, (commonly called the "ringing-island") was done with tolling a bell.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. vi, 2.

12 Streak of silver sea.

W. E. GLADSTONE, writing of the English Channel, Edinburgh Review, 18 Oct., 1870.

The Channel is that silver strip of sea which severs merry England from the tardy realms of Europe.

UNKNOWN. (Church and State Review, 1 April, 1863.)

13 Tut! the best thing I know between France and England is the sea.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: The Anglo-French Alliance.

A tunnel underneath the sea, from Calais straight to Dover, Sir, That qualmish folks may cross by land from shore to shore,

With sluices made to drown the French, if e'er they would come over, Sir,

Has long been talk'd of, till at length 'tis thought a monstrous bore.

THEODORE HOOK, Bubbles of 1825.

14 O thou dear and happy Isle The garden of the world erewhile, Thou Paradise of the four seas, Which Heaven planted us to please, But, to exclude the world, did guard With watery if not flaming sword.

ANDREW MARVELL, A Garden.

15 Rejoice, O Albion! severed from the world, By Nature's wise indulgence.

JOHN PHILIPS, Cider. Bk. ii.

16 Your isle, which stands As Neptune's park, ribbed and paled in With rocks unscalable and roaring waters. SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 18. You shall find us in our salt-water girdle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 81.

17 That pale, that white-faced shore, Whose foot spurns back the ocean's roaring tides

And coops from other lands her island-ers, . . .

That England, hedged in with the main,
That water-walled bulwark, still secure
And confident from foreign purposes, . . .
The utmost corner of the west.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 23.

<sup>1</sup> This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,

This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi-paradise,
This fortress built by Nature for herself
Against infection and the hand of war,
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 40.

England, bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beats back the envious siege
Of watery Neptune.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 61.

<sup>2</sup> Hail, happy Britain! highly favoured isle,
And Heaven's peculiar care!

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. i.

<sup>3</sup> Hope knows not if fear speak truth, nor fear whether hope be not blind as she:
But the sun is in heaven that beholds her immortal, and girdled with life by the sea.

SWINBURNE, England: An Ode. Sec. 3, ch. 7.

<sup>4</sup> Thank Him who isled us here, and roughly set His Briton in blown seas and storming showers.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 154. "Briton" is so printed, but is evidently a mistake for Britain.

God bless the narrow sea which keeps her off,
And keeps our Britain, whole within herself,
A nation yet, the rulers and the ruled.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Conclusion, l. 51.
The reference is to France.

Compass'd by the inviolate sea.

TENNYSON, To the Queen. St. 9.

<sup>5</sup> Island of bliss! amid the subject seas,
That thunder round thy rocky coasts, set up,

At once the wonder, terror, and delight
Of distant nations, whose remotest shore
Can soon be shaken by thy naval arm;
Not to be shook thyself, but all assaults
Baffling, like thy hoar cliffs the loud sea-wave.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer, l. 1595.

It is now three centuries since an English pig has fallen in a fair battle upon English ground, or a clergyman's wife been submitted to any other proposals of love than the connubial en-dearments of her sleek and orthodox mate.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 5.

<sup>6</sup> The Britons, wholly sundered from all the world. (Penitus toto divisos orbe Britannos.)
VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. i, l. 66.

The sea which, according to Virgil's famous line, divided the poor Britons utterly from the world, proved to be the ring of marriage with all nations.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 47.

<sup>7</sup> Whether this portion of the world were rent,
By the rude ocean, from the continent,
Or thus created, it was sure designed

<sup>10</sup> England! my country, great and free!
Heart of the world, I leap to thee!

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: The Surface, l. 376.

<sup>11</sup> Man is the nobler growth our realms supply,
And souls are ripened in our northern sky.
ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, The Invitation.

<sup>12</sup> In spite of their hats being terribly ugly,
God-damn! I love the English!
(Quoique leurs chapeaux soient bien laids, Goddam! moi j'aime les Anglais.)

BÉRANGER, Les Boixeurs. (1814)

How I love English boldness! how I love the people who say what they think.

VOLTAIRE.

<sup>13</sup> Oh, to be in England
Now that April's there,
And whoever wakes in England
Sees, some morning, unaware,
That the lowest boughs and the brush-wood
sheaf,
Round the elm-tree bole are in tiny leaf,
While the chaffinch sings on the orchard bough

In England—now!

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from Abroad.

"Here and here did England help me: how can I help England?"—say,
Whoso turns as I, this evening, turn to God to praise and pray,
While Jove's planet rises yonder, silent over Africa.

ROBERT BROWNING, Home Thoughts from the Sea.

Liberty is the idol of the English, under whose banner all the nation lists.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, Wonder. Act i, sc. 1.

A song of hate is a song of Hell;
Some there be who sing it well.
Let them sing it loud and long,
We lift our hearts in a loftier song:
We lift our hearts to Heaven above,
Singing the glory of her we love,
England!

HELEN GRAY CONE, A Chant of Love for England.

Bind her, grind her, burn her with fire,
Cast her ashes into the sea,—
She shall escape, she shall aspire,
She shall arise to make men free;
She shall arise in a sacred scorn,
Lighting the lives that are yet unborn,
Spirit supernal, splendour eternal,
England!

6
England is a domestic country; there the home is revered, the hearth sacred.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 April, 1872.

The stately Homes of England!

How beautiful they stand,
Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
O'er all the pleasant land!

FELICIA HEMANS, The Homes of England.

7
What of the bow?

The bow was made in England:

Of true wood, of yew-wood,

The wood of English bows;

So men who are free

Love the old yew-tree

And the land where the yew-tree grows.

A. CONAN DOYLE, The Song of the Bow. (The White Company.)

England were but a fling,

Save for the crooked stick and the grey-goose wing.

What have I done for you,
England, my England?

What is there I would not do,
England, my own?

With your glorious eyes austere,
As the Lord were walking near,
Whispering terrible things and dear,
As the Song on your bugles blown,
England—

Round the world on your bugles blown!
W. E. HENLEY, England, My England.

Ever the faith endures,
England, my England:—

"Take and break us: we are yours,
England, my own!

Life is good, and joy runs high
Between English earth and sky:

Death is death; but we shall die

To the Song on your bugles blown,
England—

To the stars on your bugles blown!"

W. E. HENLEY, England, My England.

11
Take of English earth as much
As either hand may rightly clutch. . . .
Lay that earth upon thy heart,
And thy sickness shall depart!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Charm.

Land of our Birth, our faith, our pride,
For whose dear sake our fathers died;
O Motherland, we pledge to thee
Head, heart, and hand through the years to be!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Children's Song.

There is but one task for all—
One life for each to give.
Who stands if Freedom fall?
Who dies if England live?

RUDYARD KIPLING, For All We Have and Are.

The strength of England lies not in armaments and invasions; it lies in the omnipotence of her industry, and in the vivifying energies of her high civilisation.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lascy and Merino.

The history of England is emphatically the history of progress.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mackintosh's History of the Revolution.

Attend, all ye who list to hear our noble England's praise;
I tell of the thrice famous deeds she wrought in ancient days.

MACAULAY, The Armada.

There she sits in her Island-home,
Peerless among her Peers!
And Liberty oft to her arms doth come,
To ease its poor heart of tears.
Old England still throbs with the muffled fire

Of a Past she can never forget:
And again shall she banner the World up higher;
For there's life in the Old Land yet.

GERALD MASSEY, Old England.

An old and haughty Nation proud in arms.
MILTON, Comus, l. 33.

Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks. Methinks I see her as an eagle mewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full mid-day beam.

MILTON, Areopagitica.

Britain scorns to yield.

THOMAS OLIPHANT, March of the Men of Harlech. St. 1.

Bid harbours open, public ways extend,
Bid temples, worthier of the God, ascend;
Bid the broad arch the dangerous flood contain,

The mole projected break the roaring main,
Back to his bounds their subject sea command,

And roll obedient rivers thro' the land.
These honours Peace to happy Britain brings;
These are imperial works, and worthy Kings.

Like little body with a mighty heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, prologue, l. 16.

Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act v, sc. 5, l. 20.

This England never did, nor never shall,
Lie at the proud foot of a conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound itself.

Come the three corners of the world in arms,
And we shall shock them. Nought shall make us rue,

If England to itself do rest but true.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 112.

All our past acclaims our future: Shakespeare's voice and Nelson's hand,
Milton's faith and Wordsworth's trust in this our chosen and chainless land,
Bear us witness: come the world against her,
England yet shall stand.

SWINBURNE, England: An Ode. Pt. ii, st. 5.

First pledge our Queen this solemn night,
Then drink to England, every guest; . . .
Hands all round!

God the traitor's hope confound!
To this great cause of Freedom drink, my friends,
And the great name of England, round and round.

TENNYSON, Hands All Round. (Memoirs of Tennyson, by his son. Vol. i, p. 345.) First printed in the London Examiner, 7 Feb., 1852.

O Statesmen, guard us, guard the eye, the soul
Of Europe, keep our noble England whole.
TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. Pt. vii.

It is the land that freemen till,
That sober-suited Freedom chose;
The land, where, girt with friends or foes,
A man may speak the thing he will;

A land of settled government,
A land of just and old renown,
Where Freedom slowly broadens down
From precedent to precedent.

TENNYSON, You Ask Me Why.

I thank the goodness and the grace
Which on my birth have smiled,
And made me, in these Christian days,
A happy English child.

5 By no stretch of charity, and by no violence to grammar can you call the British Nation a Christian people. The British leaders have an itch for dictation, and their chief vice is a thirst for power.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 32.

6 This is the true character of the English Government, and it presents the singular phenomenon of a nation, the individuals of which are as faithful to their private engagements and duties, as honorable, as worthy as those of any Nation on earth, and yet whose government is the most unprincipled at this day known.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xii, p. 376.

It may be asked, what, in the nature of her government, unfits England for the observation of moral duties? . . . The real power and property of the government is in the great aristocratical families of the nation. The nest of office being too small for all of them to cuddle into it at once, the contest is eternal which shall crowd the other out. For this purpose they are divided into two parties, the INS and the OUTS.

1 England has saved herself by her exertions, and will, I trust, save Europe by her example.

WILLIAM PITT, Speech, at Lord Mayor's banquet at Guildhall, London, 9 Nov., 1805. This was Pitt's last speech, and the above sentence has been variously reported. The above version is from Stanhope's Life of Pitt (vol. iv, p. 346), as told him by the Duke of Wellington. Macaulay (Miscellaneous Writings. Vol. ii, p. 368) gives the following: "Let us hope that England, having saved herself by her energy, may save Europe by her example." Still different versions were given in the newspapers commenting on the speech.

Herself by fortitude, Europe by example. (Seipsum constantia Europam exemplo.)

Inscription, on medal struck in 1814 to commemorate the Treaty of Paris.

That is for ever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,

Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,

A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home.
RUPERT BROOKE, 1914: The Soldier.

11 Be Britain still to Britain true,
Amang oursels united;
For never but by British hands
Maun British wrangs be righted!
ROBERT BURNS, The Dumfries Volunteers.

12 Bitterly, England, must thou grieve—
Though none of these poor men who died
But did within his soul believe
That death for thee was glorified.
WALTER DE LA MARE, "How Sleep the Brave."

13 Go, stranger! track the deep,
Free, free, the white sail spread!
Wave may not foam, nor wild wind sweep,
Where rest not England's dead.
FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, England's Dead.

14 Never the lotos closes, never the wild-fowl wake,
But a soul goes out on the East Wind that died for England's sake—
Man or woman or suckling, mother or bride or maid—
Because on the bones of the English the English Flag is stayed.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The English Flag. St. 12.

15 You are ordered abroad as a soldier of the King to help our French comrades against the invasion of a common enemy. You have to perform a task which will need your courage, your energy, and your patience. Remember that the honour of the British Army depends on your individual conduct. . . . Do your duty bravely. Fear God and honour the King.

LORD KITCHENER, Address to the British Expeditionary Force, 1914.

1 Napoleon's troops fought in bright fields where every helmet caught some beams of glory; but the British soldier conquered under the cold shade of aristocracy.

SIR W. F. P. NAPIER, History of the Peninsular War. Bk. ii, p. 401.

2 And, if I take Dan Congreve right,
 Pudding and beef make Britons fight.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Alma. Canto iii, l. 248.

3 Warriors!—and where are warriors found,
 If not on martial Britain's ground?
 And who, when waked with note of fire,
 Love more than they the British lyre?

SCOTT, Lord of the Isles. Canto iv, st. 20.

But say, "He died a gallant knight,
 With sword in hand, for England's right."

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto vi, st. 37.

4 I thought upon one pair of English legs
 Did march three Frenchmen.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 158.

That silly, sanguine notion, which is firmly entertained here, that one Englishman can beat three Frenchmen, encourages, and has sometimes enabled, one Englishman, in reality, to beat two.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Feb., 1749.

5 England we love; and for that England's sake
 With burden of our armour here we sweat.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 91.

6 The British soldier can stand up to anything—except the British War Office.

BERNARD SHAW, The Devil's Disciple. Act iii.

The British blockade won the war; but the wonder is that the British blockhead did not lose it.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty, V. C.: Preface.

7 It was not British blood which had been spilt,
 but it was British honour that bled at every vein.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Speech, House of Commons, 29 Oct., 1795, referring to conduct of Commodore Warren at Quiberon two days previously.

England's far, and Honour a name.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Vitai Lampada.

8 The last great Englishman is low.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington, l. 18.

9 Thus did England fight:
 And shall not England smite

With Drake's strong sword in battles yet to be?

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Christmas at the Mermaid: Chorus.

Yea, he sent out his arrows, and scattered them.
Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 14. This text was used on the medal struck to commemorate the defeat of the Spanish Armada, August, 1588.

10 Whate'er the bans the winds may waft her,
 England's true men are we, and Pope's men after.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, When England Calls.

11 Not in the Abbey proudly laid
 Find they a place or part;
 The gallant boys of the Old Brigade
 They sleep in Old England's heart.
 F. E. WEATHERLY, They All Love Jack.

12 Soldiers, we must never be beat—what will they say in England?

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Remark, attributed to him at Waterloo.

13 He [the British officer] muffs his real job without a blush, and yet he would rather be shot than do his bootlaces up criss-cross.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 4, sec. 3.

14 It is my royal and imperial command . . .
 that you address all your skill, and all the valor of my soldiers, to exterminate the treacherous English, and to walk over General
 French's contemptible little army.

KAISER WILHELM II [?], Army Order, Aix, 19 Aug., 1914. Hence the title "Old Contemptibles" given to the first British expeditionary force. The Kaiser has denied that he ever used this phrase in reference to the British army, and the evidence seems to be that it was invented by a British propagandist. Years before, in answer to a question, "What would you do if England landed an army on the coast of Germany?" Bismarck had replied, "I would call out the police to arrest them."

O little Force that in your agony
 Stood fast while England girt her armour on,
 Held high our honour in your wounded hands,
 Carried our honour safe with bleeding feet—
 We have no glory great enough for you,
 The very soul of Britain keeps your day.

UNKNOWN, O Little Force. (1917)

The English Infantry is the most formidable in Europe, but fortunately there is not much of it. (L'infanterie anglaise est la plus redoutable de l'Europe; heureusement, il n'y en a pas beaucoup.)

MARSHAL BUGEAUD, Œuvres Militaires.

15 Some talk of Alexander, and some of Hercules;

Of Hector and Lysander, and such great names as these;

But of all the world's brave heroes, there's none that can compare

With a tow, row, row, row, row, row, for the British Grenadier.

UNKNOWN, The British Grenadier.

XIII—England: Her Climate

I like the weather, when it's not too rainy,
That is, I like two months of every year.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 48.

Our cloudy climate and our chilly women.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 49.

The English winter—ending in July,

To recommence in August.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 42.

Though thy clime
Be fickle, and thy ear, most part deform'd
With dripping rains, or wither'd by a frost,
I would not yet exchange thy sullen skies,
And fields without a flower, for warmer
France,

With all her vines.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 209.

The expression "as right as rain" must have been invented by an Englishman.

WILLIAM LYON PHELPS, The Country or the City.

Hath Britain all the sun that shines?

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 139.

We are all well, and keep large fires, as it becometh those who pass their summers in England.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Mrs. Meynell, 1820.

Say, Britain, could you ever boast,
Three poets in an age at most?

Our chilling climate hardly bears

A sprig of bays in fifty years.

SWIFT, On Poetry.

My suit had wither'd, nipt to death by him
That was a god, and is a lawyer's clerk,
The rent-roll Cupid of our rainy isles.

TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 101.

In a fine day, looking up a chimney; in a foul day, looking down one.

UNKNOWN, Epigram, on the English climate, quoted Emerson, English Traits, p. 45.

XIV—England: The English: Their Virtues

My general impression is that Englishmen act better than Frenchmen, and Frenchwomen better than Englishwomen.

ARNOLD BENNETT, The Crisis in the Theatre. (Preface to Cupid and Commonsense.)

There is a peculiarity in the countenance, as everybody knows, which, though it cannot be described, is sure to betray the Englishman.

GEORGE BORROW, The Bible in Spain. Ch. 2.

Bright Thoughts, clear Deeds, Constancy, Fidelity, Bounty, and generous Honesty are the Gems of noble Minds: wherein (to derogate from none) the true Heroic English Gentleman hath no Peer.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 36.

The greatest benefit of the Eton school, says the report in an English blue book, is the serenity and repose of character which it gives to its graduates, and which, as the document says, without intent of irony, is a well-known trait of the character of the English gentleman.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Public and Private Education. The document in question is by S. Hawtrej, Provost of Eton.

You gentlemen of England

That live at home at ease.

MARTIN PARKER, You Gentlemen of England.

Cool, and quite English, imperturbable.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 14.

Men of England! who inherit
Rights that cost your sires their blood.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Men of England.

Of all the nations in the world, at present, the English are the stupidest in speech, the wisest in action.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

A glorious charter, deny it who can,
Is breathed in the words, "I'm an Englishman."

ELIZA COOK, The Englishman.

Some people . . . may be Rooshans, and others may be Prooshans; they are born so, and will please themselves. Them which is of other natures thinks different.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 19.

He is an Englishman!

For he himself has said it,

And it's greatly to his credit,

That he is an Englishman!

For he might have been a Roosian,

A French or Turk or Proosian,

Or perhaps Itali-an.

But in spite of all temptations

To belong to other nations,

He remains an Englishman.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act ii.

Never, even when the storm-clouds appear blackest, have I been tempted to wish that I was other than an Englishman.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 166.)

A stern, true-born Englishman.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1783.)

No little lily-handed baronet he,
A great broad-shoulder'd genial Englishman.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Conclusion, l. 84.

1 The ancient . . . spirit of Englishmen was once expressed by our proverb, "Better be the head of a dog than the tail of a lion"; i.e. the first of the yeomanry rather than the last of the gentry.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature. Ser. ii, p. 447.

2 I find the Englishman to be him of all men who stands firmest in his shoes.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 106.

An Englishman has firm manners. He rests secure on the reputation of his country, on his family, and his expectations at home. There is in his manners a suspicion of insolence. If his belief in the Thirty-nine Articles does not bind him much, his belief in the fortieth does:—namely, that he shall not find his superiors elsewhere.

EMERSON, Journal, 1868.

3 The most honest people in the world are the French who think and the British who talk. (Les plus honnêtes gens du monde, ce sont les Français qui pensent et les Anglais qui parlent.)

SAINT-ÉVREMOND. (INGE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

4 Not Angles, but Angels.

POPE GREGORY I., remarking upon the beauty of some English captives exposed for sale in the market-place at Rome. (FREEMAN, Old English History, 44.)

5 He [the Englishman] is like a stout ship, which will weather the roughest storm uninjured, but roll its masts overboard in the succeeding calm.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: John Bull.

His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: John Bull.

6 A Frenchman must be always talking, whether he knows anything of the matter or not; an Englishman is content to say nothing when he has nothing to say.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1779.)

I hope we English will long maintain our grand talent pour le silence.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 6.

The English are a dumb people.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Silence—a conversation with an Englishman.

HEINRICH HEINE.

7 The whole nation, beyond all other mortal men, is most given to banqueting and feasts.

PAULUS JOVIUS, History. Bk. ii. (Burton, tr.)

If an earthquake were to engulf England tomorrow, the English would manage to meet and dine somewhere among the rubbish, just to celebrate the event.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Remark, made in the Museum Club. (BLANCHARD JERROLD, Life.)

8 An Englishman hath three qualities, he can suffer no partner in his love, no stranger to be his equal, nor to be dared by any.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England.

9 The Rev. Doctor was a fine old picture; a specimen of art peculiarly English; combining in himself piety and epicurism, learning and gentlemanliness, with good room for each and a seat at one another's table.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Egoist. Ch. xx.

10 The people of England are never so happy as when you tell them they are ruined.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Upholsterer. Act ii, 1.

How hard it is to make an Englishman acknowledge that he is happy!

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Bk. ii, ch. 31.

11 Not only England, but every Englishman is an island. (Non seulement l'Angleterre, mais chaque anglais est une île.)

NOVALIS, Fragments. (1799)

Every one of these islanders is an island himself, safe, tranquil, incommunicable.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 109.

The Englishman's strong point is a vigorous insularity which he carries with him, portable and sometimes insupportable.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Americanism in Literature.

12 But we, brave Britons, foreign laws despised, And kept unconquered and uncivilized.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 156.

13 The English people fancy they are free; it is only during the election of Members of Parliament that they are so. As soon as these are elected the people are slaves, they are nothing. In the brief moments of their liberty the use made of it fully deserves that it should be lost. (Le peuple anglais pense être libre, il se trompe fort; il ne l'est que durant l'élection des membres du parlement. Sitôt qu'ils sont élus, il est esclave, il n'est rien. Dans les courts moments de sa liberté, l'usage qu'il en fait mérite bien qu'il en perde.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. iii, ch. 15.

Great eaters of meat are in general more cruel and ferocious than other men. The cruelty of the English is known. (Les grands mangeurs de viande sont en général cruels et féroces plus que les autres hommes. . . . La barbarie anglaise est connue.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. ii.

14 We Englishmen, trim, correct,

All minted in the self-same mould,
Warm hearted but of semblance cold,
All-courteous out of self-respect.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Enrica.

It is to the middle class we must look for the safety of England.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George III.

They are like their own beer: froth on top, dregs at the bottom, the middle excellent.

VOLTAIRE, referring to the British.

The English people are people who defend themselves. (Les gens Anglais sont gens qui se défendent.)

VOLTAIRE, La Pucelle. Canto x.

XV—England: The English: Their Faults

An English tourist's preconceived idea of us is a thing he brings over with him on the steamer and carries home again intact.

T. B. ALDRICH, Ponkapog Papers, p. 70.

No good man is a Briton. (Nemo bonus Brito est.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 110.

Frenchmen sin in lechery,
Englishmen in ennui.

ROBERT DE BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 4156.

An Englishman,
Being flatter'd, is a lamb; threaten'd, a lion.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act i, sc. 2.

Wise men affirm it is the English way
Never to grumble till they come to pay.

DEFOE, Britannia, l. 84.

That vain, ill-natured thing, an Englishman.

DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. i, l.
133.

No panegyric needs their praise record;
An Englishman ne'er wants his own good word.

DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. ii, l.
152.

For Englishmen are ne'er contented long.

DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. ii, l.
244.

Thus from a mixture of all kinds began

That heterogeneous thing, an Englishman:

In eager rapes and furious lust begot

Between a painted Briton and a Scot;

Whose gendering offspring quickly learnt to bow

And yoke their heifers to the Roman plough;

From whence a mongrel half-bred race there came,

With neither name nor nation, speech nor fame;

In whose hot veins new mixtures quickly ran,

Infus'd between a Saxon and a Dane.

DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman. Pt. i, l.
279.

The English are not an inventive people;
they don't eat enough pie.

THOMAS A. EDISON. (Golden Book, April, 1931.)

9

There is a prose in certain Englishmen, which exceeds in wooden deadness all rivalry with other countrymen.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 115.

The common Englishman is prone to forget a cardinal article in the bill of social rights, that every man has a right to his own ears.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 136.

Englishmen are not made of polishable substance.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 13 Feb., 1854.

p. 136. A medieval Latin proverb quoted in Kornmannus, De Linea Amoris. Ch. ii, p.
47.

12

If ever a people required to be amused, it is we sad-hearted Anglo-Saxons—heavy eaters, hard thinkers, often given up to a peculiar melancholy of our own, with a climate that for months together would frown away mirth if it could; many of us with very gloomy thoughts about our hereafter.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 4.

The English amuse themselves sadly according to the custom of their country. (Les Anglais s'amusement tristement selon l'usage de leur pays.)

DUC DE SULLY, Memoirs. (c. 1630)

They amused themselves sadly after the custom of their country. (Ils s'amusaient tristement selon la coutume de leur pays.)

FROISSART, referring to the English. (EMERSON, English Traits, ch. 8; HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: Merry England.) In spite of the fact that both Emerson and Hazlitt quote this as coming from Froissart, it is not to be found in his writings, but was probably derived from Sully, as given above. Hazlitt gives "se rejoüssoient" instead of "s'amusaient."

13

The King blew his nose twice, and wiped the royal perspiration repeatedly from a face which is probably the largest uncivilized spot in England.

XVII—England: The English: Mostly Fools

13 Consider, in fact, a body of six hundred and fifty-eight miscellaneous persons set to consult about "business" with twenty-seven millions, mostly fools, assiduously listening to them, and checking and criticising them:—was there ever since the world began, will there ever be till the world end, any "business" accomplished in these circumstances?

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets: No. 6.

14 England has been divided into three classes: Knaves, Fools, and Revolutionists.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Victorian Age in English Literature, p. 233.

15 Let but thy wicked men from out thee go,
And all the fools that crowd thee so,
Even thou who dost thy millions boast,
A village less than Islington will grow,
A solitude almost.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Solitude.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iii, l. 113.

19 You will always be fools; we shall never be gentlemen.

Quoted by Lord Fisher as "a classic," in the Times, 16 June, 1919, as the remark of a German naval officer to an English one. "On the whole," Lord Fisher commented, "I think I prefer to be the fool."

ENTHUSIASM

1 It is unfortunate, considering that enthusiasm moves the world, that so few enthusiasts can be trusted to speak the truth.

A. J. BALFOUR, Letter to Mrs. Drew.

2 The swallow, virgin-minded, studious Martyr to mild enthusiasm.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Sec. 14.

3 Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it.

BULWER-LYTON, The Last Days of Pompeii. Bk. i, ch. 8.

The prudent man may direct a state; but it is the enthusiast who regenerates it, or ruins.

BULWER-LYTON, Rienzi. Bk. i, ch. 2.

4 Rash enthusiasm in good society Were nothing but a moral inebriety.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 35.

5 No wild enthusiast ever yet could rest, Till half mankind were like himself possess'd.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 470.

6 Every production of genius must be the production of enthusiasm.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Solitude.

Enthusiasm is that secret and harmonious spirit which hovers over the production of genius, throwing the reader of a book, or the spectator of a statue, into the very ideal presence whence these works have really originated. A great work always leaves us in a state of musing.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character. Ch. xii.

7 Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles.

Enthusiasm is the leaping lightning, not to be measured by the horse-power of the understanding.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

Every great and commanding moment in the annals of the world is the triumph of some enthusiasm.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses, and Lectures: Man the Reformer.

8 Two dry Sticks will burn a green One.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1755.

9 Enthusiasm without imagination tends to make a man a crank.

BENJAMIN C. LEEMING, Imagination.

10

A little ginger 'neath the tail Will oft for lack of brains avail.

T. F. MACMANUS, Cave Sedem.

11

An ounce of enterprise is worth a pound of privilege.

FREDERIC R. MARVIN, The Companionship of Books, p. 318.

12

I love enthusiasts; exalted people frighten me.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. ix, No. 19.

13

Enthusiast most strange! (Sonderbarer Schwärmer!)

SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iii, sc. 10, l. 277.

14

There is a melancholy which accompanies all enthusiasm.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics. Vol. i, p. 13.

15

I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips, Straining upon the start.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 31.

16

His rash fierce blaze of riot cannot last, For violent fires soon burn out themselves; Small showers last long, but sudden storms are short;

He tires betimes that spurs too fast betimes.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 33.

17

Put down enthusiasm.

ARCHBISHOP MANNERS-SUTTON, Valedictory Sermon, on Bishop Heber's consecration to the see of Calcutta.

"Put down enthusiasm"—the Church of England in a nutshell.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. ii, ch. 16.

18

Enthusiasm is that temper of the mind in which the imagination has got the better of the judgment.

BISHOP WILLIAM WARBURTON, Divine Legation. Bk. v.

ENVY

19

Envy has no holidays.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. vi, sec. 16.

There be none of the affections which have been noted to fascinate, or bewitch, but Love and Envy.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Envy.

20

Neither can he, that mindeth but his own business, find much matter for Envy. For Envy is a gadding passion, and walketh the streets, and doth not keep at home.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Envy.

Envy, which is proud weakness, and deserveth to be despised.

FRANCIS BACON, Filum Labyrinthi.

1 It is not given to the children of men to be philosophers without envy. Lookers-on can hardly bear the spectacle of the great world.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Vol. ii, p. 286.

2 Envy's a coal comes hissing hot from hell.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Country Town.

Envy! eldest-born of hell!

CHARLES JENNENS, Saul: Chorus. Jennens, who was a friend of Handel, wrote the words for his famous oratorio.

3 Envy is the most corroding of the vices, and also the greatest power in any land.

4 From envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness.

Book of Common Prayer: The Litany.

5 Envy never dies.

JOHN BOURCHIER, Froissart. Sec. 428. (1523)

The envious will die, but envy never. (Les envieux mourront, mais non jamais l'envie.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act v, sc. 3, l. 25.

6 Let age not envy draw wrinkles on thy cheeks; be content to be envied, but envy not.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 13.

7 The envious man shall never want woe.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

8 With that malignant envy which turns pale, And sickens, even if a friend prevail, Which merit and success pursues with hate, And damns the worth it cannot imitate.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 127.

9 Nothing can allay the rage of biting envy. (Rabiem livoris acerbi Nulla potest placare quies.)

CLAUDIAN, De Raptu Proserpinæ. Bk. iii, l. 290.

10 Envy and fear are the only passions to which no pleasure is attached.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

11 Expect not praise without envy until you are dead.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 245.

12 A man shall never be enriched by envy.

DRAKE, Biblio. Schol. Instr., 52. (1633)

13 Envy and wrath shorten the life.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxx, 24.

14 There is a time in every man's education when he arrives at the conviction that envy is ignorance.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

15 Some folks rail against other folks because other folks have what some folks would be glad of.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iv, ch. 6.

16 An envious man is a squint-eyed fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 601.

Nothing sharpens sight like envy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3674.

17 Fools may our scorn, not envy, raise.

For envy is a kind of praise.

JOHN GAY, The Hound and the Huntsman.

Envy is the sincerest form of flattery.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

18 What mighty magic can assuage

A woman's envy and a bigot's rage?

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Progress of Beauty, l. 161.

19 Envy is but the smoke of low estate,

Ascending still against the fortunate.

SIR FULKE GREVILLE, Alaham. See also GREATNESS: ITS PENALTIES.

20 Envy, among other ingredients, has a mixture of the love of justice in it. We are more angry at undeserved than at deserved good fortune.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 6.

21 Envy not greatness: for thou mak'st thereby Thyself the worse, and so the distance greater.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 44.

22 It is better to be envied than pitied.

HERODOTUS, Thalia. Bk. iii, sec. 52.

Envy is better than pity. Those who are envied lead a splendid life, while our pity is for the unfortunate.

PALLADAS, quoting Pindar. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 51.)

23 Beneficent this bitter envy burns—
Thus emulous his wheel the potter turns,
The smith his anvil beats, the beggar throng
Industrious ply, the bards contend in song. . . .

The artist envies what the artist gains,
The bard the rival bard's successful strains.

EPIGRAM, THE

Definitions only. Epigrams themselves will be found under appropriate headings, or under Proverbs

5

The diamond's virtues well might grace
The epigram, and both excel

In brilliancy in smallest space,
And power to cut, as well.

GEORGE BIRDSEYE, The Epigram.

What is an epigram? A dwarfish whole,
Its body brevity, and wit its soul.

Attributed to S. T. COLERIDGE, but not found in his works. (See MATTHEWS, American Epigrams, Harper's Monthly, Nov., 1903.)

7

Paradoxes are useful to attract attention to ideas.

MANDELL CREIGHTON. (CREIGHTON, Life.)

8

The epigram has been compared to a scorpion, because as the sting of the scorpion lieth in the tail, the force of the epigram is in the conclusion.

LILIUS GYRALDUS, De Poetica Historia. Dial
10. (1545); EDWARD TOPSELL, The Historie of Serpents, p. 756. (1653)

9

A thought must tell at once, or not at all.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics.

10

In general I don't see how an epigram, being a pure bolt from the blue, with no introduction or cue, gets itself writ.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 42.

13

But, with the imprecise arrow

The intended acorn fairly struck—

Such is epigram, requiring

Wit, occasion, and good luck!

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, The Epigram.

14

Sure if they cannot cut, it may be said

His saws are toothless, and his hatchet's lead.

POPE, Epilogue to Satires. Dial. ii, l. 148.

15

No epigram contains the whole truth.

C. W. THOMPSON, Presidents I've Known, p.
271.

16

Somewhere in the world there is an epigram for every dilemma.

H. W. VAN LOON, Tolerance, p. 197.

17

The qualities rare in a bee that we meet,
In an epigram never should fail;

The body should always be little and sweet,
And a sting should be felt in its tail.

TOMAS DE YRIARTE, The Epigram. (See MAT-THEWS, American Epigrams, Harper's Monthly, Nov., 1903.)

18

Beware of cultivating this delicate art.

JOHN MORLEY, Studies in Literature, p. 88.

EPITAPHS

Epitaphs of persons who have subject-headings will be found under their respective names

I—Epitaphs: Apothegms

19

Julius Scaliger, who in a sleepless fit of the gout could make two hundred verses in a night, would have but five plain words upon his tomb. [Julii Cæsaries Scaligeri quod fuit.]

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 21.

20

Gravestones tell truth scarce forty years.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.

Old gravestones were taken up and other bodies laid under them.

1 Kind Reader! take your choice to cry or laugh:

Here Harold lies—but where's his Epitaph? If such you seek, try Westminster, and view Ten thousand just as fit for him as you.

BYRON, Substitute for an Epitaph.

2 Having read the inscriptions
Upon the tombstones
Of the Great and the Little Cemeteries,
Wang Peng advised the Emperor
To kill all the living
And resurrect the dead.

PAUL ELDRIDGE, Wang Pen, Famous Sociologist, Suggests to the Emperor the Only Possible Means of Improving the People of the Empire.

3 Let there be no inscription upon my tomb. Let no man write my epitaph. No man can write my epitaph. I am here ready to die. I am not allowed to vindicate my character; and when I am prevented from vindicating myself, let no man dare to calumniate me. Let my character and motives repose in obscurity and peace, till other times and other men can do them justice.

ROBERT EMMET, Speech, on his conviction for treason, Sept., 1803.

Let no man write my epitaph; let my grave Be uninscribed, and let my memory rest Till other times are come, and other men, Who then may do me justice.

SOUTHEY, Written after Reading the Speech of Robert Emmet.

4 When fades at length our lingering day,
Who cares what pompous tombstones say?
Read on the hearts that love us still,
Hic jacet Joe. Hic jacet Bill.

O. W. HOLMES, Bill and Joe.

5 In lapidary inscriptions a man is not upon oath.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

Friend, in your epitaphs I'm grieved
So very much is said:

One-half will never be believed,
The other never read.

UNKNOWN. On Too-Wordy Epitaphs.

6 The hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, "For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 144.

7 Adieu, and take thy praise with thee to heaven!

Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remember'd in thy epitaph.

SHAKESPEARE, I. Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 99.

Either our history shall with full mouth

Speak freely of our acts, or else our grave,
Like Turkish mute, shall have a tongueless mouth,

Not worshipp'd with a waxen epitaph.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act i, sc. 2, l. 230.

8 You cannot better be employ'd, Bassanio,
Than to live still and write mine epitaph.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 117.

And if your love
Can labour aught in sad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tomb.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 292.

9 Let's talk of graves, of worms, and epitaphs.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 145.

10 Build me no comic tombstone, lying half,
And half gloz'd over with unmeaning words,
But a brave fountain. Let my epitaph
Be sung by birds.

HUGH WESTERN, My Testament.

II—Epitaphs: Some Famous Examples

11 Here Huntington's ashes long have lain
Whose loss is our eternal gain,
For while he exercised all his powers,
Whatever he gained, the loss was ours.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Epitaph on Collis P. Huntington. (The Devil's Dictionary, p. 202.)

12 Underneath this sable hearse
Lies the subject of all verse:
Sidney's sister, Pembroke's mother:
Death, ere thou hast slain another,
Fair, and learn'd, and good as she,
Time shall throw a dart at thee.

WILLIAM BROWNE, On the Countess Dowager of Pembroke. The stanza as engraved on the tomb varies slightly from the above, which is the version given in the edition of Browne's poems edited by Gordon Goodwin. There is a second stanza, sometimes attributed to William, Earl of Pembroke, the son of the Countess. The first publication of the famous epitaph was in Osborne's Traditional Memoirs of the Reign of King James, 1658, but with no ascription of authorship. It was claimed for Ben Jonson by Peter Whalley, who published a collected edition of his works in 1756, but with no authority except popular tradition.

And since my weak and saddest verse
Was worthy thought thy grandam's hearse,
Accept of this! Just tears my sight
Have shut for thee—dear Lord—good night.

WILLIAM BROWNE, On the Right Honourable Charles, Lord Herbert of Cardiff and Shurland. Lord Herbert was the grandson of the Countess of Pembroke, and this explicit claim of Browne to the authorship of her famous epitaph should settle the question.

Browne was a protégé of William, Earl of Pembroke, the Countess's son.

<sup>1</sup> This is the tomb of Callimachus that thou art passing.

He could sing well, and laugh well at the right time over the wine.

CALLIMACHUS, His Own Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 415.)

<sup>2</sup> Lo, here the precious dust is laid,
Whose purely-temper'd clay was made
So fine, that it the guest betray'd.
Else, the soul grew so fast within,
It broke the outward shell of sin,
And so was hatch'd a Cherubin.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaph on Lady Maria Wentworth.

<sup>3</sup> And when I lie in the green kirkyard,
With the mould upon my breast,
Say not that she did well or ill,
Only, "She did her best."

DINAH MARIA MULOCK CRAIK, Epitaph.

<sup>4</sup> His form was of the manliest beauty,
His heart was kind and soft,
Faithful, below, he did his duty;
But now he's gone aloft. . . .

For though his body's under hatches,
His soul has gone aloft.

CHARLES DIBDEN, Tom Bowling. Written on the occasion of the death of his brother, for many years master of a merchant vessel. The first stanza is inscribed on Charles Dibdin's gravestone in the cemetery of St. James, Camden Town, London.

<sup>5</sup> Never be vexed at not getting something, but rejoice in all the gifts of God. Wise Periander died of disappointment at not attaining the thing he wished.

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Epitaph for Periander. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 620.)

<sup>6</sup> If e'er she knew an evil thought
She spoke no evil word:

Peace to the gentle! She has sought
The bosom of her Lord.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Epitaph on Hannah Ratcliff.

<sup>7</sup> Under this stone, reader, survey
Dead Sir John Vanbrugh's house of clay.
Lie heavy on him, earth! for he Laid many heavy loads on thee.

ABEL EVANS, On Sir John Vanbrugh. Vanbrugh was the architect of Blenheim Palace.

Lie light upon him, earth, tho' he Laid many a heavy load on thee.

The foregoing epitaph as quoted by SNUF-FLING, Epitaphia: Architects.

<sup>8</sup> Alas, poor Tom! how oft, with merry heart,
Have we beheld thee play the Sexton's part;

Each comic heart must now be grieved to see
The Sexton's dreary part performed on thee.

ROBERT FERGUSSON, Epigram on the Death of Mr. Thomas Lancashire, Comedian.

<sup>9</sup> When I shall be there, I shall be without care.
(Quand je serai là, je serai sans souci.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Inscription, written at the foot of the statue of Flora at Sans Souci.

<sup>10</sup> "Fuller's earth."

THOMAS FULLER, Epitaph Written by Himself.

<sup>11</sup> Here lies James Quinn. Deign, Reader, to be taught,

Whate'er thy strength of body, force of thought,

In Nature's happiest mould however cast,
To this complexion thou must come at last.

DAVID GARRICK, Epitaph on James Quinn. In the abbey church at Bath, England. (MURPHY, Life of Garrick. Vol. ii, p. 38.)

The last line is often attributed to Shakespeare, perhaps in confused remembrance of Hamlet, act v, sc. 1, l. 186: "Now get you to my lady's chamber, and tell her, let her paint an inch thick, to this favour she must come."

<sup>12</sup> Here Reynolds is laid, and, to tell you my mind,

He has not left a wiser or better behind:

His pencil was striking, resistless, and grand;
His manners were gentle, complying, and bland.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, On Sir Joshua Reynolds.

ANTHONY HOPE HAWKINS, Epitaph on William Schwenck Gilbert. Inscribed on the tablet placed in memory of Gilbert on the Victoria Embankment, London, 31 Aug., 1915.

<sup>14</sup> But here's the sunset of a tedious day.

These two asleep are; I'll but be undrest,
And so to bed. Pray wish us all good rest.

ROBERT HERRICK, Epitaph on Sir Edward Giles.

<sup>15</sup> Her face was fair, her person pleasing, her temper amiable, her heart kind. . . . To the poor she was a benefactor, to the rich an example, to the wretched a comforter, to the prosperous an ornament.

ANDREW JACKSON, Epitaph for his Wife, Rachel, inscribed on her tomb at their home, The Hermitage, near Nashville, Tenn.

<sup>16</sup> The hand of him here torpid lies,
That drew th' essential form of grace;
Here closed in death th' attentive eyes
That saw the manners in the face.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph for William Hogarth.

1
Phillips! whose touch harmonious could remove

The pangs of guilty power and hapless love,
Rest here, distress'd by poverty no more;
Find here that calm thou gav'st so oft before;
Sleep undisturb'd within this peaceful shrine,
Till angels wake thee with a note like thine!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph on Claudius Phillips, the Musician.

Underneath this stone doth lie
As much beauty as could die;
Which in life did harbour give
To more virtue than doth live.
If at all she had a fault,
Leave it buried in this vault.
One name was ELIZABETH.
The other let it sleep in death.

BEN JONSON, To Lady Elizabeth L. H.

Gentle Lady, may thy grave
Peace and quiet ever have.
MILTON, Epitaph on Lady Winchester, l. 47.

4
I have found the haven; Hope and Fortune,
farewell!

You have mocked me long enough; mock others now!

(Inveni portum; Spes et Fortuna valete!
Sat me lustris; ludite nunc alios.)

JANUS PANNONIUS, Onofrio. A Latin version of a Greek epitaph. (LAURENTIUS SCHRAEDER, Monumenta Italica: Folio Helmæstadii, p. 164.) Quoted in this form by Le Sage, Gil Blas, bk. ix, ch. 10, last lines.

Fortune and Hope farewell! I've found the port;
You've done with me: go, now, with others sport.

(Jam portum.inveni, Spes et Fortuna valete.
Nil mihi vobiscum est, ludite nunc alios.)

SIR THOMAS MORE, Progymnasmata. Latin version of Greek epitaph prefixed to More's Epigrams, 1520. English version by John Herman Merivale.

Mine haven's found; Fortune and Hope, adieu.
Mock others now, for I have done with you.

(Inveni portum Spes et Fortuna valete
Nil mihi vobiscum ludite nunc alios.)

Latin version of Greek epitaph as inscribed on the tomb of Francesco Pucci, church of St. Onofrio, Rome. English version by ROBERT BURTON (Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 6), who credits the authorship to Prudentius.

Avete multum, Spesque, Forsque; sum in vado.
Qui pone sint illudite; haud mea interest.

Latin version of Greek epitaph, given by Dr. HENRY WELLESLEY, Anthologia Polyglotta, p. 464.

5
Excuse my dust.

DOROTHY PARKER, Her Own Epitaph.

6
He kept at true good humour's mark

The social flow of pleasure's tide:
He never made a brow look dark,

Nor caused a tear, but when he died.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Headlong Hall: Song.

Here Rufus lies, who raised in victory's hour
His country, not himself, to sovran power.

(Hic situs est Rufus, pulso qui Vindice quondam

Imperium adseruit non sibi, sed patriæ.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 19.

8
Here rests a Woman, good without pretence,
Bless'd with plain Reason and with sober
Sense:

No Conquests she but o'er herself desired,
No Arts essay'd but not to be admired.
Passion and Pride were to her soul unknown,
Convinc'd that Virtue only is her own.

So unaffected, so composed, a mind,
So firm, yet soft, so strong, yet so refin'd.

Heaven, as its purest gold, by Tortures tried:
The Saint sustain'd it, but the Woman died.

POPE, Epitaph on Mrs. Corbet, Who Died of a Cancer in Her Breast.

9
Here lies Lord Coningsby—be civil!
The rest God knows—perhaps the Devil.

POPE, Epitaph on Lord Coningsby.

10
Statesman, yet friend to truth; of soul sincere,
In action faithful, and in honour clear;
Who broke no promise, serv'd no private end,
Who gain'd no title, and who lost no friend;
Ennobled by himself, by all approv'd,
And prais'd, unenvied by the Muse he lov'd.

POPE, Epistle to Mr. Addison, l. 67. Referring to James Craggs. The line on his tomb in Westminster Abbey reads: "Prais'd, wept, and honour'd, by the Muse he lov'd."

11
This modest stone, what few vain marbles can,
May truly say, Here lies an Honest Man;
A Poet bless'd beyond the Poet's fate, Whom Heav'n kept sacred from the proud and great;

Foe to loud Praise, and friend to learned Ease,
Content with Science in the vale of peace.
Calmly he look'd on either life, and here
Saw nothing to regret, or there to fear;
From Nature's temp'rate feast rose satisfied, Thank'd Heav'n that he had liv'd, and that he died.

POPE, Epitaph on Mr. Elijah Fenton.

12
To this sad shrine, whoe'er thou art, draw near;

Here lies the Friend most lov'd, the Son most
dear;

Who ne'er knew Joy but Friendship might divide,

Or gave his father grief but when he died.

POPE, Epitaph on the Hon. Simon Harcourt.

1
Kneller, by Heav'n, and not a master, taught,
Whose Art was Nature, and whose pictures
thought. . . .

Living, great Nature fear'd he might outvie
Her works; and, dying, fears herself may die.

POPE, Epitaph on Sir Godfrey Kneller. Inscribed on his monument in Westminster.
An imitation of an epitaph on Raphael,
Pantheon, Rome.

2
She was—but room forbids to tell thee what—
Sum all perfection up, and she was—that.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Epitaph on Lady Luchyn.

3
Warm summer sun, shine friendly here;
Warm western wind, blow kindly here;
Green sod above, rest light, rest light—
Good-night, Annette! Sweetheart, good-night.

ROBERT RICHARDSON, Requiem. (Willow and Wattle, p. 35.)

Warm summer sun Shine kindly here;
Warm southern wind Blow softly here;
Green sod above Lie light, lie light—
Good night, dear heart, Good night, good night.

MARK TWAIN, *Epitaph for His Daughter,
Susy*. Inscribed on her tombstone. A variation of the lines by Robert Richardson.

4
Hotten
Rotten
Forgotten

G. A. SALA, Epitaph for Gorge Camden Hotten.

5
Traveller, let your step be light,
So that sleep these eyes may close,
For poor Scarron, till to-night,
Ne'er was able e'en to doze.

PAUL SCARRON, Epitaph Written by Himself.

6
These are two friends whose lives were undivided;

So let their memory be, now they have glided
Under the grave; let not their bones be parted,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.

SHELLEY, Epitaph.

7
Stranger, bear this message to the Spartans, that we lie here obedient to their laws. (Ὁ
ξένε, ἀγγεῖλον Λακεδαιμονίοις ὅτι τῇδε κείμεθα, τοῖς κείνων ῥήμασι πειθόμενοι.)

SIMONIDES, Epitaph, on the monument of the Spartans who fell at Thermopylæ. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 249.)

Stranger, to Lacedæmon go, and tell
That here, obedient to her words, we fell.

SIMONIDES OF CHIOS, Fragment. (Burgess, tr.)

Go tell the Spartans, thou that passest by,
That here, obedient to their laws, we lie.

SIMONIDES OF CHIOS, Fragment.

8
Here lies one who meant well, tried a little,
failed much.

R. L. STEVENSON, Christmas Sermon.

I, whom Apollo sometimes visited,
Or feigned to visit, now, my day being done,
Do slumber wholly, nor shall know at all
The weariness of changes; nor perceive
Immeasurable sands of centuries
Drink up the blanching ink, or the loud sound
Of generations beat the music down.

R. L. STEVENSON, Epitaph for Himself.

9
Under the wide and starry sky,
Dig the grave and let me lie.
Glad did I live and gladly die,
And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you gave for me:
*Here he lies where he longed to be;
Home is the sailor, home from sea,
And the hunter home from the hill.*

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, Requiem. Written for himself and engraved on his tombstone.

Now when the number of my years
Is all fulfilled and I
From sedentary life
Shall rouse me up to die,

Bury me low and let me lie
Under the wide and starry sky.
Joying to live, I joyed to die,
Bury me low and let me lie.

R. L. STEVENSON, Lines. (1879) The first draft of his Requiem.

10
Ubi sæva indignatio ulterius cor lacerare nequit.

(Where fierce indignation can no longer tear my heart.)

JONATHAN SWIFT, Epitaph for Himself. Inscribed on his tomb in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin.

11
Thou third great Canning, stand among our best

And noblest, now thy long day's work hath ceased,

Here silent in our Minster of the West
Who wert the voice of England in the East.

TENNYSON, *Epitaph on Stratford Canning,
First Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe*.

12
Here in this place sleeps one whom love
Caused, through great cruelty, to fall;
A little scholar, poor enough,
Whom François Villon men did call.

No scrap of land or garden small
He owned; he gave his goods away,
Table and trestles, baskets—all;
For God's sake say for him this lay.

FRANÇOIS VILLON, His Own Epitaph.

13
Under this stone there lieth at rest
A friendly man, a worthy knight;
Whose heart and mind was ever prest
To favour truth, to further right.

THOMAS WYATT, Epitaph on Sir Thomas Gravener.

14
In this grave are the bones of the venerable

Bede. (Hac sunt in fossa Bedæ venerabilis ossa.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Bede, Durham Cathedral.

1
O man! whosoever thou art, and whencesoever thou comest, for come I know thou wilt, I am Cyrus, founder of the Persian empire. Envy me not the little earth that covers my body. (Ἦ ἀνθρώπε, ὅστις εἰ καὶ ὅθεν ἦκεις, ὅτι μὲν γὰρ ἦξεις, οἶδα, ἐγὼ Κῦρος εἰμὶ ὁ Πέρσαις κτησάμενος τὴν ἀρχήν. μὴ οὖν τῆς ὀλίγης μοι ταύτης γῆς φθονήσης ἢ τοῦμὸν σῶμα περικαλύπτει.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Cyrus. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Sec. 69.)

2
Say, dog, I pray, what guard you in that tomb?

"A dog." His name? "Diogenes." From far? "Sinopè." He who made a tub his home?

"The same. Now, dead, among the stars a star."

UNKNOWN, Inscription, on pillar, surmounted by a dog, raised at Athens to the memory of Diogenes. (Greek Anthology.)

3
Her name was Margaret Lucas, youngest sister to the Lord Lucas of Colchester, a Noble Familie: for all the brothers were valiant and all the sisters virtuous.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Margaret, Duchess of Newcastle, Westminster Abbey.

4
Farewell, vain world, I've had enough of thee, And Values't not what thou Can'st say of me; Thy Smiles I count not, nor thy frowns I fear, My days are past, my head lies quiet here. What faults you saw in me take Care to shun, Look but at home, enough is to be done.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on tombstone of William Harvey, Greasley churchyard, England. (STAPLETON, The Churchyard Scribe, p. 95.)

5
Here lies Tom Hyde;
It's a pity he died;
We had rather
It had been his father;
If it had been his sister
We had not missed her;
If the whole generation,
It had been better for the nation.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Thomas Hyde, son of Edward Hyde, Lord Chancellor of England. (ROBERT BOWERS, Letter to Robert Southwell, 9 July, 1667.) This epitaph and the one which follows are probably versions of a French epigram, "Colas est morte de maladie." (JEAN OGIER GOMBAULD, Epigrammes. 1658)

Here lies Fred,
Who was alive and is dead;
Had it been his father,
I had much rather;
Had it been his brother,

Still better than another;
Had it been his sister,
No one would have missed her;
Had it been the whole generation,
Still better for the nation:
But since 'tis only Fred
Who was alive and is dead,
There's no more to be said.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of George III. (THACKERAY, Four Georges: George III. Also preserved in Walpole. See Notes and Queries, 3 May, 1902.)

6
In sex a woman, in abilities a man. (Sexu femina, ingenio vir.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of Maria Theresa of Austria.

7
Here lies one who was nothing. (Ci-gît qui ne fut rien.)

UNKNOWN, Piron's Epitaph. Cited by Voltaire, in La Vanité, as happy and worthy of Piron's tomb.

8
Born in America, in Europe bred,
In Africa travelled, in Asia we l.
Where long he lived and thrived, in London dead;
Much good, some ill he did, so hope all's even,
And that his soul through mercy's gone to heaven.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, on tomb of Elihu Yale, founder of Yale University, in the churchyard of Wrexham, North Wales.

III—Epitaphs: "Revised by the Author"

9
The World's a Printing-House, our words,
our thoughts,
Our deeds, are characters of several sizes.
Each Soul is a Compositor, of whose faults
The Levites are Correctors; Heaven Revises.

Death is the common Press, from whence being driven,
We're gather'd, Sheet by Sheet, and bound for Heaven.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies. (1635)

The world's a book, writ by th' eternal Art
Of the great Maker; printed in man's heart;
'Tis falsely printed though divinely penn'd,
And all the Errata will appear at th' end.

10
A living, breathing Bible; tables where Both Covenants at large engraven were.
Gospel and law, in 's heart, had each its column;

His head an index to the sacred volume;
His very name a title-page; and, next,
His life a commentary on the text.
O what a monument of glorious worth,
When, in a new edition, he comes forth!

Without errata may we think he'll be,
In leaves and covers of eternity!

BENJAMIN WOODBRIDGE, Epitaph on Himself.
Though born in England, Woodbridge was a member of the first graduating class of Harvard College, 1642. He afterwards returned to England and in 1660 was chaplain to Charles II. His epitaph was quoted in Cotton Mather's Magnalia Christi, and so gained wide circulation.

1
Yet at the resurrection we shall see
A fair edition, and of matchless worth,
Free from erratas, new in heaven set forth.

JOSEPH CAPEN, Lines upon Mr. John Foster.

2
Like a worn out type, he is returned to the Founder in the hope of being recast in a better and more perfect mould.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Peter Gedge. Parish church, Bury St. Edmund's.

He died pied.
Reset and stet,
HE NAPS IN CAPS.

DAVID McCORD, Remainders.

3
He will be weighed again
At the Great Day,
His rigging refitted,
And his timbers repaired,
And with one broadside
Make his adversary
Strike in his turn.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle: Epitaph on Commodore Trunnion. Bk. iii, ch. 7.

4
Then haste, kind Death, in pity to my age,
And clap the Finis to my life's last page.
May Heaven's great Author my foul proof
revise,

Cancel the page in which my error lies,
And raise my form above the ethereal
skies. . .

The stubborn pressman's form I now may scoff;

Revised, corrected, finally worked off!

UNKNOWN. (TIMBERLEY, Songs of the Press.)

5
Here lies the remains of James Pady, Brick-maker, in hope that his clay will be remoulded in a workmanlike manner, far superior to his former perishable materials.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph of James Pady. Addiscombe churchyard, Devonshire, England.

IV—Epitaphs: Curiosa

6
To say an angel here interred doth lie
May be thought strange, for angels never die,
Indeed some fell from heaven to hell;
Are lost to rise no more.

This only fell from death to earth,
Not lost, but gone before.

Epitaph on tomb of Mary Angell, Stepney, d. 1693.

Rest, gentle Shade, await thy Master's will;
Then rise unchanged and be an angel still.
Epitaph of Richard Jebb, Chirk Church, North Wales.

7
As I walked by myself I talked to myself,
And thus myself said to me,
Look to thyself and take care of thyself
For nobody cares for thee.
So I turned to myself, and I answered myself
In the self-same reverie
Look to myself or look not to myself
The self-same thing will it be.

Epitaph of Robert Crytoft, Hornersfield, Suffolk, England. (WILLIAM H. BEABLE, Epitaphs, p. 139.)

8
Here lies Thomas Dudley, that trusty old stud—
A bargain's a bargain, and must be made good.

Epitaph on Governor Dudley, attributed to Governor Belcher.

9
Here lies DuVall; reader, if male thou art,
Look to thy purse; if female, to thy heart.
Epitaph of the famous highwayman, Claude DuVall, in Covent Garden church.

10
Here lie I, Martin Elginbrodde.
Have mercy o' my soul, Lord God,
As I would do were I Lord God,
And ye were Martin Elginbrodde.
One of many variants of an epitaph frequently found in British and American graveyards. GEORGE MACDONALD cites it in this form in his novel, David Elginbrod.

If I were Thou and Thou wert I,
I would resign the Deity,
Thou shouldst be God, I would be man—
Is't possible that Love more can?
JAMES HOWELL, Letters. A versification of a passage in St. Augustine.

Were I thou, Agni, and wert thou I, this aspiration should be fulfilled.
Rig Veda. viii, 19, 25.

Here rests one fortune never favored,
He grew no wiser from the past;
But e'er with perseverance labored
And still contended to the last.
JOSEPH EVE, His Epitaph.

12
Beneath this stone lies Catherine Gray,
Changed to a lifeless lump of clay.
By earth and clay she got her pelf,
And now she's turned to earth herself.
Ye weeping friends let me advise,
Abate your tears and dry your eyes;
For what avails a flood of tears?
Who knows but in a course of years,
In some tall pitcher or brown pan,
She in her shop may be again?
Epitaph, in a Church at Chester, England.

1
Beneath these green trees rising to the skies,
The planter of them, Isaac Greentree, lies;
The time shall come when these green trees shall fall.

And Isaac Greentree rise above them all.

Epitaph of Isaac Greentree, Harrow.

2
Here lies Sir Jenkin Grout, who loved his friend and persuaded his enemy: what his mouth ate, his hand paid for: what his servants robbed, he restored: if a woman gave him pleasure, he supported her in pain: he never forgot his children; and whoso touched his finger, drew after it his whole body.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.
Quoted.

3
Pray for the soul of Gabriel John,
Who died in the year eighteen-hundred and
one

You may if you please, or let it alone,
For it's all one To Gabriel John,
Who died in the year eighteen-hundred and
one.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme.

Here lie the bones of Robert Lowe:
Where he's gone to I don't know.

If to the realms of peace and love,
Farewell to happiness above.
If he's gone to a lower level,
I can't congratulate the devil.

E. KNATCHBULL-HUGESSEN, Epitaph on Robert Lowe.

Here lies Anne Mann; she lived an Old maid and died an old Mann.

Epitaph of Anne Mann, Bath Abbey.

6
Beneath this stone old Abraham lies;
Nobody laughs and nobody cries.
Where he is gone, and how he fares,
Nobody knows, and nobody cares.

ABRAHAM NEWLAND, His Own Epitaph. Newland, who died in 1807, was chief cashier of the Bank of England.

7
Under this sod
And under these trees
Lieth the body of Solomon Pease.

He's not in this hole,
But only his pod;
He shelled out his soul
And went up to his God.

On a tombstone in Ohio. (J. R. KIPPAX, Churchyard Literature, p. 163.)

8
Stranger, pause and shed a tear
For one who leaves no mourners.

D. F. Sapp reposes here:

He would cut corners.

Here lies G. Whilliken's friends, all five.

He took them along when he learned to drive.
LEONARD H. ROBBINS, Epitaphs for the Speed Age.

9
In heart a Lydia, and in tongue a Hannah,
In zeal a Ruth, in wedlock a Susanna,
Prudently simple, providently wary,
To the world a Martha, and to heaven a Mary.

Epitaph on Dame Dorothy Selby (d. 1641), Ightham Church, near Sevenoaks, England.

10
Here lies who, born a man, a grocer died. (Né homme—mort épicier.)

ALFRED AUSTIN, Golden Age.

11
Man's life is like unto a summer's day
Some break their fast and so away;
Others stay dinner, then depart full fed;
The longest age but sups and goes to bed:
O reader then behold and see:
As we are now, so must you be.

Attributed to JOSEPH HENSHAW, BISHOP OF PETERBOROUGH. Found with variations in many churches.

12
Here lies a poor woman, who always was tired;
She lived in a house where help was not hired.

Her last words on earth were: "Dear friends,
I am going
Where washing ain't done, nor sweeping, nor sewing;
But everything there is exact to my wishes;
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.

I'll be where loud anthems will always be ringing,
But, having no voice, I'll be clear of the singing.

Don't mourn for me now; don't mourn for me never—

I'm going to do nothing for ever and ever."
UNKNOWN, The Tired Woman's Epitaph.

13
She took the cup of life to sip,
Too bitter 'twas to drain;
She meekly put it from her lip,
And went to sleep again.
UNKNOWN, Epitaph, Meole Churchyard.
(Sabrinæ Corolla, p. 246.)

14
Here lies the mother of children seven,
Four on earth and three in heaven;
The three in heaven preferring rather
To die with mother than live with father.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph, in a graveyard at Birmingham, Eng.

EQUALITY

15
The men of culture are the true apostles of equality.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, The Maid of the Mill. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>2</sup> Your abundance may be a supply for their want, that their abundance also may be a supply for your want; that there may be equality.

New Testament: II Corinthians, viii, 14.

<sup>3</sup> As a man is equal to the Church and equal to the State, so he is equal to every other man. The disparities of power in men are superficial.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

The Spartan principle of "calling that which is just, equal; not that which is equal, just."

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

<sup>4</sup> There is a little formula, couched in pure Saxon, which you may hear in the corners of streets and in the yard of the dame's school, from very little republicans: "I'm as good as you be," which contains the essence of the Massachusetts Bill of Rights and of the American Declaration of Independence.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: Boston.

<sup>5</sup> Men are made by nature unequal. It is vain, therefore, to treat them as if they were equal.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

That all men are equal is a proposition to which, at ordinary times, no sane individual has ever given his assent.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Proper Studies, p. 23.

<sup>6</sup> One place there is—beneath the burial sod, Where all mankind are equalized by death; Another place there is—the Fane of God, Where all are equal who draw living breath.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 133.

<sup>7</sup> We are all born equal, and are distinguished alone by virtue. (Omnes pari sorte nascimur, sola virtute distinguimur.)

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>8</sup> When people have to obey other people's orders, equality's out of the question.

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i.

<sup>9</sup> We hold these truths to be self-evident—that all men are created equal.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Declaration of Independence.

I leave you, hoping that the lamp of liberty will burn in your bosoms, until there shall no longer be a doubt that all men are created free and equal.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Chicago, Ill., 10 July, 1858.

Fourscore and seven years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Gettysburg Address, 19 Nov., 1863.

All men are equal before the natural law. (Quod ad jus naturale attinet, omnes homines æquales sunt.)

UNKNOWN, Legal Maxim.

<sup>10</sup> Your levellers wish to level down as far as themselves; but they cannot bear levelling up to themselves.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1763.)

It is better that some should be unhappy, than that none should be happy, which would be the case in a general state of equality.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

No two men can be half an hour together but one shall acquire an evident superiority over the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, combating the theory that all men are equal. (BOSWELL, Life, 1776.)

<sup>11</sup> Equality in society beats inequality, whether the latter be of the British-aristocratic sort or of the domestic-slavery sort.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854.

<sup>12</sup> The odds for high and low's alike.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 1, l. 207.

The trickling rain doth fall

Upon us one and all;

The south-wind kisses

The saucy milkmaid's cheek,

The nun's, demure and meek,

Nor any misses.

E. C. STEDMAN, A Madrigal.

II—Error: To Err Is Human

15 The wisest of the wise may err. ('Αμαρτάνει τοι καὶ σοφοῦ σοφώτερος.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 219.

The best may err.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 4.

The best may slip, and the most cautious fall;
He's more than mortal that ne'er err'd at all.

JOHN POMFRET, Love Triumphant over Reason,
l. 145.

16 It is human to err; it is devilish to remain wilfully in error. (Humanum fuit errare, diabolicum est per animositatem in errore manere.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons. No. 164, sec. 14.

Man-like it is to fall into sin,

Fiend-like it is to dwell therein;

Christ-like it is for sin to grieve,

God-like it is all sin to leave.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinnegedichte.

To step aside is human.

BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid.

17 It is the nature of every man to err, but only the fool perseveres in error. (Cujusvis hominis est errare; nullius nisi insipientis in errore perseverare.)

CICERO, Philippicæ. No. xii, sec. 2.

18 Forgive, son; men are men, they needs must err. (Σὺ γὰρ γυνὴ· ἀμαρτεῖν εἰκὸς ἀνθρώπων, τέκνον.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 615. According to Buchmann, Theognis (540 B. C.) had anticipated the saying.

19 While man's desires and aspirations stir,
He cannot choose but err.

(Est irrt der Mensch so lang er strebt.)

GOETHE, Faust: Prolog im Himmel: Der Herr,

l. 77. (Bayard Taylor, tr.) Taylor remarks,

"It has seemed to me impossible to give the full meaning of these words—that error is a natural accompaniment of the struggles and aspirations of man—in a single line."

20 All men are liable to error; and most men are, in many points, by passion or interest, under temptation to it.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 20, sec. 17.

1 For to err in opinion, though it be not the part of wise men, is at least human.

PLUTARCH, Morals: Against Colotes the Epicurean.

Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, First Inaugural.

2 To err is human. (Humanum est errare.)

SENECA, Naturales Questiones. Bk. iv, sec. 2.

Probably the first expression in this form of a sentiment proverbial in all languages. Used by COGNATUS, Adagia; ST. JEROME, Epistles, lvii, 12; POLIGNAC, Anti-Lucretius, v, 58, and by many others with slight variations.

Good nature and good sense must ever join; To err is human, to forgive divine.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 324.

3 To err is common to all men, but the man who, having erred, hugs not his errors, but repents and seeks the cure, is not a wastrel.

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1023.

4 We are none of us infallible, not even the youngest.

WILLIAM HEPWORTH THOMPSON. (JAMES STUART, Reminiscences, 1912.)

III—Error and Truth

5 An error is the more dangerous in proportion to the degree of truth which it contains.

AMEL, Journal, 26 Dec., 1852.

6 The truth is perilous never to the true, Nor knowledge to the wise; and to the fool, And to the false, error and truth alike.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain Sunrise.

7 Many . . . have too rashly charged the troops of Error, and remain as trophies unto the enemies of Truth.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6.

8 Truth crushed to earth shall rise again:

Th' eternal years of God are hers;

But Error, wounded, writhes in pain,
And dies among his worshippers.

BRYANT, The Battle-Field. St. 9.

9 Error and mistake are infinite,
But truth has but one way to be i' th' right.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 114.

10 A man protesting against error is on the way towards uniting himself with all men that believe in truth.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 4.

11 Truth is a good dog; but, beware of barking too close to the heels of an error, lest you get your brains kicked out.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 7 June, 1830.

12 Truth is immortal; error is mortal.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 466.

13 Truth only smells sweet forever, and illusions, however innocent, are deadly as the canker-worm.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Calvinism.

14 Error belongs to libraries, truth to the human mind.

GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

Truth belongs to the man, error to his age.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

15 It is much easier to recognize error than to find truth; error is superficial and may be corrected; truth lies hidden in the depths.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

16 Little by little we subtract
Faith and Fallacy from Fact,
The Illusory from the True,
And starve upon the Residue.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Observation.

17 Dark Error's other hidden side is truth.

VICTOR HUGO, La Légende des Siècles.

18 Irrationally held truths may be more harmful than reasoned errors.

T. H. HUXLEY, The Coming of Age of the Origin of Species.

19 An error cannot be believed sincerely enough to make it a truth.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Great Infidels.

20 Error cannot be defended but by error. Untruth cannot be shielded but by untruth.

JOHN JEWEL, A Defence of the Apology for the Church of England.

21 Truth does not do so much good in the world, as the appearance of it does evil. (La vérité ne fait pas tant de bien dans le monde que ses apparences y font de mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 64.

22 It is one thing to show a man that he is in error, and another to put him in possession of truth.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 7, sec. 11.

Knowledge being to be had only of visible and certain truth, error is not a fault of our knowledge, but a mistake of our judgement, giving assent to that which is not true.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. iv, ch. 20, sec. 1.

Nine times out of ten, in the arts as in life,
there is actually no truth to be discovered;
there is only error to be exposed.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. iii, p. 93.

2
Truth lies within a little and certain compass,
but error is immense.

HENRY ST. JOHN, Reflections Upon Exile.

Plain truth will influence half a score men at most in a nation, or an age, while mystery will lead millions by the nose.

HENRY ST. JOHN, Letter, 28 July, 1721.

3
Shall Error in the round of time
Still father Truth?

TENNYSON, Love and Duty, l. 4.

4
Error is the force that welds men together; truth is communicated to men only by deeds of truth.

LEO TOLSTOY, My Religion. Ch. 12.

5
Love truth, but pardon error.

VOLTAIRE, Discours sur l'Homme. No. 3.

ETERNITY

For Eternity in the sense of eternal life
see Immortality

6
Eternity! thou pleasing, dreadful thought!
Through what variety of untried being,
Through what new scenes and changes must we pass!

The wide, th' unbounded prospect lies before
me,

But shadows, clouds, and darkness rest upon it.

ADDISON, Cato. Act v, sc. 1, l. 10.

7
For, Oh! eternity's too short
To utter all Thy praise.

ADDISON, Hymn: When All Thy Mercies.

Eternity, too short to speak Thy praise!

Or fathom Thy profound of love to man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 592.

8
'Tis time unfolds Eternity.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Ruined Temple.

Eternity is in love with the productions of time.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

I saw the starry Tree, Eternity,
Put forth the blossom Time.

ROBERT BUCHANAN, Proteus.

9
Who can speak of Eternity without a sole-cism?

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 11.

10
But there are wanderers o'er Eternity
Whose bark drives on and on, and anchor'd ne'er shall be.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 70.

Which makes life itself a lie,
Flattering dust with eternity.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

11
Eternity! How know we but we stand
On the precipitous and crumbling verge
Of Time e'en now, Eternity below?

ABRAHAM COLES, Eternity.

Eternity is not something that begins after you are dead. It is going on all the time. We are in it now.

CHARLOTTE P. GILMAN, The Forerunner.

It is eternity now. I am in the midst of it. It is about me in the sunshine; I am in it, as the butterfly in the light-laden air. Nothing has to come; it is now. Now is eternity; now is the immortal life.

RICHARD JEFFERIES, The Story of My Heart.
See also PRESENT: THE EVERLASTING NOW.

12
Eternity is not an everlasting flux of time, but time is as a short parenthesis in a long period.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions. Meditation 14.
(1624)

13
For ever and ever.

New Testament: Galatians, i, 5. (In sæcula
sæculorum.—Vulgate.)

Yesterday, and to-day, and for-ever.

New Testament: Hebrews, xiii, 8.

Rosalind: Now tell me how long you would have her after you have possessed her.

Orlando: For ever and a day.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l.
143.

14
Eternity's another word for change.

GERALD GOULD, Monogamy. Pt. ii, st. 5.

15
In the presence of eternity, the mountains are as transient as the clouds.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Christian Religion.

16
Thou, silent form, dost tease us out of thought
As doth eternity: Cold Pastoral!

KEATS, Ode on a Grecian Urn. St. 5.

17
To have the sense of the eternal in life is a short flight for the soul. To have had it, is the soul's vitality.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways.
Ch. 1.

18
That Golden Key,
That opes the Palace of Eternity.

MILTON, Comus, l. 13.

19
Then shall be shown, that but in name
Time and eternity were both the same;
A point which life nor death could sever,
A moment standing still for ever.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Time, A Rhapsody.

20
Eternity is not, as men believe,

Before and after us an endless line.

JOSEPH JOHN MURPHY, Eternity.

What, will the line stretch out to the crack of doom?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 117.

Those spacious regions where our fancies roam,

Pain'd by the past, expecting ills to come,
In some dread moment, by the fates assign'd,
Shall pass away, nor leave a rack behind;
And Time's revolving wheels shall lose at last

The speed that spins the future and the past:
And, sovereign of an undisputed throne,
Awful eternity shall reign alone.

PETRARCH, The Triumph of Eternity, l. 102.

I am the things that are, and those that are to be, and those that have been. No one ever lifted my skirts: the fruit which I bore was the sun.

PROCLUS, On Plato's Timæus. Inscription in the temple of Neith, at Saïs, Egypt.

My refuge is eternity. (Éternité deviens mon asile!)

ÉTIENNE PIVERT DE SENANCOUR, author of Obermann. The inscription he desired placed on his grave.

If Paris that brief flight allow,
My humble tomb explore;
It bears: "Eternity, be thou
My refuge!" and no more.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Obermann Once More, l. 269.

Gout, hack-work, and Madame Senancour explain the inscription he desired to be placed on his tomb, Éternité deviens mon asile! though perhaps his meaning would have been even more clearly conveyed had he borrowed the subtitle of his youthful work, Éternité, ou le Bonheur dans l'Obscurité.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 121.

Eternity consists of opposites. (Contrariis rerum æternitas constat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cvii, 8.

And make us heirs of all eternity.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 7.

I, the heir of all the ages, in the foremost files of time.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 178.

Or sells eternity to get a toy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 31.

Eternity for bubbles proves at last
A senseless bargain.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 175.

The Pilgrim of Eternity, whose fame
Over his living head like Heaven is bent,
An early but enduring monument,

Came, veiling all the lightnings of his song
In sorrow.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 30. Referring to Byron.

Thetis, bright image of eternity.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 1.

Till the sun grows cold,
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the Judgment Book unfold.

BAYARD TAYLOR, Bedouin Song.

In time there is no present,
In eternity no future.
In eternity no past.

TENNYSON, The "How" and the "Why."

And in those weaker glories spy
Some shadows of eternity.

HENRY VAUGHAN, The Retreat.

Beyond the stars, and all this passing scene,
Where change shall cease, and Time shall be no more.

HENRY KIRKE WHITE, Time, l. 726.

The clock indicates the moment—but what does eternity indicate?

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Pt. xlv, l. 4.

The sidewalks of Eternity, they are the freckles of Jupiter.

WALT WHITMAN, Dilation. (Uncollected Prose.
Vol. ii, p. 68.)

Eternity is written in the skies.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 659.

EUPHEMISM

See also Hanging: Some Euphemisms

Those expressions are omitted which can not with propriety be read aloud in the family.

DR. THOMAS BOWDLER, *Preface to his Family
Shakespeare*, 1818.

No profane hand shall dare, for me, to curtail my Chaucer, to Bowdlerize my Shakespeare, or mutilate my Milton.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vi, 41.)

This instinct of politeness in speech—euphemism, as it is called—which seeks to hint at an unpleasant or indelicate thing rather than name it directly, has had much to do with making words acquire new meanings and lose old ones.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Information for the People.

It is good to find modest words to express immodest things.

UNKNOWN, MS. Proverbs, c. 1645.

The Chairman felt it his imperative duty to demand . . . whether he had used the expression . . . in a common sense. Mr. Blot-ton had no hesitation in saying that he had not—he had used the word in its Pickwickian sense.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 1.

In every case it had only a political, perhaps I might say a Pickwickian meaning.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech, at Birmingham, 17 Nov., 1902.

1 In calling a prostitute an "unfortunate" the Victorians wished to imply that a prostitute was someone who had invested in the wrong stock, in spite of the advice of more experienced investors.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 12.

2 The ancient Athenians used to cover up the ugliness of things with auspicious and kindly terms, giving them polite and endearing names. Thus they called harlots "companions," taxes "contributions," and the prison a "chamber."

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 15.

3 To rest, the cushion and soft dean invite,
Who never mentions hell to ears polite.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 149.

In the reign of Charles II, a certain worthy divine at Whitehall thus addressed himself to the auditory at the conclusion of his sermon: "In short, if you don't live up to the precepts of the gospel, but abandon yourselves to your irregular appetites, you must expect to receive your reward in a certain place which 'tis not good manners to mention here."

TOM BROWN, Laconics.

4 She [my mother] says, I am too witty; Anglicé, too pert; I, that she is too wise; that is to say, being likewise put into English, not so young as she has been.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Vol. ii, letter 13.

5 Marry, then, sweet wag, when thou art king, let not us, that are squires of the night's body, be called thieves of the day's beauty: let us be Diana's foresters, gentlemen of the shade, minions of the moon; and let men say we be men of good government, being governed, as the sea is, by our noble and chaste mistress the moon, under whose countenance we steal.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 26.

6 If you have reason, be brief; 'tis not the time of the moon with me to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 214.

7 I will but look upon the hedge and follow you.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 857.

A Shakespearean exit (I go to look upon a hedge).

E. A. ROBERTSON, Four Frightened People, p. 101.

The thoughtless wits shall frequent forfeits pay,
Who 'gainst the sentry's box discharge their tea:
Do thou some court or secret corner seek,
Nor flush with shame the passing virgin's cheek.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 297.

8 Life on life downstricken goes, swifter than the wild bird's flight, to the land of the western god. (πρὸς ἐσπέρου θεοῦ.)

SOPHOCLES, Œdipus Tyrannus, l. 176. The origin, perhaps of "Going West," a euphemism for dying, particularly in vogue during the World War.

When we say of the martyr St. Stephen that "he fell asleep," instead of "he died," the euphemism partakes of the nature of a metaphor, intimating a resemblance between a sleep and the death of such a person.

JAMES BEATTIE, Elements of Moral Science. Sec. 866.

9 I've heard that breeches, petticoats and smock
Give to the modest mind a grievous shock,
And that my brain (so lucky its device,
Christ'neth them inexpressible, so nice.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), A Rowland for an Oliver, ii, 154.

The knees of the unmentionables . . . soon began to get alarmingly white.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz.

10 There is not a nation in Europe but labours
To toady itself and to humbug its neighbours.

R. H. BARHAM, The Auto-da-Fé. Canto ii, l. 1.

11 Europe is given a prey to sterner fates,
And writhes in shackles; strong the arms that chain

To earth her struggling multitude of states.

BRYANT, The Ages. St. 34.

12 Can we never extract the tapeworm of Europe from the brain of our countrymen?

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture.

Forget Europe wholly, your veins throb with blood,

To which the dull current in hers is but mud;
Let her sneer, let her say your experiment fails,
In her voice there's a tremble e'en now while she rails.

O my friends, thank your god, if you have one,
that he

'Twixt the Old World and you set the gulf of a sea.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1115.

13 In settling an island, the first building erected by a Spaniard will be a church; by a Frenchman, a fort; by a Dutchman, a warehouse; and by an Englishman, an alehouse.

GROSE, Provincial Glossary. (1790)

1 I will hold New Orleans in spite of Urop and all hell.

ANDREW JACKSON. (1812)

If that doesn't spell Europe, what does it spell?

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. (1906)

2 Man is the only animal which devours his own kind, for I can apply no milder term to the governments of Europe, and the general prey of the rich on the poor.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 56.

3 Roll up that map; it will not be wanted these ten years.

WILLIAM PITT, after the battle of Austerlitz, referring to the map of Europe. (STANHOPE, Life of Pitt. Ch. 43.)

4 Now Europe balanc'd, neither side prevails: For nothing's left in either of the scales.

POPE, The Balance of Europe.

The Balance of Europe.

UNKNOWN. Sub-title of folio publication of 1653, entitled A German Diet.

The balance of power.

Phrase used by both Edmund Burke and Sir Robert Walpole in speeches delivered in 1741. Ascribed to the King of Sweden by John Wesley. (Journal, 20 Sept., 1790)

An untoward event, threatening to disturb the balance of power.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, referring to the destruction of the Turkish navy at the battle of Navarino, 20 Oct., 1827.

5 Led by my hand, he saunter'd Europe round, And gather'd ev'ry vice on Christian ground.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 311.

6 Europe, which in twenty years' time will be nothing but a mass of French slaves.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 1.

7 Sharp the concert wrought of discord shrills the tune of shame and death,

Turk by Christian fenced and fostered, Mecca backed by Nazareth:

All the powerless powers, tongue-valiant, breathe but greed's or terror's breath.

SWINBURNE, The Concert of Europe.

8 Better fifty years of Europe than a cycle of Cathay.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 184. Tennyson's line is less clever than it appears, if it is true, as has been stated, that a Chinese cycle consists of sixty years.

9 And while she hid all England with a kiss, Bright over Europe fell her golden hair.

CHARLES TENNYSON TURNER, Letty's Globe.

10 Nor red from Europe's old dynastic slaughter-house,

(Area of murder-plots of thrones, with scent left yet of wars and scaffolds everywhere).

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Redwood Tree.

Without so much as pausing to wipe her feet, which are dipped in blood to the ankle, hasn't Europe always been willing to recommence hostilities?

15 To me at least was never evening yet But seemed far beautifuller than its day.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book: Pompilia, l. 357.

16 Hath not thy heart within thee burned At evening's calm and holy hour?

S. G. BULFINCH, Meditation.

17 It is the hour when from the boughs The nightingale's high note is heard; It is the hour when lovers' vows Seem sweet in every whispered word; And gentle winds and waters near, Make music to the lonely ear.

BYRON, Parisina. St. 1.

18 When the Gloaming is, I never made the ghost of an endeavour

To discover—but whatever were the hour,
it would be sweet.

C. S. CALVERLEY, In the Gloaming.

1 So let us welcome peaceful evening in.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 41.

2 Oh how grandly cometh Even,
Sitting on the mountain summit,
Purple-vestured, grave, and silent,
Watching o'er the dewy valleys,
Like a good king near his end.
DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Stream's Singing.

3 When day is done, and clouds are low,
And flowers are honey-dew,
And Hesper's lamp begins to glow
Along the western blue;
And homeward wing the turtle-doves,
Then comes the hour the poet loves.
GEORGE CROLY, The Poet's Hour.

4 Now was the hour that wakens fond desire
In men at sea, and melts their thoughtful hearts, . . .
And pilgrim, newly on his road, with love
Thrills if he hear the vesper bell from far
That seems to mourn for the expiring day.
DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto viii, l. 1. (Cary, tr.)

5 Welcome sweet night! the evening crowns
the day.
JOHN FORD, 'Tis Pity She's a Whore. Act ii, 6.

Though the cares of the day be many,
And the fruits of the struggle few,
I know at the close comes evening—
Evening, my love, and you.
W. R. ANDERSON, Evening and You.

6 Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the air a solemn stillness holds.

Church-yard*, l. 5.

And hie him home, at evening's close,
To sweet repast and calm repose.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode on the Pleasure Arising from Vicissitude, l. 87. Said to have been added by Gray's biographer and editor, Rev.
William Mason.

7 Day, like a weary pilgrim, had reached the western gate of heaven, and Evening stooped down to unloose the latchets of his sandal shoon.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

8 When the gray-hooded Ev'n,
Like a sad votarist in palmer's weed,
Rose from the hindmost wheel of Phœbus' wain.
MILTON, Comus, l. 188.

9 Now came still evening on, and twilight gray
Had in her sober livery all things clad;
Silence accompany'd; for beast and bird,
They to their grassy couch, these to their nests,

Were slunk, all but the wakeful nightingale;
She all night long her amorous descant sung;
Silence was pleas'd: now glow'd the firmament

With living sapphires; Hesperus, that led
The starry host, rode brightest, till the moon,
Rising in clouded majesty, at length
Apparent queen unveil'd her peerless light,
And o'er the dark her silver mantle threw.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 598.

The motto of the Order of the Garter, originated by Edward III in 1349. He was in warm rivalry with Philip of France, and Sir Walter Scott (Essay on Chivalry) says that the motto seems to apply to possible misrepresentations which the King of France might seek to make concerning the order. The garter was probably selected as the badge of the order, because Edward had given his own as a signal of battle at Crecy. There is no historical authority for the tradition that the king picked up the garter of the Countess of Salisbury at a ball, and founded the order with it as a badge, and the French proverb as a motto. For I loved you even then.

LANGDON SMITH, Evolution.

17 I am proud of those bright-eyed, furry, four-footed or feathered progenitors, and not at all ashamed of my cousins, the Tigers and Apes and Peacocks.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Trivia: Desires.

<sup>1</sup> If a single cell, under appropriate conditions, becomes a man in the space of a few years, there can surely be no difficulty in understanding how, under appropriate conditions, a cell may, in the course of untold millions of years, give origin to the human race.

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. iii, ch. 3, sec. 118.

As nine months go to the shaping an infant ripe for his birth,

So many a million of ages have gone to the making of man.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 135.

<sup>2</sup> This survival of the fittest, which I have here sought to express in mechanical terms, is that which Mr. Darwin has called "natural selection, or the preservation of favoured races in the struggle for life."

HERBERT SPENCER, Principles of Biology. Pt. iii, ch. 12, sec. 165.

The expression often used by Mr. Herbert Spencer of the Survival of the Fittest is more accurate, and is sometimes equally convenient.

CHARLES DARWIN, Origin of Species. Ch. 3.

"The unfit die—the fit both live and thrive."

Alas, who say so? They who do survive.

SARAH N. CLEGHORN, The Survival of the Fittest.

This is the law of the Yukon, that only the Strong shall thrive;

That surely the Weak shall perish, and only the Fit survive.

Dissolute, damned and despairful, crippled and palsied and slain,

This is the Will of the Yukon,—Lo, how she makes it plain!

ROBERT W. SERVICE, The Law of the Yukon.

<sup>3</sup> Out of the dusk a shadow,
Then, a spark;

Out of the cloud a silence,
Then, a lark;

Out of the heart a rapture,
Then, a pain;

Out of the dead, cold ashes,
Life again.

JOHN BANISTER TABB, Evolution.

<sup>4</sup> The Lord let the house of a brute to the soul of a man,

And the man said, "Am I your debtor?"

And the Lord—"Not yet: but make it as clean as you can,

And then I will let you a better."

TENNYSON, By an Evolutionist.

Is there evil but on earth? or pain in every peopled sphere?

Well, be grateful for the sounding watchword "Evolution" here,

Evolution ever climbing after some ideal good,
And Reversion ever dragging Evolution in the mud.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 198.

<sup>5</sup> The rise of every man he loved to trace,
Up to the very pod O!

And, in baboons, our parent race

Was found by old Monboddó.

Their A, B, C, he made them speak,

And learn their qui, quæ, quod, O!

Till Hebrew, Latin, Welsh, and Greek

They knew as well's Monboddó!

UNKNOWN, Monboddó. Published originally in Blackwood's Magazine. James Burnett, Lord Monboddó, was the person referred to.

EXAMPLE

I—Example: Apothegms

<sup>6</sup> Every life is a profession of faith, and exercises an inevitable and silent propaganda.

AMIEL, Journal, 2 May, 1852.

<sup>7</sup> Example is the school of mankind, and they will learn at no other.

EDMUND BURKE, On a Regicide Peace.

<sup>8</sup> Why doth one man's yawning make another yawn?

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 2.

<sup>9</sup> So our lives
In acts exemplary, not only win
Ourselves good names, but doth to others give

Matter for virtuous deeds, by which we live.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>10</sup> They do more harm by their evil example than by their actual sin. (Plus exempo quam peccato nocent.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 14. Cicero is speaking of rulers.

The people are fashioned by the example of their kings, and edicts are of less power than the life of the ruler. (Componitur orbis Regis ad exemplum, nec sic infectere sensus Humanos edicta valent quam vita regentis.)

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus de Quarto Consulatu Honorii Augusti, l. 299.

Examples lead us, and we likely see
Such as the prince is, will his people be.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 761.

Princes that would their people should do well
Must at themselves begin, as at the head;
For men, by their example, pattern out
Their imitations, and regard of laws.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 3.

1 What is shown by example, men think they may justly do. (Quod exemplo fit, id etiam jure fieri putant.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Atticum Bk. iv, epis. 3.

Nor knowest thou what argument
Thy life to thy neighbor's creed has lent.

EMERSON, Each and All.

2 How soon are those streets made clean,
where every one sweeps against his own door.

THOMAS FULLER, Pisgah Sight. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

3 Since truth and constancy are vain
Since neither love, nor sense of pain,
Nor force of reason, can persuade,
Then let example be obey'd.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, To Myra.

4 Example is the greatest of all the seducers.
(L'exemple est le plus grand de tous les séducteurs.)

COLLIN D'HARLEVILLE, Mœurs du Jour. Bk. ii, 5.

5 For each man to be a standard to himself is most excellent for the good, but for the bad
it is the worst of all things.

HOMER. (Contest of Hesiod and Homer. Sec. 320.)

6 The tender mind is oft deterred from vice by another's shame. (Teneros animos aliena opprobria sæpe Absterrent vitiis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 128. See also under EXPERIENCE.

7 I have ever deemed it more honorable and more profitable, too, to set a good example than to follow a bad one.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 222.

8 The salutary influence of example.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton.

9 I do not give you to posterity as a pattern to imitate, but as an example to deter.

JUNTUS, Letters. No. 12.

10 So nature ordains: evil examples in the household corrupt us more readily and promptly, since they insinuate themselves into our minds with the force of authority.
(Sic natura jubet: velocius et citius nos
Corrumpunt vitiorum exempla domestica, magnis cum subeant animos auctoribus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 31.

11 Example is a dangerous lure:
Where the wasp got through the gnat sticks sure.

(L'exemple est un dangereux luerre:
Où la guêpe a passé, le moucheron demeure.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 16.

12 So, when a great man dies,

For years beyond our ken,
The light he leaves behind him lies
Upon the paths of men.

LONGFELLOW, Charles Sumner.

13 Lives of great men all remind us
We can make our lives sublime,
And, departing, leave behind us
Footprints on the sands of time.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

We should endeavor to do something so that we may say that we have not lived in vain, that we may leave some impress of ourselves on the sands of time.

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Letter, to his Minister of the Interior. (This alleged letter was published 1 Feb., 1868.)

Everything passes and vanishes;

Everything leaves its trace;

And often you see in a footstep

What you could not see in a face.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

14 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 16.

15 I am myself tormented, see! by the fear of my own example. (Exemplique metu tor-queor, ecce, mei.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 4, l. 45.

Every one is bound to bear patiently the results of his own example. (Sua quisque exempla debet æquo animo pati.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 26, l. 12.

16 Example does the whole. Whoever is foremost

Still leads the herd.

SCHILLER, Wallenstein. Act i, sc. 4.

17 Heaven doth with us as we with torches do,
Not light them for themselves; for if our virtues

Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike

As if we had them not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act i, sc.
1, l. 33.

18 I bid him look into the lives of all men, as into a mirror, and to take example to himself from others. (Inspicere tanquam in speculum, in vitas omnium Jubeo; atque ex aliis sumere exemplum sibi.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 415. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

19 I tread in the footsteps of illustrious men
. . . in receiving from the people the sacred trust confided to my illustrious predecessor.

MARTIN VAN BUREN, Inaugural Address. 4
March, 1837, referring to Andrew Jackson.

Illustrious predecessor.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. Vol. i, p. 456.

Illustrious predecessors.

HENRY FIELDING, Covent Garden Journal, 11 Jan., 1752.

1 Example is a lesson that all men can read.

GILBERT WEST, Education. Canto i, st. 81.

II—Example and Precept

See also Preaching and Practice;
Words and Deeds

2 Words but direct, example must allure.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Ninth Hour. St. 113.

Precepts may lead but examples draw.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, p. 475.

3 One example is more valuable . . . than twenty precepts written in books.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster, 61. (1570)

4 This noble example to his sheep he gave,
That first he wrought, and afterward he taught.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 496.

But Cristes lore, and his Apostles twelve,
He taught, but first he followed it himselve.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 527.

5 Himself a wand'rer from the narrow way,
His silly sheep, what wonder if they stray?

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 118.

6 Examples work more forcibly on the mind than precepts.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 1.

Example is always more efficacious than precept.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 30.

Example prevails more than precept.

FRANCIS OSBORNE, Advice to His Son, 34. (1656)

7 Content to follow when we lead the way.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 141. (Pope, tr.)

Allur'd to brighter worlds, and led the way.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 170.

8 Precept begins, example accomplishes. (Précepte commence, exemple achève.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 The path of precept is long, that of example short and effectual. (Longum iter est per præcepta, breve et efficax per exempla.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 5.

10 For what his wisdom planned, and power enforced,

More potent still his great example showed.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 986.

EXCELLENCE

11 There has nothing been more without a definition than Excellency; although it be what we are most concerned with: yea, we are concerned with nothing else.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Works. Vol. i, p. 693.

12 I assure you I had rather excel others in the knowledge of what is excellent, than in the extent of my power and dominion.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander.)

13 Excellence is the perfect excuse. Dot it well, and it matters little what.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

Everyone has more to hide than he has to show, or is lamed by his excellence.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

14 Consider first, that great
Or bright infers not excellence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 90.

15 It takes a long time to bring excellence to maturity.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 780.

16 It is the witness still of excellency
To put a strange face on his own perfection.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 48.

Still constant in a wondrous excellence.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cv.

EXCESS, see Moderation

EXCUSE

17 A pretty hypothesis which explains many things. (Jolie hypothèse elle explique tant de choses.)

HERBERT ASQUITH, Speech, House of Commons, 29 March, 1917. Quoting "a witty Frenchman."

I do loathe explanations.

J. M. BARRIE, My Lady Nicotine. Ch. 16.

I wish he would explain his explanation.

BYRON, Don Juan: Canto i, Dedication, l. 16.

Explanations explanatory of things explained.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to Stephen A. Douglas, Lincoln-Douglas Debates.

18 How easy a thing it is to find a staff if a man be minded to beat a dog.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works: Preface. (1563)

19 Better a bad excuse, than none at all.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 293. (1605)

A bad shift is better than none at all.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angry Women of Abington. (1599)

20 Never make a defence or apology before you be accused.

CHARLES I, Letter to Lord Wentworth.

1 Apologies only account for that which they do not alter.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 28 July, 1871.

2 Stoop not then to poor excuse;
Turn on the accuser roundly; say,
"Here am I, here will I abide Forever to myself soothfast;
Go thou, sweet Heaven, or at thy pleasure stay!"

Already Heaven with thee its lot has cast.

EMERSON, Sursum Corda.

Let us never bow and apologize more.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

Don't make excuses—make good.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

3 Accusing the times is but excusing ourselves.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 759.

4 For years I've longed for some Excuse for this revulsion.

W. S. GILBERT, The Rival Curates.

5 No 'polligy ain't gwine ter make h'ar come back whar de biling water hit.

J. C. HARRIS, Nights with Uncle Remus. Ch. 45.

6 Apologizing—a very desperate habit—one that is rarely cured. Apology is only egotism wrong side out.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 6.

7 I find excuses for myself. (Egomet mi ignosco.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 23.

How pitiable is he who cannot excuse himself!
(Quam miser est qui excusare sibi se non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 605.

8 He who excuses himself accuses himself. (Qui s'excuse, s'accuse.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences, p. 63, note. (c. 1590)

When you would excuse, you are accusing. (Dum excusare velis, accusas.)

St. JEROME, Epistles. No. 4.

Excuses are no better than accusations.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

9 To him she hasted, in her face excuse
Came prologue, and apology too prompt.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 853.

10 You may often make excuses for another, never for yourself. (Ignoscito sæpe alteri;
nunquam tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 208.

11 An excuse is a lie guarded.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. Sometimes ascribed to Pope.

12 I do not trouble my spirit to vindicate itself or be understood,

I see that the elementary laws never apologize.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 20.

EXERCISE

13 Th' athletic fool, to whom what heaven denied

Of soul, is well compensated in limbs.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iii, l. 206.

14 Exercise and temperance can preserve something of our early strength even in old age. (Potest igitur exercitatio et temperantia etiam in senectute conservare aliquid pristini roboris.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 10, sec. 34.

15 By constant exercise one develops freedom of movement—for virtuous deeds.

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS. Diogenes. Sec. 70.)

16 The wise for cure on exercise depend.

DRYDEN, Epistle to John Dryden, l. 94.

17 Health is the first muse. . . . The Arabs say that "Allah does not count from life the days spent in the chase," that is, those are thrown in. Plato thought "exercise would almost cure a guilty conscience." Sydney Smith said: "You will never break down in a speech on the day when you have walked twelve miles."

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration.

18 If you will form the habit of taking such exercises, you will see what mighty shoulders you develop, what sinews, what vigor.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 26.

19 Rosy-complexion'd Health thy steps attends,
And exercise thy lasting youth defends.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 73.

20 To cure the mind's wrong bias, Spleen,
Some recommend the bowling green;
Some, hilly walks; all, exercise;
Fling but a stone, the giant dies.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 89.

21 Games played with the ball, and others of that nature, are too violent for the body and stamp no character on the mind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. v, p. 83.

22 Why do strong arms fatigue themselves with silly dumb-bells? Trenching a vineyard is worthier exercise for men. (Quid pereunt stulto fortes haltere lacerti? Exercet melius vinea fossa viros.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 49.

1 But strength of mind is Exercise, not Rest.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 104.

2 'T is the breathing time of day with me.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 181.

3 The rich advantage of good exercise.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 60.

4 Health is the vital principle of bliss,
And exercise of health.
THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto ii,
st. 57. See also under HEALTH.

5 For bodily exercise profiteth little: but god-liness is profitable unto all things.
New Testament: I Timothy, iv, 8.

EXILE

6 Myself I know that exiles feed on hope.
(Οἶδ' ἐγὼ φεύγοντας ἄνδρας ἐλπίδας σιτουμένους.)
ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1668.

7 They bore within their breasts the grief
That fame can never heal—
The deep, unutterable woe
Which none save exiles feel.
W. E. AYTOUN, The Island of the Scots, l. 241.

8 Adieu, adieu! my native shore
Fades o'er the waters blue;
The night-winds sigh, the breakers roar,
And shrieks the wild sea-mew.
Yon sun that sets upon the sea
We follow in his flight;
Farewell awhile to him and thee,
My native land—Good Night!
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 13.

I can't but say it is an awkward sight
To see one's native land receding through
The growing waters; it unmans one quite,
Especially when life is rather new.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 12.

I take a long, last, lingering view;
Adieu! my native land, adieu!
JOHN LOGAN, The Lovers.

9 Exile is terrible to those who have, as it were,
a circumscribed habitation; but not to those who look upon the whole globe as one city.
CICERO, Paradoxa. Sec. 2.

10 A homeless exile, to his country dead.
A wanderer who begs his daily bread.
(Ἄπολις, ἄοικος, πατρίδος ἐστερημένος, πτωχός, πλανήτης, βίον ἔχων τούτ' ἡμέραν.) DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Diogenes.
Sec. 38.)

11 What exile from his country ever escaped from himself? (Patriæ quis exsul se quoque fugit?)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 19.

What exile from himself can flee?
To zones, though more and more remote,
Still, still pursues, where'er I be,
The blight of life—the demon Thought.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84.

12 He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

New Testament: John, i, 11.

13 The world was all before them, where to choose
Their place of rest, and Providence their guide:

They, hand in hand, with wand'ring steps
and slow,
Through Eden took their solitary way.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 646.

14 Each voter took an ostrakon (ὄστρακον), or potsherd, wrote on it the name of that citizen whom he wished to remove from the city, and brought it to a place in the agora.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 7, sec. 4.
Hence ostracism.

Ostracism was not a penalty, but a method of satisfying that jealousy which delights to humble the eminent.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 22.

15 He suffers exile who denies himself to his country. (Exsilium patitur, patriæ qui se denegat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 182.

16 He that sweareth Till no man trust him;
He that lieth Till no man believe him;
He that borroweth Till no man will lend him;
Let him go where No man knoweth him.
HUGH RHODES, Cautions.

17 No, my good lord: banish Peto, banish Bar-dolph, banish Poins; but for sweet Jack Fal-staff, kind Jack Falstaff, true Jack Falstaff, valiant Jack Falstaff, and therefore more valiant, being, as he is, old Jack Falstaff, banish not him thy Harry's company: banish plump
Jack and banish all the world.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 520.

18 Thy sly slow hours shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy dear exile;
The hopeless word of "never to return"
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 150.

19 Have . . . sigh'd my English breath in foreign clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 19.

For exile hath more terror in his look,
Much more than death.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 13.

They are free men, but I am banished.
And say'st thou yet that exile is not death?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 42.

Banished?

O friar, the damned use that word in hell;
Howlings attend it: how hast thou the heart,
Being a divine, a ghostly confessor,
A sin-absolver, and my friend profess'd,
To mangle me with that word "banished"?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 46.

We leave our country's bounds and sweet fields. We are outcasts from our country.
(Nos patriæ finis et dulcia linquimus arva;
Nos patriam fugimus.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. i, l. 3.

And for exile they change their homes and pleasant thresholds, and seek a country lying beneath another sun (Excilioque domos et dulcia limina mutant Atque alio patriam quærun sub sole jacentem.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 511.

EXPECTATION

I would not anticipate the relish of any happiness, nor feel the weight of any misery, before it actually arrives.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 7. See also under TROUBLE.

I suppose, to use our national motto, something will turn up.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Popanilla. Ch. 7. (1828)

He was fash and full of faith that "something would turn up."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Tancred. Bk. iii, ch. 6.
(1847)

I have known him [Micawber] come home to supper with a flood of tears, and a declaration that nothing was now left but a jail; and go to bed making a calculation of the expense of putting bow-windows to the house, "in case anything turned up," which was his favorite expression.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 11. (1849)

Indeed it is good, though wronged by my over great expectations, as all things else are.
PEPYS, Diary, 1661.

Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed.

POPE, Letter to John Gay, 6 Oct., 1727. Pope characterizes the saying as "a ninth beatitude added to the eighth in the Scripture."
(ROSCOE, Life of Pope. Vol. x, p. 184.)

Blessed are those that nought expect,
For they shall not be disappointed.

JOHN WOLCOT, Ode to Pitt, l. 1.

Oft expectation fails, and most oft there
Where most it promises; and oft it hits,

Where hope is coldest and despair most fits.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 145.

The expectancy and rose of the fair state.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 160.

And now sits Expectation in the air.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, prol. l. 8.

Expectation whirls me round.

The imaginary relish is so sweet

That it enchants my sense.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 19.

'Tis expectation makes a blessing dear;

Heaven were not Heaven, if we knew what it were.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Against Fruition.

If 'twere not heaven if we knew what it were,
'Twould not be heaven to them that now are
there.

EDMUND WALLER, In Answer to Suckling's Verses.

Whatever happens beyond expectation should be counted clear gain. (Quidquid præter spem eveniat, omne id deputare esse in lucro.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 246. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

He hath indeed better bettered expectation.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 16.

'Tis silence all, And pleasing expectation.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 161.

We must expect everything and fear everything from time and from men. (Il faut tout attendre et tout craindre du temps et des hommes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 102.

It is a folly to expect men to do all that they may reasonably be expected to do.

RICHARD WHATLEY, Apothegms.

EXPERIENCE

I—Experience: Definitions

All experience is an arch, to build upon.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 87.

I am a part of all that I have met;

Yet all experience is an arch wherethro'

Gleams that untravell'd world whose margin fades

For ever and for ever when I move.

TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 18.

Experience is the mother of knowledge.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 8. (1637)

Experience is the mother of all things.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32. (1578)

Experience is the father of wisdom, and memory
the mother.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1480.

<sup>1</sup> To most men, experience is like the stern lights of a ship, which illumine only the track it has passed.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, p. 434.

<sup>2</sup> Experience seems to be like the shining of a bright lantern. It suddenly makes clear in the mind what was already there, perhaps, but dim.

WALTER DE LA MARE, Come Hither: Introduction.

<sup>3</sup> This gave me that precarious gait
Some call experience.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 136.

<sup>4</sup> Experience is the child of Thought, and Thought is the child of Action.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Experience joined with common sense,
To mortals is a providence.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 312.

Experience holds the cautious glass,
To shun the breakers, as I pass,
And frequent throws the wary lead,
To see what dangers may be hid.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 820.

<sup>6</sup> Experience is the only prophecy of wise men.

LAMARTINE, Speech, at Macon, 1847.

<sup>7</sup> Experience is the teacher of fools. (Stultorum eventus magister est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxii, sec. 39.

Experience is the mistress of fools.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 123. (1579)

Experience is the mistress of knaves as well as of fools.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Æsop, 185. (1692)

<sup>8</sup> What is experience? A poor little hut constructed from the ruins of the palace of gold and marble called our illusions.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 15.

Our experience is composed rather of illusions lost than of wisdom acquired.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 28.

II—Experience: Apothegms

<sup>9</sup> It takes longer to hard-boil a man or a woman than an egg.

F. L. ALLEN, Only Yesterday, p. 118.

<sup>10</sup> It is costly wisdom that is bought by experience.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

He hazardeth sore that waxeth wise by experience.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

<sup>11</sup> By far the best proof is experience. (Demonstratio longe optima est experientia.)

BACON, Novum Organum. Bk. i, ch. 70.

<sup>12</sup> Oh, who can tell, save he whose heart hath tried?

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

He saw with his own eyes the moon was round,
Was also certain that the earth was square,
Because he had journeyed fifty miles, and found
No sign that it was circular anywhere.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 150.

<sup>13</sup> A sadder and a wiser man
He rose the morrow morn.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner, l. 624.

<sup>14</sup> Though spirit without experience is dangerous, experience, without spirit, is languid and defective.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

<sup>15</sup> Only so much do I know, as I have lived.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses: The American Scholar.

<sup>16</sup> Experience sometimes is perilous.

<sup>17</sup> Experience is good, if not bought too dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1479.

Experience teacheth fools, and he is a great one that will not learn by it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1484.

<sup>18</sup> I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.)

<sup>19</sup> The spectacles of experience; through them you will see clearly a second time.

HENRIK IBSEN, The League of Youth. Act ii.

<sup>20</sup> No man's knowledge here can go beyond his experience.

JOHN LOCKE, Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 19.

Man knows nothing but what he learns from his own experience. (Man weiss doch nichts, als was man selbst erfährt.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. ii, 24.

<sup>21</sup> One thorn of experience is worth a whole wilderness of warning.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Shakespeare Once More.

<sup>22</sup> Experience is forever sowing the seed of one thing after another. (Semper enim ex aliis alia proseminat usus.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. i, ch. 90.

1 The true wisdom of nations is experience
 NAPOLEON I. (FREDERICKS, Maxims of Napoleon).

2 Who heeds not experience, trust him not.
 JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

3 Experience inspires this work. (Usus opus movet hoc.)
 OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 29.

4 Sad experience leaves no room for doubt.
 POPE, January and May, l. 630.

5 In almost everything, experience is more valuable than precept. (Nam in omnibus fere minus valent præcepta quam experimenta.)
 QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. v, ch. 10.

6 Take physic, pomp;
 Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 33.

7 Unless experience be a jewel that I have purchased at an infinite rate.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 213.

8 Men are wise in proportion, not to their experience, but to their capacity for experience.
 BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

9 The dirty nurse, Experience, in her kind
 Hath foul'd me.
 TENNYSON, The Last Tournament, l. 317.

10 You that woo the Voices—tell them "old experience is a fool."
 TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 131.

11 You shall know by experience. (Experiundo scies.)
 TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 331.

12 Believe one who has proved it. Believe an expert. (Experto credite.)
 VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 283.

Believe an expert; believe one who has had experience. (Experto crede.)
 ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX, Epistles. No. 106.

Believe the experienced Robert. Believe Robert, who has tried it. (Experto crede Roberto.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Introduction. Burton is quoting an anonymous medieval line: Quam subito, quam certo, experto crede Roberto, How suddenly and how certainly [it will come] believe the experienced Robert. It has been traced back to Gomes de Trier. (Le Roux de Lincy, Jardin de Récréation.)

13 There are not words enough in all Shakepeare to express the merest fraction of a man's experience in an hour.

R. L. STEVENSON, Walt Whitman.

14 Experience is of no ethical value. It is merely the name men give to their mistakes.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 4. Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii.

III—Experience the Best Teacher

15 By experience we find out a shorter way by a long wandering. Learning teacheth more in one year than experience in twenty.

ROGER ASCHAM, The Scholemaster.

Experience teaches slowly, and at the cost of mistakes.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Party Politics.

16 In gaining all that useful sort of knowledge Which is acquired in Nature's good old college.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 136.

17 Experience is the best of schoolmasters, only the school-fees are heavy.

CARLYLE, Miscellaneous Essays. Vol. i, p. 137.

Experience keeps a dear school, yet Fools will learn in no other.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1743.

Experience is a good school, but the fees are high.

HEINE. (INGE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

18 Experience, slow preceptress, teaching oft
 The way to glory by miscarriage foul.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 505.

19 Experience is our only teacher, both in war and peace.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Æschines and Phocion.

20 What that superlative master, experience, has taught me. (Quod me docuit usus, magister egregius.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 20.

21 To wilful men

The injuries that they themselves procure
 Must be their schoolmasters.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 305.

22 Experience teaches. (Experientia docet.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. v, ch. 6.

Experientia does it—as papa used to say.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 6.

IV—Experience: Its Acquisition

23 He who hath proved war, storm or woman's rage,
 Whether his winters be eighteen or eighty,

Hath won the experience which is deem'd so weighty.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 50.

<sup>1</sup> To show the world what long experience gains,

Requires not courage, though it calls for pains;

But at life's outset to inform mankind
Is a bold effort of a valiant mind.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter vii, l. 47.

<sup>2</sup> Thou shalt know by experience how salt the savor is of other's bread, and how sad a path it is to climb and descend another's stairs.

(Tu proverai sì come sa di sale
Lo pane altrui, e com' è duro calle
Lo scendere e'l salir per l'altrui scale.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xvii, l. 58.

<sup>3</sup> Experience is no more transferable in morals than in art.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: Education.

<sup>4</sup> His head was silver'd o'er with age,
And long experience made him sage.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Introduction, l. 3.

The natural crown that sage Experience wears.
WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. vi, l. 281.

<sup>5</sup> Each believes naught but his experience.
(Αὐτὸ μόνον πεισθέντες ὅτι προσέκυρσεν ἕκαστος.)

EMPEDOCLES, Fragments. No. 2, l. 5.

<sup>6</sup> Nor deem the irrevocable Past,
As wholly wasted, wholly vain,
If, rising on its wrecks, at last
To something nobler we attain.

LONGFELLOW, Ladder of St. Augustine. St. 12.

<sup>7</sup> Does not he return wisest that comes home whipt with his own follies?

THOMAS MIDDLETON, A Trick to Catch the Old One. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> Till old experience do attain
To something like prophetic strain.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 173.

<sup>9</sup> Experience, next, to thee I owe,
Best guide; not following thee, I had remain'd
In ignorance; thou open'st wisdom's way,
And giv'st access, though secret she retire.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 807.

<sup>10</sup> What man would be wise, let him drink of the river

That bears on its bosom the record of time;
A message to him every wave can deliver
To teach him to creep till he knows how to climb.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

<sup>11</sup> Jacques: Yes, I have gained my experience.

Rosalind: And your experience makes you sad. I had rather have a fool to make me merry than experience to make me sad; and to travel for it too!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 26.

<sup>12</sup> I shall the effect of this good lesson keep,
As watchman to my heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 45.

<sup>13</sup> Experience is by industry achieved
And perfected by the swift course of time.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act i, sc. 3, l. 22.

His years but young, but his experience old;
His head unmellow'd, but his judgement ripe.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 69.

<sup>14</sup> I know
The past, and thence I will essay to glean
A warning for the future, so that man
May profit by his errors, and derive Experience from his folly.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. iii, l. 6.

<sup>15</sup> I shall not let a sorrow die
Until I find the heart of it,
Nor let a wordless joy go by
Until it talks to me a bit;
And the ache my body knows
Shall teach me more than to another,
I shall look deep at mire and rose
Until each one becomes my brother.

SARA TEASDALE, Servitors.

V—Experience: The Burnt Child

<sup>16</sup> He who suffers, remembers. (Cui dolet, meminit.)

CICERO, Pro L. Murena. Sec. 42.

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 126.

<sup>18</sup> What, would'st thou have a serpent sting thee twice?

<sup>19</sup> Brent child fire dreadeth.

UNKNOWN, Reliq. Antiquæ, i, 113. (c. 1300)

Brent child of fire hath much dread.

UNKNOWN, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 1820. (c. 1400)

A burnt child dreadeth the fire.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues, p. 319. (1580)

The burnt child dreads the fire.

BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act i, sc. 2. (1616) In frequent use thereafter.

A burnt child loves the fire.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 17.

VI—Experience of Others

<sup>1</sup> In her experience all her friends relied,
Heaven was her help and nature was her
guide.

GEORGE CRABBE, Parish Register. Pt. iii, l. 472.

<sup>2</sup> Draw from other people's dangers the lesson that may profit yourself. (Periculum ex aliis facto tibi quod ex usu siet.)

PLAUTUS, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 221. (Act
ii, sc. 1.)

<sup>3</sup> The best plan is, as the common proverb has it, to profit by the folly of others.

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xviii,
sec. 31. See also under EVIL.

<sup>4</sup> Happy is he who gains wisdom from another's mishap. (Feliciter sapit qui alieno periculo sapit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 825.

Happy is he that by other men's harms takes heed.

SIR ROBERT FOSTER, Charge, at trial of Thomas
Tonge, 1662. (6 How. St. Tr. 265.)

Fortunate thou who are taught by another's suffering to avoid thy own. (Felix, quicumque dolore Alterius discis posse cavere tuum.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 6, l. 43.

He is wise that can beware by another's harms.

HILL, Commonplace Book, 132. (c. 1490)

Happy is he whom the horns of others have made cautious. (Felix quem faciunt aliorum cornua cautum.)

JOHANNES RAVISIUS-TEXTOR, Dialogue. (1525)

A happy man and wise is he
By others' harms can warned be.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, 103. (1591)

<sup>5</sup> But, ah, who ever shunned by precedent
The destined ill she must herself assay?

SHAKESPEARE, The Lover's Complaint, l. 155.

Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood
That we must curb it upon others' proof.

SHAKESPEARE, The Lover's Complaint, l. 162.

<sup>6</sup> And others' follies teach us not,
Nor much their wisdom teaches;
And most, of sterling worth, is what
Our own experience preaches.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue, l. 173.

EXTREMES

<sup>7</sup> Men are as much blinded by the extremes of misery as by the extremes of poverty.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Member of the National Assembly, 1791.

<sup>8</sup> Th' extremes of glory and of shame,
Like east and west, became the same:

No Indian Prince has to his palace
More foll'wers than a thief to th' gallows.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 271.

<sup>9</sup> The fierce extremes of good and ill to brook.

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. i, st. 23.

<sup>10</sup> Thus each extreme to equal danger tends,
Plenty, as well as Want, can separate friends.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Dauides. Bk. iii, l. 205.

<sup>11</sup> Extremes of fortune are true wisdom's test.
And he's of men most wise who bears them
best.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Philemon.

<sup>12</sup> Extremes are faulty and proceed from men:
compensation is just, and proceeds from God.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 17.

<sup>13</sup> Heard so oft In worst extremes.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 275.

And feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 599.

<sup>14</sup> Perfect good sense shuns all extremity,
Content to couple wisdom with sobriety.

(La parfaite raison fuit toute extrémité, Et veut que l'on soit sage avec sobriété.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 151.

<sup>15</sup> Avoid extremes, and shun the fault of such,
Who still are pleas'd too little or too much.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 184. The motto of Cleobulus of Lindos, μέτρον ἀρίστον,
"Moderation is best," is sometimes translated "Avoid extremes." See under MODERA-TION.

<sup>16</sup> Extremes in Nature equal ends produce;
In Man they join to some mysterious use.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 205.

Extremes in Nature equal good produce,
Extremes in Man concur to gen'ral use.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 161.

<sup>17</sup> The fate of all extremes is such,
Men may be read, as well as books, too much.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 9.

<sup>18</sup> We always distrust too much or too little.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. ix, No. 33.

<sup>19</sup> Like to the time o' the year between the extremes

Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act i,
sc. 5, l. 51.

Not fearing death, nor shrinking for distress,
But always resolute in most extremes.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 37.

Who can be patient in such extremes?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 215.

<sup>1</sup>Extremes meet.

WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 12 June, 1780.

Les extrêmes se touchent.

L. S. MERCIER, Tableaux de Paris. Vol. iv, title of chapter. (1782)

Extremes meet, and there is no better example than the haughtiness of humility.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

Extremes meet, as the whitening said with its tail in its mouth.

THOMAS HOOD, The Doves and the Crows.

That dead time of the dawn, when (as extremes meet) the rake . . . and the hard-handed artisan . . . jostle . . . for the honours of the pavement.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: Chimney-Sweepers.

<sup>2</sup>Turning to scorn with lips divine
The falsehood of extremes!

TENNYSON, Of Old Sat Freedom on the Heights.

<sup>7</sup>What I can see with my eyes, I point out with my finger.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 62.

<sup>8</sup>The eyes, like sentinels, have the highest station, to give them the widest outlook for the performance of their function. (Oculi tamquam speculatores altissimum locum ob-tinent, ex quo plurima conspicientes fungantur suo munere.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 56, sec. 140.

Our eyes are sentinels unto our judgements, And should give certain judgement what they see;

But they are rash sometimes, and tell us wonders

Of common things, which when our judgements find,

They then can check the eyes, and call them blind.

MIDDLETON AND ROWLEY, The Changeling. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>9</sup>He holds him with his glittering eye.

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 4.

<sup>10</sup>In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.

<sup>14</sup>The eye is not satisfied with seeing.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 8.

<sup>15</sup>A suppressed resolve will betray itself in the eyes.

GEORGE ELIOT, Mill on the Floss. Bk. v, ch. 14.

How many furtive inclinations are avowed by the eye, though dissembled by the lips!

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

<sup>16</sup>Eyes are bold as lions,—roving, running, leaping, here and there, far and near. They speak all languages. They wait for no introduction; they are no Englishmen. . . . What inundation of life and thought is discharged from one soul into another through them!

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

There are asking eyes, asserting eyes, prowling eyes; and eyes full of fate,—some of good, and some of sinister omen.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

<sup>17</sup>Take my receipt in full: I ask but this,—

To sun myself in Huncamunca's eyes.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>18</sup>The eyes of other people are the eyes that ruin us. If all but myself were blind, I should want neither fine clothes, fine houses, nor fine furniture.

FRANKLIN, Letter to Benjamin Vaughan.

5 Men of cold passions have quick eyes.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 1837.

6 The eyes have one language everywhere.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The eyes of men converse as much as their tongues, with the advantage, that the ocular dialect needs no dictionary, but is understood all the world over.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

7 What the eye sees not, the heart rues not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

If eyes don't see, heart doesn't break.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 67.

What the eye views not, the heart craves not, as well as rues not.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Pt. i, ch. 5, sec. 11.

The present eye praises the present object.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 180.

8 I have neither eyes to see nor tongue to speak but as the constitution is pleased to direct me.

WILLIAM LENTHALL, Speaker of the Long Parliament, to Charles I. (WENDELL PHILLIPS, Under the Flag, Boston, 21 April, 1861.)

As President, I have no eyes but constitutional eyes; I cannot see you.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, to the Confederate Commissioners from South Carolina.

9 Your eyes are so sharp that you cannot only look through a millstone, but clean through the mind.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 289. (1580)

"Yes, I have a pair of eyes," replied Sam, "and that's just it. If they was a pair of patent double million magnifyin' gas microscopes of hextra power, p'raps I might be able to see through a flight o' stairs and a deal door; but being only eyes, you see, my wision's limited."

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.

10 The eye hath ever been thought the pearl of the face.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 406. (1580)

11 The light of the body is the eye.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 22.

12 Towers and battlements it sees

Bosom'd high in tufted trees,
Where perhaps some beauty lies,
The cynosure of neighbouring eyes.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 77.

13 Nothing is lost on him who sees

With an eye that feeling gave;—

For him there's a story in every breeze,
And a picture in every wave.

THOMAS MOORE, Boat Glee.

14 There are often voice and words in a silent look.

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 574.

For eyes can speak and eyes can understand.

CHAPMAN, The Gentleman Usher. Act ii, sc. 1.

An eye can threaten like a loaded and levelled gun, or can insult like hissing or kicking; or, in its altered mood, by beams of kindness, it can make the heart dance with joy.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

15 The eyes, in beholding the afflicted, sometimes suffer affliction. (Dum spectant læsos oculi, læduntur et ipsi.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 615.

16 The eyes of a fool are in the ends of the earth.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 24.

17 All looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, p. 359.

18 Why has not man a microscopic eye?

For this plain reason, man is not a fly.

Say, what the use, were finer optics giv'n,
T' inspect a mite, not comprehend the Heav'n?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 193. Locke uses the phrase "Microscopical eye" in his Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 23, sec. 12.

19 The eyes do not go wrong if the mind rules the eyes. (Nil peccant oculi, si animus oculis imperat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 415.

The guiltless eye

Commits no wrong, nor wastes what it enjoys.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. i, l. 333.

1 Hard must he wink that shuts his eyes from heaven.

FRANCIS QUARLES, A Feast of Worms. Sec. 3, 3.

2 The eye is a shrew.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 354. (1678)

3 Faster than his tongue
Did make offence his eye did heal it up.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 116.

4 It is a basilisk unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 107.

5 An eye like Mars, to threaten and command.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 57.

Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 95.

6 I have a good eye, uncle; I can see a church
by daylight.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 85.

7 The fringed curtains of thine eye advance,
And say what thou seest yond.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 407.

8 Make the abhorrent eye roll back and close.

SOUTHEY, Curse of Kehama. Canto viii, st. 9.

Or roll the lucid orbit of an eye.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 7.

9 His smiling eyes with simple truth were stored.

SPENSER [?], Britain's Ida. Canto i.

10 She hath an eye behind her.

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1565)

He hath an eye behind, a wary man.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1032. (1681)

She has eyes in the back of her head.

P. FITZGERALD, Comediettas, 111. (1869)

11 For any man with half an eye,
What stands before him may espy;
But optics sharp it needs, I ween,
To see what is not to be seen.

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. Canto i, l. 67.

12 One unguarded look betrayed David.

THOMAS WILSON, Sacra Privata, p. 151.

13 The harvest of a quiet eye

That broods and sleeps on his own heart.

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph. St. 13.

II—Eyes: Women's Eyes

14 I knew you by your eyes,

That rest on nothing long,
And have forgot surprise.

ROBERT BRIDGES, I Love My Lady's Eyes.

15 Such a blue inner light from her eyelids out-broke,
You looked at her silence and fancied she spoke.

E. B. BROWNING, My Kate.

16 Thine eyes are springs, in whose serene
And silent waters heaven is seen;
Their lashes are the herbs that look
On their young figures in the brook.

BRYANT, Oh, Fairest of the Rural Maids.

17 Heart on her lips and soul within her eyes,
Soft as her clime and sunny as her skies.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 45.

Her eye (I'm very fond of handsome eyes)
Was large and dark, suppressing half its fire
Until she spoke, then through its soft disguise
Flash'd an expression more of pride than ire,
And love than either; and there would arise,
A something in them which was not desire,
But would have been, perhaps, but for the soul,
Which struggled through and chasten'd down the whole.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 60.

18 Those eyes, affectionate and glad,
Which seemed to love whate'er they looked upon.

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. ii, st. 4.

19 Paradise stood formed in her eye.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 817.

Grace was in all her steps, Heav'n in her eye,
In every gesture dignity and love.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 488.

Within her tender eye
The heaven of April, with its changing light.

LONGFELLOW, The Spirit of Poetry, l. 45.

20 The joy of youth and health her eyes display'd,

And ease of heart her every look convey'd.

CRABBE, The Parish Register. Pt. ii.

21 With store of ladies, whose bright eyes
Rain influence, and judge the prize.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 121.

22 Man for his glory To ancestry flies,
While woman's bright story Is told in her eyes.

THOMAS MOORE, Desmond's Song. St. 4.

From Persia's eyes of full and fawn-like ray,
To the small, half-shut glances of Kathay.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

23 Those eyes, whose light seem'd rather given
To be ador'd than to adore—

Such eyes as may have looked from heaven,

But ne'er were rais'd to it before!

THOMAS MOORE, Loves of the Angels, l. 1707.

<sup>1</sup> Bright as the sun her eyes the gazers strike,
And, like the sun, they shine on all alike.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 13.

<sup>2</sup> From women's eyes this doctrine I derive:
They are the ground, the books, the academes,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 302.

A wither'd hermit, five-score winters worn,
Might shake off fifty, looking in her eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 242.

For where is any author in the world
Teaches such beauty as a woman's eye?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 312.

<sup>3</sup> Iago: What an eye she has! methinks it sounds a parley of provocation.

Cassio: An inviting eye; and yet methinks right modest.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 22.

There's language in her eye, her cheek, her lip.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 55.

<sup>4</sup> Her eyes, like marigolds, had sheath'd their light;

And, canopied in darkness, sweetly lay,
Till they might open to adorn the day.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 397.

<sup>5</sup> If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
And in fresh numbers number all your graces,
The age to come would say, "This poet lies;
Such heavenly touches ne'er touch'd earthly faces."

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xvii.

<sup>6</sup> Thine eyes are like the deep, blue, boundless
heaven

Contracted to two circles underneath
Their long, fine lashes; dark, far, measure-
less,

Orb within orb, and line through line inwoven.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>7</sup> Alas! how little can a moment show
Of an eye where feeling plays
In ten thousand dewy rays;
A face o'er which a thousand shadows go.

WORDSWORTH, The Triad, l. 128.

<sup>8</sup> Some ladies' judgment in their features lies,
And all their genius sparkles from their eyes.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. v, l. 143.

III—Eyes and Love

<sup>9</sup> A thousand hearts beat happily; and when Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes look'd love to eyes which spake
again,

And all went merry as a marriage-bell.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21.

<sup>10</sup> Love's special lesson is to please the eye.

<sup>11</sup> The love light in her eye.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, She Is not Fair to Outward View.

The love light in your eye.

LADY DUFFERIN, The Irish Emigrant.

<sup>12</sup> Sweet, silent rhetoric of persuading eyes, Dumb eloquence, whose power doth move
the blood

More than the words or wisdom of the wise.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Complaint of Rosamond.
St. 19.

Ah! 'tis the silent rhetoric of a look
That works the league betwixt the states of hearts.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Queen's Arcadia. Act v, sc. 2.

The heavenly rhetoric of thine eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 60.

<sup>13</sup> Adding once more the music of the tongue
To the sweet music of her alluring eyes.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Orchestra. St. 96.

<sup>14</sup> Our eye-beams twisted, and did thread
Our eyes, upon one double string;
So to, engraft our hands, as yet
Was all the means to make us one,
And pictures in our eyes to get
Was all our propagation.

JOHN DONNE, The Ecstasy, l. 7.

Think ye by gazing on each other's eyes
To multiply your lovely selves?

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act iii, sc. 4.

<sup>15</sup> It does not hurt weak eyes to look into beautiful eyes never so long.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

<sup>16</sup> The greatest curse that man can labour under
Is the strong witchcraft of a woman's eyes.

JOHN FLETCHER, Lover's Progress. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>17</sup> Love's tongue is in the eyes.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Piscatory Eclogues. No. 5,
l. 13.

<sup>18</sup> On whom he many a sheepish eye did cast.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, D 1. (1577)

On Cleopatra he has cast a sheep's eye.

WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Playhouse to be Let.
Act v. (c. 1663)

1 From whose eyelids also as they gazed flowed limb-unnerving love. (Τῶν καὶ ἀπὸ βλεφάρων ἔπος εἵβeto δερκομενῶν λυσιμελῆς.)
HESIOD, Theogony, l. 910.

2 Why did you swear mine eyes were bright,
Yet leave those eyes to weep?

DAVID MALLET, Margaret's Ghost.

These poor eyes, you called, I ween,
"Sweetest eyes were ever seen."

E. B. BROWNING, Catarina to Camoens. St. 1.

3 If you wish to love them, it shall be, by my faith, for their beautiful eyes. (Si vous les voulez aimer, se sera, ma foi, pour leurs beaux yeux.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Sc. 15, l. 17.

4 The light that lies In women's eyes,
Has been my heart's undoing.

THOMAS MOORE, The Time I've Lost in Wooing.

And the world's so rich in resplendent eyes,
'Twere a pity to limit one's love to a pair.

THOMAS MOORE, 'Tis Sweet to Think.

5 Your eyes were not silent. (Non oculi tacuere tui.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 5, l. 17.

Sometimes from her eyes.

I did receive fair speechless messages.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 163.

6 Love is allured by gentle eyes. (Comibus est oculis alliciendus amor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 510.

O Love! for Sylvia let me gain the prize,
And make my tongue victorious as her eyes.

POPE, Pastorals: Spring, l. 49.

7 Drink to me with your eyes alone. . . . And if you will, take the cup to your lips and fill it with kisses, and give it so to me.

PHILOSTRATUS, Epistles. No. 24.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,
And I'll not look for wine.

BEN JONSON, To Celia. A paraphrase of Philostratus.

Drink to me only with thine eyes—
'Tis all the law allows.

ALAN T. WINFIELD, A Revised Classic.

8 She looked down to blush, and she looked up to sigh,

With a smile on her lips, and a tear in her
eye.

SCOTT, Lochinvar. (Marmion. Canto v, st. 12.)

Now Rory, be aisy, sweet Kathleen would cry;
Reproof on her lip, but a smile in her eye.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More.

9 Thou tell'st me there is murder in mine eye;
'Tis pretty, sure, and very probable,
That eyes, that are the frail'st and softest
things,

Who shut their coward gates on atomies,
Should be call'd tyrants, butchers, murderers!
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5, 10.

10 Those doves' eyes
Which can make gods forsworn.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 27.

11 A lover's eyes will gaze an eagle blind.
SHAKESPEARE, Lover's Labour's Lost. Act iv,
sc. 3, l. 334.

Reason becomes the marshal to my will
And leads me to your eyes, where I o'erlook
Love's stories written in love's richest book.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 120.

Alack! there lies more peril in thine eye,
Than twenty of their swords.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 71.

12 O, hell! to choose love by another's eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 140.

13 Young men's love then lies
Not truly in their hearts, but in their eyes.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 67.

14 I ne'er could any lustre see,
In eyes that would not look on me.
SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

15 Somebody loves me, how do I know?
Somebody's eyes have told me so!
HATTIE STARR, Somebody Loves Me.

16 So when thou saw'st, in Nature's cabinet,
Stella, thou straight'st lookt'st babies in her
eyes.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella.
Sonnet xi. (1591)

Can ye look babies, sisters, in the young gallants'
eyes?

JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act iii,
sc. 2. (1618)

Look babies in your eyes, my pretty sweet one.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act iii,
sc. 2.

Sweeten her again with ogling smiles, look babies
in her eyes.

THOMAS BAKER, Fine Lady's Airs. Act i, sc. 1.
(1709)

It is an active flame that flies
First to the babies in the eyes.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Kiss.

She clung about his neck, gave him ten kisses,
Toyed with his locks, looked babies in his eyes.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Love's Mistress.

In each of her two crystal eyes

Smileth a naked boy.

HENRY HOWARD, Earl of Surrey, Cupid.

1 My Uncle Toby . . . would have sat quietly upon a sofa from June to January (which, you know, takes in both the hot and cold months) with an eye as fine as the Thracian Rhodope's beside him, without being able to tell whether it was a black or a blue one.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 24.

An eye full of gentle salutations, and soft responses, . . . whispering soft, like the last low accents of an expiring saint. . . It did my Uncle Toby's business.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vii, ch. 25.

2 My heart, the bird of the wilderness, has found its sky in your eyes.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 31.

Eyes of pure women, wholesome stars of love.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 307.

IV—Eyes and the Soul

3 These lovely lamps, these windows of the soul.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 6. (Sylvester, tr.)

Ere I let fall the windows of my eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 116.

Were never four such lamps together mix'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 489.

4 Eyes so transparent that they permit your soul to be seen. (Ils sont si transparents qu'ils laissent voir votre âme.)

THÉOPHILE GAUTIER, Two Beautiful Eyes.

5 The heart's letter is read in the eyes.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For it is said by man expert

That the eye is traitor of the heart.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, That the Eye Bewrayeth.

6 Yet his look with the reach of past ages was wise,

And the soul of eternity thought through his eyes.

LEIGH HUNT, The Feast of the Poets. Referring to Apollo.

7 Through her expressive eyes her soul distinctly spoke.

GEORGE LYTTETON, Monody to the Memory of Lady Lyttelton.

Those true eyes

Too pure and too honest in aught to disguise
The sweet soul shining through them.

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. ii, canto ii, st. 3.

8 And looks commercing with the skies,
Thy rapt soul sitting in thine eyes.

MILTON, Il Penseroso, l. 39.

The majesty

That from man's soul looks through his eager eyes.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xiii.

9 Whatever of goodness emanates from the soul, gathers its soft halo in the eyes: and if the heart be a lurking-place of crime, the eyes are sure to betray the secret. A beautiful eye makes silence eloquent, a kind eye makes contradiction assent, an enraged eye makes beauty a deformity.

JOHN SAUNDERS, Stray Leaves of Literature: Physiognomy.

10 His soul seemed hovering in his eyes.

SHELLEY, Rosalind and Helen, l. 799.

11 Her eyes are homes of silent prayer.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxxii, st. 1.

V—Eyes: Their Color

12 A gray eye is a sly eye,
And roguish is a brown one;

Turn full upon me thy eye,—

Ah, how its wavelets drown one!

A blue eye is a true eye;

Mysterious is a dark one,

Which flashes like a spark-sun!

A black eye is the best one.

W. R. ALGER, Poetry of the Orient: Mirtsa Schaffy on Eyes.

13 An eye's an eye, and whether black or blue
Is no great matter, so 'tis in request.

'Tis nonsense to dispute about a hue,—

The kindest may be taken as a test.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 3.

14 There are eyes of blue,

There are eyes of brown, too;

There are eyes of every size,

And eyes of every hue.

But I surmise, that if you are wise,

You'll be careful of the maiden with the dreamy eyes.

JAMES WELDON JOHNSON, The Maiden With the Dreamy Eyes. (1901)

Black Eyes

15 With eyes that look'd into the very soul— . . .

Bright—and as black and burning as a coal.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 94.

16 There are eyes half defiant,
Half meek and compliant;

Black eyes, with a wondrous, witching charm
To bring us good or to work us harm.

PHOEBE CAREY, Doves' Eyes.

17 And yet the large black eyes, like night,

Have passion and have power;
Within their sleepy depths is light,
For some wild waking hour.
LETTITIA LONDON, The Nizam's Daughter.

<sup>1</sup>
The flash of his keen, black eyes
Forerunning the thunder.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

<sup>2</sup>
His large sloe-black eyes
Melt in soft blandishments and humble joy.
WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Chase. Bk. i.

<sup>3</sup>
Black brows they say
Become some women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a semicircle
Or a half-moon made with a pen.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 8.

Blue Eyes

<sup>4</sup>
How blue were Ariadne's eyes
When, from the sea's horizon line,
At eve, she raised them to the skies!
My Psyche, bluer far are thine.
AUBREY DE VERE, Psyche.

<sup>5</sup>
When blue eyes, more softly bright,
Diffuse divinely humid light,
We gaze, and see the smiling loves,
And Cytherea's gentle doves.
MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 222.

<sup>6</sup>
And heaven's soft azure in her eye was seen.
WILLIAM HAYLEY, The Afflicted Father.

O lovely eyes of azure,
Clear as the waters of a brook that run
Limpid and laughing in the summer sun.
LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. i.

<sup>7</sup>
Those blue violets, her eyes. (Die blauen Veilchen der Aeugelein.)
HEINE, Lyrisches Intermezzo. No. 31.

And violets, transform'd to eyes,
Inshrin'd a soul within their blue.
MOORE, Evenings in Greece: Second Evening.

Blue eyes shimmer with angel glances,
Like spring violets over the lea.
CONSTANCE F. WOOLSON, October's Song.

<sup>8</sup>
Like a beauteous woman's large blue eyes
Gone mad through olden songs and poesies.
KEATS, Familiar Verses, l. 53.

<sup>9</sup>
Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.
GEORGE MACDONALD, *At the Back of the North
Wind: Song*. Ch. 33.

<sup>10</sup>
Eyes of most unholy blue.
THOMAS MOORE, By That Lake.

<sup>11</sup>
Her two blue windows faintly she upheaveth,

Like the fair sun, when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn, and all the earth relieveth;

And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumin'd with her eye.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 482.

Dark Eyes

<sup>12</sup>
Lovely in your strength, as is the light
Of a dark eye in women.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 92.

<sup>13</sup>
Maiden! with the meek brown eyes.
LONGFELLOW, Maidenhood.

<sup>14</sup>
Dark eyes are dearer far
Than those that mock the hyacinthine bell.
J. H. REYNOLDS, Sonnet.

<sup>15</sup>
And her dark eyes—how eloquent!
Ask what they would, 'twas granted.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. i, l. 82.

Gray Eyes

<sup>16</sup>
Eyes too expressive to be blue,
Too lovely to be grey.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, On the Rhine.

Those eyes the greenest of things blue,
The bluest of things grey.
SWINBURNE, Félice. St. 24.

<sup>17</sup>
Mine eyes are grey and bright and quick in turning.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 140.

<sup>18</sup>
A noticeable man with large grey eyes.
WORDSWORTH, *Stanzas Written in Thomson's
"Castle of Indolence."*

Green Eyes

<sup>19</sup>
The Girl with the Green Eyes.
CLYDE FITCH. Title of play.

<sup>20</sup>
Her eyes were green as leeks.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, 342.

<sup>21</sup>
The sea-green mirrors of your eyes.
SWINBURNE, Félice. St. 35.

Eyes coloured like a water-flower,
And deeper than the green seas' glass.
SWINBURNE, Félice. St. 36.

<sup>22</sup>
Do you see any green in my eye?
UNKNOWN. London street saying, c. 1840.

VI—Eyes: Their Brilliancy

<sup>23</sup>
There are whole veins of diamonds in thine
eyes,
Might furnish crowns for all the Queens of
earth.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Drawing Room.

Eyes, that displace
The neighbour diamond, and out-face
That sunshine by their own sweet grace.
RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed)
Mistress. St. 15.

I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond:
thou hast the right arched beauty of the brow.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 3, l. 58.

1
On woman Nature did bestow two eyes,
Like Hemian's bright lamps, in matchless beauty shining,

Whose beams do soonest captivate the wise
And wary heads, made rare by art's refining.

ROBERT GREENE, Philomela.

Her eyes the glow-worm lend thee,
The shooting stars attend thee;

And the elves also,
Whose little eyes glow

Like the sparks of fire, befriend thee.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece, to Julia.

3
The light of midnight's starry heaven
Is in those radiant eyes.

LETITIA LONDON, Poetical Portraits. No. 5.

4
And thy deep eyes, amid the gloom,
Shine like jewels in a shroud.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

5
When did morning ever break,
And find such beaming eyes awake?

THOMAS MOORE, Fly Not Yet.

6
Look out upon the stars, my love,
And shame them with thine eyes.

EDWARD COATE PINKNEY, A Serenade.

Two starry eyes, hung in the gloom of thought.
SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 490.

Those eyes which burn through smiles that fade
in tears,

Like stars half-quenched in mists of silver dew.
SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act ii, sc. 1.

Her eyes as stars of twilight fair.

WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of De- light, l. 5.

I dislike an eye that twinkles like a star. Those only are beautiful which, like the planets, have a steady, lambent light,—are luminous, but not sparkling.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iii, ch. 4.

7
The dew that on the violet lies
Mocks the dark lustre of thine eyes.

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto i, st. 3.

The sparkle of his swarthy eye.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 4.

8
Her eyes in heaven

Would through the airy region stream so bright

That birds would sing and think it were not night.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 20.

And as the bright sun glorifies the sky,
So is her face illumined with her eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 485.

But hers, which through the crystal tears gave
light,

Shone like the moon in water seen by night.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 491.

9
Nor brighter was his eye, nor moister
Than a too-long opened oyster.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. 4.

10
Their eyes seem'd rings from whence the gems were gone. (Parean l'occhiaje anella senza gemme.)

Lack-lustre eye.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7,
l. 21.

A lack-lustre dead-blue eye.

TENNYSON, A Character.

VII—Eye and Ear

12
I sometimes almost think that eyes have ears: . . .

'Tis wonderful how oft the sex have heard
Long dialogues—which pass'd without a word!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 76.

13
The eyes are as ignorant as the ears are knowing. (Καὶ τόσον ὀφθαλμοὶ γὰρ ἀπνευθέες ὅσον ἀκοὴ εἰδύλις.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragmenta Incertæ. No. 128.

14
But sooth is said, gone sithen many years
That field hath eyen, and the wood hath ears.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 664. (l. 1522)

For poets have ears, and walls have eyes to see.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Canto
xxii, st. 32.

Fields have eyes and woods have ears.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5.

Walls have tongues and hedges ears.

SWIFT, Pastoral Dialogue, l. 7.

The fields have eyes, the bushes ears,
False birds can fetch the wind.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: To Light a Candle Be- fore the Devil.

Wood has ears, field has sight.

WRIGHT, Essays on the Middle Ages. Vol. i, p.
168. Quoted as of the thirteenth century.

15
The ear is a less trustworthy witness than the eye. (Ὡτα τυγχάνει ἀνθρώποισι ἔοντα ἀπιστότερα ὀφθαλμῶν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 8.

We credit most our sight; one eye doth please
Our trust far more than ten ear-witnesses.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Eyes Before the Ears.

A thing when heard, remember, strikes less keen
On the spectator's mind than when 'tis seen.
(Segnius irritant animos demiss per aurem;
Quam quæ sunt oculis subjecta fidelibus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 180.

One eye-witness is better than ten hearsay witnesses. Those who see know beyond a doubt.
(Pluris est oculatus testis unus, quam auriti decem; Qui audiunt, audita dicunt: qui vident plane sciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 8.

All pleasure has departed from the ear to the vain delights of the wandering eye. (Migravit ab aure voluptas Omnis ad incertos oculos, et gaudia vana.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 187.

I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear;

but now mine eye seeth thee.

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 5.

The hearing ear, and the seeing eye.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 12.

The ears can endure an injury better than the eyes. (Injuriam aures quam oculi facilius ferunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 295.

A man may see how this world goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 6, l. 153.

Stabbed with a white wench's black eye; shot through the ear with a love-song.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 13.

O, learn to read what silent love hath writ:
To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxiii.

F

FACE

I—Face: Definitions

A man shall see faces, that if you examine them, part by part, you shall find never a good; and yet all together do well.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Beauty.

It is the common wonder of all men how, among so many million of faces, there should be none alike.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii,
sec. 2.

The human features and countenance, although composed of but some ten parts or little more, are so fashioned that among so many thousands of men there are no two in existence who cannot be distinguished from one another.

PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

As from our beginning we run through variety of looks, before we come to consistent and settled faces, so before our end, by sick and languishing alterations, we put on new visages.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, To a Friend. Sec. 3.

The countenance is the portrait of the mind, the eyes are its informers. (Imago animi vul-tus est, indices oculi.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 59.

Some can form an opinion from the countenance as to how much ability a man possesses. (Quidam ex vultu conjecturam faciunt, quantum quisque animi habere videatur.)

CICERO, Pro L. Murena. Sec. 21. (Adapted.)

Physiognomy is not a guide that has been given us by which to judge of the character of men:
it may only serve us for conjecture.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii.

There's no art

To find the mind's construction in the face.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 4, l. 11.

There is in every human countenance either a history or a prophecy, which must sadden, or at least soften, every reflecting observer.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Additional Table Talk.

His face, The tablet of unutterable thoughts.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 6.

Contending Passions jostle and displace
And tilt and tourney mostly in the Face: . . .
Unmatched by Art, upon this wondrous scroll
Portrayed are all the secrets of the soul.

ABRAHAM COLES, Man, The Microcosm, l. 26.

Joy to the face its own expression sent,
And gave a likeness in the looks it lent.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. ii, l. 33.

Your face doth testify what you be inwardly.
LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised. Sig.
L7. (1586)

Man is read in his face.

BEN JONSON, Deus in Creaturis.

What a man is lies as certainly upon his countenance as in his heart.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Weighed and Wanting.
Ch. 2.

In whose gay red-lettered face
We read good living more than grace.

MATTHEW GREENE, The Spleen, l. 330.

1 Of all the branches of political economy, the human face is perhaps the best criterion of value.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works. Vol. xii, p. 377.

2 The human face is the masterpiece of God. The eyes reveal the soul, the mouth the flesh, The chin stands for purpose, the nose means will; But over and behind all is that fleeting something we call "expression."

ELBERT HUBBARD, Little Journeys: Leonardo.

3 Men's faces are not to be trusted; does not every street abound in gloomy-visaged debauchees? (Frontis nulla fides; quis enim non vicus abundat Tristibus obscaenis?)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 8.

Trust not to outward show!

JUVENAL, Satires, ii, 8. (Gifford, tr.)

See also under APPEARANCES.

4 The face, when we are born, is no less tender than any other part of the body: it is use alone hardens it, and makes it more able to endure the cold. And therefore the Scythian philosopher gave a very significant answer to the Athenian, who wondered how he could go naked in frost and snow. "How," said the Scythian, "can you endure your face exposed to the sharp winter?" "My face is used to it," said the Athenian. "Think me all face," replied the Scythian.

JOHN LOCKE, On Education. Sec. 5.

You have your face bare; I am all face. (Vous avez bien la face decouverte; moi je suis tout face.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 35. The answer of a naked beggar, when asked if he was cold. Fuller (Worthies of England: Berkshire, p. 82) tells the same story, and it is also given as the reply of an Indian, wearing only a breech-cloth, skating on the river at Quebec.

5 A face that had a story to tell. How different faces are in this particular! Some of them speak not. They are books in which not a line is written, save perhaps a date.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 4.

6 He [the Deity] gave to man an uplifted face, and bade him contemplate the heavens. (Os homini sublimē dedit, cœlumque videri.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 85.

7 Alas, how hard it is not to betray a guilty conscience in the face! (Heu! quam difficile est crimen non prodere vultu!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 447.

A troubled countenance oft discloses much. (Multa sed trepidus solet Detegere vultus.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 330.

8 The face of man is the index to joy and mirth, to severity and sadness. (Frons homini lætitiæ et hilaritatis, seceritatis et tristitiæ index.)

PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. ii, sec. 37.

The face is oftentimes a true index of the heart. JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 3, epis. 15. (1645)

For what is form and what is face,

But the soul's index or its case?

NATHANIEL COTTON, Visions in Verse: Pleasure.

The face the index of a feeling mind.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. xvi, l. 113.

All is not well within; for still we find The face the unerring index of the mind.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 18. (Gifford, tr.)

That old saying is untrue, "the face Is index of the heart."

UNKNOWN, Times Whistle, 23. (c. 1615)

9 All men's faces are true, whate'er their hands are.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 102.

10 Your face, my thane, is as a book, where men

May read strange matters.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 63.

I saw Othello's visage in his mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 3, l. 253.

11 Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,

Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1252.

12 I trowe that countenance cannot lie Whose thoughts are legible in the eye.

SPENSER, An Elegie, l. 106.

For in the face judicious eyes may find The symptoms of a good or evil mind.

JOHN WARD, History of the Grand Rebellion, i, 8. (1713)

13 In the faces of men and women I see God.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. St. 48.

14 The face of every one

That passes by me is a mystery!

WORDSWORTH, The Prelude. Bk. vii, st. 24.

II—Face: Apothegms

15 It is good that a man's face gives his tongue leave to speak.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Simulation and Dissimulation.

16 May the man be damned and never grow fat Who wears two faces under one hat.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 451.

Two faces under one hood.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

1 And in the scowl of Heaven, each face
Grew dark as they were speaking.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lord Ullin's Daughter.

2 I will not lend my countenance to the enterprise.

GROVER CLEVELAND, to John Finley, who had urged him to have his portrait painted.
(NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 762.)

3 I have always considered my face a convenience rather than an ornament.

O. W. HOLMES, Life and Letters. Vol. ii, p. 103.

4 That saw the manners in the face.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, On the Death of Hogarth.

5 Your face betrays your years. (Facies tua computat annos.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 199.

And careful hours with time's deformed hand
Have written strange defeatures in my face.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 298.

6 These faces in the mirrors
Are but the shadows and phantoms of myself.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. ii,
l. 72.

7 And where thou hast most matter to complain,

Make the good face and glad in port thee
feign.

JOHN LYDGATE, Troy Book. Bk. ii, l. 4366.
(1412)

Though it be a foul lie, set upon it a good face.

JOHN BALE, Kynge Johan, l. 1991. (c. 1540)

Set a good face on a bad matter.

HUMPHREY GIFFORD, A Posie of Gilloflowers,
44. (1580)

God hath done his part: she hath a good face.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Spider and Flie, 4. (1556)

8 Often a silent face has voice and words.
(Sæpe tacens vocem verbaque vultus habet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 574.

But still her silent looks loudly reproached me.
(Sed taciti fecere tamen convicia vultus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 21.

9 When the disposition is friendly the face pleases. (Ingenio facies conciliante placet.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 44.

10 Make thy face to shine upon thy servant.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxi, 16.

Show thy servant the light of thy countenance.
Book of Common Prayer: The Psalter.

11 A comely face is a silent recommendation.
(Formosa facies muta commendatio est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 207.

A fair face is half a portion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

A good face needs no band, and a pretty wench
no land.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

See also under APPEARANCE.

12 The human face is my landscape.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, remarking that he did not enjoy the scenery of Richmond.

13 I next strained my eyes, with equally bad success, to see if, among the sea of upturned faces which bent their eyes on the pulpit as a common center, I could discover the sober and business-like physiognomy of Owen.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 20. (1817)

In this sea of upturned faces there is something which excites me strangely, deeply, before I even begin to speak.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, Faneuil Hall, 30
Sept., 1842. Opening sentence.

The slope of faces from the floor to th' roof,
(As if one master-spring controll'd them all)
Relax'd into a universal grin.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 202.

A press of gaping faces.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1408.

14 False face must hide what the false heart doth know.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 7, l. 82.

15 Your honour's face is made of a fiddle; every one that looks on you, loves you.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 8.

16 Well, I will set a face of brass on it.

GEORGE WHEATSTONE, Promos and Cassandra.
Pt. ii, 3, l. (1578)

III—Face: Its Beauty

See also Beauty

17 A face to lose youth for, to occupy age
With the dream of, meet death with.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Likeness.

18 Whose face is this, so musically fair?

ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Syren.

19 The Deil he could na skaith thee,
Or aught that wad belang thee:

He'd look into thy bonnie face,
And say:—"I canna wrang thee!"

BURNS, Saw Ye Bonnie Lesley.

20 His honest, sonsie, baws'nt face
Aye gat him friends in ilka place.

BURNS, The Twa Dogs, l. 31.

A picturesque countenance, rather than one that is esteemed of regular features.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, An Humourist.

Yet even her tyranny had such a grace,
The women pardoned all, except her face.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 113.

And to his eye
There was but one beloved face on earth,
And that was shining on him.

BYRON, The Dream. St. 2.

There is a garden in her face,
Where roses and white lilies grow;
A heavenly paradise is that place,
Wherein all pleasant fruits do flow.

There cherries grow, which none may buy,
Till "Cherry ripe" themselves do cry.

THOMAS CAMPION, Cherry Ripe. These verses, which appeared originally in An Hour's Recreation in Music, in 1606, without ascription of authorship, were for a time attributed to Richard Alison, who set them to music. Campion claimed them in a note in Fourth Book of Airs, and there is no reason to doubt his authorship.

Flushing white and soften'd red;
Mingling tints, as when there glows
In snowy milk the bashful rose.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode xvi, l. 28.

The magic of a face.

THOMAS CAREW, Epitaph on the Lady S—.

He had a face like a benediction.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 4.

Her face, oh call it fair, not pale!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. i, l. 289.

Her brow was fair, but very pale, and looked Like stainless marble; a touch methought would soil

Its whiteness. O'er her temple one blue vein
Ran like a tendril.

BARRY CORNWALL, The Magdalen.

The fairest garden in her looks
And in her mind the wisest books.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden. Pt. i.

With faces like dead lovers who died true.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Indian Summer.

What cunning can express
The favour of her face?

EDWARD DE VERE, What Cunning Can Express.

Sweet grave aspect.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week i, day 4.

Her face betokened all things dear and good.

JEAN INGELOW, Margaret in the Xebec. St. 57.

The light upon her face
Shines from the windows of another world.
Saints only have such faces.

LONGFELLOW, Michael Angelo. Pt. ii, sec. 6.

Oh! could you view the melody
Of ev'ry grace,
And music of her face,
You'd drop a tear,
Seeing more harmony
In her bright eye,
Than now you hear.

RICHARD LOVELACE, Orpheus to Beasts. St. 2.

Human face divine.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 44.

Thy face remembered is from other worlds,
It has been died for, though I know not when,
It has been sung of, though I know not
where.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa.

If to her share some female errors fall
Look on her face, and you'll forget 'em all.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto ii, l. 17.

The sweet expression of that face,
For ever changing, yet the same.

SAMUEL ROGERS, A Farewell.

With every change his features play'd,
As aspens show the light and shade.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto iii, st. 5.

A face which is always serene possesses a mysterious and powerful attraction: sad hearts come to it, as to the sun, to warm themselves again.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Love, Friendship, Friends. No. 10.

A sweet attractive kind of grace,
A full assurance given by looks,
Continual comfort in a face
The lineaments of Gospel books.

MATTHEW ROYDON, An Elegie.

His face was as the heavens; and therein stuck

A sun and moon, which kept their course, and lighted

The little O, the earth.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 79.

For thou hast given me in this beauteous face,
A world of earthly blessings to my soul,
If sympathy of love unite our thoughts.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 21.

Fair ladies mask'd are roses in their bud:
Dismask'd, their damask sweet commixture shown,

Are angels veiling clouds, or roses blown.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 295.

1
Viola: Good madam, let me see your face.
Olivia: Have you any commission from your lord to negotiate with my face? You are now out of your text: but we will draw the curtain and show you the picture . . . 'tis in grain, sir; 'twill endure wind and weather.
Viola: 'Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white Nature's own sweet and cunning hand laid on.
 SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, 248.

2
 If I should die to-night,
 My friends would look upon my quiet face
 Before they laid it in its resting-place,
 And deem that death had left it almost fair.
 ARABELLA EUGENIA SMITH, If I Should Die To-night.

3
 Her angel's face
 As the great eye of heaven, shined bright,
 And made a sunshine in the shady place;
 Did never mortal eye behold such heavenly grace.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto 3, st. 4.
 4
 Her cheeks so rare a white was on,
 No daisy makes comparison;
 (Who sees them is undone);
 For streaks of red were mingled there,
 Such as are on a Cath'rine pear,
 (The side that's next the Sun).
 SIR JOHN SUCKLING, A Ballad Upon a Wedding. St. 10.

Her face is like the Milky Way i' the sky,—
 A meeting of gentle lights without a name.
 SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Brennoralt. Act iii.

5
 White rose in red rose-garden
 Is not so white;
 Snowdrops that plead for pardon
 And pine for fright . . .
 Grow not as this face grows from pale to bright.
 SWINBURNE, Before the Mirror.

6
 Your sweet faces make good fellows fools
 And traitors.
 TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 399.

7
 A countenance in which did meet
 Sweet records, promises as sweet.
 WORDSWORTH, She Was a Phantom of Delight.
 A face with gladness overspread!
 Soft smiles, by human kindness bred!
 WORDSWORTH, To a Highland Girl.

IV—Face: Its Ugliness

8
 Thou hast a serious face,
 A betting, bargaining and saving face,
 A rich face; pawn it to the usurer.
 BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act iii.

9
 Her nose and chin they threaten ither.
 BURNS, Sic a Wife as Willie Had.

10
 He's Judas to a tittle that man is,
 Just such a face!
 ROBERT BROWNING, Fra Lippo Lippi.

11
 As a beauty I'm not a great star,
 There are others more handsome by far;
 But my face I don't mind it
 Because I'm behind it—
 'Tis the folks out in front that I jar.

ANTHONY EUWER, Limeratomy. This limerick has sometimes been ascribed to Woodrow Wilson because it was his favorite one, and he occasionally wrote it in an album.

My face. Is this long strip of skin
 Which bears of worry many a trace,
 Of fallow hue, of features thin,
 This mass of seams and lines, my face?
 EDMUND YATES, Aged Forty.

12
 In my poor, lean, lank face nobody has ever seen that any cabbages were sprouting.
 ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Lincoln-Douglas Debates.

13
 She was a lady of incisive features bound in stale parchment.
 GEORGE MEREDITH, Diana of the Crossways. Ch. 14.

14
 His face so pale and skin transparent was,
 It seemed a ghastly looking-glass of death.
 FRANCIS ROUS, Thule.

15
 His face was of that doubtful kind
 That wins the eye, but not the mind.
 SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto v, st. 16.

16
 Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
 Bears a command in 't.
 SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 66.
 You have such a February face,
 So full of frost, of storm, of cloudiness.
 SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 4, l. 41.

17
 The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes.
 SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 4, l. 18.
 I have seen better faces in my time
 Than stands on any shoulder that I see.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 99.

18
 Compare her face with some that I shall show;
 And I will make thee think thy swan a crow.
 SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 91.

Mislike me not for my complexion,
 The shadow'd livery of the burnish'd sun.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 1.

Dusk faces with white silken turbans wreath'd.

FACTS

<sup>14</sup> Facts, when combined with ideas, constitute the greatest force in the world. They are greater than armaments, greater than finance, greater than science, business and law because they are the common denominator of all of them.

SMOLLETT, Sir Launcelot Greaves.

But facts are facts and flinch not.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ii, l. 1049.

7 Matters of fact, as Mr. Budgell somewhere observes, are very stubborn things.

MATTHEW TINDAL, Will, p. 23. (1733)

Facts are stubborn things.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Field Husbandry, p. 35. (1747) The phrase was also used by Smollett in his translation of Le Sage's Gil Blas (bk. x, ch. 1), which was published in 1755.

But facts are chieftains that winna ding,
An' downa be disputed.

BURNS, A Dream. St. 4.

8 Facts, or what a man believes to be facts, are delightful. . . . Get your facts first, and then you can distort them as much as you please.

The hymn of the wounded, the beaten who died overwhelmed in the strife;

Not the jubilant song of the victors for whom the resounding acclaim

Of nations was lifted in chorus, whose brows wore the chaplet of fame,

But the hymn of the low and the humble, the weary, the broken in heart,

Who strove and who failed, acting bravely a silent and desperate part.

WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Io Victis.

My songs that found no tongue;
Nobler than any fact
My wish that failed of act.

WHITTIER, My Triumph. St. 9.

Others shall sing the song,
Others shall right the wrong,—
Finish what I begin,
And all I fail of win.

WHITTIER, My Triumph. St. 10.

FAIRIES

5 Up the airy mountain,
Down the rushy glen,
We daren't go a-hunting
For fear of little men;
Wee folk, good folk,
Trooping all together;
Green jacket, red cap,
And white owl's feather!

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, The Fairies.

6 When the first baby laughed for the first time, his laugh broke into a million pieces, and they all went skipping about. That was the beginning of fairies.

J. M. BARRIE, Little White Bird. Ch. 16.

Whenever a child says "I don't believe in fairies" there's a little fairy somewhere that falls right down dead.

J. M. BARRIE, Peter Pan.

Do you believe in fairies? If you believe clap your hands. Don't let Tinker die.

J. M. BARRIE, Peter Pan. Tinker Bell, the fairy of the play, was desperately ill because she had drunk some poison which Captain Hook, the pirate, had mixed for Peter Pan, and she could be saved only if children still believed in fairies.

The weird "Never, Never Land," so called by the earliest pioneers from the small chance they anticipated, on reaching it, of ever being able to return to civilization.

You moonshine revellers, and shades of night.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 5, l. 41.

10
Over hill, over dale,
Through brush, through brier,
Over park, over pale,
Through flood, through fire.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 2.

In silence sad,
Trip we after night's shade:

We the globe can compass soon.

Swifter than the wand'ring moon.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 100.

11
O, then, I see Queen Mab hath been with
you.

She is the fairies' midwife, and she comes

In shape no bigger than an agate-stone

On the forefinger of an alderman,

Drawn with a team of little atomies

Athwart men's noses as they lie asleep: . . .

Her chariot is an empty hazel-nut

Made by the joiner squirrel, or old grub,

Time out o' mind the fairies' coach-makers.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 4,
l. 53.

This is Mab, the Mistress-Fairy,
That doth nightly rob the dairy.

BEN JONSON, The Satyr: Song.

12
Where the bee sucks, there suck I:

In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act v, sc. 1, l. 88.

Or like a fairy trip upon the green.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 146.

1
Here, in cool grot and mossy cell,
We rural fays and fairies dwell;
Though rarely seen by mortal eye,
When the pale moon, ascending high,
Darts through yon limes her quivering beams,
We frisk it near these crystal streams.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Lines Inscribed on a Tablet in the Gardens at the Poet's Residence.

2
Ye fairies, from all evil keep her!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell: Prologue, l. 65.

FAITH

I—Faith: Definitions

3
Faith is a certitude without proofs. . . .
Faith is a sentiment, for it is a hope; it is an instinct, for it precedes all outward instruction.

AMIEL, Journal, 7 Feb., 1872.

4
For what is faith unless it is to believe what you do not see? (Quid est enim fides nisi credere quod non vides?)

ST. AUGUSTINE. (Joannis Evangelical Tract.
Ch. 40, sec. 8.)

To believe only possibilities is not Faith, but mere Philosophy.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 48.

The faith that stands on authority is not faith.
The reliance on authority measures the decline of religion.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

5
Faith is love taking the form of aspiration.

WILLIAM ELLERY CHANNING. Note-Books: Faith.

6
To take up half on trust, and half to try,
Name it not faith, but bungling bigotry.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. i, l.
141.

7
Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen.

New Testament: Hebrews, xi, 1.

8
Faith, as an intellectual state, is self-reliance.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 4.

Faith always implies the disbelief of a lesser fact in favor of a greater. A little mind often sees the unbelief, without seeing the belief of large ones.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5.

9
Faith is an act of self-consecration, in which the will, the intellect, and the affections all have their place.

10
Faith is the cliff on which the weak wave breaks,

The tree around whose might frail tendrils
twine,

In cloudy skies it sets a starry sign,
And in the sorrowing soul an altar makes.

THOMAS S. JONES, Quatrains.

11
And we shall be made truly wise if we be made content; content, too, not only with what we can understand, but content with what we do not understand—the habit of mind which theologians call—and rightly—faith in God.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Health and Education: On Bio-Geology.

12
The only faith that wears well and holds its color in all weathers, is that which is woven of conviction and set with the sharp mordant of experience.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Abraham Lincoln.

13
The principal part of faith is patience.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Weighed and Wanting
Ch. 53.

14
Faith may be defined briefly as an illogical belief in the occurrence of the improbable.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Series iii, p. 267.

15
Faith is a kind of winged intellect. The great workmen of history have been men who believed like giants.

DR. CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Walking by Faith.

16
Faith is like a lily, lifted high and white.

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Hope.

17
There are no tricks in plain and simple faith.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 22.

18
Faith is the subtle chain
Which binds us to the infinite; the voice
Of a deep life within, that will remain
Until we crowd it thence.

ELIZABETH OAKES SMITH, Faith.

19
Faith is the force of life.

LEO TOLSTOY, My Confession. Ch. ii.

II—Faith: Apothegms

1 Give to faith the things which belong to faith. (Da fidei, quæ fidei sunt.)

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

2 Inflexible in faith, invincible in arms.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 99.

3 A little faith all undisproved.

E. B. BROWNING, The Sleep.

4 You can do very little with faith, but you can do nothing without it.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 336.

5 We walk by faith, not by sight.

New Testament: II Corinthians, v, 7.

6 His faith, perhaps, in some nice tenets might Be wrong; his life, I'm sure, was in the right.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, On the Death of Crashaw, l. 55. (1649)

For modes of faith let graceless zealots fight; He can't be wrong whose life is in the right.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 305. (1733)

7 Faith needs her daily bread.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Fortune's Marriage. Ch. 10.

8 No longer by implicit faith we err, Whilst every man's his own interpreter.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Progress of Human Learning, l. 148.

Whose faith has centre everywhere, Nor cares to fix itself to form.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. xxxiii, st. 1.

9 Who breaks his faith, no faith is held with him.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week ii. (Sylvester, tr.)

10 The shield of faith.

New Testament: Ephesians, vi, 16.

11 Faith sees by the ears.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

12 Love asks faith and faith, firmness.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

13 Mirror of constant faith, rever'd and mourn'd.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 229. (Pope, tr.)

14 Guided by faith and matchless fortitude.

MILTON, Sonnets: To Cromwell.

15 Beautiful Faith, surrendering unto Time.

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Marpessa, l. 62.

16 Th' enormous faith of many made for one.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 242.

In Faith and Hope the world will disagree.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 307.

17 And cling to Faith beyond the forms of Faith!

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 69.

To persecute

Makes a faith hated, and is furthermore

No perfect witness of a perfect faith

In him who persecutes.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 72.

18 The coalheaver's faith. (Fides carbonaria.)

A medieval proverb, founded on the anecdote of the coalheaver who said that he believed what the Church believed. When asked what that was, he answered, "What I believe."

III—Faith: Its Power

19 The cruse of oil and the barrel of meal overflow because the widow has firm faith.

AGATHIAS SCHOLASTICUS, On the Widow Who Fed Elijah. (Greek Anthology. Bk. i, epig. 77.)

20 They never fail who light

Their lamp of faith at the unwavering flame

Burnt for the altar service of the Race

Since the beginning.

ELSA BARKER, The Frozen Grail.

21 But there's a dome of nobler span,

A temple given

Thy faith, that bigots dare not ban—

Its space is Heaven!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

22 Daughter of Faith, awake, arise, illumine

The dread unknown, the chaos of the tomb!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 261.

23 Yet courage, soul! Nor hold thy strength in vain,

In hope o'ercome the steeps God sets for thee;

For past the Alpine summits of great pain Lieth thine Italy.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Beyond.

24 We lean on Faith; and some less wise have cried,

"Behold the butterfly, the seed that's cast!" Vain hopes that fall like flowers before the blast!

R. W. GILDER, Love and Death. St. 2.

25 When false things are brought low,

And swift things have grown slow,

Feigning like froth shall go,

Faith be aye for aye.

THOMAS HARDY, Between Us Now.

26 What here we hope for, we shall once inherit:

By Faith we walk here, not by the Spirit.

ROBERT HERRICK, Faith.

1 Wake in our breast the living fires,
The holy faith that warmed our sires.
O. W. HOLMES, Army Hymn.

Faith of our fathers—holy faith,
We will be true to thee till death.
FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, Faith of Our Fathers.
Used by William Jennings Bryan for close of his undelivered speech at the Scopes trial.

2 I know that my redeemer liveth.
Old Testament: Job, xix, 25.

I . . . exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.
New Testament: Jude, i, 3.

3 O Faith, that meets ten thousand cheats
Yet drops no jot of faith!
RUDYARD KIPLING, To the True Romance.

4 Our faith triumphant o'er our fears.
LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship.
Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,
Who have faith in God and nature.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha: Introduction.

5 A perfect faith would lift us absolutely above fear.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Sir Gibbie. Ch. 11.

6 O welcome pure-eyed Faith, white-handed Hope,
Thou hovering angel, girt with golden wings!
MILTON, Comus, l. 213.

7 I argue not
Against Heav'n's hand or will, nor bate a jot
Of heart or hope, but still bear up and steer Right onward.
MILTON, To Cyriac Skinner.

8 Call no faith false which e'er hath brought Relief to any laden life,
Cessation to the pain of thought,
Refreshment mid the dust of strife.
SIR LEWIS MORRIS, Tolerance.

9 But give me, Lord, eyes to behold the truth;
A seeing sense that knows the eternal right;
A heart with pity filled, and gentlest ruth;
A manly faith that makes all darkness light.
THEODORE PARKER, The Higher Good.

10 Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.
New Testament: Revelation, ii, 10.

The just shall live by faith.
New Testament: Romans, i, 17.

11 I know no deeper doubt to make me mad,
I need no brighter love to keep me pure.
To me the faiths of old are daily bread;
I bless their hope, I bless their will to save.
GEORGE SANTAYANA, What Riches Have You.

12 Thy path is plain and straight,—that light is given:
Onward in faith,—and leave the rest to Heaven.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Retrospect, l. 175.

13 And all but their faith overthrown.
WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, Io Victis.

14 Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 1.

We have but faith: we cannot know,
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from Thee,
A beam in darkness: let it grow.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam: Introduction. St. 6.

15 The night is long and pain weighs heavily,
But God will hold His world above despair;
Look to the East, where up the lucid sky
The morning climbs! The day shall yet be fair.
CELIA THAXTER, Faith.

16 Faith is required of thee, and a sincere life, not loftiness of intellect, nor deepness in the mysteries of God.
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi.
Pt. iv, ch. 18, sec. 3.

17 The mason asks but a narrow shelf to spring his brick from; man requires only an infinitely narrower one to spring his arch of faith from.
H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 31 Jan., 1852.

18 Fight the good fight of faith.
New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 12.

I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith.
New Testament: II Timothy, iv, 7.

19 Faith, mighty faith, the promise sees,
And looks to that alone;
Laughs at impossibilities,
And cries it shall be done.
CHARLES WESLEY, Hymns.

20 Through the dark and stormy night
Faith beholds a feeble light
Up the blackness streaking;
Knowing God's own time is best,
In a patient hope I rest
For the full day-breaking!
J. G. WHITTIER, Barclay of Ury. St. 16.

He worshipped as his fathers did,
And kept the faith of childish days,
And, howsoever he strayed or slid,
He loved the good old ways.
WHITTIER, My Namesake.

1
A bending staff I would not break,
A feeble faith I would not shake,
Nor even rashly pluck away
The error which some truth may stay,
Whose loss might leave the soul without
A shield against the shafts of doubt.

WHITTIER, Questions of Life. St. 1.

2
Of one in whom persuasion and belief
Had ripened into faith, and faith become
A passionate intuition.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. iv, l. 1293.

Through love, through hope, and faith's transcendent dower,

We feel that we are greater than we know.

WORDSWORTH, The River Duddon: After-Thought.

3
Faith builds a bridge across the gulf of death,
To break the shock blind nature cannot shun,
And lands thought smoothly on the farther shore.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 721.

IV—Faith: Its Weakness

4
'Tis well averred,
A scientific faith's absurd.

ROBERT BROWNING, Easter Day. Pt. vi.

5
Half our daylight faith's a fable.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, A Dream, l. 5.

Ghost, kelpie, wraith,
And all the trumpery of vulgar faith.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, The Pilgrim of Glencoe,
l. 188.

6
Morality was held a standing jest,
And faith a necessary fraud at best.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. ii, l. 597.

Faith is a fine invention
For gentlemen who see;
But microscopes are prudent
In an emergency!

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 56.

8
Faith is a kind of parasitic plant,
That grasps the nearest plant with tendrils;
rings;

And as the climate and the soil may grant,
So is the sort of tree to which it clings.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 257.

9 Faith is often the boast of the man who is too lazy to investigate.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

10
Yes, faith is a goodly anchor;

When skies are sweet as a psalm,
At the bows it lolls so stalwart

In its bluff, broad-shouldered calm. . . .

But, after the shipwreck, tell me

What help in its iron thews,
Still true to the broken hawser,
Deep down among sea-weed and ooze?
J. R. LOWELL, After the Burial.

11
Unfaith clamouring to be coined
To faith by proof.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Earth and Man. St. 41.

12
How many things served us yesterday for articles of faith, which to-day are fables to us! (Combien de choses nous servoient hier d'articles de foy, qui nous sont fables aujourd'hui!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 26.

13
Faith, fanatic faith, once wedded fast
To some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet.

14
It will profit me nothing, for I have no faith in it. (Elle ne me profitera de rien, car je n'y adjouste point de foi.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 42. The monk's remark when he says that he knows a prayer which guarantees immunity from all firearms.

15
The old faiths light their candles all about,
But burly Truth comes by and puts them out.

LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Truth.

16
Men's faiths are wafer-cakes.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 53.

17
And bloody Faith, the foulest birth of Time.
SHELLEY, Feelings of a Republican.

Faith, haggard as Fear that had borne her, and dark as the sire that begat her, Despair.

SWINBURNE, An Autumn Vision. Sec. vii, l. 9.

18
Christian, what of the night?—
I cannot tell; I am blind.

I halt and hearken behind
If haply the hours will go back
And return to the dear dead light,
To the watchfires and stars that of old
Shone where the sky now is black,
Glowed where the earth now is cold.

SWINBURNE, A Watch in the Night. St. 10.

19
In our windy world
What's up is faith, what's down is heresy.
TENNYSON, Harold. Act i, sc. 1.

V—Faith and Reason

20
Faith is a higher faculty than reason.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem, l. 84.

21
Reason is our soul's left hand, Faith her right,

By these we reach divinity.

JOHN DONNE, To the Countess of Bedford.

Reason is the triumph of the intellect, faith of the heart.

JAMES SCHOULER, History of the United States. Vol. ii.

Reason saw not, till Faith sprung the light.
DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 69.

The way to see by Faith is to shut the Eye of Reason.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

Faith has no merit where human reason supplies the proof. (Fides non habet meritum ubi humana ratio præbet experimentum.)

ST. GREGORY, Homilies. No. 40.

It is not reason makes faith hard, but life.

JEAN INGELOW, A Pastor's Letter to a Young Poet. Pt. ii, l. 233.

Surely investigation is better than unthinking faith. Surely reason is a better guide than fear.

R. G. INCERSOLL, The Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

And Wisdom cries, "I know not anything"; And only Faith beholds that all is well.

S. R. LYSAGHT, A Ritual: A Lesson, l. 102.

They live no longer in the faith of reason.

SCHILLER, I Wallenstein. Act ii, sc. 4.

It is always right that a man should be able to render a reason for the faith that is within him.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol. i, p. 53.)

Such lapses from knowledge to faith are perhaps necessary that human heroism may be possible.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 1.

We live by Faith; but Faith is not the slave Of text and legend. Reason's voice and God's, Nature's and Duty's, never are at odds.

WHITTIER, Requirement.

VI—Faith Without Works

Faith without works is dead.

New Testament: James, ii, 20.

Faith without works is nothing worth, As dead as door-nail unless deeds follow.

LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. ii, l. 183.

If faith produce no works, I see That faith is not a living tree. Thus faith and works together grow; No separate life they e'er can know: They're soul and body, hand and heart: What God hath joined, let no man part.

HANNAH MORE, Dan and Jane.

Faith is the root of works. A root that produceth nothing is dead.

BISHOP THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety and of Christianity.

VII—Faith: Want of Faith

He that has lost faith, what has he left to live on? (Fidem qui perdit, quo se servat in reliquum?)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 11.

Geology, ethnology, what not? (Greek endings, each little passing bell That signifies some faith's about to die.)

ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology.

And my faith is torn to a thousand scraps, And my heart feels ice while my words breathe flame.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Worst of It.

The disease with which the human mind now labors is want of faith.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

In the affairs of this World, Men are saved, not by Faith, but by the Want of it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1754.

Much knowledge of things divine escapes us through want of faith. (Ἀλλὰ τῶν μὲν θείων τα πολλά ἀπιστίῃ διαφυγγάνει μὴ γινώσκεισθαι.)

HERACLITUS, Fragments. No. 116.

Th' extremes of too much faith, and none.

THOMAS MOORE, Fables. No. 5, l. 64.

Tell faith it's fled the city.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The Lie. (Sometimes attributed to Joshua Sylvester and to Sir John Davies.)

Play fast and loose with faith.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 242.

He wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat; it ever changes with the next block.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act i, sc. 1, l. 75.

The saddest thing that can befall a soul Is when it loses faith in God and woman.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. 12.

One by one, like leaves from a tree, All my faiths have forsaken me.

SARA TEASDALE, Leaves.

Faith and unfaith can ne'er be equal powers: Unfaith in aught is want of faith in all.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 386.

What faith is there in the faithless? (Τίς δ' ἄρα πίστις ἀπίστω.)

THEOGNIS, Sententiae. (SPENSER, Shepherds Calender: May: Piers' Emblem.)

<sup>1</sup> He hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel.

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 8.

<sup>2</sup> It may be that we can no longer share
The faith which from his fathers he received;
It may be that our doom is to despair,
Where he with joy believed.

WILLIAM WATSON, To James Bromley: With Wordsworth's Grave.

FALCON, see Hawk

FALL

See also Greatness: Its Penalties. For Fall, a season of the year, see Autumn

<sup>3</sup> Who lies upon the ground has no whither to fall. (Qui jacet in terra non habet unde cadat.)

ALAIN DE LILLE, Book of Parables. Ch. 2. This line was quoted by Charles I to the French minister, M. de Bellièvre, when the latter was trying to persuade him to seek safety in flight. The minister replied, "Sire, on peut lui faire tomber la tête."

He that is down needs fear no fall,
He that is low, no pride.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

I am not now in fortune's power:
He that is down can fall no lower.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 877.

A lowly man cannot have a high or heavy fall.
(Humilis nec alte cadere nec graviter potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 259.

<sup>4</sup> Who falls from all he knows of bliss,
Cares little into what abyss.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 1091.

<sup>5</sup> The oak grows silently in the forest a thousand years; only in the thousandth year, when the axeman arrives with his axe, is there heard an echoing through the solitudes; and the oak announces itself when, with far-sounding crash, it falls.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 1.

<sup>6</sup> He that falls to-day may be up again to-morrow.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 65.

We fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

ROBERT BROWNING, Asolando: Epilogue.

He falls low that cannot rise again.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 72. (1683)

Some falls are means the happier to arise.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 403.

<sup>7</sup> Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 12.

<sup>8</sup> Fallen, fallen, fallen, fallen,
Fallen from his high estate,
And welt'ring in his blood;
Deserted at his utmost need,
By those his former bounty fed;
On the bare earth expos'd he lies,
With not a friend to close his eyes.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 77.

So noble a master fallen! All gone! and not
One friend to take his fortune by the arm,
And go along with him.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 2, 6.

<sup>9</sup> For a man
Low-fallen from high estate more sharply feels
The strangeness of it than the long unblest.

("Οταν δ' ἀνὴρ
ἰράξη κακῶς ὑψηλός, εἰς ἀθλίαν πίπτει κακίῳ τοῦ πάλοι δυσδαίμονος.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 417. (Way, tr.)

Whoever has fallen from his former high estate is in his calamity the scorn even of the base.
(Quicumque amisit dignitatem pristinam Ignavis etiam jocus est in casu gravi.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 21, l. 1.

<sup>10</sup> Every slip is not a fall.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>11</sup> He that is fallen cannot help him that is down.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> It falls, all hope falls, and the fortune of our name. (Occidit; occidit Spes omnis et fortuna nostri Nominis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 4, l. 70.

<sup>13</sup> How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning!

Old Testament: Isaiah, xiv, 12.

From morn
To noon he fell, from noon to dewy eve,
A summer's day; and with the setting sun
Dropt from the zenith like a falling star.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 742.

And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,
Never to hope again.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 371.

<sup>14</sup> Who falls for love of God shall rise a star.

BEN JONSON, To a Friend.

<sup>15</sup> The vulgar falls and none laments his fate;
Sorrow has hardly leisure for the great.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iv. (Rowe, tr.)

<sup>16</sup> And great was the fall of it.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 27.

<sup>17</sup> That water which falls from some Alpine height is dashed, broken, and will murmur loudly, but grows limpid by its fall.

(Quell' onda, che ruina
Dalla pendice alpina,
Balza, si frange, e mormora
Ma limpida si fa.)

METASTASIO, Alcide al Bivio.

1 Awake, arise, or be for ever fall'n.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 330.

2 I made him just and right,
Sufficient to have stood, though free to fall.
Such I created all th' ethereal Powers
And Spirits, both them who stood, and them who fail'd;
Freely they stood who stood, and fell who fell.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 98.

3 Everything that shakes does not fall. (Tout ce qui bransle ne tombe pas.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

4 Who falls in honourable strife,
Surrenders nothing but his life;
Who basely triumphs casts away
The glory of the well-won day.

MONTGOMERY, Thoughts on Wheels. No. 1.

5 Low though I am, I have not fallen so low that I am beneath you too, for beneath you there can be nothing. (Non adeo cecidi, quamvis abjectus, ut infra Te quoque sim, inferius quo nihil esse potest.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 1.

6 As he rose like a rocket, he fell like a stick.
THOMAS PAINE, Letter to His Addressers.
Referring to Edmund Burke. See also under DICKENS.

I stood beside the grave of him who blazed
The comet of a season.

BYRON, Churchill's Grave, l. 1.

7 Fain would I climb, yet fear I to fall.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, scratched with a diamond on a window-pane, either in the presence of Queen Elizabeth or where she would be certain to see it.

If thy heart fails thee, do not climb at all.
QUEEN ELIZABETH, written by her under Raleigh's line. (FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. i, p. 19.) Raleigh's line is usually given, "Fain would I climb, but that I fear to fall." (SCOTT, Kenilworth, ch. 17.)

Fain would I, but I dare not; I dare, and yet I may not;
I may, although I care not for pleasure when I play not.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, Fain Would I. Written in later life than the line on the window-pane.

8 Hasty climbers have sudden falls.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 All things that rise will fall. (Omniaque orta occidunt.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 2, sec. 3.

One may sooner fall than rise.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 How are the mighty fallen!
Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 19.

How are the mighty fallen in the midst of the battle!

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 25.

Prostrate on earth the bleeding warrior lies,
And Isr'el's beauty on the mountains dies.
How are the mighty fallen!

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Lamentation of David over Saul and Jonathan.

11 O Hamlet, what a falling-off was there!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 47.

I shall fall,
Like a bright exhalation in the evening,
And no man see me more.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 225.

Press not a falling man too far!
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 333.

12 Great Cæsar fell.
O, what a fall was there, my countrymen!
Then I, and you, and all of us fell down.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l.
193.

I see thy glory like a shooting star
Fall to the base earth from the firmament.
Thy sun sets weeping in the lowly west.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sec. 4, l. 19.

13 "Yea," quoth he, "dost thou fall upon thy face?"

Thou wilt fall backward when thou hast more wit."

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 3, l.
41.

14 What though success will not attend on all?
Who bravely dares, must sometimes risk a
fall.
SMOLLETT, Advice, l. 207.

15 Woe to my wretched self! from what a height of hope have I fallen.
(Væ misero mihi! quanta de spe decidi.)
TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos. Act i, sc. 3,
l. 9.

Alas, from what high hope to what relapse
Unlook'd for, are we fall'n!

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 30.

16 A great villain, a great fall. (De grand vilain grande chute.)

J. DE LA VEPRIE, Les Proverbes Communs.

<sup>1</sup> How many are raised to high posts by the instigation of the devil, that their fall may be more dismal!

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety.

<sup>2</sup> Who, taking counsel of unbending truth,
By one example hath set forth to all
How they with dignity may stand; or fall,
If fall they must.

I—Fame: Definitions

<sup>3</sup> Renown is the mother of virtues. (Τὴν δόξαν ἀρεῶν μητέρα εἶναι.)

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 48.)

<sup>4</sup> Fame is the thirst of youth.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 112.

<sup>5</sup> Fame, we may understand, is no sure test of merit, but only a probability of such: it is an accident, not a property of a man.

CARLYLE, Essays: Goethe.

Money will buy money's worth, but the thing men call fame, what is it?

CARLYLE, Memoirs of the Life of Scott.

<sup>6</sup> Fame Is nothing but an empty name.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 230.

What is fame? an empty bubble.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude.

<sup>7</sup> Fame is but wind.

THOMAS CORYATE, Crudities. Bk. i, l. 60. (1611)

The splendors of earthly fame are but a wind,
That in the same direction lasts not long.

(Non é il mondam romore altro che un fiato
Di vento, che vien quinci ed or vien quindi,
É muta nome, perchè muta lato.)

DANTE, Purgatorio. Canto xi, l. 100.

Fame they tell you is air; but without air there is no life for any; without fame there is none for the best.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: The Ciceros.

<sup>8</sup> Fame is a fickle food
Upon a shifting plate.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 4.

Fame is a food that dead men eat,—
I have no stomach for such meat.

AUSTIN DOBSON, Fame Is a Food.

<sup>9</sup> Fame is a magnifying glass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Fame is the echo of actions, resounding them to the world, save that the echo repeats only the last part, but fame relates all, and often more than all.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane States: Of Fame.

<sup>10</sup> What is this fame, thus crowded round with slaves?

The breath of fools, the bait of flattering knaves.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Imitation of Second Chorus in Act ii of Seneca's Thyestes.

<sup>11</sup> Fame is the inheritance not of the dead, but of the living. It is we who look back with lofty pride to the great names of antiquity, who drink of that flood of glory as of a river, and refresh our wings in it for future flight.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 389.

Fame is not popularity. . . . It is the spirit of a man surviving himself in the minds and thoughts of other men.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Lectures on the English Poets, p. 283.

<sup>12</sup> If that thy fame with ev'ry toy be pos'd,
'Tis a thin web, which poisonous fancies make;

But the great soldier's honour was compos'd
Of thicker stuff, which would endure a shake.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 38.

<sup>13</sup> Ah, pensive scholar, what is fame?
A fitful tongue of leaping flame;
A giddy whirlwind's fickle gust,
That lifts a pinch of mortal dust;
A few swift years, and who can show
Which dust was Bill, and which was Joe?

O. W. HOLMES, Bill and Joe. St. 7.

<sup>14</sup> And what after all is everlasting fame? Altogether vanity. (Τί δὲ καὶ ἔστιν ὄλως τὸ αἰμνηστον; ὅλον κενόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. 4, sec. 33.

<sup>15</sup> Fame lulls the fever of the soul, and makes Us feel that we have grasp'd an immortality.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Ina. Sc. 4, l. 273.

<sup>16</sup> Fame is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise

(That last infirmity of noble mind)
To scorn delights, and live laborious days.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 70. (1638)

Read but the stories

Of men most famed for courage and for counsel,
And you will find that the desire for glory
(That last infirmity of noble minds),
Was the last frailty wise men e'er put off.

UNKNOWN, Sir John van Olden Barnevelt. (1622) A tragedy produced fifteen years before Lycidas. "The most astonishing coincidence in the whole range of literature," Swinburne called the lines in parenthesis.

- 1
Fame is no plant that grows on mortal soil.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 78.
- 2
What's fame? a fancied life in others' breath;
A thing beyond us, ev'n before our death.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 237.
- And what is Fame? the meanest have their day,
The greatest can but blaze, and pass away.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. vi, l. 46.
- 3
Fame's but a hollow echo.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World.
- 4
Fame is a bugle call
Blown past a crumbling wall.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Taps.
- 5
Fame is something which must be won; honor only something which must not be lost.
SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms on the Wisdom of Life.
- 6
Fame is the shadow of virtue. It will attend virtue even against her will. (Gloria umbra virtutis est, etiam invitam comitabitur.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxix, 13.
- Renown is the praise rendered to a good man by good men. (Claritas laus est a bonis bono red-dita.)
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cii, sec. 9.
- Fame is the perfume of heroic deeds.
SOCRATES.
- 7
There is this difference between renown and glory—the latter depends upon the judgments of the many, the former on the judgments of good men.
SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. cii, sec. 18.
- Fame has no necessary conjunction with praise;
it may exist without the breath of a word: it is a recognition of excellence which must be felt but need not be spoken. Even the envious must feel it: feel it, and hate it in silence.
MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston.
- Reputation being essentially contemporaneous, is always at the mercy of the Envious and the Ignorant. But Fame, whose very birth is posthumous, and which is only known to exist by the echo of its footsteps through congenial minds, can neither be increased nor diminished by any degree of wilfulness.
MRS. ANNA JAMESON, Memoirs and Essays: Washington Allston.
- 8
Fame is love disguised.
SHELLEY, An Exhortation.
- 9
And what is fame in life but half-disfame,
And counterchanged with darkness?
TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 463.
- 10
Fame is but a slow decay—

- Even this shall pass away.
THEODORE TILTON, Even This Shall Pass Away.
- 11
Fame is a public mistress, none enjoys,
But, more or less, his rival's peace destroys.
YOUNG, Epistles to Pope. Epis. i, l. 25.
- Fame is the shade of immortality,
And in itself a shadow. Soon as caught,
Contemn'd; it shrinks to nothing in the grasp.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 365.

- 12
Distinction is the consequence, never the object, of a great mind.
WASHINGTON ALLSTON, Aphorisms Written on Walls of His Studio.
- 13
Fame is like a river, that beareth up things light and swoln, and drowns things weighty and solid.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects.
- Fame, like water, bears up the lighter things,
And lets the weighty sink.
CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours. Act ii.
- 14
Herostratus lives that burnt the temple of
Diana; he is almost lost that built it.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5.
- The aspiring youth that fired the Ephesian dome
Outlives, in fame, the pious fool that rais'd it.
COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act
iii, sc. 1.

<sup>12</sup> Fame, impatient of extremes, decays Not more by envy than excess of praise.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 43.

<sup>13</sup> What is the fame of men compared to their happiness?

WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 3 Oct., 1762.

III—Fame: Love of Fame

<sup>14</sup> Passion for fame; a passion which is the instinct of all great souls.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on American Taxation.

<sup>15</sup> Folly loves the martyrdom of fame.

BYRON, On the Death of Sheridan, l. 68.

<sup>16</sup> Men the most infamous are fond of fame, And those who fear not guilt, yet start at shame.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Author, l. 233.

Man from his sphere eccentric starts astray; All hunt for fame, but most mistake the way.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 587.

<sup>17</sup> Upon the very books in which philosophers bid us scorn ambition, they inscribe their names. They seek publicity for themselves on the very page where they pour contempt upon publicity. (Ipsi illi philosophi etiam illis libellis, quos de contemnenda gloria scribunt, nomen suum inscribunt: in eo ipso, in quo prædicationem nobilitatemque despiciunt, prædicari de se ac nominari volunt.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 11, sec. 26.

Though they [philosophers] write contemptu gloriæ, yet as Hieron observes, they will put their names to their books.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. 2, mem. 3, subs. 14.

Even those who write against fame wish for the fame of having written well, and those who read their works desire the fame of having read them.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 150.

The hater of property and of government takes care to have his warranty-deed recorded, and the book written against Fame and learning has the author's name on the title-page.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vi, l. 637. (Pope, tr.)

If it is for fame that men do brave actions, they are only silly fellows after all.

R. L. STEVENSON, The English Admirals.

11 My advice to a young man seeking deathless fame would be to espouse an unpopular cause and devote his life to it.

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS, Wendell Phillips.

12 For not on downy plumes, nor under shade
Of canopy reposing, fame is won.

(Chè, seggendo in piuma,

In fama non si vien, nè sotto coltre.)

13 Fame then was cheap, and the first comer
sped;

And they have kept it since, by being dead.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada: Epilogue.

14 Nothing is less selfish than a desire of fame, since its only sure acquisition is by labouring for others.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Letter, 1853.

No true and permanent Fame can be founded except in labors which promote the happiness of mankind.

CHARLES SUMNER, Fame and Glory. Address at Amherst, 11 Aug., 1847.

15 Fame comes only when deserved, and then is as inevitable as destiny, for it is destiny.

Building nests in Fame's great temple, as in spouts the swallows build.

LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. St. 16.

16 Thus fame shall be achiev'd, renown on earth,
And what most merits fame in silence hid.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 694.

17 Nor Fame I slight, nor for her favours call;
She comes unlook'd for, if she comes at all.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 513.

Fame usually comes to those who are thinking about something else,—very rarely to those who say to themselves, "Go to, now, let us be a celebrated individual!" The struggle for fame, as such, commonly ends in notoriety;—that ladder is easy to climb, but it leads to the pillory which is crowded with fools who could not hold their tongues and rogues who could not hide their tricks.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12.

1 True fame will never be in Chance's gift.
(Non erunt honores umquam fortuiti muneris.)

SOLON. (AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiæ, l. 31.)

Renown's all hit or miss;

There's fortune even in fame.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 33.

2 Fame's loudest trump upon the ear of Time
Leaves but a dying echo; they alone
Are held in everlasting memory
Whose deeds partake of heaven.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Verses Spoken at Oxford upon the Installation of Lord Grenville, l. 92.

Wouldst thou be fam'd? have those high deeds
in view,

Brave men would act, though scandal should ensue.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire vii, l. 181.

3 His very depreciation of fame increased his fame.
(Ipsa dissimulatione famæ faman auxit.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 18.

V—Fame: Its Rewards

4 Let us now praise famous men.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xlv, 1.

"Let us now praise famous men"—

Men of little showing—
For their work continueth,
And their work continueth,
Broad and deep continueth,
Greater than their knowing!

KIPLING, A School Song.

5 Sure of the Fortieth spare Arm-chair
When gout and glory seat me there.

The steep where Fame's proud temple shines afar;

Ah! who can tell how many a soul sublime
Has felt the influence of malignant star,
And waged with Fortune an eternal war;
Check'd by the scoff of Pride, by Envy's frown,

And Poverty's unconquerable bar.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 1.

4 The best-concerted schemes men lay for

They scratch his name on the Abbey-stones.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Last Ride Together.

9 What is the end of Fame? 'tis but to fill
A certain portion of uncertain paper:
Some liken it to climbing up a hill,

Whose summit, like all hills, is lost in vapour:

For this men write, speak, preach, and heroes kill,

And bards burn what they call their "mid-night taper."

To have, when the original is dust,
A name, a wretched picture, and worse bust.

VIII—Fame: The Mouse-trap

8

I trust a good deal to common fame, as we all must. If a man has good corn, or wood, or boards, or pigs, to sell, or can make better chairs or knives, crucibles, or church organs, than anybody else, you will find a broad, hard-beaten road to his house, though it be in the woods.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Common Fame: Journals, 1855. Vol. viii, p. 528.

There has been much inquiry in the newspapers, recently [1911], as to whether Mr. Emerson wrote a sentence very like the above, which has been attributed to him in print. The Editors do not find the latter in his works; but there can be little doubt that it was a memory-quotation by some hearer, or, quite probably, correctly quoted from one of his lectures, the same image in different words.

EDWARD WALDO EMERSON AND WALDO EMERSON FORBES, Footnote, to preceding quotation, in Journals of Ralph Waldo Emerson.

If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mouse-trap, than his neighbor, though he builds his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.

Almost certainly a verbal variation of the preceding quotation, made by Emerson while delivering a lecture either at San Francisco or at Oakland, Calif., April 23, 26, 29, May 1, 17, and 18, 1871. This version, credited to Emerson, appears on page 38 of a little anthology called Borrowings, "Compiled by Ladies of the First Unitarian Church of Oakland, California," and published in December, 1889. This specific contribution was made by Mrs. Sarah S. B. Yule, who asserted (The Docket, Feb., 1912) that "to the best of my knowledge and belief, I copied it in my handbook from an address delivered long years ago, it being my custom to write everything there that I thought particularly good, if expressed in concise form; and when we were compiling Borrowings, I drew from this old handbook freely." Mrs. Yule died at Oakland, 1 Nov., 1916, at the age of 60. She undoubtedly told the essential truth about the origin of the quotation, and Emerson must therefore have used it in one of the six lectures he delivered at San Francisco and at Oakland. Since Mrs. Yule used the word "copied," it is probable that she copied it from a newspaper report of one of these lectures, but she might, of course, have heard it, since she was a girl of sixteen at the time, and her parents, being Unitarians, would naturally take her to hear Emerson. "Mouse-trap" was probably a happy thought which came to Emerson at the moment of delivery, as there is no record of his ever using it anywhere else. The compiler has had a search made through the files of such San Francisco papers of the period as still exist, but without result.

Mr. Emerson was in the habit of repeating on different occasions, what was nominally the same lecture, in reality often varied by the introduction of part of some other or of new matter.

J. E. CABOT, Letters and Social Aims: Introduction.

If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon or build a better mouse-trap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 166. (1911) Mr. Hubbard had previously used this quotation, in slightly different form, in The Philistine, crediting it to Emerson, and when his authorship of it was challenged, published the following in The Fra for May, 1911: "Mr. Hubbard, like all writers of epigrams, has attributed some of his good Class A product to other writers. For instance, he was once writing about the Roycrofters, and, having in mind the number of visitors who came to see us, he wrote: 'If a man can write a better book,' etc. . . . It was a little strain of his ego to let this thing go under his own stamp, so he saved his modesty and at the same time gave his epigram specific gravity, by attributing it to one Ralph Waldo Emerson." A somewhat similar explanation was made in The Philistine for July, 1912. In spite of which, it is certain that Hubbard did not originate the quotation, for the first number of The Philistine did not appear until June, 1895. There can be no doubt that its first appearance was in Borrowings, in December, 1889.

A man can't be hid. He may be a peddler in the mountains, but the world will find him out to make him a king of finance. He may be carrying cabbages from Long Island, when the world will demand that he run the railways of a continent. He may be a groceryman on a canal, when the country shall come to him and put him in his career of usefulness. So that there comes a time finally when all the green barrels of petroleum in the land suggest but two names and one great company.

DR. JOHN RANDOLPH PAXTON, Sermon: He Could Not Be Hid, 25 Aug., 1889. As reported in the New York Sun, 26 Aug., 1889. The similarity of this to the "mouse-trap" quotation has caused Dr. Paxton to be credited with the authorship of both. The Paxton quotation was an adaptation of Emerson's Common Fame, as given below.

If a man knows the law, people find it out, tho' he live in a pine shanty, and resort to him. And if a man can pipe or sing, so as to wrap the prisoned soul in an elysium; or can paint landscape, and convey into oils and ochres all enchantments of Spring and Autumn; or can liberate and intoxicate all people who hear him with delicious songs and verses; it is certain that the secret cannot be kept: the first witness tells it to a second, and men go by fives and tens and fifties to his door.

EMERSON, Common Fame: Journals, 1855. Vol. viii, p. 528.

7 Farewell, my friends! farewell, my foes!
My peace with these, my love with those.
The bursting tears my heart declare;
Farewell, the bonnie banks of Ayr.

BURNS, The Banks of Ayr.

8 He turn'd him right and round about
Upon the Irish shore,
And gae his bridle reins a shake,
With Adieu, for evermore, My dear,—
And adieu for evermore!
BURNS, It Was a' for Our Rightfu' King.

Scott, under the impression that this stanza was part of an ancient ballad, used it both in Rokeby and in The Monastery.

9 Farewell! a word that must be, and hath been—

A sound which makes us linger;—yet—farewell!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 186.

Farewell!

For in that word, that fatal word—howe'er
We promise, hope, believe—there breathes despair.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 15.

Fare thee well! and if for ever,
Still for ever, fare thee well.

I only know we loved in vain;
I only feel—Farewell!—Farewell!

BYRON, Farewell! If Ever Fondest Prayer.

"Farewell!" into the lover's soul
You see Fate plunge the fatal iron.
All poets use it. It's the whole
Of Byron.

"I only feel—farewell!" said he;
And always fearful was the telling—
Lord Byron was eternally Farewelling.

3 Under water, famine; under snow, bread.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Referring to the comparative effect of snow and rain on crops.

4 Let it please thee to keep in order a moderate-sized farm, that thy garners may be full of fruits in their season.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 304.

Praise a great estate, but cultivate a small one. (Laudato ingentia rura, Exiguum colito.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 412. An old adage which Vergil echoes from Cato.

We all know how old farm folk especially delight in aphorisms of this kind, and in this respect, at all events, show much real wit.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. Lecture 37.

5 Let us seek bread with the plough. (Panem quæramus aratro.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 181.

6 Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit thereof; But in the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land, a sabbath for the Lord; thou shalt neither sow thy field nor prune thy vineyard. That which groweth of its own accord of thy harvest thou shalt not reap, neither gather the grapes of thy vine undressed: for it is a year of rest unto the land.

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxv, 3-5.

7 When the land is cultivated entirely by the spade, and no horses are kept, a cow is kept for every three acres of land.

JOHN STUART MILL, Political Economy. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 5. Referring to peasant-farming in Flanders.

Three acres and a cow.

Usually attributed to JESSE COLLINGS, a member of Parliament who carried the "small holdings amendment" against Lord Salisbury's government in 1886.

Ten acres and a mule.

A phrase originating in America in 1862, indicating what a slave expected to receive when he was emancipated.

11 Look at your corn in May,
And you'll come weeping away;
Look at the same in June,
And you'll come home to another tune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12 Ill husbandry braggeth to go with the best;
Good husbandry baggeth up gold in his chest.
Ill husbandry lieth in prison for debt;
Good husbandry spieth where profit to get.

THOMAS TUSSER, Hundreth Good Pointes of Husbandrie. Ch. 52.

13 I believe the first receipt to farm well is to be rich.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to John Wishaw, 13 April, 1818.

He was a very inferior farmer when he first began, . . . and he is now fast rising from affluence to poverty.

MARK TWAIN, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Farm.

14 Farming is not really a business; it is an occupation.

W. E. WOODWARD, Money for Tomorrow, p. 177.

II—Farming: Its Dignity

15 The agricultural population produces the bravest men, the most valiant soldiers, and a class of citizens the least given of all to evil designs.

CATO. (PLINY THE ELDER, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xviii, sec. 26.)

16 Far back in the ages,
The plough with wreaths was crowned;

The hands of kings and sages
Entwined the chaplet round.

BRYANT, Ode for an Agricultural Celebration.

17 Of all occupations from which gain is secured, there is none better than agriculture, nothing more productive, nothing sweeter, nothing more worthy of a free man. (Omnium autem rerum, ex quibus aliquid acquiritur, nihil est agri cultura melius, nihil uberius, nihil dulcius, nihil homine libero dignius.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 42.

1
The first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

The glory of the farmer is that, in the division of labors, it is his part to create. All trade rests at last on his primitive activity.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

A Plowman on his legs is higher than a Gentleman on his Knees.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1746.

3
Agriculture is the foundation of manufactures; since the productions of nature are the materials of art.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 2.

4
Not the Atlantic sweeps a flood
Potent as the ploughman's blood.
He, his horse, his ploughshare, these
Are the only verities.

LOUIS GOLDING, Ploughman at the Plough.

5
A time there was, ere England's griefs began,
When every rood of ground maintain'd its man;

For him light Labour spread her wholesome store,
Just gave what life requir'd, but gave no more:

His best companions, innocence and health;
And his best riches, ignorance of wealth.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 57.

But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
When once destroy'd, can never be supplied.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 55.

6
A peasant may believe as much
As a great clerk, and reach the highest stature.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Temple: Faith.

No one, after the priest, approaches nearer the divinity than the peasant.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Peasant. No. 89.

7
Ye rigid Ploughmen! bear in mind
Your labour is for future hours.

Advance! spare not! nor look behind!
Plough deep and straight with all your powers!

RICHARD HENGIST HORNE, The Plough.

To plow is to pray—to plant is to prophesy, and the harvest answers and fulfills.

R. G. INGERSOLL, About Farming in Illinois.

9
Those who labor in the earth are the chosen people of God, if He ever had a chosen people, whose breasts He has made His peculiar deposit for substantial and genuine virtue.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. ii, p. 229.

Whenever there are in any country uncultivated lands and unemployed poor it is clear that the laws of property have been so far extended as to violate natural right. The earth is given as a common stock for men to labor and live on. . . . The small landowners are the most precious part of the State.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xix, p. 17.

10
The first and most respectable of all the arts is agriculture. (Le premier et le plus respectable de tous les arts est l'agriculture.)

ROUSSEAU, Emile. Bk. iii.

Fair Queen of arts! from Heaven itself who came.
JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto ii, st. 19. Referring to agriculture.

11
O peasant, thou tillest the fields and fertilizest them, and sowest them. Thou makest the wheat to rise from the earth; through thee the "barren" is converted into grain; thou nourishest man, who is flesh. It is thanks to thy effort that we live here below. Glory to thee, O peasant!

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 31.

Let me be no assistant for a state,
But keep a farm and carters.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 166.

13
And he gave it for his opinion . . . that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Brobdingnag.

In ancient times the sacred plough employed
The kings and awful fathers of mankind;
And some, with whom compared your insect-tribes

Are but the beings of a summer's day,
Have held the scale of empire, ruled the storm

Of mighty war; then, with victorious hand,
Disdaining little delicacies, seized
The plough, and greatly independent, scorned
All the vile stores corruption can bestow.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 58.

15
Let us never forget that the cultivation of the earth is the most important labor of man.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Remarks on Agriculture, Boston, 13 Jan., 1840.

When tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of human civilization.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Remarks on Agriculture, Boston, 13 Jan., 1840.

16
Give fools their gold, and knaves their power;

Let fortune's bubbles rise and fall;
Who sows a field, or trains a flower,
Or plants a tree, is more than all.

WHITTIER, A Song of Harvest.

1 He who sows the ground with care and diligence acquires a greater stock of religious merit than he could gain by the repetition of ten thousand prayers.

And on the summer winds are rolled
Its waves of emerald and gold.

W. H. BURLEIGH, The Harvest Call.

4 Drop a grain of California gold into the ground, and there it will lie unchanged until the end of time; . . . drop a grain of our blessed gold into the ground and lo! a mystery.

EDWARD EVERETT, Address on Agriculture, Boston, Oct., 1855. Referring to wheat.

5 And farmers fatten most when famine reigns.

SAMUEL GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto ii, l. 64.

6 Oft did the harvest to their sickle yield:

Their furrow oft the stubborn glebe has broke:

How jocund did they drive their team a-field!
How bow'd the woods beneath their sturdy stroke!

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 25.

7 Tradition said he feather'd his nest
Through an Agricultural Interest

In the Golden Age of farming;

When golden eggs were laid by the geese,
And Colchian sheep wore a golden fleece,
And golden pippins—the sterling kind

Of Hesperus—now so hard to find—
Made Horticulture charming!

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Pedigree.

8 Happy the man who, far from cares of business,

Like the primitive race of mortals,
Works his ancestral acres with his oxen.
(Beatus ille qui procul negotiis,
Ut prisca gens mortalium,
Paterna rura bobus exercet suis.)

HORACE, Epodes. Epode ii, l. 1.

9 The life of the husbandman,—a life fed by the bounty of earth and sweetened by the airs of heaven.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Husbandman's Life.

10 Earth is here so kind, that just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, A Land of Plenty. Referring to Australia.

There is nothing grateful but the earth; you cannot do too much for it: it will continue to repay tenfold the pains and labour bestowed upon it.

LORD RAVENSWORTH. (Bewick, Life.)

11 Well may we labour, still to dress

This garden, still to tend plant, herb, and flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 205.

12 'Tis sweet to spend one's time in the cultivation of the fields. (Tempus in agrorum cultu consumere dulce est.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 69.

13 Here Ceres' gifts in waving prospect stand,
And nodding tempt the joyful reaper's hand.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 39.

14 Let your strong oxen plough up the rich soil of the earth, from the earliest months of the year. (Pingue solun primis extemplo a mensibus anni Fortes invertant tauri.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 63.

Plough deep while sluggards sleep.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

15 Work returns to the husbandmen, moving in a circle, as the year rolls itself round in its former track. (Redit agricolis labor actus in orbem, Atque in se sua per vestigia volvitur annus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 401.

O how happy beyond measure would be the husbandmen if they knew their own good fortune. (O fortunatos nimium, sua si bona norint, Agricolas!)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 458.

O happy life! if that their good
The husbandmen but understood!

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides: The Country Life. Adapting Vergil.

16 He [the husbandman] equalled the riches of kings in the happiness of his mind; and returning home, in the late evening, loaded his board with feasts unbought. (Regum æquabat opes animis; seraque revertens Nocte domum, dapibus mensas onerabat inemptis.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 132.

He brings out dainties unbought. (Dapes inemptas adparet.)

HORACE, Epodes. No. ii, l. 48.

1
Heap high the farmer's wintry hoard!
Heap high the golden corn!
No richer gift has Autumn poured
From out her lavish horn!
WHITTIER, The Corn-Song.

IV—Farming: Its Penalties

2
Husbandry is not governed by judgment and labor, but by the most uncertain of things, winds and tempests.

CICERO, In Verram. No. iii, sec. 98.
The diligent farmer plants trees of which he himself will never see the fruit. (Arbores seret diligens agricola, quarum aspiciet bacam ipse numquam.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, sec. 14.

3
How can he get wisdom that holdeth the plough, and that glorieth in the goad, that driveth oxen, and is occupied in their labours, and whose talk is of bullocks?

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 25.

4
All taxes must, at last, fall upon agriculture.
EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 8.

5
A man's soul may be buried and perish under a dunghheap or in a furrow of the field, just as well as under a pile of money.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 1 June, 1841.

6
They [the farmers] say it is too hard to give fifty bushels of corn (an acre of corn) for a pair of boots, simply to satisfy tariff monopolists. They are down on railroads and rings, and conspiracies, and monopolies, and treason against the general welfare.

WILLIAM HERNDON. (Illinois State Register, 19 Feb., 1873.)

The farmer is endeavoring to solve the problem of a livelihood by a formula more complicated than the problem itself. To get his shoestrings he speculates in herds of cattle. With consummate skill he has set his trap with a hair spring to catch comfort and independence, and then, as he turned away, got his own leg into it. This is the reason he is poor.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

Slave of the wheel of labor, what to him
Are Plato and the swing of Pleiades?

EDWIN MARKHAM, The Man With the Hoe.
Serving the wheels or guiding straight the plow
Leaves little thought of frankincense and nard.
SCUDDER MIDDLETON, Jezebel.

8
No one hates his job so heartily as a farmer.

H. L. MENCKEN, What Is Going on in the World. (American Mercury, Nov., 1933, p. 259.)

9
The pious farmer, who ne'er misses pray'rs,
With patience suffers unexpected rain;

He blesses Heav'n for what its bounty spares,
And sees, resign'd, a crop of blighted grain.
But, spite of sermons, farmers would blaspheme

If a star fell to set their thatch in flame.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, The Farmer.

10
Where grows?—where grows it not? If vain
our toil,

We ought to blame the culture, not the soil.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 13.

11
He that counts all costs will never put plough
in the earth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

12
The peasant loves nothing and nobody, except for the use he can make of him.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 2.

The peasant is a sullen payer, like the soil he tills.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 8.

The countryman is too much of a child not to be a liar.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: The Country, The Peasant. No. 22.

13
Farming is a most senseless pursuit, a mere laboring in a circle. You sow that you may reap, and then you reap that you may sow.
Nothing ever comes of it.

STOBÆUS, Florilegium. Pt. xxxviii, l. 30.

14
God did not will that the way of cultivation should be easy. (Pater ipse colendi Haud facilem esse viam colendi.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 121.

E'en in mid-harvest, while the jocund swain
Plucked from the brittle stalk the golden grain,
Oft have I seen the war of winds contend,
And prone on earth th' infuriate storm descend,
Waste far and wide, and by the roots upturn,
The heavy harvest sweep through ether borne,
As the light straw and rapid stubble fly
In darkening whirlwinds round the wintry sky.

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 351. (Sotheby, tr.)

15 Blessed be agriculture! if one does not have too much of it.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, My Summer in a Garden: Preliminary.

Fate leads the willing but drives the stubborn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1508.

Fate leads him who follows it, and drags him who resists.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Camillus. Quoted by Montaigne, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 38.

<sup>17</sup> Whatever limits us, we call Fate. . . . The limitations refine as the soul purifies, but the ring of necessity is always perched at the top.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

'Tis weak and vicious people who cast the blame on Fate.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>18</sup> Fate is nothing but the deeds committed in a prior state of existence.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. Quoted as a Hindoo proverb.

Fate, then, is a name for facts not yet passed under the fire of thought. . . . Fate is unpenetrated causes.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>19</sup> Stranger! may fate a milder aspect show,
And spin thy future with a whiter clue!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xx, l. 249. (Pope, tr.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. v, l. 709.

The Fates will find a way. (Fata viam invenient.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 113.

<sup>5</sup> Fate is the endless chain of causation, whereby things are; the reason or formula by which the world goes on.

ZENO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, 149.)

II—Fate: Its Power

<sup>6</sup> Things are where things are, and, as fate has willed,

So shall they be fulfilled.

(Ἔστι δ' ὅπῃ νῦν ἔστι· τελεῖται δ' ἐς τὸ πεπωμένον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 67. (Browning, tr.)

As the old hermit of Prague, that never saw pen and ink, very wittily said to a niece of King Gorboduc, "That that is is"

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 14.

The "hermit of Prague" was perhaps Jerome, the hermit of Camaldoli, but more probably an invention of Shakespeare.

<sup>7</sup> The bow is bent, the arrow flies,
The wingèd shaft of fate.

IRA ALDRIDGE, On William Tell. St. 12.

Fate has carried me

'Mid the thick arrows: I will keep my stand—
Not shrink and let the shaft pass by my breast
To pierce another.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii.

CHRYSIPIUS, De Fato. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 149.)

<sup>9</sup> Fate steals along with silent tread,
Found off'nest in what least we dread;
Frowns in the storm with angry brow,
But in the sunshine strikes the blow.

COWPER, A Fable: Moral.

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis fate that flings the dice, and as she flings

Of kings makes peasants, and of peasants kings.

DRYDEN, Jupiter Cannot Alter the Decrees of Fate.

Eternal Deities.

Who rule the World with absolute decrees,
And write whatever Time shall bring to pass
With pens of adamant on plates of brass.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. i, l. 470.

<sup>11</sup> If we are related we shall meet.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

And two shall walk some narrow way of life, . . .
And yet, with wistful eyes that never meet, . . .
They seek each other all their weary days
And die unsatisfied—and this is Fate!

SUSAN MARR SPALDING, Fate.

<sup>12</sup> See how the Fates their gifts allot,
For A is happy—B is not.

Yet B is worthy, I dare say,
Of more prosperity than A.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

<sup>13</sup> Fate holds the strings, and men like children move

But as they're led; success is from above.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>14</sup> Let bounteous Fate your spindles full Fill, and wind up with whitest wool.

ROBERT HERRICK, An Epithalamie.

And turn the adamantine spindle round,
On which the fate of gods and men is wound.

MILTON, Arcades, l. 66.

<sup>15</sup> Jove lifts the golden balances, that show
The fates of mortal men, and things below.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 271. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>16</sup> The thousand strands of the web of fate are so wildly, so strangely entangled . . . that if a man searches into it, he sees right and the bloodiest wrong become as one.

HENRIK IBSEN, Brand. Act iv.

The outward wayward life we see,
The hidden springs we may not know. . . .
It is not ours to separate
The tangled skein of will and fate.

J. G. WHITTIER, Snow-Bound, l. 565.

<sup>17</sup> Three were the fates—gaunt Poverty that chains,

Gray Drudgery that grinds the hope away,
And gaping Ignorance that starves the soul.

EDWIN MARKHAM, Young Lincoln.

Swift-limbed they move with even pace,
Together, these immortal three;

These three, that never quit the chase
Wherever souls of mortals be.

ROBERT BURNS WILSON, The Immortal Three.
[Death, Memory, Remorse.]

<sup>18</sup> It lies not in our power to love or hate,
For will in us is over-ruled by fate.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad 1. (1598)

Oh no! 'tis only Destiny or Fate
Fashions our wills to either love or hate.
RICHARD LOVELACE, Dialogue on a Lost Heart.
(1649)

All the great things of life are swiftly done,
Creation, death, and love the double gate.
However much we dawdle in the sun
We have to hurry at the touch of Fate.
JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. ii.

4
The fates are not quite obdurate.
They have a grim, sardonic way
Of granting men who supplicate
The things they wanted—yesterday!
ROSSELLE MERCIER MONTGOMERY, The Fates.

5
Fate sits on these dark battlements, and frowns;
And as the portals open to receive me,
Her voice, in sullen echoes, through the courts,
Tells of a nameless deed.

Let those deplore their doom,
Whose hope still grovels in this dark sojourn:
But lofty souls, who look beyond the tomb,
Can smile at Fate, and wonder how they mourn.
JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 226.

16
Here's a sigh to those who love me,
And a smile to those who hate;
And, whatever sky's above me,
Here's a heart for every fate.
BYRON, To Thomas Moore. St. 2.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate.
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

17
To bear is to conquer our fate.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lines Written on Visiting
a Scene in Argyleshire, l. 36.

18
'Tis writ on Paradise's gate,
"Woe to the dupe that yields to Fate!"
HAfiz. (EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims:
Persian Poetry.)

19
Arise, O Soul, and gird thee up anew, Though the black camel Death kneel at thy gate;
No beggar thou that thou for alms shouldst
sue;
Be the proud captain still of thine own fate.
JAMES B. KENYON, The Black Camel.

20
Lord, make my childish soul stand straight
To meet the kindly stranger, Fate;
Shake hands with elder brother, Doom,
Nor bawl, nor scurry from the room.
WILLIAM LAIRD, A Prayer.

- 1 All are architects of Fate,
Working in these walls of Time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme.
LONGFELLOW, The Builders. St. 1.
- 2 Necessity and Chance
Approach not me, and what I will is Fate.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 172.
- 3 The glory and the glow
Of the world's loveliness have passed away;
And Fate hath little to inflict today,
And nothing to bestow.
W. M. PRAED, Stanzas.
- 4 My fate cries out,
And makes each petty artery in this body
As hardy as the Nemean lion's nerve.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 81.
- 5 Men at some time are masters of their fates.
SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 139.
- I am the mistress of my fate.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1069.
- We are, when we will it, masters of our own fate.
(On est, quand on veut, maître de son sort.)
FERRIER, Adraste.
- It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.
W. E. HENLEY, Invictus.
- For man is man and master of his fate.
TENNYSON, The Marriage of Geraint, l. 355.
- 6 But, O vain boast! Who can control his fate?
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 264.

MARGARET TURNBULL, Alabaster Lamps, p. 300.
- 16 Father!—to God himself we cannot give
A holier name.
WORDSWORTH, The Borderers. Act i. Also Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 21.

II—Fathers and Sons

See also Son

- 17 'Tis said that Donna Julia's grandmamma
Produced her Don more heirs at love than law.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 58.
- 18 Yet in my lineaments they trace
Some features of my father's face.
BYRON, Parisina. St. 13, l. 63.
- Some time before his death, he had stamped his likeness upon a little boy.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34.
- Ask the mother if the child be like his father.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 818.
- 19 I'll meet the raging of the skies,
But not an angry father.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Lord Ullin's Daughter.
- 20 As fathers commonly go, it is seldom a misfortune to be fatherless; and considering the general run of sons, as seldom a misfortune to be childless.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 July, 1751.
- Few fathers care much for their sons, or at least, most of them care more for their money.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 May, 1752.
- 21 A little child, a limber elf,
Singing, dancing to itself, . . .
Makes such a vision to the sight
As fills a father's eyes with light.
S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. Pt. ii, l. 656.
- 22 One father is enough to govern one hundred sons, but not a hundred sons one father.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 23 It's a wise child that knows its own father.
(Οὐ γὰρ πῶς τις ἐὼν γόνον αὐτοῦ ἀνέγνω.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 216.

No one knows his own father, but all of us have a conjecture or a belief. (Αὐτὸν γὰρ οὐδεὶς οἶδ' ὅτου ποτ' ἐγένετο, ἀλλ' ὑπονοοῦμεν πάντες ἢ πιστεύομεν.)

MENANDER, The Carthaginian. Frag. 261.

It is a wise father that knows his own child.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 80.

The night my father got me
His mind was not on me;
He did not plague his fancy
To muse if I should be
The son you see.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Last Poems. No. xiv.

I wish either my father or my mother, or indeed both of them, as they were in duty both equally bound to it, had minded what they were about when they begot me.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 1.

2
The regal and parental tyrant differ only in the extent of their dominions, and the number of their slaves.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 148.

3
The father to the bough, the son to the plough.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Perambulation of Kent, 497. (1576)

4
Like father, like son: every good tree maketh good fruits.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Pt. iii.

Thou art thy father's own son.

WALKER, Paræmologia, 30. (1672)

He that loves the tree loves the branch.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5
Dear Child, 'tis your poor lot to be
My little Son;

I'm glad, though I am old, you see,—

While you are One.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Rhyme of One.

6
It behooves a father to be blameless, if he expects his son to be more blameless than he was himself. (Probum patrem esse oportet qui gnatum suum Esse probiorem quam ipsus fuerit postulet.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 438. (Act i, sc. 5.)

7
And still tomorrow's wiser than today.

We think our fathers fools, so wise we grow;

Our wiser sons, no doubt, will think us so.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 237.

We admire our fathers quite too much. It shows that we have no energy in ourselves, when we rate it so prodigiously high. Rather let us shame the fathers by superior virtue in the sons.

EMERSON, Journal, 1861.

The commonest axiom of history is that every generation revolts against its fathers and makes friends with its grandfathers.

LEWIS MUMFORD, The Brown Decades.

While we criticise the fathers for being narrow, we should not forget that they were also deep. We are inclined to be so broad that people can see through us most any place.

WILLIAM HIRAM FOULKES, Sermon.

8
A wise son maketh a glad father.

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 1.

9
Raw dads make fat lads.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10
The fundamental defect of fathers is that they want their children to be a credit to them.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 194.

11
It is not flesh and blood but the heart which makes us fathers and sons. (Nicht Fleisch und Blut; das Herz macht uns zu Vätern und Söhnen.)

SCHILLER, Die Räuber. Act i, sc. 1.

12
We are all bastards;
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father, was I know not where
When I was stamp'd; some coiner with his tools

Made me a counterfeit.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 2.

13
Fathers that wear rags

Do make their children blind;

But fathers that bear bags

Shall see their children kind.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 48.

14
To you your father should be as a god;
One that composed your beauties, yea, and one

To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted and within his power
To leave the figure or disfigure it.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act i, sc. 1, l. 47.

15
Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy of the father, eye, nose, lip,
The trick of's frown, his forehead, nay, the valley,
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek, his smiles;
The very mould and frame of hand, nail, finger.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 97.

16
'Tis happy for him that his father was born before him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

17
A dead father's counsel, a wise son heedeth.

TEGNER, Fridthjof's Saga. Canto viii.

18
He who has been in the habit of lying to or deceiving his father, or who will dare to do so, will be all the more daring in attempting the same with others. (Qui mentiri aut fallere insuerit patrem, aut Audebit, tanto magis audebit ceteros.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 55. (Act i, sc. 1.)

This is the duty of a father, to accustom his son to act rightly rather of his own accord than from unnatural fear. (Hoc patrium est, potius consuefacere filium Sua sponte recte facere, quam alieno metu.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 74. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Whom should he bear with if not with his own father? (Quem ferret, si parentem non ferret suum?)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 202.

What harsh judges fathers are to all young men! (Quam iniqui sunt patres in omnibus adulescentis iudices!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 213.

What unjust judges fathers are, when in regard to us they hold

That even in our boyish days we ought in conduct to be old,

Nor taste at all the very things that youth and only youth requires;

They rule us by their present wants, not by their past long-lost desires.

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 213. (F. W. Ricord, tr.)

O dearest, dearest boy! my heart
For better lore would seldom yearn,
Could I but teach the hundredth part
Of what from thee I learn.

WORDSWORTH, Anecdote for Fathers.

In deep and awful channel runs

This sympathy of Sire and Sons.

WORDSWORTH, The White Doe of Rylstone.
Canto ii, l. 469.

The booby father craves a booby son,
And by heaven's blessing thinks himself undone.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 165.

III—Father of His Country

Free Rome hailed Cicero as the parent, as the father of his country. (Roma parentem, Roma patrem patriæ Ciceronem libera dixit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 243. This title was bestowed upon Cicero for his services in unmasking the conspiracy of Catiline, 64 B.C.

The title, "Pater Patriæ," was also offered to Marius, who refused it. Julius and Augustus were also so called. So was Cosimo de' Medici. The title was conferred upon Peter the Great by the Russian Senate in 1721. (Post-Boy, 28 Dec., 1721.) Frequently applied to George Washington. (q.v.)

There are many different voices and languages; but there is but one voice of the peoples when you are declared to be the true "Father of your country." (Vox diversa so-nat: populorum est vox tamen una, Cum verus Patriæ diceris esse Pater.)

MARTIAL, De Spectaculis, iii, 11.

Parent of his country. (Parens patriæ.)

PLINY THE ELDER, History. Bk. vii. Referring to Cicero.

To safeguard the citizens is the greatest (virtue) of a father of his country. (Servare cives major est [virtus] patriæ patri.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 444.

He pleased the ladies round him,—with manners soft and bland;

With reason good, they named him,—the father of his land.

W. M. THACKERAY, The King of Brentford.
(After Béranger.)

FATNESS

Nobody loves a fat man.

MACLYN ARBUCKLE, as Sheriff "Slim" Hoover, in The Round-Up.

As fat as hens i' th' forehead.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act i, sc. 2.

Fat! ay, fat as a hen in the forehead.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii.

As fat as a fool.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 118. (1579)

He shall be fat as a pork hog.

As fat as a pig. (Gras comme un cochon.)

JOHN COTGRAVE, Wit's Interpreter. (1611)

He will grow not only to be very large, but as fat as a hog.

IZAACK WALTON, Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 10.

Fat as butter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 283. (1678)

I shall grow as fat as a porpoise.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

Gross feeders, great sleepers;

Great sleepers, fat bodies;

Fat bodies, lean brains!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Bk. ii, sc. 1.

Great eaters and great sleepers are incapable of anything else that is great. (Les grands mangeurs et les grands dormeurs sont incapables de rien faire de grand.)

HENRY IV of France, Epigram.

Fat paunches have lean pates, and dainty bits
Make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 26.

A fat belly does not produce a fine sense. (Pinguis ventor non gignit sensum tenuem.)

ST. JEROME, De Viris Illustribus.

Fat heads, lean brains. (Capo grasso, cervello magro.)

UNKNOWN. An Italian proverb.

1 I am not much in fear of these fat, sleek fellows, but rather of those pale, thin ones.

JULIUS CÆSAR, referring to Anthony and Dolabella as the fat ones, and Brutus and Cassius as the thin ones. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Cæsar. Ch. 62, sec. 5.)

Let me have men about me that are fat;
Sleek-headed men and such as sleep o' nights:
Yond Cassius hath a lean and hungry look;
He thinks too much: such men are dangerous. . . .

Would he were fatter! But I fear him not:
Yet if my name were liable to fear,
I do not know the man I should avoid
So soon as that spare Cassius.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 192.

2 All the gruel is in the fire.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iii, st. 95. (c. 1374)

Or else . . . All your fat lie in the fire.

THOMAS BECON, Prayers, 277. (1559)

All the fat's in the fire.

JOHN MARSTON, What You Will. (1607)

The fat is in the fire.

BEN JONSON, Love's Welcome. (1633) In frequent use thereafter.

3 Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked.

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxxii, 15.

4 A man must take the fat with the lean; that's what he must make up his mind to, in this life.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 51.

5 I am resolved to grow fat and look young till forty, and then slip out of the world with the first wrinkle and the reputation of five-and-twenty.

DRYDEN, The Maiden Queen. Act iii, sc. 1.

Fat, fair, and forty was all the toast of the young men.

JOHN O'KEEFE, Irish Minnie. Act ii, sc. 3.

Fat, fair, and forty.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 7. The Prince Regent's description of what a wife should be.

6 Fat old women, fat and five-and-fifty.

JOHN FLETCHER, Women Pleased. Act ii, sc. 1.

A fat, fair, and fifty card-playing resident of the Crescent.

MRS. MELISINA TRENCH, Letter, 18 Feb., 1816.

7 I see no objection to stoutness—in moderation.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

8 The fat man knoweth not what the lean thinketh.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

9 You may see me fat and shining, . . . a hog from Epicurus' herd. (Me pinguem et nitidum . . . Epicuri de grege porcum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 4, l. 15.

The fattest hog in Epicurus' sty.

WILLIAM MASON, Heroic Epistle.

10 Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1784.) A parody of Henry Brooke's line, "Who rules o'er freemen should himself be free," from The Earl of Essex.

11 A light heart in a fat body ravishes not only the world, but the philosopher.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 19.

12 What she wants in up and down she hath it round about.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 346.

13 No gentleman ever weighs more than two hundred pounds.

THOMAS B. REED, when his statement of his own weight as 199 pounds was questioned. (ROBINSON, Life.)

14 Sweep on, you fat and greasy citizens!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 55.

15 He's fat, and scant of breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 298.

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iii, footnote.
And oftentimes excusing of a fault
Doth make the fault the worse by the excuse,
As patches set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 30.

1 If you would be stripped of your faults, leave far behind you the pattern of the faults. (Si velis vitiis exui, longe a vitiorum exemplis recedendum est.)

His faults lie open to the laws; let them,
Not you, correct him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 334.

So may he rest, his faults lie gently on him!

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 31.

The image of a wicked heinous fault
Lives in his eye.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 71.

4 The fault, dear Brutus, is not in our stars,
But in ourselves, that we are underlings.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 140.

5 Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it?
Why, every fault's condemn'd ere it be done;
Mine were the very cipher of a function,
To fine the faults whose fine stands in record,
And let go by the actor.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 37.

That we were all, as some would seem to be,
From our faults, as faults from seeming, free.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 40.

6 O, what a world of vile ill-favour'd faults
Looks handsome in three hundred pounds a year!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 32.

Faults that are rich are fair.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 13.

7 It hath pleased the devil drunkenness to give place to the devil wrath: one unperfectness shows me another, to make me frankly despise myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 297.

8 The fault unknown is as a thought unacted.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 527.

9 We cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 53.

We do not confess little faults except to insinuate that we have no great ones. (Nous n'avouons de petits défauts que pour persuader que nous n'en avons pas de grands.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 327.

II—Faults: Every Man Has His Faults

10 No one is born without faults; he is best who is beset by fewest. (Vitiis nemo sine nascitur; optimus ille est, Qui minimis urgetur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 68.

In vain you avoid one fault if you, in your depravity, turn aside after another. (Frustra vitium vitaveris illud, Si te alio pravum detorseris.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 54.

Then farewell, Horace; whom I hated so,
Not for thy faults, but mine.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 77.

11 If we had no faults, we should not take so much pleasure in remarking them in others. (Si nous n'avions point de défauts, nous ne prendrions pas tant de plaisir à en remarquer dans les autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 31.

Those, who twit others with their faults, should look at home. (Quia, qui alterum incusat probi, eum, ipsum se intueri oportet.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 58.

12 A man must have his faults. (Sed sibi quisque peccat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45.

13 All men make faults.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. xxxv.

14 The faults and follies of most men make their deaths a gain;
But thou also art a man, full of faults and follies.

MARTIN F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Tolerance.

III—Faults: Their Virtues

See also Vice and Virtue: The Two Natures; Virtues: Their Faults

15 Every man in his lifetime needs to thank his faults. . . . Has he a defect of temper that unfits him to live in society? Thereby he is driven to entertain himself alone and acquire habits of self-help; and thus, like the wounded oyster, he mends his shell with pearl.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

16 E'en his failings lean'd to Virtue's side.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 164.

All his faults are such that one loves him still the better for them.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i.

There are some faults so nearly allied to excellence that we can scarce weed out the vice without eradicating the virtue.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i.

AMIALE WEAKNESS, see under WEAKNESS.

1 Who mix'd reason with pleasure and wisdom with mirth;

If he had any faults he has left us in doubt.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 24.

2 His very faults smack of the raciness of his good qualities.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Sketch Book: John Bull. Of the Englishman.

3 Most of his faults brought their excuse with them.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets. Referring to Matthew Prior.

4 He abounds in sweet faults.

QUINTILIAN, Institutes of Oratory.

5 You, gods, will give us Some faults to make us men.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v, sc. 1, l. 32.

They say, best men are moulded out of faults; And, for the most, become much more the better For being a little bad.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc. 1, l. 444.

6 Countries, like people, are loved for their failings.

FRANCIS YEATS-BROWN, Lives of a Bengal Lancer, p. 45.

IV—Faults of Others

7 Every man has his faults; but we do not see the wallet on our own back. (Suus cuique attributus est error: sed non videmus manticæ quod in tergo.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. xxii, l. 20.

Not a soul is there who seeks to search into himself—not one! But the wallet of the person in front is kept carefully in view.

(Ut nemo in sese temptat descendere, nemo; Sed præcedenti spectatur mantica tergo!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 23.

Jupiter has loaded us with two wallets: the one, filled with our own faults, he has placed at our backs; the other, heavy with the faults of others, he has hung before.

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Fable x, l. 1.

Other men's faults are before our eyes; our own behind our backs. (Aliena vitia in oculis habemus; a tergo nostra sunt.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 28.

From our necks, when life's journey begins

Two sacks Jove the Father suspends,

The one holds our own proper sins,

The other the sins of our friends:

The first, man immediately throws

Out of sight, out of mind, at his back;

The last is so under his nose,

He sees every grain in the sack.

BULWER-LYTTON, Paraphrase of Phædrus.

8 It is the peculiar quality of a fool to perceive the faults of others, and to forget his own. (Est proprium stultitiæ aliorum vitia cernere, oblivisci suorum.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 30, sec. 74. See also JUDGMENT: THE MOTE AND THE BEAM.

9 Black detraction

Will find faults where they are not.

MASSINGER, The Guardian. Act i, sc. 2.

10 When that thy neighbor's faults thou wouldst arraign,

Think first upon thine own delinquencies.

MENANDER, Fabulæ Incertæ. Frag. 162.

11 I will chide no breather in the world but myself, against whom I know most faults.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 298.

12 All his faults observed,
Set in a note-book, learn'd, and conn'd by rote.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 97.

13 If he had been as you and you as he,
You would have slept like him.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 64.

Shame to him whose cruel striking
Kills for faults of his own liking!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 281.

14 Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 633.

15 A man sooner finds out his own foibles in a stranger than any other foibles.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 68.

Do you wish to find out a person's weak points?
Note the failings he has the quickest eye for in others.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

16 If you want a person's faults, go to those who love him. They will not tell you, but they know.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books, p. 159.

17 We would willingly have others perfect, and yet we amend not our own faults. We would have others severely corrected, and will not be corrected ourselves. The large liberty of others displeaseth us, and yet we will not have our own desires denied us. We will have others kept under by strict laws, but in no sort will ourselves be restrained. And thus it appeareth how seldom we weigh our neighbor in the same balance with ourselves.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 16, sec. 4.

1 But, by all thy nature's weakness,
Hidden faults and follies known,
Be thou, in rebuking evil,
Conscious of thine own.

WHITTIER, What the Voice Said. St. 15.

2 'Tis a meaner part of sense
To find a fault than taste an excellence.

JOHN WILMOT, An Epilogue, l. 6.

3 For as, by discipline of Time made wise,
We learn to tolerate the infirmities
And faults of others—gently as he may,
So with our own the mild Instructor deals,
Teaching us to forget them, or forgive.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 35.

4 We see Time's furrows on another's brow,
And Death entrench'd, preparing his assault;
How few themselves, in that just mirror, see!
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 627.

V—Faults in Women

5 Thy faults, my Lesbia, have such charm for
me,

So far in love of thee I've lost myself,
Wert thou a saint, I could not wish thee well,
Nor cease to worship thee, whate'er thy sins.
(Huc est mens deducta tua, mea Lesbia, culpa,
Atque ita se officio perdidit ipsa suo,
Ut jam nec bene velle queat tibi, si optima
fias,

Nec desistere amare, omnia si facias.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. lxxv.

6 Be to her virtues very kind,
Be to her faults a little blind.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An English Padlock, l. 78.

7 If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne'er be known.
For blushing cheeks by faults are bred,
And fears by pale white shown.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 2, l. 105.

8 For several virtues
Have I lik'd several women; never any
Was so full of soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,
And put it to the foil.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 42.

9 Is she not a wilderness of faults and follies?

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

VI—Faults: Faultlessness

10 Faultless to a fault.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book. Pt. ix, l. 1177.

11 The greatest of faults, I should say, is to be conscious of none.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Prophet*.

12 Thou hast no faults, or I no faults can spy;
Thou art all beauty, or all blindness I.

CHRISTOPHER CODRINGTON, Lines to Garth, On His Dispensary. (1696) Leigh Hunt states that this epigram was written by Lord Chesterfield in praise of David Mallet's Truth in Rhyme, but it is now generally attributed as above.

13 Men still had faults, and men will have them still;

He that hath none, and lives as angels do,
Must be an angel.

WENTWORTH DILLON, *Miscellanies: On Mr.
Dryden's Religio Laici*, l. 8.

14 It is well that there is no one without a fault,
for he would not have a friend in the world.

15 He has no fault except that he has no fault.
(Nihil peccat, nisi quod nihil peccat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. 9, epis. 26.

He is all fault who hath no fault at all.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 132.

16 He is lifeless that is faultless.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
The old saying is, "Lifeless, faultless."

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 10.

17 There's no such thing in Nature; and you'll draw

A faultless monster which the world ne'er saw.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, Essay on Poetry.

18 Faultily faultless, icily regular, splendidly null,

Dead perfection, no more.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 82.

Inspid as the queen upon a card.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 28.

At the best, my lord, she is a handsome picture,
And, that said, all is spoken.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

16 Fear may force a man to cast beyond the moon.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

17 You crystal break, for fear of breaking it: Careless and careful hands like faults commit. (Frangere dum metuis, franges crystallina; Peccant securæ nimum, sollicitæque manus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 111.

18 The thing in the world I am most afraid of is fear, and with good reason; that passion alone, in the trouble of it, exceeding all other accidents.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 17.

1 It is foolish to fear what cannot be avoided.
(Stultum est timere quod vitari non potest.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 682.

All fearfulness is folly.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 32.

2 Fear makes men ready to believe the worst.
(Ad deteriora credenda proni metu.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, iv, 3, 22.

It is good to fear the worst; the best will save itself.

DRAXE, Biblio. Schol. Instr., 65. (1633)

In grief we know the worst of what we feel,
But who can tell the end of what we fear?

HANNAH MORE, The Fatal Falsehood. Act iv.

To fear the worst oft cures the worse.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 76.

3 No fear is so ruinous and uncontrollable as panic fear. For other fears are groundless, but this fear is witless. (Nulli itaque tam perniciosi, tam inrevocabiles quam lymphatici metus sunt. Ceteri enim sine ratione, hi sine mente sunt.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xiii, sec. 9.

4 To fear the foe, since fear oppreseth strength,

Gives in your weakness strength unto your foe,

And so your follies fight against yourself.

Fear and be slain; no worse can come to fight:

And fight and die is death destroying death;
Where fearing dying pays death servile breath.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 180.

5 Fear will drive men to any extreme; and the fear inspired by a superior being is a mystery which cannot be reasoned away.

BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface.

6 Desponding Fear, of feeble fancies full,
Weak and unmanly, loosens every power.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 286.

7 Fearful when all was safe. (Omnia tuta timens.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 298.

8 The fear that kills.

WORDSWORTH, Resolution and Independence, l. 113.

IV—Fear: Unreasoning Fear

See also Imagination

9 The clouds dispell'd, the sky resum'd her light,
And Nature stood recover'd of her fright.

But fear, the last of ills, remain'd behind,
And horror heavy sat on ev'ry mind.

DRYDEN, Theodore and Honoria, l. 336.

10 The absent Danger greater still appears.
Less fears he who is near the thing he fears.
SAMUEL DANIEL, Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 1.

11 If I quake, what matters it what I quake at?
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

12 He returned with more fear of his shadow than true report of that he had in charge.

GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello. Vol. ii, p. 285.

He is afraid of his own shadow.

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie. Vol. v, l. 92. (1574)

13 He that is afraid of every starting grass may not walk in a meadow.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 192. (1590)

He that's afraid of every grass must not sleep in a meadow.

SAMUEL PALMER, Essays on Proverbs, p. 195.

He that is afraid of leaves goes not to the wood.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

He that feareth every bush must never go a-birding.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 354. (1580)

Or in the night, imagining some fear,

How easy is a bush supposed a bear.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.

Act v, sc. 1, l. 21. (1595)

14 The one permanent emotion of the inferior man is fear—fear of the unknown, the complex, the inexplicable. What he wants beyond everything else is safety.

H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 75.

15 The wounded body shrinks even from a gentle touch; an empty shadow fills the anxious with fear. (Membra reformidant mollem quoque saucia tactum; Vanaque sollicitis incutit umbra metum.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 7, l. 13.

What I am to fear, I know not—yet none the less I fear all things. (Quid timeam, ignoro—timeo tamen omnia.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. i, l. 71.

The least rustle of a feather brings dread upon the dove that thy talons, O hawk, have wounded.
(Terretur minimo pennæ stridore columba, Unguibus, accipiter, saucia facta tuis.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 1, l. 75.

16 Where truth cannot be determined, what is false is increased by fear. (Ubi explorari vera non possunt, falsa per metum augentur.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, iv, 10, 10.

17 Terror closes the ears of the mind. (Timor animi auribus officit.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 58, sec. 3.

18 The terror we fear is often empty, but nevertheless it causes real misery.

SCHILLER, Piccolomini. Act v, sc. 1, l. 105.

1 For I am sick and capable of fears, Oppress'd with wrongs, and therefore full of fears,

A widow, husbandless, subject to fears,
A woman, naturally born to fears.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 12.

2 Give me the daggers: the sleeping and the dead

Are but as pictures: 'tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted devil.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 53.

3 Extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But coward-like with trembling terror die.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 230.

Blind fear, that seeing reason leads, finds safer footing than blind reason stumbling without fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii,
sc. 2, l. 74.

4 Do you think I was born in a wood to be afraid of an owl?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. 1.

TACITUS, Annales. Bk. ii, sec. 24.

6 Horror itself in that fair scene looks gay,
And joy springs up e'en in the midst of fear.
(Bello in si bella vista anco è l'orrore,
E di mezzo la tema esce il diletto.)

TASSO, Gerusalemme. Bk. xx, st. 30.

7 My apprehensions come in crowds;
I dread the rustling of the grass;
The very shadows of the clouds
Have power to shake me as they pass:
I question things and do not find
One that will answer to my mind,
And all the world appears unkind.

WORDSWORTH, The Affliction of Margaret. St.
10.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 446.

15 We listened and looked sideways up!
Fear at my heart, as at a cup,
My life-blood seemed to sip!

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. iii.

Like one, that on a lonesome road
Doth walk in fear and dread,
And having once turned round, walks on,
And turns no more his head;
Because he knows a frightful fiend
Doth close behind him tread.

COLERIDGE, The Ancient Mariner. Pt. vi.

"I wants to make your flesh creep," replied the boy.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 8.

16 His frown was full of terror, and his voice
Shook the delinquent with such fits of awe
As left him not, till penitence had won
Lost favour back again, and clos'd the breach.

18 Distill'd

Almost to jelly with the act of fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 204.

Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 81.

19 Thou tremblest; and the whiteness in thy cheek

Is apter than thy tongue to tell thy errand.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 1, l. 68.

And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 136.

20 Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect,

Whole as the marble, founded as the rock,
As broad and general as the casing air:
But now I am cabin'd, cribb'd, confined,
bound in

To saucy doubts and fears.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 21.

I have almost forgot the taste of fears.

I have supp'd full with horrors;

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start me.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 13.

1 Sweating with guilty fear.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 740.

I am surprised with an uncouth fear:

A chilling sweat o'er-runs my trembling joints.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 211.

2 Truly, the souls of men are full of dread:
Ye cannot reason almost with a man

That looks not heavily and full of fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 39.

3 I have a faint cold fear thrills through my veins,

That almost freezes up the heat of life.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 15.

4 Fear

Stared in her eyes, and chalk'd her face.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 357.

5 My hair stood on end, and my voice stuck in my throat. (Steteruntque comæ, et vox faucibus hæsit.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 774; bk. iii, l. 48.

Fear came upon me, and trembling; . . . the hair of my flesh stood up.

Old Testament: Job, iv, 14, 15.

Anastasio having heard all this discourse his hair stood upright like porcupine's quills.

BOCCACCIO, Decameron. Day v, novel 8. (1358)

I could a tale unfold whose lightest word
Would harrow up thy soul, freeze thy young blood,

Make thy two eyes, like stars, start from their spheres,

Thy knotted and combined locks to part

And each particular hair to stand on end,

Like quills upon the fretful porpentine.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 15. (1600)

My fell of hair

Would at a dismal treatise rouse and stir
As life were in't.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 5, l. 11.

6 Fear shakes the pencil; Fancy loves excess;

Dark Ignorance is lavish of her shades:

And these the formidable picture draw.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 58.

FEAST and FESTIVAL

7 Some men are born to feast, and not to fight;
Whose sluggish minds, e'en in fair honour's field,

Still on their dinner turn—

Let such pot-boiling varlets stay at home,
And wield a flesh-hook rather than a sword.

JOANNA BAILLIE, Basil. Act i, sc. 1.

11 As much valour is to be found in feasting as in fighting, and some of our city captains and carpet knights will make this good, and prove it.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. i, mem. 2, subs. 2.

12 This feast is named the Carnival, which being Interpreted, implies "farewell to flesh";
So call'd, because, the name and thing agree-
ing,

Through Lent they live on fish both salt and fresh.

BYRON, Beppo. St. vi.

13 There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Belgium's capital had gather'd then
Her Beauty and her Chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21.

The music, and the banquet, and the wine—
The garlands, the rose odours, and the flowers—
The sparkling eyes, and flashing ornaments—
The white arms and the raven hair—the braids
And bracelets; swan-like bosoms, and the necklace,

An India in itself; yet dazzling not.

BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 51.

14 The promised feast became a feast of the Lapithæ.

CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. i, ch. 5.

The chief of the Lapithæ gave a feast to celebrate the wedding of Pirithous and Hippodamia, which ended in blows and "very great slaughter," owing to the fact that the Centaurs, who had mistakenly been invited, offered violence to the bride. (OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xii.)

6 There is no great banquet but some fares ill.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 The true essentials of a feast are only fun and feed.

O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatica. St. 11.

8 When mirth reigns throughout the town, and feasters about the house, sitting in order, listen to a minstrel; when the tables beside them are laden with bread and meat, and the wine-bearer draws sweet drink from the mixing-bowl and fills the cups; this I think in my heart to be the most delightful of all to men.

HOMER. (Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 316.)

It is said that when Homer recited these verses, they were so admired by the Greeks as to be called golden by them, and that even now at public sacrifices all the guests solemnly recite them before feasts and libations.

THOMAS TUSSER, Hundredth Good Pointes of Husbandrie. Ch. 34.

18 Late February days; and now, at last,
 Might you have thought that Winter's woe
 was past;

So fair the sky was and so soft the air.

WILLIAM MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise: February.

19 If foul-faced February keep true touch, . . .
 By night, by day, by little and by much,
 It fills the ditch with either black or white.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, Works, p. 257.

20 So, in a single night,

Fair February came,

Bidding my lips to sing

Or whisper their surprise,

With all the joys of spring

And morning in her eyes.

FRANCIS BRETT YOUNG, February.

FEELING

21 There are some feelings time cannot benumb.
 BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 19.

The keenest pangs the wretched find
Are rapture to the dreary void,
The leafless desert of the mind,
The waste of feelings unemployed.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 957.

1
Thought is deeper than all speech,
Feeling deeper than all thought.
CHRISTOPHER PEARSE CRANCH, Thought.

2
A nation with whom sentiment is nothing is on the way to cease to be a nation at all.
J. A. FROUDE, Oceana: The Premier.

3
The fine emotions whence our lives we mold
Lie in the earthly tumult dumb and cold.
(Die uns das Leben gaben, herrliche Gefühle, Erstarren in dem irdischen Gewühle.)
GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 1, l. 286.

4
I perfectly feel, even at my finger's end.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6.

5
If you wish me to weep, you must first feel grief. (Si vis me flere, dolendum est Primum ipsi tibi.)
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 102.

But, spite of all the criticising elves,
Those who would make us feel, must feel themselves.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 961.

6
Some are more strongly affected by the facts of human life; others by the beauty of earth and sky.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. Lecture 31.

7
There are moments in life, when the heart
is so full of emotion,
That if by chance it be shaken, or into its depths like a pebble

Drops some careless word, it overflows, and
its secret,

Spilt on the ground like water, can never be gathered together.

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish.
Pt. vi, l. 12.

8
Sentiment is intellectualized emotion, emotion precipitated, as it were, in pretty crystals
by the fancy.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Rousseau and the Sentimentalists.

9
If he comes beneath a heel,
He shall be crushed until he cannot feel,
Or, being callous, haply till he can.

Damn'd neuters, in their middle way of steering, Are neither fish, nor flesh, nor good red herring.

DRYDEN, Duke of Guise: Epilogue, l. 39.

III—Fish and Bait

<sup>15</sup> That fish will soon be caught that nibbles at every bait.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4342.

The fish adores the bait.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The tender nibbler would not touch the bait.

SHAKESPEARE [?], Passionate Pilgrim, l. 53.

<sup>16</sup> You must lose a fly to catch a trout.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

For you catch your next fish with a piece of the last.

O. W. HOLMES, Verses for After Dinner.

<sup>17</sup> Your bait of falsehood takes this carp of truth.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, Act ii, sc. 1, l. 63.

Bait the hook well; this fish will bite.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 114.

<sup>18</sup> A man may fish with the worm that hath eat of a king, and eat of the fish that hath fed of that worm.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 28.

<sup>19</sup> But fish not, with this melancholy bait, For this fool gudgeon, this opinion.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 1, l. 101.

1 Sweet innocent, the mother cried,
And started from her nook,
That horrid fly is put to hide
The sharpness of the hook.
ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, The Little Fish that Would Not Do as It Was Bid.

IV—Fish: Description

2 God quickened in the Sea and in the Rivers,
So many fishes of so many features,
That in the waters we may see all Creatures;
Even all that on the earth is to be found,
As if the world were in deep waters drowned.
DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Wk.
i, day 5.

3 Here when the labouring fish does at the foot arrive,
And finds that by his strength but vainly he doth strive;
His tail takes in his teeth, and bending like
a bow,
That's to the compass drawn, aloft himself
doth throw:
Then springing at his height, as doth a little wand,
That, bended end to end, and flirted from
the hand,
Far off itself doth cast, so does the salmon vault.
And if at first he fail, his second summer-saut
He instantly assays and from his nimble ring,
Still yarking never leaves, until himself he fling
Above the streamful top of the surrounded heap.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Poly-Olbion. Song vi, l. 45.

4 Now at the close of the soft summer's day,
Inclined upon the river's flowery side,
I pause to see the sportive fishes play,
And cut with finny oars the sparkling tide.
THOMAS FOSTER, Perennial Calendar.

5 O scaly, slippery, wet, swift, staring wights,
What is 't ye do? what life lead? eh, dull goggles?

How do you vary your vile days and nights?
How pass your Sundays?

LEIGH HUNT, The Fish, the Man, and the Spirit.

6 Ye monsters of the bubbling deep,
Your Maker's praises spout;
Up from the sands ye codlings peep,
And wag your tails about.

COTTON MATHER, Hymn.

7 Our plenteous streams a various race supply,
The bright-eyed perch with fins of Tyrian dye,

The silver eel, in shining volumes roll'd,
The yellow carp, in scales bedropp'd with
gold,

Swift trouts, diversifed with crimson stains,
And pikes, the tyrants of the wat'ry plains.
POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 141.

'Tis true, no turbots dignify my boards.
But gudgeons, flounders, what my Thames affords.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii,
sat. 2, l. 141.

V—Fishing: Apothegms

8 There's no taking trout with dry breeches.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71.

9 Still he fishes that catches one.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4262.

The end of fishing is not angling, but catching.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4497.

The end of fishing is catching.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 396. (1580)

10 He has well fished and caught a frog.
THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.
(1546)

The man that weds for greedy wealth,
He goes a fishing fair,
But often times he gets a frog,
Or very little share.
UNKNOWN, Pepysian Garland, 318. (1629)

11 They may the better fish in the water when it is troubled.
RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicles, i, 283. (1569)

Best fishing in troubled waters.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xli.
(1591)

For trouts are tickled best in muddy water.
SAMUEL BUTLER, On a Hypocritical Nonconformist. St. 4.

To fish in troubled waters.
MATTHEW HENRY, Commentaries. Psalm lx.

12 See how he throws his baited lines about,
And plays his men as anglers play their trout.
O. W. HOLMES, The Banker's Secret.

13 Canst thou draw out leviathan with a hook?
Old Testament: Job, xli, 1.

For angling-rod he took a sturdy oak;
For line, a cable that in storm ne'er broke; . . .
The hook was baited with a dragon's tail,—
And then on rock he stood to bob for whale.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Britannia Triumphans, p. 16. (1637) This quatrain appeared in The Mock Romance, a rhapsody attached to The Loves of Hero and Leander (London, 1677), without ascription of authorship. In CHALMERS, British Poets, it was ascribed to William King, under the title, Upon a Giant's Angling.

14 Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing.

They say unto him, We also go with thee.

New Testament: John, xxi, 3. Used as motto on the title page of the first edition of Walton's Compleat Angler.

The apostolic occupation of trafficking in fish.

SYDNEY SMITH, Third Letter to Archdeacon Singleton.

The first men that our Saviour dear
Did choose to wait upon Him here,
Blest fishers were; and fish the last
Food was, that He on earth did taste:
I therefore strive to follow those,
Whom He to follow Him hath chose.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler: The Angler's Song.

1 Can the fish love the fisherman? (Piscatorem piscis amare potest?)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 63, l. 5.

2 He who holds the hook is aware in what waters many fish are swimming. (Qui sustinet hamos, Novit, quæ multo pisce natentur aquæ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 47.

Ever let your hook be hanging; where you least believe it, there will be a fish in the stream. (Semper tibi pendeat hamus: Quo minime credas gurgite, piscis erit.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 425.

3 Never a fisherman need there be
If fishes could hear as well as see.

UNKNOWN. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, ii, 94.)

4 When the wind is in the east,
Then the fishes bite the least;
When the wind is in the west,
Then the fishes bite the best;
When the wind is in the north,
Then the fishes do come forth;
When the wind is in the south,
It blows the bait in the fish's mouth.

UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (J. O. HALLIWELL, Popular Rhymes.)

I shall stay him no longer than to wish . . . that if he be an honest angler, the east wind may never blow when he goes a fishing.

IZAACK WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader.

VI—Fishing: Its Delights

5 A rod twelve feet long and a ring of wire,
A winder and barrel, will help thy desire
In killing a Pike; but the forked stick,
With a slit and a bladder,—and that other fine trick,

Which our artists call snap, with a goose or a duck,—

Will kill two for one, if you have any luck.

THOMAS BARKER, The Art of Angling.

6 Of all the world's enjoyments
That ever valued were,

There's none of our employments
With fishing can compare.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy: Massaniello: Fisherman's Song.

7 When if or chance or hunger's powerful sway
Directs the roving trout this fatal way,
He greedily sucks in the twining bait,
And tugs and nibbles the fallacious meat.
Now, happy fisherman; now twitch the line!
How thy rod bends! behold, the prize is thine!

JOHN GAY, Rural Sports. Canto i, l. 150.

8 A fishing-rod is a stick with a hook at one end and a fool at the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAZLITT, Essays: On Ego-tism.) The jest has also been ascribed to Dean Swift.

Fly fishing is a very pleasant amusement; but angling or float fishing, I can only compare to a stick and a string, with a worm at one end and a fool at the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HAWKER, On Worm Fishing.) The quotation is not found in Johnson's works. (See Notes and Queries, 11 Dec., 1915.)

The line with its rod is a long instrument whose lesser end holds a small reptile, while the other is held by a great fool.

(La ligne avec sa canne est un long instrument, Dont le plus mince bout tient un petit reptile, Et dont l'autre est tenu par un grand imbecile.)

These lines are alleged to have been written by a French poet of the 17th century named Guyet.

9 Down and back at day dawn,
Tramp from lake to lake,
Washing brain and heart clean
Every step we take.

Leave to Robert Browning

Beggars, fleas, and vines;

Leave to mournful Ruskin

Popish Apennines,

Dirty stones of Venice,

And his gas lamps seven,

We've the stones of Snowdon

And the lamps of heaven.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Letters and Memories, Aug., 1856.

10 In genial Spring, beneath the quiv'ring shade,
When cooling vapours breathe along the mead,

The patient fisher takes his silent stand,
Intent, his angle trembling in his hand:

With looks unmov'd, he hopes the scaly breed,

And eyes the dancing cork and bending reed.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 135.

11 Give me mine angle; we'll to the river: there,
My music playing far off, I will betray
Tawny-finn'd fishes; my bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 10.

'T was merry when
You wager'd on your angling; when your diver
Did hang a salt-fish on his hook, which he
With fervency drew up.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 15.

<sup>1</sup>
The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

<sup>2</sup>
But, should you lure
From his dark haunt beneath the tangled roots
Of pendent trees the monarch of the brook,
Behoves you then to ply your finest art.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 422.

<sup>3</sup>
Then come, my friend, forget your foes, and leave your fears behind,
And wander forth to try your luck, with cheerful, quiet mind.

HENRY VAN DYKE, The Angler's Reveille.

'Tis an affair of luck.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck.

Two honest and good-natured anglers have never met each other by the way without crying out,
"What luck?"

HENRY VAN DYKE, Fisherman's Luck.

<sup>4</sup>
No man is born an Artist nor an Angler.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader.

Angling may be said to be so like the mathematics that it can never be fully learnt.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader.

Angling is somewhat like poetry, men are to be born so.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

It is an art worthy the knowledge and patience of a wise man.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

You will find angling to be like the virtue of humility, which has a calmness of spirit and a world of other blessings attending upon it.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

All that are lovers of virtue, and dare trust in His providence, and be quiet, and go a-angling.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 21.

<sup>5</sup>
I am a Brother of the Angle.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.

An excellent angler, and now with God.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 4.

Meek Walton's heavenly memory.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 5.

And angling too, that solitary vice,

Whatever Izaak Walton sings or says:

The quaint, old, cruel coxcomb, in his gullet
Should have a hook, and a small trout to pull it.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 106.

<sup>6</sup>
We may say of angling, as Dr. Boteler said of strawberries: "Doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did"; and so, (if I might be judge), God never did make a more calm, quiet, innocent recreation than angling.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 5. (Second edition.) Boteler was Dr. William Butler. See under STRAWBERRY.

<sup>7</sup>
Oh the brave Fisher's life,
It is the best of any,
'Tis full of pleasure, void of strife,
And 'tis belov'd of many:

Other joys Are but toys;

Only this Lawful is,

For our skill Breeds no ill,

But content and pleasure.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 11. (First edition.)

<sup>8</sup>
Thus use your frog: put your hook—I mean the arming-wire—through his mouth and out at his gills, and then with a fine needle and silk sew the upper part of his leg with only one stitch to the arming-wire of your hook, or tie the frog's leg above the upper joint to the armed wire; and in so doing, use him as though you loved him.

IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 8.

<sup>9</sup>
'Tis an employment for my idle time, which is then not idly spent; a rest to my mind, a cheerer of my spirits, a diverter of sadness, a calmer of unquiet thoughts, a moderator of passions, a procurer of contentedness.

SIR HENRY WOTTON. (IZAAK WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Ch. 1.)

FLAG

I—Flag: Apothegms

<sup>10</sup>
These are our realms, no limit to their sway,—
Our flag the sceptre all who meet obey.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto i, st. 1.

For where'er our country's banner may be planted,

All other local banners are defied!

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

<sup>11</sup>
See the power of national emblems. Some stars, lilies, leopards, a crescent, a lion, an eagle, or other figure which came into credit God knows how, on an old rag of bunting, blowing in the wind on a fort at the ends of the earth, shall make the blood tingle under the rudest or the most conventional exterior.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: The Poet.

- 1
A banner need not do much thinking.

II—Flag: American

- 7
I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.
FRANCIS M. BELLAMY, Pledge to the Flag.
Written in August, 1892.
- 8
Off with your hat as the flag goes by!
And let the heart have its say;
You're man enough for a tear in your eye
That you will not wipe away.
HENRY CUYLER BUNNER, The Old Flag.
Uncover when the flag goes by, boys,
'Tis freedom's starry banner that you greet,
Flag famed in song and story
Long may it wave, Old Glory
The flag that has never known defeat.
CHARLES L. BENJAMIN AND GEORGE D. SUT-TON, The Flag That Has Never Known Defeat.
Hats off!
Along the street there comes
A blare of bugles, a ruffle of drums,
A flash of color beneath the sky:

- Hats off!
The flag is passing by.
H. H. BENNETT, The Flag Goes By.
- 9
Fling out, fling out, with cheer and shout,
To all the winds Our Country's Banner!
Be every bar, and every star,
Displayed in full and glorious manner!
Blow, zephyrs, blow, keep the dear ensign flying!
Blow, zephyrs, sweetly mournful, sighing,
sighing, sighing!
ABRAHAM COLES, Our Country's Banner.
- 10
Here's to the red of it,
There's not a thread of it,
No, not a shred of it,
In all the spread of it,
From foot to head,
But heroes bled for it,
Faced steel and lead for it,
Precious blood shed for it,
Bathing in red.
JOHN DALY, A Toast to the Flag.
- 11
When Freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night,
And set the stars of glory there.
She mingled with its gorgeous dyes
The milky baldrick of the skies,
And striped its pure celestial white
With streakings of the morning light.
JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The American Flag.
Flag of the free heart's hope and home!
By angel hands to valor given;
Thy stars have lit the welkin dome,
And all thy hues were born in heaven.
For ever float that standard sheet!
Where breathes the foe but falls before us,
With Freedom's soil beneath our feet,
And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us?
JOSEPH RODMAN DRAKE, The American Flag.
The last four lines are said to have been written by Fitz-Greene Halleck.
- 12
I have seen the glories of art and architecture, and mountain and river; I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau, and the full moon rise over Mont Blanc; but the fairest vision on which these eyes ever looked was the flag of my country in a foreign land.
Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and glory, and the honor, of fifty millions of Americans.
GEORGE FRISBIE HOAR, Speech, 1878.
- 13
What flower is this that greets the morn,
Its hues from Heaven so freshly born?
With burning star and flaming band
It kindles all the sunset land:
Oh tell us what the name may be,—

Is this the Flower of Liberty?

It is the banner of the free,
The starry Flower of Liberty!

O. W. HOLMES, The Flower of Liberty.

Ay, tear her tattered ensign down!

Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky.

O. W. HOLMES, Old Ironsides.

<sup>1</sup> The flag of our stately battles, not struggles of wrath and greed,

Its stripes were a holy lesson, its spangles
a deathless creed:

'T was red with the blood of freemen and white with the fear of the foe;

And the stars that fight in their courses
'gainst tyrants its symbols know.

JULIA WARD HOWE, The Flag.

<sup>2</sup> The simple stone of Betsy Ross
Is covered now with mold and moss,
But still her deathless banner flies,
And keeps the color of the skies.

A nation thrills, a nation bleeds,
A nation follows where it leads,
And every man is proud to yield
His life upon a crimson field

For Betsy's battle flag!

MINNA IRVING, Betsy's Battle Flag.

<sup>3</sup> Oh! thus be it ever, when freemen shall stand Between their loved homes and the war's desolation!

Blest with victory and peace, may the heaven-rescued land

Praise the Power that hath made and preserved us a nation.

Then conquer we must, for our cause it is just,

And this be our motto: "In God is our trust."
And the star-spangled banner in triumph shall wave

O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.

FRANCIS SCOTT KEY, The Star-Spangled Banner.

<sup>4</sup> I am not the flag; not at all. I am but its shadow. I am whatever you make me, nothing more. I am your belief in yourself, your dream of what a People may become. . . .
I am the day's work of the weakest man,
and the largest dream of the most daring.
. . . I am the clutch of an idea, and the reasoned purpose of resolution. I am no more than you believe me to be and I am all that you believe I can be. I am whatever you make me, nothing more.

FRANKLIN K. LANE, Makers of the Flag.

<sup>5</sup> Each red stripe has blazoned forth
Gospels writ in blood;

Every star has sung the birth
Of some deathless good.

LUCY LARCOM, The Flag.

<sup>6</sup> Take thy banner! May it wave
Proudly o'er the good and brave.

LONGFELLOW, Hymn of the Moravian Nuns of Bethlehem.

<sup>7</sup> Your flag and my flag,
And how it flies today
In your land and my land
And half a world away!

Rose-red and blood-red

The stripes forever gleam;

Snow-white and soul-white—

The good forefathers' dream;

Sky-blue and true-blue,

With stars to gleam aright—

The gloried guidon of the day,
A shelter through the night.

WILBUR D. NESBIT, Your Flag and My Flag.

<sup>8</sup> What shall I say to you, Old Flag?

You are so grand in every fold,

So linked with mighty deeds of old,

So steeped in blood where heroes fell,

So torn and pierced by shot and shell,

So calm, so still, so firm, so true,

My throat swells at the sight of you,

Old Flag!

HUBBARD PARKER, Old Flag.

<sup>9</sup> Yes, we'll rally round the flag, boys, we'll rally once again,

Shouting the battle-cry of Freedom,

We will rally from the hill-side, we'll gather from the plain,

Shouting the battle-cry of Freedom.

GEORGE F. ROOT, The Battle-Cry of Freedom.

<sup>10</sup> She's up there—Old Glory—where lightnings are sped,

She dazzles the nations with ripples of red,

And she'll wave for us living, or droop o'er us dead—

The flag of our country forever.

F. L. STANTON, Our Flag Forever.

My name is as old as the glory of God,
So I came by the name of Old Glory.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Name of Old Glory.

There it is—Old Glory!

CAPTAIN WILLIAM DRIVER, as an American flag was run up to the masthead of a new ship of which he had just been appointed master, at Salem, Mass., Dec., 1831. The most probable of the legends accounting for the name.

<sup>11</sup> Might his last glance behold the glorious ensign of the Republic still full high advanced, its arms and trophies streaming in all their original lustre.

WEBSTER, Reply to Hayne; Peroration.

1
O hasten flag of man—O with sure and steady
step, passing highest flag of kings,
Walk supreme to the heavens mighty symbol
—run up above them all,

Flag of stars! thick-sprinkled bunting!

WALT WHITMAN, Thick-Sprinkled Bunting.

Banner so broad advancing out of the night, I sing you haughty and resolute, . . .

Not houses of peace indeed are you, nor any nor all their prosperity, (if need be, you shall again have every one of those houses to destroy them,

You thought not to destroy those valuable houses, standing fast, full of comfort, built with money,

May they stand fast, then? not an hour except you above them and all stand fast.)

WHITMAN, Song of the Banner at Daybreak.

2
"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head,
But spare your country's flag," she said.

WHITTIER, Barbara Frietchie.

When I think of the flag, . . . I see alternate strips of parchment upon which are written the rights of liberty and justice, and stripes of blood to vindicate those rights, and then, in the corner, a prediction of the blue serene into which every nation may swim which stands for these great things.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 17 May, 1915.

The lines of red are lines of blood, nobly and unselfishly shed by men who loved the liberty of their fellowmen more than they loved their own lives and fortunes. God forbid that we should have to use the blood of America to freshen the color of the flag. But if it should ever be necessary, that flag will be colored once more,
and in being colored will be glorified and purified.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, N. Y., 17 May, 1915.

4
Its red for love, and its white for law;
And its blue for the hope that our fathers saw,

Of a larger liberty.

UNKNOWN, The American Flag.

5
Your banner's constellation types
White freedom with its stars,
But what's the meaning of the stripes?
They mean your negroes' scars.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the United States of North America. (1838)

England! Whence came each glowing hue
That tints your flag of meteor light,—
The streaming red, the deeper blue,
Crossed with the moonbeams' pearly white?
The blood, the bruise—the blue, the red—
Let Asia's groaning millions speak;
The white it tells of colour fled
From starving Erin's pallid cheek.

Banner of England, not for a season, O Banner of Britain, hast thou

Shot thro' the staff or the halyard, but ever we raised thee anew,

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 13, l. 1.

11 The flatteries of a bad man cover treachery.
(Habent insidias hominis blanditiæ mali.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 19, l. 1.

Your flattery is so much birdlime. (Viscus merus vestra est blanditia.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 16. (Act i, sc. 1.)

12 Thou shalt not fear sharp words, but dread fair words.

HUGH RHODES, Boke of Nurture.

13 No vizor does become black villainy
So well as soft and tender flattery.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 44.

O, that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery!

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l.
256.

14 Those worst of enemies, flatterers. (Pessimum inimicorum genus, laudantes.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 41.

15 All panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

16 Distrust mankind; with your own heart confer;

And dread even there to find a flatterer.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 233.

V—Flattery: Disdain of Flattery

17 Madam, before you flatter a man so grossly to his face, you should consider whether or not your flattery is worth his having.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark to Hannah More.
(FANNY BURNET, Diary, 1778.)

18 He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for 's power to thunder.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 256.

19 Nay, do not think I flatter:
For what advancement may I hope from
thee,

That no revenue hast but thy good spirits?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 61.

By God, I cannot flatter: I do defy
The tongues of soothers.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 6.

He cannot flatter, he,
An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth!
An they will take it, so; if not, he's plain:
These kind of knaves I know.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 104.

20 Because I cannot flatter and speak fair, Smile in men's faces, smooth, deceive, and cog,

Duck with French nods and apish courtesy,
I must be held a rancorous enemy.
Cannot a plain man live and think no harm,
But thus his simple truth must be abused
By silken, sly, insinuating Jacks?

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 47.

FLEA

1 The flea, though he kill none, he does all the harm he can.

JOHN DONNE, Devotions.

2 He that lieth down with dogs shall rise up with fleas.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

3 "I cannot raise my worth too high;
Of what vast consequence am I!"
"Not of th' importance you suppose,"
Replies a Flea upon his nose;
"Be humble, learn thyself to scan;
Know, pride was never made for man."

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Man and the Flea.

4 When eager bites the thirsty flea,
Clouds and rain you sure shall see.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 148.

5 I do honour the very flea of his dog.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act
iv, sc. 4.

6 A blockhead, bit by fleas, put out the light,
And chuckling cried, "Now you can't see to bite!"

(Ἐσβεσε τὸν λύχνον μῶρος, ψυλλῶν ὑπὸ πολλῶν δακνόμενος, λέξας· Οὐκέτι με βλέπετε.)

LUCIAN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 432.)

7 They'd skin a flea for his hide and tallow.

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour. Pt. i, l. 134.

8 That's a valiant flea that dare eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 154.

9 So, naturalists observe, a flea
Has smaller fleas that on him prey;
And these have smaller still to bite 'em,
And so proceed ad infinitum.

SWIFT, On Poetry: A Rhapsody, l. 337.

Great fleas have little fleas upon their backs to bite 'em,
And little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.

And the great fleas themselves, in turn, have greater fleas to go on;
While these again have greater still, and greater still, and so on.

AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, A Budget of Paradoxes,
p. 377.

Big fleas have little fleas to plague, perplex and
bite 'em,

Little fleas have lesser fleas, and so ad infinitum.
R. R. FIELDER, Pulex Irritans.

1430)

How Panurge had a flea in his ear. (Comment Panurge avoyt la pulce en l'oreille.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. iii, ch. 7. Heading.
(1532)

Ferardo . . . whispering Philantus in the ear (who stood as though he had a flea in his ear), desired him to keep silence.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues. (1578) The phrase was widely used: TEUTON, Tragicall Discourses
(1579); THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penniless
(1592); GREENE, Quip for an Upstart Courier (1592), etc.

I will send him hence with a flea in his ear.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt, Master Constable.
Act ii, sc. 2.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
iv, Day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)

Who did leave His Father's throne,
To assume thy flesh and bone?
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church: Business.

16 The frailë flesh, whose nature is
Ay ready for the sporne and fall,
The firstë foeman is of all.
It warreth night, it warreth day,
So that a man hath never rest.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v.

Frail as flesh is.

LANAN BLANCHARD, *Nell Gwynne's Looking-
Glass*.

17 That flesh is but the glass, which holds the dust
That measures all our time; which also shall

Be crumbled into dust.

FLOWERS

I—Flowers: Apothegms

14 To create a little flower is the labour of ages.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

15 The faintest streak that on a petal lies May speak instruction to initiate eyes.

BRYANT, The Mystery of Flowers.

Not a flower But shows some touch, in freckle, streak or stain, Of his unrivall'd pencil.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 241.

16 The bud may have a bitter taste, But sweet will be the flower.

COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

17 Flowers are words Which even a babe may understand.

ARTHUR C. COXE, The Singing of Birds.

18 The fairest flower that ever saw the light.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Sonnets to Delia. No. xxxvii.

19 The flowers of the forest are a' wede away.

JANE ELLIOT, The Flowers of the Forest.

20 Earth laughs in flowers.

EMERSON, Hamatreya.

21 Full many a flower is born to blush unseen, And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard. St. 14.

The flower of sweetest smell is shy and lowly.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets: Pt. ii, Not Love, Not War.

22 One flower makes no garland.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. See also under SWALLOW.

23 The Amen! of Nature is, always a flower.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

24 Only the flower sanctifies the vase.

ROBERT UNDERWOOD JOHNSON, The Temple.

25 You are as welcome as the flowers in May.

CHARLES MACCLIN, Love à la Mode. Act i, sc. 1.

The flowers that bloom in the spring, Tra la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii.

1 Flowers that their gay wardrobe wear.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 47.

Flowers worthy of paradise.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 241.

Flowers of all hue, and without thorn the rose.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 256.

A wilderness of sweets.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 294.

2 So from the root
Springs lighter the green stalk, from thence the leaves

More ærie, last the bright consummate flower.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 479.

3 "A milkweed, and a buttercup, and cowslip," said sweet Mary,

"Are growing in my garden-plot, and this I call my dairy."

PETER NEWELL, Her Dairy.

4 One thing is certain and the rest is lies;
The Flower that once has blown for ever dies.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubáiyát. St. 63. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

5 Here blushing Flora paints th' enamell'd ground.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 38.

6 The devil has not any flower,
But only money in his power.

JAMES STEPHENS, In the Poppy Field.

7 Flowers of all heavens, and lovelier than their names.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 12.

8 One of the attractive things about the flowers is their beautiful reserve.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 17 June, 1853.

9 So great is their love of flowers. (Tantus amor florum.)

VERGIL, Georgics. No. iv, l. 205.

10 And 'tis my faith that every flower
Enjoys the air it breathes.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Written in Early Spring.

II—Flowers: Their Beauty

11 And because the breath of flowers is far sweeter in the air (where it comes and goes, like the warbling of music) than in the hand, therefore nothing is more fit for that delight than to know what be the flowers and plants that do best perfume the air.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Gardens.

I love these beautiful and peaceful tribes and wish I was better acquainted with them.

W. S. LANDOR, Letter to Southey, 1811. Referring to flowers.

12 Sweet letters of the angel tongue,
I've loved ye long and well,
And never have failed in your fragrance
sweet

To find some secret spell,—

A charm that has bound me with witching power,

For mine is the old belief,
That midst your sweets and midst your bloom,
There's a soul in every leaf!

MATURIN MURRAY BALLOU, Flowers.

13 Flowers are the sweetest things God ever made and forgot to put a soul into.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

As for marigolds, poppies, hollyhocks, and valorous sunflowers, we shall never have a garden without them, both for their own sake, and for the sake of old-fashioned folks, who used to love them.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Star Papers: A Discourse of Flowers.

Flowers have an expression of countenance as much as men or animals. Some seem to smile; some have a sad expression; some are pensive and diffident; others again are plain, honest and upright, like the broad-faced sunflower and the hollyhock.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, *Star Papers: A Dis-
course of Flowers*.

14 I love the gorse and heather,
And bluebells close beside—

I'll find my cap a feather,
And kiss a Highland bride!

CHARLES G. BLANDEN, The Rose Is a Royal Lady.

15 Thick on the woodland floor
Gay company shall be,

Primrose and Hyacinth
And frail Anemone,

Perennial Strawberry-bloom,
Woodsorrel's pencilled veil,

Dishevel'd Willow-weed
And Orchis purple and pale.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Idle Flowers.

I have loved flowers that fade,
Within whose magic tents

Rich hues have marriage made
With sweet unmemoried scents.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Shorter Poems. Bk. ii, No. 13.

16 The pink laburnam lays her cheek
In married, matchless, lovely bliss,
Against her golden mate, to seek
His airy kiss.

Tulips, in faded splendor drest,
Brood o'er their beds, a slumbrous gloom,
Dame Peony, red and ripe with bloom,

Swells the silk housing of her breast.
ALICE BROWN, A Benedictine Garden.

1
Brazen helm of daffodillies,
With a glitter toward the light.
Purple violets for the mouth,
Breathing perfumes west and south;
And a sword of flashing lilies,
Holden ready for the fight.
E. B. BROWNING, Hector in the Garden. St. 10.

2
The south wind searches for the flowers whose fragrance late he bore,
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers.
The windflower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the brier-rose and the orchis died amid the summer glow;
But on the hill the golden-rod, and the aster in
the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook, in autumn beauty stood,
Till fell the frost from the clear cold heaven, as falls the plague on men,
And the brightness of their smile was gone from upland, glade, and glen.

BRYANT, The Death of the Flowers.
3
Mourn, little harebells o'er the lea;
Ye stately foxgloves, fair to see;
Ye woodbines, hanging bonnily
In scented bowers;
Ye roses on your thorny tree,
The first o' flow'rs!

BURNS, Elegy on Captain Matthew Henderson.
Now blooms the lily by the bank,
The primrose down the brae;
The hawthorn's budding in the glen,
And milkwhite is the slae.

BURNS, Lament of Mary, Queen of Scots.
The snawdrop and primrose our woodlands adorn,
And violets bathe in the weat o' the morn.
BURNS, My Nannie's Awa.

4
Ye field flowers! the gardens eclipse you, 'tis true;

Yet, wildings of nature! I dote upon you,
For ye waft me to summers of old,
When the earth teem'd around me with fairy delight,

And when daisies and buttercups gladden'd
my sight,
Like treasures of silver and gold.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Field Flowers.
"Of what are you afraid, my child?" inquired the kindly teacher.

"Oh, sir! the flowers they are wild," replied the timid creature.

PETER NEWELL, Wild Flowers.

5
The deep red cones of the sumach
And the woodbine's crimson sprays

Have bannered the common roadside
For the pageant of passing days.

BLISS CARMAN, An Autumn Garden.

We are the roadside flowers,
Straying from garden grounds;
Lovers of idle hours,
Breakers of ordered bounds. . . .
Who shall inquire of the season,
Or question the wind where it blows?
We blossom and ask no reason,
The Lord of the Garden knows.
BLISS CARMAN, Roadside Flowers.

6
I know not which I love the most,
Nor which the comeliest shows,
The timid, bashful violet
Or the royal-hearted rose:
The pansy in her purple dress,
The pink with cheek of red,
Or the faint, fair heliotrope, who hangs,
Like a bashful maid her head.
PHOEBE CARY, Spring Flowers.

7
O the green things growing, the green things
growing,
The faint sweet smell of the green things
growing!
I should like to live, whether I smile or grieve,
Just to watch the happy life of my green things growing.

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, Green Things Growing.

8
And all the meadows, wide unrolled,
Were green and silver, green and gold,
Where buttercups and daisies spun
Their shining tissues in the sun.

JULIA C. R. DORR, Unanswered.

9
Why does the rose her grateful fragrance yield,
And yellow cowslips paint the smiling field?
JOHN GAY, Panthea, l. 71.

10
Through the laburnum's dropping gold
Rose the light shaft of Orient mould,
And Europe's violets, faintly sweet,
Purpled the mossbeds at its feet.
FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Palm-tree.

11
Farewell, dear flowers, sweetly your time ye spent,
Fit, while ye liv'd, for smell or ornament,
And after death for cures.
I follow straight without complaints or grief,
Since, if my scent be good, I care not if
It be as short as yours.
GEORGE HERBERT, Life.

12
Fair pledges of a fruitful tree
Why do ye fall so fast?
Your date is not so past
But you may stay yet here awhile
To blush and gently smile

And go at last.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Blossoms.

1 What are the flowers of Scotland,
All others that excel?

The lovely flowers of Scotland,
All others that excel!

The thistle's purple bonnet,
And bonny heather bell,

Oh, they're the flowers of Scotland.
All others that excel!

JAMES HOGG, The Flowers of Scotland.

2 Yellow japanned buttercups and star-disked dandelions,—just as we see them lying in the grass, like sparks that have leaped from the kindling sun of summer.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Professor at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10.

3 The cowslip is a country wench,
The violet is a nun;—

But I will woo the dainty rose,
The queen of every one.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

I remember, I remember
The roses, red and white,
The violets and the lily-cups,
Those flowers made of light!
The lilacs, where the robin built,
And where my brother set
The laburnam on his birthday,—
The tree is living yet.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember, I Remember.

4 What to them is winter!
What are stormy showers!

Buttercups and daisies
Are these human flowers!

He who gave them hardships
And a life of care,

Gave them likewise hardy strength
And patient hearts to bear.

MARY HOWITT, Buttercups and Daisies.

5 And in his left he held a basket full
Of all sweet herbs that searching eye could cull:

Wild thyme, and valley-lilies whiter still
Than Leda's love, and cresses from the rill.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 155.

Young playmates of the rose and daffodil,
Be careful ere ye enter in, to fill
Your baskets high

With fennel green, and balm, and golden pines,
Savory, latter-mint, and columbines.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 572.

The rose
Blendeth its odour with the violet,—
Solution sweet.

KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 36.

And O and O
The daisies blow,
And the primroses are waken'd;

And the violets white
Sit in silver plight,
And the green bud's as long as the spike end.
KEATS, Fragment, in a letter to Haydon.

6 Shed no tear! O shed no tear!
The flower will bloom another year.
Weep no more! O weep no more!
Young buds sleep in the root's white core.
KEATS, Faery Song.

7 The loveliest flowers the closest cling to
earth,
And they first feel the sun: so violets blue;
So the soft star-like primrose—drenched in a dew—
The happiest of Spring's happy, fragrant birth.

JOHN KEBLE, Spring Showers.

8 Brave flowers—that I could gallant it like
you,
And be as little vain!

HENRY KING, A Contemplation Upon Flowers.

9 Need any man be told what flowers are,
That hold a star?

ALFRED KREYMBORG, Bloom.

10 Spake full well, in language quaint and olden,
One who dwelleth by the castled Rhine,
When he called the flowers, so blue and golden,
Stars, that in earth's firmament do shine.
LONGFELLOW, Flowers. St. 1.

The root of a forget-me-not caught the drop of water by the hair and sucked her in, that she might become a floweret, and twinkle as brightly as a blue star on the green firmament of earth.

FREDERICK WILHELM CAROVÉ, The Story Without an End. Carové, a resident of Coblenz, is the poet referred to in Longfellow's stanza.

11 Gorgeous flowerets in the sunlight shining,
Blossoms flaunting in the eye of day,
Tremulous leaves, with soft and silver lin-
ing,

Buds that open only to decay.

LONGFELLOW, Flowers. St. 6.

12 See how the flowers, as at parade,
Under their colours stand displayed:
Each regiment in order grows,
That of the tulip, pink, and rose.

ANDREW MARVELL, A Garden.

13 Throw hither all your quaint enamell'd eyes
That on the green turf suck the honied showers,
And purple all the ground with vernal flowers.
Bring the rathe primrose that forsaken dies,
The tufted crow-toe, and pale jessamine,
The white pink, and the pansy freakt with jet,

The glowing violet,
The musk-rose, and the well-attir'd wood-
bine,
With cowslips wan that hang the pensive
head,
And every flower that sad embroidery wears:
Bid amaranthus all his beauty shed,
And daffodillies fill their cups with tears,
To strew the laureate hearse where Lycid lies.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 139.

On either side
Acanthus and each odourous bushy shrub
Fenc'd up the verdant wall; each beauteous
flower,
Iris all hues, roses, and jessamin Rear'd high their flourish'd heads between, and wrought
Mosaic; under foot the violet,
Crocus, and hyacinth with rich inlay
Broider'd the ground, more colour'd than with stone
Of costliest emblem.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 695.

Rose, and went forth among her fruits and
flowers,
To visit how they prosper'd, bud and bloom,
Her nursery; they at her coming sprung:
And touch'd by her fair tendance gladlier grew.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 44.

1
The foxglove, with its stately bells
Of purple, shall adorn thy dells;
The wallflower, on each rifted rock,
From liberal blossoms shall breathe down,
(Gold blossoms flecked with iron brown,)
Its fragrance; while the hollyhock,
The pink, and the carnation vie
With lupin and with lavender,
To decorate the fading year.
D. M. MOIR, The Birth of the Flowers. St. 14.

2
The Wreath's of brightest myrtle wove
With brilliant tears of bliss among it,
And many a rose leaf cull'd by Love
To heal his lips when bees have stung it.
THOMAS MOORE, The Wreath and the Chain.

3
Where fall the tears of love the rose appears,
And where the ground is bright with friend-
ship's tears,
Forget-me-nots, and violets, heavenly blue,
Spring glittering with the cheerful drops like dew.
NICKLAS MÜLLER, Paradise of Tears. (Bryant, tr.)

4
Here's Black-Eyed Susan weeping
Into exotic air,
And Bouncing Bet comes creeping
Back to her old parterre.
ADA FOSTER MURRAY, Unguarded.

5
He bore a simple wild-flower wreath:
Narcissus, and the sweet-briar rose;

Vervain, and flexile thyme, that breathe
Rich fragrance; modest heath, that glows
With purple bells; the amaranth bright,
That no decay nor fading knows,
Like true love's holiest, rarest light;
And every purest flower, that blows
In that sweet time, when Love most blesses,
When Spring on Summer's confines presses.

T. L. PEACOCK, Rhododaphne. Canto i, l. 107.

6
Here eglantine embalmed the air,
Hawthorn and hazel mingled there;
The primrose pale and violet flower
Found in each clift a narrow bower;
Foxglove and nightshade, side by side,
Emblems of punishment and pride,
Grouped their dark hues with every stain
The weather-beaten crags retain.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 12.

7
Thou shalt not lack
The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose, nor
The azur'd harebell, like thy veins.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 220.

8
When daisies pied and violets blue
And lady-smocks all silver-white
And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue
Do paint the meadows with delight.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc.
2, l. 904.

In emerald tufts, flowers purple, blue, and white;
Like sapphire, pearl and rich embroidery.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 5, l. 74.

To strew thy green with flowers: the yellows,
blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 15.

9
I know a bank where the wild thyme blows,
Where oxslips and the nodding violet grows,
Quite over-canopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet musk-roses and with eglantine.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 251.

Here's flowers for you:
Hot lavender, mints, savory, marjoram;
The marigold, that goes to bed wi' the sun
And with him rises weeping: . . . daffodils
That come before the swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty; violets dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes
Or Cytherea's breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength—a malady
Most incident to maids: bold oxlips and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one!
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 103.

10
And the Spring arose on the garden fair,
Like the Spirit of Love felt everywhere;

And each flower and herb on Earth's dark breast

Rose from the dreams of its wintry rest.

SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 2.

1

The tufted basil, pun-provoking thyme,
Fresh baum, and marigold of cheerful hue.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Schoolmistress. St. 11.

Were I, O God, in churchless lands remaining,
Far from all voice of teachers or divines,
My soul would find, in flowers of thy ordaining,

Priests, sermons, shrines!

HORACE SMITH, Hymn to the Flowers.

3

No dainty flower or herb that grows on
ground,

No arborett with painted blossoms drest,
And smelling sweet, but there it might be found

To bud out fair, and her sweet smells throw all around.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto vi, st. 12.

Roses red and violets blue,

And all the sweetest flowers that in the forest grew.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto vi, st. 6.

Strowe me the ground with daffadowndillies,
And cowslips, and kingcups, and loved lillies.

SPENSER, Shepherd's Calendar: April, l. 140.

4

The violets ope their purple heads;
The roses blow, the cowslip springs.

SWIFT, Answer to a Scandalous Poem, l. 150.

5

With roses musky-breathed,
And drooping daffodilly,
And silver-leaved lily,
And ivy darkly-wreathed,
I wove a crown before her,
For her I love so dearly.

TENNYSON, Anacreontics.

6

The gold-eyed kingcups fine,
The frail bluebell peereth over
Rare broiery of the purple clover.

TENNYSON, A Dirge. St. 6.

Here are cool mosses deep,
And thro' the moss the ivies creep,
And in the stream the long-leaved flowers weep,
And from the craggy ledge the poppy hangs in sleep.

TENNYSON, Lotos-Eaters: Choric Song. Pt. i.

7

The rose is fragrant, but it fades in time:
The violet sweet, but quickly past the prime:
White lilies hang their heads, and soon decay,
And white snow in minutes melts away.

THEOCRITUS, The Despairing Lover, l. 57. (Dryden, tr.)

8

The daisy, primrose, violet darkly blue;
And polyanthus of unnumbered dyes.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Spring, l. 529.

9

But when they had unloosed the linen band
Which swathed the Egyptian's body,—lo!
was found

Closed in the wasted hollow of her hand

A little seed, which sown in English ground
Did wondrous snow of starry blossoms bear,
And spread rich odours through our springtide air.

OSCAR WILDE, Athanasia. St. 2.

Flowers of remarkable size and hue,
Flowers such as Eden never knew.

R. H. BARHAM, The Nurse's Story.

10

Along the river's summer walk,

The withered tufts of asters nod;

And trembles on its arid stalk

The hoar plume of the golden-rod.

WHITTIER, The Last Walk in Autumn.

11

The mysteries that cups of flowers enfold

And all the gorgeous sights which fairies do behold.

WORDSWORTH, *Stanzas Written in Thomson's
Castle of Indolence*, l. 62.

III—Flowers: Their Language

12

Flowers are Love's truest language; they betray,

Like the divining rods of Magi old,

Where precious wealth lies buried, not of
gold,

But love—strong love, that never can decay!

PARK BENJAMIN, Sonnet.

13

Who that has loved knows not the tender tale

Which flowers reveal, when lips are coy to tell?

BULWER-LYTTON, The First Violets.

14

The delicate odor of mignonette,

The ghost of a dead and gone bouquet,

Is all that tells of her story, yet,

Could she think of a sweeter way?

BRET HARTE, A Newport Romance.

15

They speak of hope to the fainting heart,
With a voice of promise they come and part,
They sleep in dust through the wintry hours,
They break forth in glory—bring flowers,
bright flowers!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Bring Flowers.

16

An exquisite invention this,
Worthy of Love's most honeyed kiss,—

This art of writing billet-doux

In buds, and odours, and bright hues!

In saying all one feels and thinks

In clever daffodils and pinks;

In puns of tulips, and in phrases,

Charming for their truth, of daisies!

LEIGH HUNT, Love-Letters Made of Flowers.

Growing one's own choice words and fancies
In orange tubs, and beds of pansies;
One's sighs and passionate declarations,
In odorous rhetoric of carnations; . . .
Taking due care one's flowers of speech
To guard from blight as well as bathos,
And watering, every day, one's pathos!

LEIGH HUNT, Love-Letters Made of Flowers.

1
Yet, no—not words, for they
But half can tell love's feeling;
Sweet flowers alone can say
What passion fears revealing.
A once bright rose's wither'd leaf,
A tow'ring lily broken,—
Oh, these may paint a grief
No words could e'er have spoken.
THOMAS MOORE, The Language of Flowers.

2
In Eastern lands they talk in flowers,
And they tell in a garland their loves and cares;
Each blossom that blooms in their garden
bowers,
On its leaves a mystic language bears.
J. G. PERCIVAL, The Language of Flowers.

3
There's rosemary, that's for remembrance;
pray, love, remember: and there is pansies, that's for thoughts. . . . There's fennel for you, and columbines: there's rue for you; and here's some for me. . . . O, you must wear your rue with a difference. There's a daisy:
I would give you some violets, but they withered all when my father died.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 175.

4
And ye talk together still,
In the language wherewith Spring
Letters cowslips on the hill.

TENNYSON, Adeline. St. 5.

5
Thanks to the human heart by which we live,
Thanks to its tenderness, its joys, and fears,
To me the meanest flower that blows can give
Thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears.

WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality, l. 204.

6
Take the flower from my breast, I pray thee,
Take the flower, too, from out my tresses;
And then go hence; for, see, the night is fair,
The stars rejoice to watch thee on thy way.

UNKNOWN. (Bard of the Dimbovitza. No. 3.
English by Carmen Sylva and Alma Stret-
tell.)

Here's eglantine,
Here's ivy!—take them as I used to do Thy flowers, and keep them where they shall not pine.
Instruct thine eyes to keep their colours true,
And tell thy soul their roots are left in mine.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese. No. xlv.

IV—Flowers: Individual

Quotations relating to the more important flowers will be found under their respective names: Buttercup, Daffodil, Daisy, etc.

7

A great acacia, with its slender trunk
And overpoise of multitudinous leaves (In which a hundred fields might spill their dew

And intense verdure, yet find room enough)
Stood reconciling all the place with green.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 537.

8

Our rocks are rough, but smiling there
Th' acacia waves her yellow hair,
Lonely and sweet, nor loved the less
For flow'ring in a wilderness.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harem.

Almond

9

Almond blossom, sent to teach us
That the spring days soon will reach us,
Lest, with longing over-ried,
We die, as the violets died.

EDWIN ARNOLD, Almond Blossom.

10

White as the blossoms which the almond tree,
Above its bald and leafless branches bears.

MARGARET JUNKIN PRESTON, Royal Preacher.

Amaranth

11

Immortal amaranth, a flower which once
In Paradise, fast by the Tree of Life,
Began to bloom, but soon for man's offence
To Heav'n remov'd, where first it grew, there grows,

And flow'rs aloft shading the Fount of Life,
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 353.

Anemone, see WINDFLOWER, infra.

Arbutus

12

Darlings of the forest!

Blossoming alone

When Earth's grief is sorest

For her jewels gone—

Ere the last snow-drift melts your tender buds have blown.

ROSE TERRY COOKE, Trailing Arbutus.

13

Pure and perfect, sweet arbutus
Twines her rosy-tinted wreath.

ELAINE GOODALE EASTMAN, The First Flowers.

14

The shy little Mayflower weaves her nest,
But the south wind sighs o'er the fragrant loam,

And betrays the path to her woodland home.
SARAH HELEN WHITMAN, Waking of the Heart.

Asphodel

1
With her ankles sunken in asphodel
She wept for the roses of earth which fell.
E. B. BROWNING, Calls on the Heart.

2
And rest at last where souls unbodied dwell,
In ever-flow'ring meads of asphodel.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxiv, l. 19. (Pope, tr.)
By those happy souls who dwell
In yellow meads of asphodel.
POPE, Ode on St. Cecilia's Day, l. 74.

Aster

3
Chide me not, laborious band!
For the idle flowers I brought;
Every aster in my hand
Goes home loaded with a thought.
EMERSON, The Apology.

4
The aster greets us as we pass
With her faint smile.
SARAH HELEN WHITMAN, A Day of the Indian Summer, l. 35.

Azalea

5
And in the woods a fragrance rare
Of wild azaleas fills the air,
And richly tangled overhead
We see their blossoms sweet and red.
DORA READ GOODALE, Spring Scatters Far and Wide.

6
A very rapture of white;
A wedlock of silence and light:
White, white as the wonder undefiled
Of Eve just wakened in Paradise.
HARRIET MCEWAN KIMBALL, White Azaleas.

7
The fair azalea bows
Beneath its snowy crest.
SARAH H. WHITMAN, She Blooms No More.

Barberries

8
Do you love barberries? . . .
There is something splendid about them:
They are not afraid of being warm and glad and bold;
They flush joyously like a cheek under a lover's kiss;
They bleed cruelly like a dagger-wound in the breast;
They flame up madly for their little hour,
Knowing they must die.
MARY ALDIS, Barberries.

Bluebells

9
To-night from deeps of loneliness I wake in wistful wonder
To a sudden sense of brightness, an im-manence of blue—

O are there bluebells swaying in the shadowy coppice yonder,
Shriven with the dawning and the dew?
LUCIA CLARK MARKHAM, Bluebells.

Broom

10
Oh the Broom, the yellow Broom,
The ancient poet sung it,
And dear it is on summer days
To lie at rest among it.
MARY HOWITT, The Broom Flower.

Buttercup, see separate heading.

Camomile, see ADVERSITY.

Celandine

11
Long as there's a sun that sets,
Primroses will have their glory;
Long as there are violets,
They will have a place in story:
There's a flower that shall be mine,
'Tis the little Celandine.

WORDSWORTH, To the Small Celandine.
Eyes of some men travel far
For the finding of a star;
Up and down the heavens they go,
Men that keep a mighty rout!
I'm as great as they, I trow,
Since the day I found thee out,
Little Flower!—I'll make a stir,
Like a great astronomer.
WORDSWORTH, To the Small Celandine.

There is a flower, the lesser Celandine,
That shrinks, like many more, from cold and rain;
And, the first moment that the sun may shine,
Bright as the sun himself, 'tis out again!
WORDSWORTH, The Small Celandine.

Clover, see separate heading.

Compass Plant

12
Look at this vigorous plant that lifts its head
from the meadow,
See how its leaves are turned to the north, as true as the magnet;
This is the compass-flower, that the finger of God has planted
Here in the houseless wild, to direct the traveller's journey.

LONGFELLOW, Evangeline. Pt. ii, sec. iv, l. 140.

Convolvulus

13
There is an herb named in Latin Convolvulus (i.e. with wind), growing among shrubs and bushes, which carrieth a flower not unlike to this Lilly, save that it yieldeth no smell nor hath those chives within; for whiteness they resemble one another very much, as if Nature in making this flower were a learning and trying her skill how to frame the Lilly indeed.
PLINY, Historia Naturalis. Bk. xxi, ch. 10.

Cowslip, Daffodil, Daisy, Dandelion, see separate headings.

Edelweiss

<sup>1</sup>
Ye living flowers that skirt the eternal frost!
S. T. COLERIDGE, Hymn Before Sunrise in the Vale of Chamouni.

Eglantine

<sup>2</sup>
The fresh eglantine exhal'd a breath,
Whose odours were of pow'r to raise from death.

DRYDEN, The Flower and the Leaf, l. 96.

<sup>3</sup>
Rain-scented eglantine
Gave temperate sweets to that well-wooing sun.

KEATS, Endymion. Bk. i, l. 100.

Its sides I'll plant with dew-sweet eglantine.
KEATS, Endymion. Bk. iv, l. 700.

Flower-de-Luce

<sup>4</sup>
Born in the purple, born to joy and pleasance,
Thou dost not toil nor spin,
But makest glad and radiant with thy presence
The meadow and the lin.

LONGFELLOW, Flower-de-Luce. St. 3.

Forget-me-not

<sup>5</sup>
The blue significant Forget-me-not.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson.

<sup>6</sup>
The sweet forget-me-nots,
That grow for happy lovers.

TENNYSON, The Brook, l. 172.

Gentian

<sup>7</sup>
Then doth thy sweet and quiet eye
Look through its fringes to the sky,
Blue—blue—as if that sky let fall
A flower from its cerulean wall.

BRYANT, To the Fringed Gentian.

And the blue gentian-flower, that, in the breeze,
Nods lonely, of her beauteous race the last.

BRYANT, November.

<sup>8</sup>
Blue thou art, intensely blue;
Flower, whence came thy dazzling hue?
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Gentianella.

Goldenrod

<sup>9</sup>
Reaching up through bush and brier,
Sumptuous brow and heart of fire,
Flaunting high its wind-rocked plume,
Brave with wealth of native bloom,—
Goldenrod!

ELAINE GOODALE EASTMAN, Goldenrod.

<sup>10</sup>
I know the lands are lit
With all the autumn blaze of Goldenrod.
HELEN HUNT JACKSON, Asters and Goldenrod.

<sup>11</sup>
Welcome, dear Goldenrod, once more,
Thou mimic, flowering elm!

I always think that Summer's store
Hangs from thy laden stem.

HORACE SCUDDER, To the Goldenrod at Midsummer.

<sup>12</sup>
And in the evening, everywhere
Along the roadside, up and down,
I see the golden torches flare
Like lighted street-lamps in the town.
FRANK DEMPSTER SHERMAN, Golden-Rod.

Gorse

<sup>13</sup>
Mountain gorses, ever-golden,
Cankered not the whole year long!
Do ye teach us to be strong,
Howsoever pricked and holden
Like your thorny blooms, and so
Trodden on by rain and snow,
Up the hillside of this life, as bleak as where ye grow?

E. B. BROWNING, Lessons from the Gorse.

Mountain gorses, since Linnæus
Knelt beside you on the sod,
For your beauty thanking God,—
For your teaching, ye should see us
Bowing in prostration new!

E. B. BROWNING, Lessons from the Gorse.

<sup>14</sup>
Love you not, then, to list and hear
The crackling of the gorse-flower near,
Pouring an orange-scented tide
Of fragrance o'er the desert wide?

WILLIAM HOWITT, A June Day.

Harebell

<sup>15</sup>
With drooping bells of clearest blue
Thou didst attract my childish view,
Almost resembling

The azure butterflies that flew
Where on the heath thy blossoms grew
So lightly trembling.

REGINALD HEBER, The Harebell.

<sup>16</sup>
Simplest of blossoms! To mine eye
Thou bring'st the summer's painted sky;
The May-thorn greening in the nook;
The minnows sporting in the brook;
The bleat of flocks; the breath of flowers;
The song of birds amid the bowers;
The crystal of the azure seas;
The music of the southern breeze;
And, over all, the blessed sun,
Telling of halcyon days begun.

And honeysuckle loved to crawl

Up the low crag and ruin'd wall.

SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iii, Introduction.

1
So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle
Gentle entwist.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iv, sc. 1, l. 45.

2
And bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where honeysuckles, ripen'd by the sun,
Forbid the sun to enter, like favorites,
Made proud by princes, that advance their pride

Against that power that bred it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act
iii, sc. 1, l. 7.

Hyacinth, Ivy, Jasmine, see separate headings.

Knapweed

3
By copse and hedgerow, waste and wall,
He thrusts his cushions red;

O'er burdock rank, o'er thistles tall,
He rears his hardy head:

Within, without, the strong leaves press,
He screens the mossy stone,

Lord of a narrow wilderness,
Self-centred and alone.

A. C. BENSON, Knapweed.

Lichen

4
Sharing the stillness of the unimpassioned rock, they share also its endurance; and while the winds of departing Spring scatter the white hawthorn blossom like drifted snow, and summer dims on the parched meadow the drooping of its cowslip-gold, far above, among the mountains, the silver lichen-spots rest, starlike, on the stone; and the gathering orange stain upon the edge of yonder Western peak reflects the sunsets of a thousand years.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Vol. v, pt. vi, ch. 10.

Lilac, Lily, Lotus, see separate headings.

Love-in-Idleness

5
Give me to live with Love alone
And let the world go dine and dress;

For Love hath lowly haunts. . . .

If life's a flower, I choose my own—
'Tis "love in Idleness."

LAMAN BLANCHARD, Dolce far Niente. St. 4.

6
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell:
It fell upon a little western flower,
Before milk-white, now purple with love's wound,

And maidens call it love-in-idleness.

Fetch me that flower; the herb I shew'd thee
once:

The juice of it on sleeping eyelids laid
Will make or man or woman madly dote

Upon the next live creature that it sees.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 165.

Marigold

7
No marigolds yet closed are,
No shadows great appear.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Daisies, Not to Shut So Soon.

8
The sun-observing marigold.

QUARLES, School of the Heart. Ode xxx, st. 5.

Mignonette

9
The Frenchman's darling.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 765. Cowper is referring to the mignonette. He is said to have been the one who gave this flower this now common name.

10
A pitcher of mignonette

In a tenement's highest casement,—

Queer sort of a flower-pot—yet

That pitcher of mignonette

Is a garden in heaven set

To the little sick child in the basement—

The pitcher of mignonette,

In the tenement's highest casement.

H. C. BUNNER, A Pitcher of Mignonette.

Mint

11
I am that flower,—That mint.—That columbine.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 661.

Moly

12
That moly

That Hermes once to wise Ulysses gave.

MILTON, Comus, l. 637.

13
Traveler, pluck a stem of moly,

If thou touch at Circe's isle,—

Hermes' moly, growing solely

To undo enchanter's wile!

EDITH M. THOMAS, Moly.

The root is hard to loose
From hold of earth by mortals; but God's power

Can all things do. 'Tis black, but bears a flower
As white as milk.

HOMER, Odyssey. (Chapman, tr.)

Morning-Glory

14
Was it worth while to paint so fair

Thy every leaf—to vein with faultless art

Each petal, taking the book light and air

Of summer so to heart? . . .

Thy silence answers: "Life was mine!

And I, who pass without regret or grief,

Have cared the more to make my moment fine,

Because it was so brief."

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Morning-Glory.

1
A morning-glory at my window satisfies me
more than the metaphysics of books.
WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 24.

Myrtle

2
The myrtle (ensign of supreme command, Consign'd by Venus to Melissa's hand)
Not less capricious than a reigning fair,
Oft favours, oft rejects a lover's prayer;
In myrtle shades oft sings the happy swain,
In myrtle shades despairing ghosts complain.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Written at the Request of a Gentleman, l. 3.

3
Once more,
Ye myrtles brown, with ivy never-sere,
I come to pluck your berries harsh and crude,
And with forc'd fingers rude,
Shatter your leaves before the mellowing year.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 1.

4
While the myrtle, now idly entwin'd with his
crown,
Like the wreath of Harmodius, shall cover his sword.
THOMAS MOORE, O, Blame Not The Bard.

Narcissus
See also Hyacinth, under separate heading.

5
And narcissi, the fairest among them all,
Who gaze on their eyes in the stream's recess,
Till they die of their own dear loveliness.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 5.

Nettle

6
This corner of the farmyard I like most:
As well as any bloom upon a flower
I like the dust on the nettles, never lost
Except to prove the sweetness of a shower.
EDWARD THOMAS, Tall Nettles.

Pansy, see separate heading.

Pink

7
You take a pink,
You dig about its roots and water it,
And so improve it to a garden-pink,
But will not change it to a heliotrope.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vi, l. 1044.

8
And I will pu' the pink, the emblem o' my
dear,
For she's the pink o' womankind, and blooms
without a peer.
BURNS, O Luve Will Venture In.

Poppy, Primrose, see separate headings.

Rhodora

9
In May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,
I found the fresh Rhodora in the woods,

Spreading its leafless blooms in a damp nook,
To please the desert and the sluggish brook.
The purple petals, fallen in the pool,
Made the black water with their beauty gay;
Here might the red-bird come his plumes to cool,

And court the flower that cheapens his array.
Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that if eyes were made for seeing,

Then Beauty is its own excuse for being:
Why thou wert there, O rival of the rose!
I never thought to ask, I never knew:
But, in my simple ignorance, suppose
The self-same Power that brought me there brought you.

EMERSON, The Rhodora.

Rose, see separate heading.

Rosemary

10
Dreary rosmarye
That always mourns the dead.
THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

11
The humble rosemary
Whose sweets so thanklessly are shed
To scent the desert and the dead.
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harem.

Sensitive Plant

12
A Sensitive Plant in a garden grew,
And the young winds fed it with silver dew;
And it opened its fan-like leaves to the light,
And closed them beneath the kisses of Night.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 1.

For the Sensitive Plant has no bright flower;
Radiance and odour are not its dower;
It loves, even like Love,—its deep heart is full;
It desires what it has not, the beautiful.
SHELLEY, The Sensitive Plant. Pt. i, st. 19.

Shamrock, see Ireland.

Snowdrop

13
Close to the sod there can be seen
A thought of God in white and green. . . .
It is so holy and yet so lowly.
ANNA BUNSTON DE BARY, The Snowdrop.

14
The morning star of flowers.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, Snow-Drop.

15
Chaste Snowdrop, venturous harbinger of Spring,
And pensive monitor of fleeting years.
WORDSWORTH, To a Snowdrop.

Lone Flower, hemmed in with snows and white as they
But harder far, once more I see thee bend
Thy forehead, as if fearful to offend,

Like an unbidden guest. Though day by day,
Storms, sallying from the mountain tops, waylay
The rising sun, and on the plains descend;
Yet art thou welcome, welcome as a friend
Whose zeal outruns his promise!

WORDSWORTH, To a Snowdrop.

Sunflower, see separate heading.

Sweet Basil

I pray your Highness mark this curious herb:
Touch it but lightly, stroke it softly, Sir,
And it gives forth an odor sweet and rare;
But crush it harshly and you'll make a scent
Most disagreeable.

CHARLES GODFREY LELAND, Sweet Basil.

Sweet Pea

Here are sweet peas, on tiptoe for a flight;
With wings of gentle flush o'er delicate white,
And taper fingers catching at all things,
To bind them all about with tiny rings.

KEATS, I Stood Tiptoe Upon a Little Hill, l. 57.

Tuberose

The tuberose, with her silvery light,
That in the gardens of Malay
Is call'd the Mistress of the Night,
So like a bride, scented and bright;
She comes out when the sun's away.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Light of the Harem.

Tulip

'Mid the sharp, short emerald wheat, scarce risen three fingers well,
The wild tulip, at end of its tube, blows out its great red bell,
Like a thin clear bubble of blood, for the children to pick and sell.

ROBERT BROWNING, Up at a Villa: Down in the City. St. 6.

The tulip is a courtly quean,
Whom, therefore, I will shun.

THOMAS HOOD, Flowers.

Not one of Flora's brilliant race
A form more perfect can display;
Art could not feign more simple grace
Nor Nature take a line away.

MONTGOMERY, On Planting a Tulip-Root.

Clean as a lady,
cool as glass,
fresh without fragrance
the tulip was.

HUMBERT WOLFE, Tulip.

Violet, see separate heading.

Wallflower

Flower in the crannied wall,

I pluck you out of the crannies,
I hold you here, root and all, in my hand,
Little flower—but if I could understand
What you are, root and all, and all in all,
I should know what God and man is.

TENNYSON, Flower in the Crannied Wall.

Wind-flower

Or, bide thou where the poppy blows,
With wind-flowers frail and fair.

BRYANT, The Arctic Lover.

Teach me the secret of thy loveliness,
That, being made wise, I may aspire to be
As beautiful in thought, and so express
Immortal truths to earth's mortality.

MADISON CAWEIN, To a Wind-Flower.

Anemone, so well
Named of the wind, to which thou art all free.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Wild Flowers, l. 9.

Thou lookest up with meek, confiding eye
Upon the clouded smile of April's face,
Unharm'd though Winter stands uncertain by,
Eyeing with jealous glance each opening grace.

JONES VERY, The Wind-flower.

FLY

For Fly in Amber, see Amber

It was prettily devised of Æsop: The fly sat upon the axle-tree of the chariot-wheel, and said, What a dust do I raise!

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Vain-Glory. Bacon was mistaken in attributing the fable to Æsop. It is found in the Fables of Phædrus (bk. iii, fab. 6).

What a dust have I rais'd! quoth the fly upon the coach.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5476.

The fly, which sitting upon a cart that was driven in the way, said he had raised a very great dust.

GUAZZO, Civil Conversations. Fo. 71. (1586)

Yet these are no more than the fly on the wheel.
WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Complete Armour, p. 299. (1679)

A fly sat on the chariot wheel
And said "what a dust I raise."

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 9.

And so we plough along, as the fly said to the ox.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act iii,
sc. 5.

The wanton boy that kills a fly
Shall feel the spider's enmity.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

I killed a fly this morning—it buzzed, and I wouldn't have it!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

As willingly as one would kill a fly.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 1, l. 142.

<sup>1</sup> Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 1. Hence, "A fly in the ointment."

<sup>2</sup> A fly is as untamable as a hyena.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

<sup>3</sup> An actually existing fly is more important than a possibly existing angel.

EMERSON, Letter to Moncure D. Conway.

<sup>4</sup> 'Twould make even a fly laugh.

<sup>5</sup> The fly that sips treacle is lost in the sweets.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act ii, sc. 2.

Flies come to feasts unasked.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>8</sup> A fly on your nose, you slap, and it goes; If it comes back again, it will bring a good rain.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 148.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 316. (1580)

Ants have bile and flies have spleen. (Formicæ sua bilis inest, habet et musca splenem.)

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1646) Quoted as a proverb.

Even a fly hath its spleen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1388.

<sup>10</sup> Busy, curious, thirsty fly,
Drink with me, and drink as I;
Freely welcome to my cup,
Couldst thou sip and sip it up.
Make the most of life you may;
Life is short and wears away.
Both alike are mine and thine,
Hastening quick to their decline;
Thine's a summer, mine no more,
Though repeated to three-score;
Three-score summers, when they've gone,
Will appear as short as one.

WILLIAM OLDYS, On a Fly Drinking Out of a Cup of Ale.

Go, poor devil, get thee gone! Why should I hurt thee? This world is surely wide enough to hold both thee and me.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Vol. ii, ch. 12. Uncle Toby is addressing a fly.

<sup>11</sup> King James said to the fly, Have I three kingdoms, and thou must needs fly into my eye?

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Religion.

<sup>12</sup> Though he in a fertile climate dwell,
Plague him with flies.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 70.

<sup>13</sup> Baby bye, Here's a fly,
Let us watch him, you and I,
How he crawls Up the walls
Yet he never falls.

THEODORE TILTON, Baby Bye.

He would fain fly but wanted feathers.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

<sup>20</sup> He rode upon a cherub, and did fly: yea, he did fly upon the wings of the wind.

Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 10.

On cherubs and on cherubims

Full royally he rode;

And on the wings of all the winds

Came flying all abroad.

THOMAS STERNHOLD, A Metrical Version of Psalm xviii.

On wings of winds came flying all abroad.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 218.

1
For I dipt into the future, far as human eye could see,
Saw the Vision of the world, and all the wonder that would be;
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies
of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down
with costly bales;
Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there
rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 119.

2
Darius was clearly of the opinion
That the air is also man's dominion
And that with paddle or fin or pinion,
We soon or late shall navigate
The azure as now we sail the sea.

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Darius Green and His Flying Machine.

"The birds can fly, an' why can't I?
Must we give in," says he, with a grin,
"T the bluebird an' phoebe are smarter 'n we be?
Jest fold our hands, an' see the swaller
An' blackbird an' catbird beat us holler? . . .
Jest show me that! er prove 't the bat
Hez got more brains than's in my hat,
An' I'll back down, an' not till then!"

J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Darius Green and His Flying Machine.

"Wal, I like flyin' well enough,"
He said, "but the' ain't sich a thundern' sight
O' fun in't when ye come to light."

FOG

4
Wrapped in a cloak
Of grey mystery,
Fog, the magician,
Steals tip-toe out of the sea.
MELVILLE CANE, Fog, The Magician.

5
A fog cannot be dispelled with a fan.
MICHAEL A. DENHAM, Proverbs.

6
This is a London particular—a fog, miss.
DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 3.

7
The yellow fog that rubs its back upon the window-panes,
T. S. ELIOT, The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock.

8
The fog comes
on little cat feet.
It sits looking over the harbor and city
on silent haunches
and then, moves on.
CARL SANDBURG, Fog.

9
There must be something good in you, I know,
Or why does everyone abuse you so?
OWEN SEAMAN, In Praise of Fog.

10
To lose itself in a fog.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 34.
The starry welkin cover thou anon
With drooping fog as black as Acheron.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act iii, sc. 2, l. 357.

11
The yellow fog came creeping down
The bridges, till the houses' walls
Seemed changed to shadows, and St. Paul's Loomed like a bubble o'er the town.
OSCAR WILDE, Impression du Matin.

FOLLY

12
The folly of one man is the fortune of another.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune.

13
If others had not been foolish, we should be
so.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

14
This picture, placed these busts between,
Gives Satire its full strength;
Wisdom and Wit are little seen,
But Folly at full length.
JANE BRERETON, On Beau Nash's Picture at Full Length between the Busts of Sir Isaac Newton and Mr. Pope, in the Pump Room at Bath. (Poems, 1744; DYCE, Specimens of British Poetesses.) This epigram is often ascribed to Lord Chesterfield (CAMPBELL,
English Poets, p. 521, note; MATTHEW MATY, Memoirs of Chesterfield, sec. 4), and was also included by Henry Norris in an edition of his own poems published in 1740.
(See Notes and Queries, 10 Feb., 1917, p.
119.)

15
And Folly loves the martyrdom of Fame.
BYRON, Monody on the Death of Sheridan.

16
Folly is wont to have more followers and comrades than discretion. (Mas acompañados y paniguados debe di tener la locura que la discrecion.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13.

17
Many count their chickens before they are hatched; and where they expect bacon, meet with broken bones.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 55.

To swallow gudgeons ere they're catch'd,

And count their chickens ere they're hatch'd.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 923.

You reckon your chickens before they are hatched.

ERASMUS, Colloquies, 39. (Bailey, tr.)

Take care we don't reckon our chickens before they are hatched.

JAMES HOWARD, English Monsieur. Act iii, sc. 3. (1674)

My chickings are not hatched; I nil to count of them as yet.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iv, sc. 1. (1577)

You are over hasty: your harvest is still in the blade. (Nimium properas: et adhuc tua messis in herba est.)

His ambition is to sink,
To reach a depth profounder still, and still Profounder, in the fathomless abyss
Of folly.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 592.

Folly in youth is sin, in age 'tis madness.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Tragedy of Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 2.

Happy the man who knows his follies in his youth.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa Harlowe, iv, 121. Quoting a proverb.

All is laughter, all is dust, all is nothing, for all that is cometh from folly. (Πάντα γέλως, καὶ πάντα κόνις, καὶ πάντα τὸ μηδέν· πάντα γὰρ ἐξ ἀλόγων ἐστὶ τὰ γινόμενα.)

GLYCON. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 124.)

The folly of others is ever most ridiculous to those who are themselves most foolish.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 43.

In my time the follies of the town crept slowly among us, but now they travel faster than a stage coach.

Who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks. (Qui vit sans folie n'est pas si sage qu'il croit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 209.

And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 26-27.

Oft would he say, Who builds his house on sands,
Pricks his blind horse across the fallow lands,
Or lets his wife abroad with pilgrims roam,
Deserves a fool's-cap and long ears at home.

How much folly there is in human affairs. (Quantum est in rebus inane!)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 1.

Eye Nature's walks, shoot folly as it flies,
And catch the manners living as they rise.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 13.

Thou comedy to men,
Whose serious folly is a butt for all
To shoot their wits at!

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 1.

In Folly's cup still laughs the bubble joy.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 283.

Leave such to trifle with more grace and ease,
Whom Folly pleases, and whose follies please.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 326.

I saw a new world in my dream,
Where all the follies alike did seem.

W. B. RANDS, I Saw a New World.

Young gentlemen! pray recollect, if you please,

Not to make assignations near mulberry trees;
Should your mistress be missing, it shows a weak head

To be stabbing yourself till you know she is dead.

J. G. SAXE, Pyramus and Thisbe: Moral.

<sup>1</sup> Folly always loathes itself. (Omnis stultitia laborat fastidio sui.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 22.

Folly is often sick of itself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1559.

<sup>2</sup> Folly is low, abject, mean, slavish, and exposed to many of the cruellest passions.
(Humilis res est stultitia, abiecta, sordida, servilis, multis affectibus et sævissimis subiecta.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxvii, 4.

<sup>3</sup> The common curse of mankind—folly and ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
3, l. 31.

Foolery, sir, does walk about the orb like the sun, it shines every where.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 44.

<sup>4</sup> You may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act i, sc. 2, l. 426.

<sup>5</sup> The word Folly is, perhaps, the prettiest word in the language.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 5.

Folly is the direct pursuit of Happiness and Beauty.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

<sup>6</sup> 'Tis not by guilt the onward sweep
Of truth and right, O Lord, we stay;
'Tis by our follies that so long
We hold the earth from heaven away.
E. R. SILL, The Fool's Prayer.

<sup>7</sup> Brutes find out where their talents lie:
A bear will not attempt to fly;
A founder'd horse will oft debate,
Before he tries a five-barr'd gate;
A dog by instinct turns aside,
Who sees the ditch too deep and wide;
But man we find the only creature
Who, led by Folly, combats Nature;
Who, when she loudly cries, Forbear
With obstinacy fixes there;
And, where his genius least inclines,
Absurdly bends his whole designs.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 13.

<sup>8</sup> It is well to advise folly, not to punish it.
(Monere non punire stultitiam decet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 412.

<sup>15</sup> Fools are my theme, let satire be my song.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers,
l. 6.

<sup>16</sup> There is a greatest Fool, as superlative in every kind; and the most Foolish man in the Earth is now indubitably living and breathing, and did this morning or lately eat breakfast.
CARLYLE, Essays: Biography.

<sup>17</sup> A fool can not be still.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 574.

<sup>18</sup> Fools never perceive where they are ill-timed or ill-placed.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 July, 1749.

Fool beckons fool, and dunce awakens dunce.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 42.

<sup>19</sup> O fate of fools! officious in contriving;
In executing puzzled, lame and lost.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act v, sc. 1.

We speak of hardships, but the true hardship is to be a dull fool, and permitted to mismanage life in our own dull and foolish manner.

R. L. STEVENSON, Travels with a Donkey.

<sup>20</sup> Painted fools Are caught with silken shows.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Quest of Cynthia.

1 The fool of nature stood with stupid eyes
And gaping mouth, that testified surprise.

(Πολλάκι τοι καὶ μωρὸς ἀνὴρ μάλα καίριον εἶπεν.)
AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. ii, ch. 6,
sec. 9. Referred to as a "very ancient line."

Though syllogisms hang not on my tongue,
I am not surely always in the wrong!
'Tis hard if all is false that I advance,—
A fool must now and then be right, by chance.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 93.

A fool's bolt may sometimes hit the white.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 107.

5 The old proverb, of fools have fortune.
HENRY GLAPTHORNE, Wit in a Constable. Act
iii.

Call me not fool till heaven hath sent me fortune.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 19.

anxiety.]
GOETHE, Conversations with Eckermann.

7 Fools will still be fools.
ROBERT HEATH, Satyr, 9. (1650)

8 To make a trade of laughing at a fool is the highway to become one.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 172.

One should no more laugh at a contemptible fool than at a dead fly.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 235.

All fools have still an itching to deride,
And fain would be upon the laughing side.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 32.

9 A man may be as much a fool from the want of sensibility as the want of sense.
ANNA JAMESON, Detached Thoughts, p. 122.

12 A fool is one whom simpletons believe to be a man of merit. (Un fat est celui que les sots croient un homme de mérite.)
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. xii.

13 Alas, how soon the hours are over
Counted us out to play the lover!
And how much narrower is the stage
Allotted us to play the sage!
But when we play the fool, how wide,
The theatre expands! beside,
How long the audience sits before us!
How many prompters! what a chorus!
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Plays.

14 It needs brains to be a real fool.
GEORGE MACDONALD, Weighed and Wanting.
Ch. 26.

15 A fool! a fool! my coxcomb for a fool!
JOHN MARSTON, Parasitaster. (1606)

16 The strong fool breasts the flood and dies,
The weak fool turns his back and flies.
JOAQUIN MILLER, A Song of Creation. Canto v,
st. 2.

17 You are a fool in three letters. (Vous êtes un sot, en trois lettres.)
MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act i, sc. 1, l. 16.

20 Or serve (like other fools) to fill a room.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 136.

21 You think me cruel? take it for a rule,
No creature smarts so little as a fool.
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 83.

22 No place so sacred from such fops is barr'd,
Nor is Paul's church more safe than Paul's church-yard:

Nay, fly to altars; there they'll talk you dead;
For fools rush in where angels fear to tread.
POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 63.

23 A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

Cross words and angry names require
To be chastised at school;

And he's in danger of hell-fire

That calls his brother fool.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Scoffing.

14
The best way to silence any friend of yours whom you know to be a fool is to induce him to hire a hall.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, New York, 27 Jan., 1916.

Nothing exceeds in ridicule, no doubt,
A fool in fashion, but a fool that's out;
His passion for absurdity's so strong,
He cannot bear a rival in the wrong.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 105.

16
A sot's bolt is soon shot.

<sup>13</sup> How ill white hairs become a fool and jester.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 5, l. 52.

<sup>14</sup> At thirty man suspects himself a fool;

Knows it at forty, and reforms his plan;

At fifty chides his infamous delay,

Pushes his prudent purpose to resolve;

In all the magnanimity of thought

Resolves; and re-resolves; then dies the same.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 417.

IV—Fool: The Fool's Tongue

<sup>15</sup> The treasure of a fool is always in his tongue.

<sup>16</sup> And fools cannot hold their tongue.

CHAUCE, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5266.

A fool could never hold his peace; for too much talking is ever the indice of a fool.

DEMACATUS. (JONSON, Explorata: Homeri Ulysses, quoting Plutarch.)

But fools, to talking ever prone,

Are sure to make their follies known.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 44.

<sup>19</sup> A fool's mouth is his destruction.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 7.

V—Fools and Knaves

<sup>20</sup> A fool and knave with different views

For Julia's hand apply;

The knave to mend his fortune sues,

The fool to please his eye.

Ask you how Julia will behave,

Depend on't for a rule,

If she's a fool she'll wed the knave—

If she's a knave, the fool.

SAMUEL BISHOP, The Touchstone.

<sup>21</sup> O reader, behold the Philosopher's grave!

He was born quite a Fool, but he died quite a Knave.

WILLIAM BLAKE, On Sir Joshua Reynolds.

Folly is the cloak of knavery.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

frowning fool, shall both be thought wise, that they may be a rod.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

<sup>24</sup> A fool sees not the same tree that a wise man sees.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

1 Nothing can confound
A wise man more than laughter from a dunce.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 88.

In the vain laughter of folly wisdom hears half its applause.

GEORGE ELIOT, Romola. Bk. i, ch. 12.
See also under LAUGHTER.

2 Fools set stools for wise men to stumble at.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)

A fool may throw a stone into a well which a hundred wise men cannot pull out.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3 Wise men profit more from fools than fools from wise men; for the wise shun the mistakes of fools, but fools do not imitate the successes of the wise.

MARCUS CATO. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. ix, sec. 4.)

Cato Major would say: "That wise men learned more by fools than fools by wise men."

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 167. MON-
TAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8.

Wise men learn by others' harms, fools scarcely by their own.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

4 A fool knows more in his own house than a wise man in another's.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

5 A fool may eke a wise man often guide.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 630.

6 The strongest plume in wisdom's pinion
Is the memory of past folly.
S. T. COLERIDGE, To an Unfortunate Woman.

7 Any fool can carry on, but only the wise man knows how to shorten sail.
JOSEPH CONRAD, Message to Tusitala.

8 God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty.
New Testament: I Corinthians, i, 27.

9 The wise too jealous are, fools too secure.
CONGREVE, The Way of the World. Act iii, sc. 3.

10 Design'd by Nature wise, but self-made fools.
COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 837.

11 Who are a little wise, the best fools be.
JOHN DONNE, The Triple Fool.

Nae man can play the fule sae weel as the wise man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

This fellow's wise enough to play the fool;
And to do that well craves a kind of wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 67.

12 Then I saw that wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness. The wise man's eyes are in his head; but the fool walketh in darkness.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ii, 13, 14.

It is better to hear the rebuke of the wise, than for a man to hear the song of fools.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 5.

13 The wise through excess of wisdom is made a fool.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

14 The wise man draws more advantage from his enemies, than the fool from his friends.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

15 Fools are wise men in the affairs of women.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1571.

16 A fool and a wise man are alike both in the starting-place—their birth, and at the post—their death; only they differ in the race of their lives.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and Profane
States: Of Natural Fools*. Maxim 4.

Solomon laid hold of folly, as well as wisdom, that he might see what was good for the Sons of Men.

FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam, 188.

17 The fools and the wise are equally harmless;
it is the half-wise and the half-foolish who are the most to be feared.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

18 The wisest fool in Christendom.

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, of James I of England, when the latter abandoned him for an alliance with Spain.

19 Better be foolish with all than wise by yourself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

None is so wise but the fool o'ertakes him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Fools bite one another, but wise men agree together.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

20 It is the folly of the world constantly which confounds its wisdom.

Table*. Ch. 1.

21 He dares to be a fool, and that is the first step in the direction of wisdom.

22 Fears of the brave, and follies of the wise!

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *The Vanity of Human
Wishes*, l. 314.

23 He who lives without folly is not so wise as he thinks. (Qui vit sans folie n'est pas si sage qu'il croit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 209.

He who hath not a dram of folly in his mixture hath pounds of much worse matter in his composition.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: All Fools' Day.

1 And what, in a mean man, I should call folly, Is in your majesty remarkable wisdom.

MASSINGER, The Picture. Act i, sc. 2.

2 At times discretion should be thrown aside, And with the foolish we should play the fool. (Ὁ πανταχοῦ τὸ φρόνιμον ἀρμόττει παρὸν, καὶ συμμαρῆναι δ' ἕνα δεῖ.)

MENANDER, Poloumenoi. Frag. 2.

Mingle a short spell of folly with your studies; it is sweet on occasion to play the fool. (Misce stultitiam consiliis brevem; Dulce est desipere in loco.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 12, l. 27.

Then, Pallas, take away thine Owl, And let us have a lark instead.

THOMAS HOOD, To Minerva.

A wise man holds himself in check, But fools and poets run ahead. One must be credulous or sit Forever with the living dead.

The wise man shuts his door at night And pulls the bolts and drops the bars. One must go trustful through the dark To earn the friendship of the stars.

SCUDDER MIDDLETON, Wisdom.

3 He who has once been very foolish will at no other time be very wise. (Qui aura esté une fois bien fol ne sera nulle aultre fois bien sage.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

4 A little folly is desirable in him that will not be guilty of stupidity.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.

A LITTLE NONSENSE NOW AND THEN, see under NONSENSE.

5 To succeed in this world, one must have the appearance of a fool and be wise.

MONTESQUIEU, Maximes.

6 He may be called a fool that . . . announced himself to be wise.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, Dialogue of Princes. Fo. 91. (1557)

The first chapter of fools is to count themselves wise.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 29. (1578)

People are never so near playing the fool as when they think themselves wise.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Lady Bute, 1 March, 1755.

He who thinks himself wise, O heavens! is a great fool. (Qui se croit sage, ô ciel! est un grand fou.)

A fool with judges, among fools a judge.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 298.

13 A fool may ask more questions in an hour than a wise man can answer in seven years.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 91. (1670)

A fool will ask more questions than the wisest can answer.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

Examinations are formidable even to the best prepared, for the greatest fool may ask more than the wise man can answer.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Reflections. No. 322.

14 Professing themselves to be wise, they became fools.

New Testament: Romans, i, 22.

15 A little group of wise hearts is better than a wilderness of fools.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive: War.

16 The Italian seems wise, and is wise; the Spaniard seems wise, and is a fool; the French seems a fool, and is wise; and the English seems a fool and is a fool.

THOMAS SCOT, The Highwaies of God and the King, p. 8. (1623) Quoted as a proverb.

1 Folly is pursued, and confronted, by peril.
... But the wise man is fortified against all attacks. (Secuntur pericula et occurrunt. . . . Sapiens autem ad omnem incursum munitus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lix, sec. 8.

Folly may creep upwards toward wisdom, but wisdom never slips back into folly. (Stultitia ad sapientiam eripit, sapientia in stultitiam non revolvitur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, 19.

2 Full oft we see
Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly.
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 1, l. 115.

3 Touchstone: The more pity, that fools may not speak wisely, what wise men do foolishly. Celia: By my troth, thou say'st true; for since the little wit that fools have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great show.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2, l. 92.

The fool doth think he is wise, but the wise man knows himself to be a fool.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 1, l. 34.
Quoted as "a saying."

4 Well, thus we play the fools with the time, and the spirits of the wise sit in the clouds and mock us.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 153.

Powers above in clouds do sit,
Mocking our poor apish wit,
That so lamely, with such state
Their high glory imitate.

THOMAS CAMPION, Life's Progress.

5 Servant: Thou art not altogether a fool. Fool: Nor thou altogether a wise man: as much foolery as I have, so much wit thou lackest.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 122.

Well, God give them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 14.

6 Twenty wise men may easily add up into one fool.

J. A. SPENDER, Comments of Bagshot. Ch. 11.

7 Some people take more care to hide their wisdom than their folly.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

8 Wise men may think, what hardly fools would say.

SWINBURNE, Mary Stuart. Act iv, sc. 2.

9 Immortal gods! how much does one man excel another! What a difference there is between a wise person and a fool! (Di immortales, ho-mini homo quid præstat! Stulto intellegens quid interest!)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 232. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

10 Nor is he the wisest man who never proved himself a fool.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 244.

If thou hast never been a fool, be sure thou wilt never be a wise man.

THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower.

And he is oft the wisest man

Who is not wise at all.

WORDSWORTH, The Oak and the Broom. St. 7.

11 A man of sense can artifice disdain,
As men of wealth may venture to go plain. . . .

I find the fool when I behold the screen,
For 'tis the wise man's interest to be seen.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 193.

VII—Fool's Paradise

12 I would not be in a fool's paradise.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters. Vol. ii, p. 109. (1462)

Thou shouldst not bring me in a fool's paradise. Mathew's Bible: II Kings, iv. (1549)

13 Thy fairest prospects, rightly viewed,
The Paradise of Fools.

THOMAS BLACKLOCK, Ode on the Refinements in Metaphysical Philosophy.

14 The fool shall not enter into heaven, let him be ever so holy.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Why Men Enter Heaven.

15 A fool's paradise is better than a wiseacre's purgatory.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Deuce Is In Him. Act i, sc. 1.

16 In this fool's paradise he drank delight.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 12.

FOOT

<sup>4</sup> Make your feet your friend.

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 137. In other words, "Get out!"

<sup>5</sup> My feet, they haul me Round the House,
They Hoist me up the Stairs;
I only have to steer them, and
They Ride me Everywheres.
GELETT BURGESS, My Feet.

<sup>6</sup> The many-twinkling feet so small and sylph-like,
Suggesting the more perfect symmetry

Of the fair forms which terminate so well.

BYRON, Marino Faliero. Act iv. See also under DANCING.

<sup>7</sup> This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.

Old Testament: Daniel, ii, 32, 33.

It is the feet of clay that makes the gold of the image precious.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 15.

<sup>8</sup> Be swift their feet as antelopes,
And as behemoth strong.

EMERSON, Boston Hymn.

<sup>9</sup> Better a bare foot than none.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

HERODOTUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 82. Plutarch, as reported by Aulus Gellius (Noctes Atticæ, i, 1) tells how Pythagoras deduced the stature of Hercules from the length of his foot.

You shall not know the length of my foot.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 290. (1580)

Having now the full length of his foot, then shows she herself what she is.

THOMAS DEKKER, Works. Vol. i, p. 203.

Well, gossip, I know too the length of your foot.

D'AVENANT, Play-House to be Let. Act v.

rected towards thy den, and none returning. (Quia me vestigia terrent, Omnia te adversum spectantia, nulla retrorsum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 74. The fox speaking to the lion. "Vestigia nulla retrorsum" is the motto of the Hampden family and others.

<sup>12</sup> By the foot of Pharaoh!

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>13</sup> Her treading would not bend a blade of grass
Or shake the downy blue-ball from his stalk,
And where she went, the flowers took thickest root,

As she had sow'd them with her odorous foot.

BEN JONSON, The Sad Shepherd. Act i, sc. 1.

Whilst from off the waters fleet

Thus I set my printless feet

O'er the cowslip's velvet head,

That bends not as I tread.

MILTON, Comus, l. 896.

A foot more light, a step more true,
Ne'er from the heath-flower dashed the dew;
E'en the slight harebell raised its head,
Elastic from her airy tread.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 18.

The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 1028.

Steps with a tender foot, light as on air,
The lovely, lordly creature floated on.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. vi, l. 72.

But light as any wind that blows

So fleetly did she stir,

The flower she touch'd on dipt and rose,
And turn'd to look at her.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 129.

<sup>14</sup> Feet that run on willing errands!

<sup>15</sup> Whose feet are shod with silence.

LONGFELLOW, Tegnér's Drapa. St. 6.

<sup>16</sup> He stood a spell on one foot fust,

Then stood a spell on t'other,

An' on which one he felt the wust

He couldn't ha' told ye nuther.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'.

<sup>17</sup> His very foot has music in't
As he comes up the stair.

WILLIAM JULIUS MICKLE, The Sailor's Wife.
Sometimes attributed to Jean Adam.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 170.

Come on, my lords, the better foot before.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 192.

You should . . . put your best foot forward.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 10.

Here comes the lady! O, so light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 16.

Nay, her foot speaks.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 56.

O happy earth,

Whereon thy innocent feet do ever tread!

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto x, st. 9.

Her feet beneath her petticoat,
Like little mice, stole in and out,
As if they feared the light.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, A Ballad Upon a Wedding. St. 8. (1637)

Her pretty feet like snails did creep

A little out, and then,

As if they played at Bo-peep,
Did soon draw in again.

ROBERT HERRICK, Upon Mistress Susanna Southwell: Her Feet. (1650)

The prettiest foot! Oh, if a man could but fasten his eyes to her feet, as they steal in and out and play at Bo-peep under her petticoats.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 2. (1695)

But from the hoop's bewitching round,
Her very shoe has power to wound.

EDWARD MOORE, Fables: The Spider and the Bee. (1744)

And feet like sunny gems on an English green.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 175.

FOP

Curl'd minion, dancer, coiner of sweet words!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Sohrab and Rustum, l. 458.

The wealthy curled darlings of our nation.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 2, l. 68.

That dandy-despot, he,
That jewell'd mass of millinery,
That oil'd and curl'd Assyrian bull
Smelling of musk and of insulence.

TENNYSON, Maud, l. 231.

We've no accomplish'd blackguards, like Tom Jones,

But gentlemen in stays, as stiff as stones.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 110.

All affectation is bad. (Toda Afertacion es mala.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 25.

They are the affectation of affectation.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

I marched the lobby, twirled my stick, . . .

The girls all cried, "He's quite the kick."

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Broad Grins.

The solemn fop; significant and budge;

A fool with judges, amongst fools a judge.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 299.

He cannot drink five bottles, bilk the score,
Then kill a constable, and drink five more;
But he can draw a pattern, make a tart,
And has the ladies' etiquette by heart.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 193.

Foppery atones

For folly, gallantry for ev'ry vice.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 689.

True fops help nature's work, and go to school
To file and finish God Almighty's fool.

DRYDEN, Man of Mode: Epilogue.

Squinting upon the lustre

Of the rich Rings which on his fingers glistre;
And, snuffing with a wrythed nose the Amber,
The Musk and Civet that perfum'd the chamber.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
ii, day 3. (Sylvester, tr.)

Soft carpet-knights all scenting musk and amber.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 3.

Carpet knights are men who are by the prince's grace and favour made knights at home. . . .
They are called carpet knights because they receive their honours in the court and upon carpets.

GERVASE MARKHAM, Booke of Honour. (1625)

Of all the fools that pride can boast,

A Coxcomb claims distinction most.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 5.

A greenery-yallery, Grosvenor Gallery

Foot-in-the-grave young man!

W. S. GILBERT, Patience. Act ii.

There's Bardus, a six-foot column of fop,

A lighthouse without any light atop.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her First Step.

Fitted for girls; a ladies' man. (Puellis nuper idoneus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 26, l. 1.

He has thrown his spats away,

He is wearing spurs today,

And the world will please take notice that the Yankee dude'll do!

S. E. KISER, The Yankee Dude'll Do.

A beau is one who, with the nicest care,

In parted locks divides his curling hair;

One who with balm and cinnamon smells
sweet,

Whose humming lips some Spanish air repeat;

Whose naked arms are smooth'd with pumice-stone,

And toss'd about with graces all their own:
A beau is one who takes his constant seat
From morn to evening, where the ladies meet;
And ever, on some sofa hovering near,
Whispers some nothing in some fair one's ear;
Who scribbles thousand billets-doux a day;
Still reads and scribbles, reads, and sends away: . . .

Who knows who flirts with whom, and still is found

At each good table in successive round.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 63. (Elton, tr.)

He, Cotta, who is a pretty man is a paltry man.
(Qui bellus homo, Cotta, pusillus homo est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 9.

Accustom him to everything, that he may not be a Sir Paris, a carpet-knight, but a sinewy, hardy, and vigorous young man.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

Ye curious carpet knights, that spend the time
in sport and play,
Abroad, and see new sights, your country's cause calls you away.

HUMPHREY GIFFORD, For Soldiers.

Some are bewilder'd in the maze of schools,
And some made coxcombs Nature meant but fools.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 26.

Nature made ev'ry fop to plague his brother,
Just as one beauty mortifies another.

POPE, Satires of Dr. John Donne. Sat. iv, l. 258.

Who knows a fool must know his brother;
One fop will recommend another.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 9, l. 11.

Sir Plume, of amber snuff-box justly vain,
And the nice conduct of a clouded cane.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iv, l. 123.

He was perfumed like a milliner;
And 'twixt his finger and his thumb he held
A pouncet-box, which ever and anon
He gave his nose, and too 't away again.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 36.

A beardless boy, A cocker'd, silken wanton.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 1, l. 69.

He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odd,
as it were; too peregrinate, as I may call it.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 1, l. 13.

I call'd him Crichton, for he seem'd
All-perfect, finish'd to the finger-nail.

TENNYSON, Edwin Morris, l. 22.

A fop? In this brave, licentious age
To bring his musty morals on the stage?

SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours.
Act v.

A man who can dominate a London dinner-table can dominate the world. The future belongs to the dandy. It is the exquisites who are going to rule.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance.
Act iii.

A lofty cane, a sword with silver hilt,
A ring, two watches, and a snuff box gilt.

UNKNOWN, Recipe to Make a Modern Fop.

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 494.

And so no force, however great,
Can strain a cord, however fine,
Into a horizontal line
That shall be absolutely straight.

WILLIAM WHEWELL, Force. Quoted as an accidental instance of rhyme and meter.

FOREIGNERS

1 Wide open and unguarded stand our gates,
Named of the four winds, North, South, East, and West. . . .

O Liberty, white Goddess! is it well
To leave the gates unguarded? On thy breast Fold Sorrow's children, soothe the hurts of Fate,

Lift the down-trodden, but with hand of steel
Stay those who to thy sacred portals come
To waste the gifts of Freedom.

T. B. ALDRICH, Unguarded Gates.

2 Each breath
Of foreign air he draws seems a slow poison.
BYRON, The Two Foscari. Act i, sc. 1.

3 The more I saw of foreign lands, the more I loved my own.

DE BELLOY, Siège de Calais.

What I gained by being in France was learning to be better satisfied with my own country.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life.)

4 An English lady on the Rhine hearing a German speaking of her party as foreigners, exclaimed, "No, we are not foreigners; we are English; it is you that are foreigners."

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 151.

Father, Mother and Me,
Sister and Auntie say
All the people like us are We,
And every one else is They.

RUDYARD KIPLING, We and They.

5 Here you would know, and enjoy, what posterity will say of Washington. For a thousand leagues have nearly the same effect with a thousand years.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Washington.
5 March, 1780.

We are a kind of posterity in respect to them.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to William Strahan, 1745.

Foreigners are contemporary posterity. (Les étrangers sont la postérité contemporaine.)

MADAME DE STAËL. (CROKER, Memoirs, i, 326.)

Byron's European fame is the best earnest of his immortality, for a foreign nation is a kind of contemporaneous posterity.

HORACE BINNEY WALLACE, Stanley, or the Recollections of a Man of the World. Vol. ii,
p. 89. (1838)

6 And I'll wager in their joy they kissed each other's cheek

(Which is what them furriners do).

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

7 People have prejudices against a nation in which they have no acquaintance.

PHILIP HAMERTON, Modern Frenchmen: Henri Perreyve.

8 Immoral money first brought in foreign manners. (Prima peregrinos obsœna Pecunia mores Intulit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 298.

9 Hope nothing from foreign governments. They will never be really willing to aid you until you have shown that you are strong enough to conquer without them.

MAZZINI, Life and Writings: Young Italy.

10 By foreign hands thy dying eyes were closed,
By foreign hands thy decent limbs composed,
By foreign hands thy humble grave adorn'd,
By strangers honour'd, and by strangers
mourn'd.

POPE, *Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate
Lady*, l. 51.

11 At the gate of the West I stand,
On the isle where the nations throng.
We call them "scum o' the earth."

R. H. SCHAUFFLER, Scum o' the Earth.

12 They spell it Vinci and pronounce it Vinchy; foreigners always spell better than they pronounce.

MARK TWAIN, Innocents Abroad.

13 A foreigner can photograph the exteriors of a nation, but I think that is as far as he can get.
No foreigner can report its interior—its soul,
its life, its speech, its thought.

MARK TWAIN, What Paul Bourget Thinks of Us.

He reports the American joke correctly. In Boston they ask, How much does he know? In New York, How much is he worth? In Philadelphia, Who were his parents? And when an alien observer turns his telescope upon us, a natural apprehension moves us to ask, What is the diameter of his reflector?

<sup>8</sup> Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional.

<sup>9</sup> There is no need to say "forget," I know,
For youth is youth, and time will have it so.
ANDREW LANG, Good-Bye.

<sup>10</sup> You say, when I kissed you, you are sure I must quite Have forgotten myself. So I did; you are right.

No, I'm not such an egotist, dear, it is true,
As to think of myself when I'm looking at you.
WALTER LEARNED, Humility.

<sup>11</sup> I shook my head, perhaps,—but quite Forgot to quite forget her.
F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, St. James's Street.

<sup>12</sup> Darker grows the valley, more and more forgetting:

So were it with me if forgetting could be willed.

Tell the grassy hollow that holds the bubbling well-spring,
Tell it to forget the source that keeps it filled.
GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley.

Romans, forget your fealty to me.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 255.

<sup>22</sup> We bury love,
Forgetfulness grows over it like grass;

That is a thing to weep for, not the dead.
ALEXANDER SMITH, A Boy's Poem. Pt. iii.

1 I remember the way we parted,
The day and the way we met;
You hoped we were both broken-hearted,
And knew we should both forget.
SWINBURNE, An Interlude. St. 11.

And the best and the worst of this is
That neither is most to blame,
If you've forgotten my kisses
And I've forgotten your name.
* SWINBURNE, An Interlude. St. 14.

2 Forget thee . . . Never—
Till Nature, high and low, and great and small Forgets herself, and all her loves and hates
Sink again into Chaos.
TENNYSON, The Foresters. Act i, sc. 3.

FORGIVENESS

I—Forgive and Forgiven

7 They who forgive most shall be most forgiven.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

8 And throughout all Eternity
I forgive you, you forgive me.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Broken Love.

9 Now may the good God pardon all good men!
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iv, l. 506.

10 But Thou art good; and Goodness still Delighteth to forgive.

ROBERT BURNS, A Prayer in the Prospect of Death.

11 But to have power to forgive,
Is empire and prerogative;
And 'tis in crowns a nobler gem
To grant a pardon than condemn.
BUTLER, An Heroical Epistle of Hudibras to His Lady, l. 135.

12 He who forgives readily only invites offense.

(Qui pardonne aisément invite à l'offenser.)
CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act iv, sc. 4.

To forgive everyone is as much cruelty as to forgive no one. (Tam ignoscere omnibus crudelitas est quam nulli.)
SENECA.

13 But I forgive you. . . I do, and you can't help yourself.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 42. Uriah
Heep speaking.

14 God may forgive you, but I never can.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, to the Countess of Nottingham. (HUME, History of England. Ch. 44.)

And unforgiving, unforgiven dies.

UNKNOWN, Lines on the Death of Queen Caroline. (1821)

15 If anyone will take these two words to heart and use them for his own guidance and regulation, he will be almost without sin and will lead a very peaceful life. These two words are bear and forbear. (Ἀνέχου καὶ ἀπέχου.)

EPICTETUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ.
Bk. xvii, epis. 19, sec. 6.)

16 O Thou, who Man of baser Earth did make,
And ev'n with Paradise devise the Snake:
For all the sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blackened—Man's forgiveness give,—and take!

FITZGERALD, Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám. St.
81. This stanza is not in Omar, but is an interpolation by Fitzgerald.

17 The offender never pardons.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

FORGIVENESS TO THE INJURED DOETH BELONG, see under INJURY.

18 It is just that he who asks forgiveness for his offenses should give it in turn. (Æquum est Peccatis veniam poscentem reddere rursus.)
HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 3, l. 74.

19 Nobuddy ever fergits where he buried a hatchet.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 52.

20 One pardons in the degree that one loves. (On pardonne tant que l'on aime.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 330.

21 Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do.

New Testament: Luke, xxiii, 34.

22 Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 12.

Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those that trespass against us.

Book of Common Prayer: The Lord's Prayer.

This is the version generally in use in English and American churches, both Catholic and Protestant.

Forgive us our sins; for we also forgive every one that is indebted to us.

New Testament: Luke, xi, 4.

1 And I think, in the lives of most women and men,

There's a moment when all would go smooth and even,

If only the dead could find out when

To come back, and be forgiven.

OWEN MEREDITH, Aux Italiens.

2 Philosophy is toleration, and it is only one step from toleration to forgiveness.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act ii.

3 Forgiveness is better than revenge. (Συγγνώμη τιμωρίας κρείσσων.)

PITTACUS, when he released Alcæus, after having him in his power. (DIOGENES LAËRTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 76.)

Forgiveness is better than revenge; for forgiveness is the sign of a gentle nature, but revenge the sign of a savage nature.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 68.

4 Only heaven
Means crowned, not conquered, when it says
"Forgiven."

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Legend of Provence.

5 Forgive others often, yourself never. (Ignoscito sæpe alter, nunquam tibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 325.

Pardon all but thyself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6 To forgive much makes the powerful more powerful. (Multa ignoscendo fit potens potentior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 384.

To forgive is beautiful. (Pulchrum ignoscere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 544.

7 Forgive that you may be forgiven. (Ut absolvaris, ignosce.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, sec. 28.

8 Pardon's the word to all.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act v, sc. 5, l. 422.

I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 3, l. 131.

A virtuous and a Christian-like conclusion,

To pray for them that have done scathe to us.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 316.

Not to relent is beastly, savage, devilish.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 265.

9 May one be pardoned, and retain the offence?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 56.

10 God never pardons; his laws are irrevocable;

the mind that deserts its better knowledge must suffer.

God always pardons; for remorse is penitence, and penitence is new life, and returning peace.

WILLIAM SMITH, Thorndale. Pt. ii, sec. 13.

11 To understand everything makes one very indulgent. (Tout comprendre rend très indulgent.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. xviii, ch. 5.

To understand is to pardon. To understand everything is to forgive everything. (Comprendre c'est pardonner. Tout comprendre c'est tout pardonner.)

Both these phrases have been attributed to Madame de Staël, but are not found in her works. They are probably misquotations of—as well as great improvements on—the sentence from Corinne cited above.

The more we know, the better we forgive; Whoe'er feels deeply, feels for all who live.

Attributed to MADAME DE STAËL, but exact source not discovered.

Know all and you will pardon all.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i.

He who understands everything understands nothing, and he who forgives everything forgives nothing.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies p. 93.

12 Only the brave know how to forgive. . . . A coward never forgave; it is not in his nature.

LAURENCE STERNE, Sermons. No. 12.

13 If the injured one could read your heart, you may be sure he would understand and pardon.

R. L. STEVENSON, Truth of Intercourse.

14 Sleep; and if life was bitter to thee, pardon; If sweet, give thanks; thou hast no more to live,

And to give thanks is good, and to forgive.

SWINBURNE, Ave atque Vale. St. 17.

15 Forgive! How many will say, "forgive," and find

A sort of absolution in the sound

To hate a little longer!

TENNYSON, Sea Dreams, l. 60.

16 But to forgive our enemies their virtues—that is a greater miracle, and one which no longer happens.

(Mais à ses ennemis pardonner les vertus, C'est un plus grand miracle, et qui ne se fait plus.)

VOLTAIRE, Discours sur la Vraie Vertu.

17 The best of what we do and are,
Just God, forgive!

WORDSWORTH, Thoughts Suggested on the Banks of Nith.

II—Forgive and Forget

<sup>1</sup> "I can forgive, but I cannot forget," is only another way of saying, "I cannot forgive."
HENRY WARD BEECHER, Life Thoughts.

<sup>2</sup> Good, to forgive; Best, to forget!
Living, we fret; Dying, we live.

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz: Dedication.

<sup>3</sup> The memory and conscience never did, nor never will, agree about forgiving injuries.
LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 252.

<sup>4</sup> All our great fray . . . is forgiven and forgotten between us quite.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

Pray you now, forget and forgive.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 84. (c. 1605)

Endeavour to forget, sir, and forgive.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act v, sc. 2. (1696)

Yon little thatch is where she lives,

Yon spire is where she met me;—

I think that if she quite forgives,

She cannot quite forget me.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, Mrs. Smith.

What fortune has made yours is not really yours.

(Non est tuum, fortuna quod fecit tuum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 10.)

12
He who can bear fortune, can also beware of fortune. (Potest fortunam cavere, qui potest ferre.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 7. Amid the greatest disturbance of fortune, he was undisturbed. (Æqualis fuit in tanta inequalitate fortunæ.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 28. Referring to Socrates.

Fortune can take away riches, but not courage. (Fortuna opes auferre, non animum potest.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 176.

13
O giglot fortune!

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 31.

Fortune brings in some boats, that are not steer'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 46.

14

Fortune is merry,

And in this mood will give us any thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 271.

For herein Fortune shows herself more kind Than is her custom.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 267.

15

And all the unsettled humours of the land . . .

Have sold their fortunes at their native homes . . .

To make a hazard of new fortunes here.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 66.

A Hazard of New Fortunes.

W. D. HOWELLS. Title of novel.

16

'Tis more by fortune, lady, than by merit.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 12.

17

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,

That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 169.

18

A just fortune awaits the deserving. (Fors æqua merentes Respicit.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Pt. i, l. 661.

19

We are corrupted by good fortune. (Felicitate corrumpimur.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 15.

20

And fortune smil'd, deceitful, on her birth.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 178.

21

Fortune, who oft proves

The careless wanderer's friend.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ii, l. 185.

Fortune's friend is mishap's foe.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, The Lover Complaineth Himself Forsaken, l. 8.

II—Fortune: Its Blindness

1 If a man look sharply and attentively, he shall see Fortune; for though she is blind, she is not invisible.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune.

2 Not only is Fortune blind herself, but as a rule she blinds those whom she favors. (Non enim solum ipsa fortuna cæca est, sed eos etiam plerumque efficit cæcos, quos complexa est.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xv, sec. 54.

3 Blind fortune pursues blind rashness. (Fortune aveugle suit aveugle hardiesse.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 14.

4 Fortune never seems so blind as to those upon whom she has bestowed no favors. (La fortune ne paraît jamais si aveugle qu'à ceux à qui elle ne fait pas de bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 391.

5 That goddess blind,
That stands upon the rolling restless stone.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 29.

Fortune is painted blind, with a muffler afore her eyes, to signify to you that Fortune is blind.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 32.

6 Fortune has often been blamed for her blindness; but Fortune is not so blind as men are.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 3.

III—Fortune: Its Fickleness

7 Fortune ever hath an uncertain end.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Shyp of Folsys, l. 126. (1509)

8 Fortune is full of fresh variety.

Constant in nothing but inconstancy.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 11.

9 Gifts of fortune,
That pass as a shadow upon a wall.

CHAUCEUR, The Marchantes Tale, l. 70.

Fortune hath in her honey gall.

CHAUCEUR, The Monkes Tale, l. 557.

10 Variant Fortune was; aye in short space
Her wheel was ready to turn without let.

LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods. St. 46. (c. 1420)

11 She sings defiance to the giddy wheel of fortune.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, A Fair and Happy Milkmaid.

Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2, l. 34.

And railed on Lady Fortune in good terms,
In good set terms.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 16.

12 Fortune knows neither reason or law. She is inclined to favor the wicked, and hates the just, as if to display her unreasoning force.

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology). Bk. x, epig. 62.)

13 Fortune changes suddenly: life is changeable. (Actutum fortunæ solent mutarier: varia vita est.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 9.

14 The wheel goes round and round,
And some are up and some are on the down,
And still the wheel goes round.

JOSEPHINE POLLARD, The Wheel of Fortune.

For fortune's wheel is on the turn,
And some go up and some go down.

MARY F. TUCKER, Going Up and Coming Down.

15 Who thinks that Fortune cannot change her mind,
Prepares a dreadful jest for all mankind.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. ii, l. 23.

16 Dame Fortune is a fickle gipsy,
And always blind, and often tipsy;
Sometimes, for years and years together,
She'll bless you with the sunniest weather,
Bestowing honour, pudding, pence,
You can't imagine why or whence;—
Then in a moment—Presto, Pass!—
Your joys are withered like the grass.

W. M. PRAED, The Legend of the Haunted Tree.

17 Fortune is glass; just as it becomes bright it is broken. (Fortuna vitrea est; tum cum splendet frangitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 280. Said to be a maxim of Seneca.

18 On doubtful wings flies the inconstant hour, nor does swift Fortune keep faith with any.
(Volat ambiguus mobilis alis Hora, nec ulli præstat velox Fortuna fidem.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1141.

19 And giddy Fortune's furious fickle wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 29.

Fortune, good night: smile once more; turn thy wheel!

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 180.

And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 136.

20 O fortune, fortune! all men call thee fickle.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 60.

IV—Fortune: Its Ups and Downs

21 Though I was long in coming to the light,

Yet may I mount to fortune's highest height.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet xcvi.

1 Fortune turns round like a mill-wheel, and he who was yesterday at the top, lies today at the bottom.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20.

2 Whenever Fortune wishes to jest, she lifts people from the gutter to the mighty places of the earth. (Ex humili magna ad fastigia rerum Extollit quotiens voluit Fortuna jocari.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 39.

3 Fortune in men has some small diff'rence made;

One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade,
The cobbler apron'd, and the parson gown'd,
The friar hooded, and the monarch crown'd.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 195.

4 Fortune rules in all things; she raises to eminence or buries in oblivion from caprice rather than from principle. (Sed perfecta fortuna in omni re dominatur; ea res cunctas ex lubricine magis quam ex vero celebrat obscuratque.)

SALLUST, Catiline. Ch. 8, sec. 1.

5 Whatever Fortune has raised on high, she has raised but to bring low. (Quidquid in altum Fortuna tulit, Ruitura levat.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 101.

6 I do but wait a time and fortune's chance;
Oft many things do happen in one hour.

SIR THOMAS WYATT, Whether Liberty or Prison.

7 Lo, thus Fortune can turn her dice,
Now up, now down; her wheel is unstable.

UNKNOWN, Partonope, l. 4389. (c. 1490)

V—Fortune: Its Power

8 Sovereign of all the gods is Fortune, and these other names are given her in vain; for she alone disposeth all things as she will.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 254.

9 Fortune, the great commandress of the world,
Hath divers ways to advance her followers:
To some she gives honour without deserving;
To other some, deserving without honour;
Some wit, some wealth; and some, wit without wealth;

Some wealth without wit; some nor wit nor wealth.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act v, sc. 1.

10 Thou wouldst have no divinity, O Fortune, if we had but wisdom; it is we that make a goddess of thee, and place thee in the skies. (Nul-lum numen habes, si sit prudentia: nos te, nos facimus, Fortuna, deam cæloque locamus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365.

11 Fortune rules all.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act iv, sc. 1.

12 If the gale of Fortune bear thee, bear with it and be borne; if thou rebellest, the gale bears thee just the same

PALLADAS. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 73.)

13 Fortune moulds and limits human affairs as she pleases. (Fortuna humana fingit artatque ut lubet.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 304. (Act ii, sc. 2.)

The schemes of a hundred learned men are all inferior to one lone goddess, Fortune. (Centum doctum hominum consilia sola hæc devincit dea, Fortuna.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 678. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

14 Behold! if fortune or a mistress frowns,
Some plunge in business, others shave their crowns.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 103.

15 Fortune is of more value to a man than judgment. (Fortuna plus homini quam consilium valet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 283.

16 Against fortune the carter cracks his whip in vain. (Centre fortune, la diverse un chartier rompit nazardes son fouet.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

17 Fortune turns on her wheel the fate of kings. (Præcipites regum casus Fortuna rotat.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 71.

18 Fortune has all power over one who lives, but no power over one who knows how to die.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, 7.

19 Fortune reigns in gifts of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2, l. 44.

Under Heaven's high cope
Fortune is God: all you endure and do
Depends on circumstance as much as you.

SHELLEY, Epigrams from the Greek Circum-stance.

20 The power of fortune is confessed only by the miserable; for the happy impute all their success to prudence and merit.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

21 Fortune, not riches, rules the life of men. (Τύχη τὰ θνητῶν πράγματα' οὐκ εὐβουλία.)

THEOPHRASTUS, Callisthenes. (PLUTARCH, De Fortuna, 97.) Latined by CICERO (Tusculanarum Disputationum, v, 9): Vitam regit fortuna, non sapientia.

VI—Fortune: Good and Bad

22 Ah! who can tell how many a soul sublime

Has felt the influence of malignant star,
And waged with Fortune an eternal war.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 3.

1 Incapable of compromises,
Unable to forgive or spare,
The strange awarding of the prizes
He had no fortitude to bear.

WILLA CATHER, A Likeness.

2 For I deem that contrarious Fortune profiteth more to men than Fortune debonaire.

CHAUCEER, Boethius. Bk. ii, prose 8.

In losing fortune, many a lucky elf
Has found himself.

HORACE SMITH, Moral Alchemy. St. 12.

3 Fortune came smiling to my youth and woo'd
it,

And purple greatness met my ripened years.

DRYDEN, All for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

4 Vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave.

GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 71.

5 The greatest reverses of fortune are the most easily borne, from a sort of dignity belonging to them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Life of Napoleon Buona-
parte. Vol. iv, p. 267.

6 The bitter dregs of Fortune's cup to drain.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 85. (Pope, tr.)

7 You are sad, though fortunate. Take care that Fortune does not perceive this, or she will call you ungrateful. (Tristis es et felix. Sciat hoc Fortuna caveto Ingratum dicet te.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 79.

8 The most wretched fortune is safe, for it lacks fear of anything worse. (Fortuna miserrima tuta est, nam timor eventus deterioris best.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 31.

His only solace was, that now
His dog-bolt fortune was so low,
That either it must quickly end
Or turn about again, and mend.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 39.

I wish thy lot, now bad, still worse, my friend,
For when at worst, they say, things always mend.

JOHN OWEN, To a Friend in Distress.

See also BUNYAN under FAIL.

9 Even men of the noblest virtue are seldom spared by adverse fortune. (Iniqua raro max-imis virtutibus Fortuna parcit.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 325.

O Fortune, jealous of the brave, in allotting thy favors, how unjust art thou unto the righteous!
(O Fortuna viris invida fortibus, Quam non æqua bonis præmia dividis.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 524.

10

Fortune is gentle to the lowly. (Minor in parvis Fortuna furit.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1124.

Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 52.

11 I am now, sir, muddled in fortune's mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 2, l. 4.

One out of suits with fortune.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 258.

On Fortune's cap we are not the very button.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 233.

A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 164.

12 Will Fortune never come with both hands full,
But write her fair words still in foulest letters?
She either gives a stomach and no food;
Such are the poor, in health: or else a feast
And takes away the stomach; such are the rich,

That have abundance, and enjoy it not.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 4,
l. 103.

13

When Fortune means to men most good,
She looks upon them with a threatening eye.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 119.

14

So was their fortune good, though wicked was their mind.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto ii, st. 43.

15

For ever, Fortune, wilt thou prove
An unrelenting foe to love.

JAMES THOMSON, To Fortune.

16

Where God and cruel fortune call, let us follow. (Quo Deus, et quo dura vocat Fortuna, sequamur.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 677.

17

A man is never so on trial as in the moment of excessive good-fortune.

LEW WALLACE, Ben Hur. Bk. v, ch. 7.

VII—Fortune: Architects of Fortune

18

Every man is the architect of his own fortune.
(Fabrum esse suæ quemque fortunæ.)

APPIUS CLAUDIUS CÆCUS, who held the office of censor in 312 B.C. His poems have not survived. (PSEUDO-SALLUST, Duae Epistulae de Republica Ordinanda. Epis. i, sec. 1. These letters were addressed to Cæsar, and are attributed to Sallust on doubtful authority.
The entire sentence reads: "But these things teach us the truth of what Appius says in his verses, that everyone is the architect of his own fortune.")

It is a highway saying, that we are architects of our own fortune.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenianism, p. 454. (1707)

1 It cannot be denied, but outward accidents conduce much to fortune: favour, opportunity, death of others, occasion fitting virtue. But chiefly the mould of a man's fortune is in his own hands: (Faber quisque fortunæ suæ.)

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: On Fortune.

2 Each person is the founder
Of his own fortune, good or bad.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Pilgrimage.
Act i, sc. 1.

3 The brave man carves out his fortune, and every man is the son of his own works.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 4.

Each is the maker of his own fortune.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66.

4 Every man's fortune is moulded by his character. (Mores cuique sui fingunt fortunam.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, Atticus. Ch. 11.

His own character is the arbiter of everyone's fortune.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 283.

5 The wise man is the maker of his own fortune, and, unless he be a bungling workman, little can befall him which he would desire to change.

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2.

6 Every man is the maker of his own fortune.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 52.

7 A man's own manners do shape his fortune.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 37. (1539)

8 We have not a commoner saying among us than "Every man is the architect of his own fortune," and we have very few much older.

E. TEW. (Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. xii, p. 515.)

VIII—Fortune: Mastery of Fortune

9 All fortune is to be conquered by bearing it. (Vincenda est omnia fortuna ferendo.)

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Quoted as a maxim.

10 Let not one look of fortune cast you down;
She were not fortune, if she did not frown:
Such as do braveliest bear her scorns awhile,
Are those on whom, at last, she most will smile.

JOHN BOYLE, Imitation of Horace.

11 Let not Fortune, which hath no name in Scripture, have any in thy divinity.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 25.

12 My worthy friend, ne'er grudge an' carp,
Tho' Fortune use you hard and sharp;
Come, kittle up your moorland harp

Wi' gleesome touch!

Ne'er mind how Fortune waft an' warp;
She's but a bitch.

BURNS, Second Epistle to J. Lapraik.

Fortune! if thou'll but gie me still
Hale breeks, a scone, an' whisky-gill,
An' rowth o' rhyme to rave at will,
Tak a' the rest.

BURNS, Scotch Drink. St. 21.

Is Fortune's fickle Luna waning?

E'en let her gang!

Beneath what light she has remaining,
Let's sing our sang.

BURNS, Epistle to James Smith.

13 I can enjoy her while she's kind;
But when she dances in the wind,
And shakes the wings, and will not stay,
I puff the prostitute away.

DRYDEN, Imitations of Horace. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 81.

14 Never think you Fortune can bear the sway,
Where Virtue's force can cause her to obey.

QUEEN ELIZABETH, In Defiance of Fortune.
(PUTTENHAM, Art of Poesie: Of Ornament.)

15 A change of fortune hurts a wise man no more than a change of the moon.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1756.

16 Learn to bear great fortune well. (Bene ferre magnam Disce fortunam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 27, l. 74.

17 Ill fortune never crushed that man whom good fortune deceived not.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

18 Largesse! Largesse, Fortune!
Give or hold at your will.

If I've no care for Fortune
Fortune must follow me still.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Wishing-Caps.

If fortune favour I may have her, for I go about her;

If fortune fail you may kiss her tail, and go without her.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. No. 212.

19 Fortune knows
We scorn her most when most she offers blows.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 11, l. 73.

A man that fortune's buffets and rewards
Hast ta'en with equal thanks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 72.

20 Blest are those Whose blood and judgement are so well com-mingled,

That they are not a pipe for fortune's finger
To sound what stop she please.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73.

1
We ready are to try our fortunes
To the last man.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 43.

Myself could else outgrown false fortune's frown.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 6.

How some men creep in skittish Fortune's hall,
While others play the idiots in her eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 134.

2
They make their fortune who are stout and wise.

TASSO, Jerusalem Delivered. Bk. x, st. 20.

IX—Fortune Favors the Bold

3 Fortune favors the bold. (Audentis Fortuna juvat.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 284. Used in this form by many Latin writers. Sometimes written,
"Fors juvat audentes," as by CLAUDIAN, *Ad
Probinum*, l. 8.

4 Fortune favors the brave. (Fortes fortuna adjuvat.)

TERENCE, Phormio. Act i, sc. 4, l. 26. Used in this form by CICERO, De Finibus, bk. iii,
ch. 4, sec. 116, and by many others.

5
Hap helpeth hardy man alday, quoth he.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women. Pt.
v, l. 94.

6
Fortune and Venus help the bold. (Audentem Forsque Venusque juvat.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 608.

Be bold: Venus herself aids the stout-hearted.
(Audendum est: fortes adjuvat ipsa Venus.)

TIBULLUS, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 16.

7
Fortune is like a widow won,
And truckles to the bold alone.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Fortune-Hunter.
Canto ii. See also WIDOW: WOOING.

8
Fortune is not on the side of the faint-hearted.
SOPHOCLES, Phædra. Frag. 842.

X—Fortune Favors Fools

9
Fortune makes Folly her peculiar care.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 604.

10
'Tis a gross error held in schools,
That Fortune always favours fools.

JOHN GAY, Fables. No. 12.

11
Fortune favours fools.

BARNABE GOOGE, Eglogs, l. 74. (1563)

Does my patron lose? fortune favours fools!

SIR CHARLES SEDLEY, Bellamira.

Fortune, that favours fools.

BEN JONSON, The Alchemist: Prologue; Every Man Out of His Humour. Act i, sc. 1.

12
When fortune favors a man too much, she makes him a fool. (Fortuna nimium quem fovet, stultum facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 198.

13
O, I am fortune's fool!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc.
l. 141.

FOURTH OF JULY, see In- dependence Day

FOX

14
Like Æsop's fox, when he had lost his tail, would have all his fellow foxes cut off theirs.

ROBERT BURTON, *Anatomy of Melancholy:
Democritus to the Reader*. (ÆSOP, Fables.
Bk. v, fab. 5.)

15
The fox has many tricks, and the hedgehog only one, but that is the best of all.

ERASMUS, Adagia.

The fox has many tricks, and the cat only one,
but that the best of all. (i. e., climbing a tree.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Though the fox run, the chicken hath wings.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

16
A fox should not be of the jury at a goose's trial.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 116.

An old fox needs not be taught tricks.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 644.

He that will deceive the fox must rise betimes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2357.

Old foxes want no tutors.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3712.

The fox may grow grey but never good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4545.

With foxes we must play the fox.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5797.

17
The more the fox is cursed, the better he fares.

ROBERT GREENE, Friar Bacon. Sc. 11. (1594)

The cursed fox thrives the best.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

18
At length the fox is brought to the furrier.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

19
Where the lion's skin will not reach, a little of the fox's must be used. ("Οπου γὰρ ἡ λεοντῆ μὴ ἐφικνεῖται, προσαρπτεόν ἐκεῖ τὴν ἀλωπεκῆν.)

LYSANDER. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lysander. Ch.
7, sec. 4.)

Craft, where strength doth fail,
And piece the lion with the fox's tail!

JOHN WILSON, Andron. Commenius, iv, 4.

The lion's skin too short, you know . . .
Was lengthened by the fox's tail;

And art supplies, where strength may fail.

UNKNOWN, Agreeable Companion, 182.

was used by an old herdsman in reference to Vespasian, who had promised him liberty, but refused to confer it without payment.

FRANCE AND THE FRENCH

I—France: Familiar Phrases

- 6
Nec Pluribus impar.
DOUVIER, Motto, of the device of the rising sun, adopted by Louis XIV of France. It has been variously translated, but "I shine on more worlds than one" is as good as any. Fournier says it was devised by an antiquarian named Douvier.
- 7
Liberty, equality, fraternity. (Liberté, égalité, fraternité.)
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN is said to have suggested this phrase, which became the watchword of the French revolution, and which is still placed upon the front of every public building in France.
Be my brother, or I will kill thee.
SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT, paraphrasing the revolutionary watchword, "Fraternity or death," which he called a "brotherhood of Cain." "We will have equality, should we descend for it to the tomb." (CARLYLE,
French Revolution, ii, i, 12.)
The binding of the hands, the thrusting of the head out of the little national sash-window, the crash of the axe.
MACAULAY, Essays: Memoirs of Barère.
I have lived. (J'ai vécu.)
JOSEPH SIEYÈS, after the Reign of Terror, when asked what he had done. (MIGNET, Notices Historiques, i, 81.)
- 8
Nothing is changed in France: there is only one Frenchman the more. (Il n'y a rien de changé en France; il n'y a qu'un Français de plus.)

COMTE D'ARTOIS, afterwards CHARLES X OF FRANCE, in proclamation published in the Moniteur upon the restoration of Louis XVIII, April 12, 1814. Said to have been composed in his name by Comte Beugnot. (Contemporary Review, Feb., 1854. DE VAULABELLE, Histoire des Deux Restorations, ii, 30.)

Nothing is changed: there is only one animal more.

Medal celebrating arrival of first giraffe in Paris. (Il n'y a qu'un bête de plus was a sarcastic allusion to the Bourbons.)

Nothing is altered: there is only one Austrian less.

Epigram on the death of Francis I, Emperor of Austria, 1835, when Metternich remained at the head of affairs.

9
Unhappy France! Unhappy king! (Malheureuse France! Malheureuse roi!)

ÉTIENNE BÉQUET, Heading, of an article in the Journal des Débats, when Charles X was driven from the French throne.

10
What is the Third Estate? Every thing. What part has it in government? Nothing. What does it want? To become something. (Qu'est-ce le Tiers État? Tout. Qu'a-t-il? Rien. Que veut-il? Y devenir quelque chose.) SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT. Given to Sieyès as title for a pamphlet.

11
We will not cede either an inch of our territory or a stone of our fortresses.

JULES FAVRE, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a circular to the diplomatic representatives of France abroad, 6 Sept., 1870, immediately after the fall of the empire.

We are so well equipped, that, if the war were to last ten years, we should not have to buy the button of a soldier's gaiter.

MARSHAL LEBŒUF, in June, 1870, speaking of the preparedness of the French forces.

We accept it with a light heart.

ÉMILE OLLIVIER, Prime Minister of France, on July 15, 1870, speaking of the declaration of war against Germany.

12
That will go, that will last. (Ça ira, ça tiendra.)

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, according to Cassagnac (History of the Girondists, i, 373), who says that the Ça Ira, the revolutionary song of France, was composed by an itinerant musician who took the refrain from this mot of Franklin's on the revolution.

If a sparrow cannot fall without God's knowledge, how can an empire rise without His aid?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, proposing that the sessions of the Constitutional Convention, May, 1787, be opened with prayer.

MARSEAL ANDOCHEE JUNOT, when a bursting shell threw some dirt on a dispatch he was writing from Bonaparte's dictation, Toulon, Dec., 1793.

<sup>2</sup> Ye sons of freedom, wake to glory!
Hark! hark! what myriads bid you rise!
Your children, wives, and grandsires hoary,
Behold their tears and hear their cries!
(Allons, enfants de la patrie!
Le jour de gloire est arrivé!
Contre nous de la tyrannie
L'étendard sanglant est levé.)

ROUGET DE LISLE, La Marseillaise. (1792)

LOUIS XIII OF FRANCE, on the execution of Cinq-Mars, in 1642. (LADY JACKSON, Old Paris, i, 227.) Lady Jackson asserts that this French proverb was first used on this occasion.

LOUIS XV, seeing that it was raining hard on the day when the body of Madame de Pompadour was taken from Versailles to Paris. (Nouvelle Biog. Univ.)

CARDINAL MAZARIN, referring to the fact that the French received each new tax with satirical poems.

France is an absolute monarchy, tempered by songs.

CHAMFORT, Characters and Anecdotes, quoting an anonymous wit.

NAPOLEON III, Address, before the Chamber of Commerce at Toulouse, 9 Oct., 1852. (JERROLD, Life of Louis Napoleon.) In Germany this pronouncement was parodied, "L'empire, c'est l'épée"—The empire, it is the sword. (Kladderdatsch, 8 Nov., 1862.)

<sup>7</sup> The King of France went up the hill

With twenty thousand men;

The King of France came down the hill,
And ne'er went up again.

UNKNOWN, Old Tarleton's Song. Quoted in a tract entitled Pigges Corantoe, or Newes from the North, London, 1642.

The king of France with twenty thousand men
Went up the hill, and then came down again;
The king of Spain with twenty thousand more,
Climbed the same hill the French had climbed before.

UNKNOWN, The King of France. (Sloane MS. No. 1489) An earlier version of Old Tarleton's Song. For other versions see Halliwell, Nursery Rhymes.

The song, "The King of France with Forty Thousand Men," has reference to the raising of 40,000 men by Henry IV, of France, in 1609-1610.

JAMES HOWELL, Letter to James Croft, 12 May, 1620.

<sup>8</sup> Adieu, pleasant land of France. Oh, my country, the dearest in the world! (Adieu, plaisant pays de France, O ma patrie la plus chérie!)

UNKNOWN. A song supposed to have been sung by Mary Stuart on leaving France to become Queen of Scotland, but really a forgery by De Querlon. Béranger gave the lines wide currency by taking them as the refrain for his song, Les Adieux de Marie Stuart.

Shouted by the Royalists at Albi in 1830, when the Republicans were parading through the streets a painting of Minerva supposed to personify the Republic. Marianne, in the local slang, meant a prostitute.

II—France: Her Virtues

<sup>10</sup> Gay lilled fields of France.

CAMPBELL, Gertrude of Wyoming. Pt. ii, st. 15.

<sup>11</sup> The further off from England the nearer is to France.

LEWIS CARROLL, Alice in Wonderland. Ch. 10.

<sup>12</sup> Is morning here? Then speak that we may know!

The sky seems lighter, but we are not sure.
Is morning here? . . . The whole world holds its breath

To hear the crimson Gallic rooster crow!

RALPH CHAPLIN, To France. (May Day, 1919.)

<sup>13</sup> Gay sprightly land of mirth and social ease,
Pleas'd with thyself, whom all the world can please.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 241.

<sup>14</sup> France is a meadow that cuts thrice a year.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>15</sup> In a comparison of this with other countries we have the proof of primacy which was given to Themistocles after the battle of Salamis. Every general voted himself the first reward of valor, and the second to Themistocles. So, ask the travelled inhabitant of any nation, in what country on earth you would rather live? Certainly in my own. . . . Which would be your second choice? France.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 159.

<sup>16</sup> Half artist and half anchorite,
Part siren and part Socrates.

PERCY MACKAYE, France.

1 My thoughts and wishes bend again toward France.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 55.

2 That sweet enemy, France.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet xli.

3 And threat'ning France, plac'd like a painted Jove,

Kept idle thunder in his lifted hand.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis. St. 39.

4 "They order," said I, "this matter better in France."

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey. Ch. i, l. 1.

These things are managed so well in France.

BRET HARTE, The Tale of a Pony.

III—France: Her Faults

5 The thirst for truth is not a French passion. In everything appearance is preferred to reality, the outside to the inside, the fashion to the material, that which shines to that which profits, opinion to conscience. That is to say, the Frenchman's centre of gravity is always outside him,—he is always thinking of others, playing to the gallery.

AMIEL, Journal, 22 Jan., 1875.

6 France, fam'd in all great arts, in none supreme.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To a Republican Friend.

7 The most frivolous and fickle of civilised nations—they pass from the game of war to the game of peace, from the game of science to the game of art, from the game of liberty to the game of slavery, from the game of slavery to the game of licence.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies: Shakespeare.

Fickle in everything else, the French have been faithful in one thing only,—their love of change.

SIR ARCHIBALD ALISON, History of Europe.

8 My scrofulous French novel.

ROBERT BROWNING, Soliloquy in a Spanish Cloister.

9 Never was there a country where the practice of governing too much had taken deeper root and done more mischief.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vii, p. 445.

10 Have the French for friends, but not for neighbors.

EMPEROR NICEPHORUS, when treating with the ambassadors of Charlemagne in 803.

11 Others import yet nobler arts from France, Teach kings to fiddle, and make senates dance.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iv, l. 597.

12 'Tis better using France than trusting France.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 42.

13 The faithless vain disturber of mankind, Insulting Gaul.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 1076.

14 The cross of the Legion of Honor has been conferred upon me. However, few escape that distinction.

MARK TWAIN, A Tramp Abroad. Ch. 8.

We distribute tracts, the French distribute medals.

GEORGE MOORE, Meissonier and the Salon Julian.

IV—France: Her Language

15 And French she spake full fair and fetisly, After the school of Stratford-atte-Bowe,

For French of Paris was to her unknowe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 122.

16 The Frenchman feels an easy mastery in speaking his mother tongue, and attributes it to some native superiority of parts that lifts him high above us barbarians of the West.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners.

17 The French tongue, which is the speech of the clear, the cheerful, or the august among men.

JOHN MORLEY, Rousseau, p. 436.

Speak in French when you can't think of the English for a thing.

LEWIS CARROLL, Through the Looking-Glass. Ch. 2.

18 It is the true and native language of insincerity.

ALFRED SUTRO, A Marriage Has Been Arranged. Referring to the French language.

V—France: The French

19 The French are wiser than they seem, and the Spaniards seem wiser than they are.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seeming Wise.

20 Frenchmen are like gunpowder, each by itself smutty and contemptible; but mass them together, they are terrible indeed!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

21 The Frenchman, easy, debonair, and brisk, Give him his lass, his fiddle, and his frisk, Is always happy, reign whoever may, And laughs the sense of mis'ry far away.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 237.

22 Much like the French (or like ourselves, their apes),

Who with strange habit do disguise their shapes;

Who loving novels, full of affectation,
Receive the manners of each other nation.

DU BARTAS, Devine Weekes and Workes. Week
i, day 2. (Sylvester, tr.)

<sup>1</sup> The French woman says, "I am a woman and a Parisienne, and nothing foreign to me appears altogether human."

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

There is a quality in which no woman in the world can compete with her [the French woman], —it is the power of intellectual irritation. She will draw wit out of a fool.

Attributed to WILLIAM SHENSTONE.

Every Frenchwoman, as I suppose, knows, well or ill, how to do a little cookery.

(Toute Française, à ce que j'imagine, Sait, bien ou mal, faire un peu de cuisine.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Bégueule.

She's only a darned Mounseer.

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

<sup>2</sup> I hate the French because they are all slaves and wear wooden shoes.

GOLDSMITH, Essays: The History of a Disabled Soldier.

<sup>3</sup> Fifty million Frenchmen can't be wrong.

Attributed to TEXAS GUINAN. (New York World-Telegram, 21 March, 1931.)

<sup>4</sup> The French are excellent in this, they have a book on every subject.

<sup>5</sup> A Frenchman loves his mother—in the abstract.

HENRY SETON MERRIMAN, The Sowers. Ch. 3.

<sup>6</sup> Why, is it not a lamentable thing, grandsire, that we should be thus afflicted with these strange flies, these fashion-mongers, these perdona-mi's.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 4,
l. 32.

<sup>7</sup> A nation of monkeys with the throat of parrots.

JOSEPH SIEYÈS, referring to the French, Letter to Mirabeau.

Your nation is divided into two species: the one of idle monkeys who mock at everything; and the other of tigers who tear.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Madame du Deffand, 21
Nov., 1766.

Something of the monkey aspect inseparable
from a little Frenchman.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 5 July, 1837.

<sup>8</sup> If they have a fault, they are too serious.

LAURENCE STERNE, *A Sentimental Journey:
The Address: Versailles*.

<sup>9</sup> I do not dislike the French from the vulgar antipathy between neighbouring nations, but for their insolent and unfounded airs of superiority.

WALPOLE, Letter to Hannah More, 14 Oct., 1787.

FRANKLIN, BENJAMIN

<sup>10</sup> The body of Benjamin Franklin, Printer, (like the cover of an old book, its contents torn out and stripped of its lettering and gilding), lies here, food for worms; but the work shall not be lost, for it will (as he believed) appear once more in a new and more elegant edition, revised and corrected by the Author.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Epitaph on Himself.

Composed in 1728, at the age of twenty-two.

It was not placed on his monument. Franklin was admittedly familiar with Cotton
Mather's Magnalia Christi. See also EPI-TAPHS: REVISED BY THE AUTHOR.

<sup>11</sup> While Franklin's quiet memory climbs to
heaven,

Calming the lightning which he thence hath riven.

BYRON, The Age of Bronze, l. 245.

And stoic Franklin's energetic shade
Robed in lightnings which his hand allay'd.

BYRON, The Age of Bronze, l. 386.

<sup>12</sup> Benjamin Franklin, incarnation of the peddling, tuppenny Yankee.

JEFFERSON DAVIS. (CAIRNS, History of American Literature, p. 98.)

<sup>13</sup> It is hardly necessary to state that Franklin did not originate all the "Sayings of Poor Richard." He himself tells us that they were "the wisdom of many ages and nations." Any one familiar with Bacon, Rochefoucauld, and Rabelais, as well as others, will recognize old friends in some of these sayings, while a study of the collections of Proverbs, made in the early part of the last century by Ray and Palmer, will reveal the probable source from which Poor Richard pilfered. Yet with but few exceptions these maxims and aphorisms had been filtered through Franklin's brain, and were tinged with that mother wit which so strongly and individually marks
so much that he said and wrote.

PAUL LEICESTER FORD, *The Sayings of Poor
Richard: Introduction*.

<sup>14</sup> But matchless Franklin! What a few
Can hope to rival such as you.

Who seized from kings their sceptred pride
And turned the lightning's darts aside.

PHILIP FRENEAU, On the Death of Benjamin Franklin.

<sup>15</sup> I succeed him; no one could replace him.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, to the Comte de Vergennes, when the latter remarked, "You replace Mr. Franklin," as envoy to France.

1 Nations should wear mourning only for their benefactors. . . . Antiquity would have raised altars to this mighty genius, who, to the advantage of mankind, compassing in his mind the heavens and the earth, was able to restrain alike thunderbolts and tyrants.

MIRABEAU, Address, moving that the French National Assembly should go into mourning, when Franklin's death was announced.

"Antiquity," said Mirabeau, "would raise Altars to honor him!"

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, Franklin.

2 Prudence is a wooden Juggernaut, before whom Benjamin Franklin walks with the portly air of a high priest.

R. L. STEVENSON, Crabbed Age and Youth.

3 He snatched the thunderbolt from heaven, the sceptre from tyrants. (Eripuit cœlo fulmen, mox sceptrum tyrannis.)

A. R. J. TURGOT, Inscription, for the Houdon bust of Franklin, 1778. According to Condorcet (Vie de Turgot, p. 200) this is the phrase as Turgot wrote it, but it is frequently misquoted, "Eripuit cœlo fulmen, sceptrumque tyrannis." Frederick von der Trenck, at his trial before the Revolutionary Tribunal of Paris, 9 July, 1794, asserted that he was the author of the line. (GARTENLAUBE, Last Hours of Baron Trenck.) Manilius (Astronomica, i, 10) has the line, "Eripuit Jovi fulmen viresque tonandi." Cardinal Melchior de Polignac (Anti-Lucretius, i, 96) published in 1745, has, "Eripuit fulmenque Jovi, Phœboque sagittas."

Notwithstanding my experiments with electricity the thunderbolt continues to fall under our noses and beards; and as for the tyrant, there are a million of us still engaged at snatching away his sceptre.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to Felix Nogaret, commenting on Turgot's inscription.

FREEDOM

I—Freedom: Definitions

4 Ah! freedom is a noble thing!
Freedom makes man to have liking!
Freedom all solace to man gives!
He lives at ease, that freely lives!

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce. Bk. i, l. 228.

5 Freedom is not caprice, but room to enlarge.

C. A. BARTOL, Radical Problems: Open Questions.

6 O Freedom! thou art not, as poets dream,
A fair young girl, with light and delicate limbs,
And wavy tresses. . . . A bearded man,
Armed to the teeth, art thou; one mailèd
hand

Grasps the broad shield, and one the sword;
thy brow

Glorious in beauty though it be, is scarred
With tokens of old wars; thy massive limbs
Are strong with struggling.

BRYANT, The Antiquity of Freedom.

7 Perfect freedom is reserved for the man who lives by his own work and in that work does what he wants to do.

R. G. COLLINGWOOD, Speculum Mentis.

8 Restraint from ill is freedom to the wise.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman.
Pt. ii, l. 206.

But what is Freedom? Rightly understood,
A universal license to be good.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Liberty.

Where justice reigns, 'tis freedom to obey.

MONTGOMERY, Greenland. Canto iv, l. 88.

That sweet bondage which is freedom's self.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto ix, l. 76.

Nought nobler is than to be free;

The stars of heaven are free because

In amplitude of liberty

Their joy is to obey the laws.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Things that Are More Excellent.

9 Is freedom anything but the right to live as we wish? Nothing else. ("Ἄλλο τί ἐστιν ἐλευθερία ἢ τὸ ἐξεῖναι ὡς βουλόμεθα διεξάγειν οὐδέν.")

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 23.

He is free who lives as he chooses. ("Ἐλευθερός ἐστὶν ὁ ᾧ ὡς βούλεται.")

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 1,

Is any man free except the one who can live as he chooses? (An quisquam est alius liber, nisi ducere vitam Cui licet ut libuit?)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. v, l. 83.

The only freedom which deserves the name, is that of pursuing our own good in our own way, so long as we do not attempt to deprive others of theirs, or impede their efforts to obtain it.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 1.

10 No man is free who is not master of himself.
(Οὐδεὶς ἐλεύθερος ἐαυτοῦ μὴ κρατῶν.)

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 35. Sto-bæus ascribes this maxim to Pythagoras.

11 Who then is free? The wise man, who is lord over himself, whom neither poverty, nor death, nor bonds affright, who bravely defies his passions, and scorns ambition, who in himself is a whole, smoothed and rounded, so that nothing from outside can rest on the polished surface, and against whom Fortune in her onset is ever defeated.

HORACE, Satires. Bk ii, sat. 7, l. 83.

1 There will be no true freedom without virtue, no true science without religion, no true industry without the fear of God and love to your fellow-citizens. Workers of England, be wise, and then you must be free, for you will be fit to be free.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Placard, 1848.

2 Men are free when they are in a living homeland, not when they are straying and breaking away. . . . The most unfree souls go west, and shout of freedom. Men are freest when they are most unconscious of freedom.

D. H. LAWRENCE, Studies in Classic American Literature.

3 'Tis not a freedom that, where all command. ANDREW MARVELL, The First Anniversary.

Inferior, who is free?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 825.

4 To be free is to live under a government by law.

WILLIAM MURRAY, EARL OF MANSFIELD, King v. Shipley. (3 Douglas's Rep. 170.)

Freedom is political power divided into small fragments.

THOMAS HOBBES. (MAINE, Popular Government, p. 70.)

That man is free who is protected from injury.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Address to Charlestown Bar, 10 May, 1847.

5 Oh! let me live my own, and die so too (To live and die is all I have to do)! Maintain a poet's dignity and ease, And see what friends, and read what books I please.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 261.

6 Man is created free, and is free, even though born in chains. (Der Mensch ist frei geschaffen, ist frei Und würd' er in Ketten geboren.)

SCHILLER, Die Worte des Glaubens. St. 2.

7 What is freedom? It means not being a slave to any circumstance, to any constraint, to any chance; it means compelling Fortune to enter the lists on equal terms. (Quæ sit libertas? Nulli rei servire, nulli necessitati, nullis casibus, fortunam in æquum deducere.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 9.

8 What other liberty is there worth having, if we have not freedom and peace in our minds,—if our inmost and most private man is but a sour and turbid pool?

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 26 Oct., 1853.

9 Freedom exists only where the people take care of the government.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at the Workingman's Dinner, N. Y., 4 Sept., 1912.

Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom, must, like men, undergo the fatigue of supporting it.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis. No. iv.

II—Freedom: Apothegms

10 The cause of freedom is the cause of God.

W. L. BOWLES, To Edmund Burke.

11 Whilst freedom is true to itself, everything becomes subject to it.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol.

Depend upon it, the lovers of freedom will be free.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, 1780.

12 Hereditary bondsmen! know ye not

Who would be free themselves must strike the blow?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 76.

They can only set free men free . . .

And there is no need of that:

Free men set themselves free.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Slave.

13 Freedom suppressed and again regained bites with keener fangs than freedom never endangered. (Acriores autem morsus sunt intermissæ libertatis quam retentæ.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 7, sec. 24.

Regained my freedom with a sigh.

BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon. St. 14.

14 Freedom our pain, and plenty our disease.

DRYDEN, Abraham and Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 32.

16 Wherever snow falls, man is free. Where the orange blooms, man is the foe of man.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1862.

Countries are well cultivated, not as they are fertile, but as they are free.

MONTESQUIEU.

17 No bad man is free. (Τολμνν οὐδ' ἐλεύθερός ἐστιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, ch. 1, sec. 4.

Usually quoted as the Stoic maxim, "All bad men are slaves." (Πάντες κακοὶ δούλοι.)

No man who is in fear, or sorrow, or turmoil is free, but whoever is rid of sorrows and fears and turmoils, that man is by the self-same course rid also of slavery.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 24.

Let them fear bondage who are slaves to fear, The sweetest freedom is an honest heart.

JOHN FORD, The Lady's Trial. Act i, sc. 3.

18 Bred in the lap of Republican Freedom.

WILLIAM GODWIN, Enquirer. Bk. ii, 12, 402.

19 We are not free; it was not intended we should be. A book of rules is placed in our cradle, and we never get rid of it until we reach our graves. Then we are free, and only then.

E. W. HOWE, Howe's Monthly.

1 There is no freedom on earth or in any star for those who deny freedom to others.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams.

No! true freedom is to share
All the chains our brothers wear.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Stanzas on Freedom.

2 A man should never put on his best trousers when he goes out to battle for freedom and truth.

HENRIK IBSEN, An Enemy of the People. Act v.

3 Pray you use your freedom,
And, so far as you please, allow me mine.

PHILIP MASSINGER, Duke of Milan. Act iv, sc. 3.

4 None can love freedom heartily but good men; the rest love not freedom, but licence.

MILTON, Tenure of Kings and Magistrates.

5 The path of freedom is blocked much more by those who wish to obey than by those who desire to command.

M. D. PETRE. (INGE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

6 Freedom is only in the land of dreams. (Freiheit ist nur in dem Reich der Träume.)

SCHILLER, The Beginning of the New Century.

7 Freedom, near at hand, makes an old man brave. (Fortem facit vicina libertas senem.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 139.

8 They wish to be free, and know not how to be just. (Ils veulent être libres et ne savent pas être justes.)

ABBÉ JOSEPH SIEYÈS, in the Constituent Assembly, 10 Aug., 1789. (DUMONT, Recollections of Mirabeau.)

9 O, lift your natures up;
Embrace our aims: work out your freedom.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 74.

10 Ne'er yet by force was freedom overcome.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. ii, l. 494.

11 Man is free at the moment he wishes to be.

VOLTAIRE, Brutus. Act ii, sc. 1.

III—Freedom: Its Virtues

12 The time will come when men
Will be as free and equal as the waves,
That seem to jostle, but that never jar.

ALFRED AUSTIN, Tower of Babel. Act ii, sc. 1.

13 Yet, Freedom, yet thy banner, torn but flying,

Streams like the thunder-storm against the wind.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 98.

And Freedom hallows with her tread
The silent cities of the dead.

BYRON, On the Star of "The Legion of Honour".

14 No! Freedom has a thousand charms to show
That slaves, howe'er contented, never know. . . .

Religion, virtue, truth—whate'er we call
A blessing—freedom is the pledge of all.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table Talk, l. 260.

15 I want free life, and I want fresh air;
And I sigh for the canter after the cattle,
The crack of the whip like shots in battle,
The medley of horns, and hoofs, and heads
That wars, and wrangles, and scatters and spreads;

The green beneath and the blue above,
And dash, and danger, and life and love!

FRANK DESPREZ, Lasca.

16 I am as free as nature first made man,
Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Act i, sc. 1.

17 My angel—his name is Freedom—
Choose him to be your king;
He shall cut pathways east and west,
And fend you with his wing.

EMERSON, Boston Hymn.

For what avail the plough or sail,
Or land or life, if freedom fail?

EMERSON, Boston.

18 Aye, call it holy ground,
The soil where first they trod!

They have left unstained what there they found—

Freedom to worship God!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, Landing of the Pilgrim Fathers.

19 Oh, only a free soul will never grow old! (O, nur eine freie Seele wird nicht alt.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 140.

20 All the arts of pleasure grow when suckled by freedom. (Von der Freiheit gesäugt wachsen die Künste der Lust.)

SCHILLER, Der Spaziergang, l. 122.

21 Of old sat Freedom on the heights,
The thunders breaking at her feet;
Above her shook the starry lights;
She heard the torrents meet.

TENNYSON, Of Old Sat Freedom.

And Freedom rear'd in that august sunrise
Her beautiful bold brow.

TENNYSON, The Poet.

1 Only free peoples can hold their purpose and their honor steady to a common end, and prefer the interests of mankind to any narrow interest of their own.

WOODROW WILSON, War Address to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

2 Me this unchartered freedom tires;
I feel the weight of chance-desires:
My hopes no more must change their name,
I long for a repose that ever is the same.

WORDSWORTH, Ode to Duty. St. 5.

IV—Freedom: Its Defense

3 This hand, to tyrants ever sworn the foe,
For Freedom only deals the deadly blow;
Then sheathes in calm repose the deadly blade,
For gentle Peace in Freedom's hallowed shade.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Inscription in an Album, 1842.

4 "Freedom!" their battle-cry,—
"Freedom! or leave to die!"

G. H. BOKER, The Black Regiment.

5 Righteous monarchs,
Justly to judge, with their own eyes should see;
To rule o'er freemen should themselves be free.

HENRY BROOKE, The Earl of Essex. Act i. The lines are spoken by Queen Elizabeth.

Johnson was present when a tragedy was read in which there occurred this line: Who rules o'er freemen should himself be free. The company admired it much.—"I cannot agree with you," said Johnson, "it might as well be said, Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat."

BOSWELL, Life of Johnson, June, 1784.

6 For he was Freedom's champion, one of those,
The few in number, who had not o'erstept
The charter to chastise which she bestows
On such as wield her weapons; he had kept
The whiteness of his soul, and thus men o'er him wept.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 57.

7 For Freedom's battle once begun,
Bequeath'd by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft is ever won.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 123.

The greatest glory of a freeborn people
Is to transmit that freedom to their children.

WILLIAM HARVARD, Regulus.

All we have of freedom, all we use or know—
This our fathers bought for us, long and long ago.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Old Issue.

8 Hope, for a season, bade the world farewell,
And Freedom shrieked—as Kosciusko fell!

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 381.

O what a loud and fearful shriek was there! . . .
Ah me! they saw beneath a Hireling's sword
Their Kosciusko fall!

S. T. COLERIDGE, Sonnet: Kosciusko.

9 Yes! to this thought I hold with firm persistence;
The last result of wisdom stamps it true;

He only earns his freedom and existence
Who daily conquers them anew.

GOETHE, Faust. Act v, sc. 6, l. 63. (Bayard Taylor, tr.)

10 Off with the fetters
That chafe and restrain!
Off with the chain!

RICHARD HOVEY, Vagabondia.

11 In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom that transfigures
you and me;

As he died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

JULIA WARD HOWE, Battle Hymn of the Republic.

12 Freedom needs all her poets: it is they
Who give her aspirations wings,
And to the wiser law of music sway
Her wild imaginings.

J. R. LOWELL, To the Memory of Hood. St. 4.

13 'Tis sweeter to bleed for an age at thy shrine
Than to sleep but a moment in chains!

THOMAS MOORE, Remember the Glories of Brien the Brave.

O Freedom! once thy flame hath fled,
It never lights again.

THOMAS MOORE, Weep On, Weep On.

14 Tyranny, like hell, is not easily conquered, yet we have this consolation within us, that the harder the conflict, the more glorious the triumph. What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly. . . . It would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated.

THOMAS PAINE, The Crisis: Introduction.

15 Freedom and Arts together fall;
Fools grant whate'er Ambition craves,
And men, once ignorant, are slaves.

POPE, Brutus: Chorus, l. 26.

16 Blandishments will not fascinate us, nor will threats of a "halter" intimidate. For, under God, we are determined that wheresoever, whensoever, or howsoever we shall be called to make our exit, we will die free men.

JOSIAH QUINCY, Observations on the Boston Port Bill, 1774.

17 O Freedom! if to me belong

Nor mighty Milton's gift divine,
Nor Marvell's wit and graceful song,
Still with a love as deep and strong
As theirs, I lay, like them, my best gifts on thy shrine!

WHITTIER, Proem.

The nations lift their right hands up and swear
Their oath of freedom.

WHITTIER, Garibaldi.

V—Freedom of Speech

Liberty of speech inviteth and provoketh liberty to be used again, and so bringeth much to a man's knowledge.

FRANCIS BACON, Advancement of Learning.
Bk. ii.

The most beautiful thing in the world is freedom of speech. (παρρησία.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes.
Sec. 69.)

To speak his thoughts is every freeman's right,
In peace and war, in council and in fight.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xii, l. 249. (Pope, tr.)

Such being the happiness of the times, that you may think as you wish, and speak as you think. (Rara temporum felicitate, ubi sentire quæ velis, et quæ sentias dicere licet.)

TACITUS, History. Bk. i, sec. 1. Tacitus is referring to the reigns of Nerva and Trajan.

I may stand alone,
But would not change my free thoughts for a throne.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 89.

I do not agree with a word that you say, but
I will defend to the death your right to say it.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Helvétius.

FRIEND

I—Friend: Definitions

What is a friend? A single soul dwelling in two bodies. (Μία ψυχή δύο σώμασιν ἐνοικοῦσα.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk.
v, sec. 20.)

He ought not to pretend to friendship's name,
Who reckons not himself and friend the same.

SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five-Hours.

Two friends, two bodies with one soul inspired.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 267. (Pope, tr.)

A faithful friend is the medicine of life.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, vi, 16.

I do not remember to have met with any saying that has pleased me more than that of a friend's being the medicine of life.

UNKNOWN, The Speaker. No. 68.

A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

What is a Friend? I will tell you. It is a person with whom you dare to be yourself.

FRANK CRANE, A Definition of Friendship.

A friend may well be reckoned the masterpiece of Nature.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

A divine person is the prophecy of the mind; a friend is the hope of the heart.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

A man's friends are his magnetisms.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

Friends are fictions founded on some single momentary experience.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. x, p. 11.

There are three faithful friends—an old wife,
an old dog, and ready money.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1738.

A Father's a Treasure; a Brother's a Comfort;
a Friend is both.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1747.

O ev'ry sacred name in one! my Friend!

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xxii, l. 226. (Pope, tr.)

A faithful friend is a true image of the Deity.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings of Napoleon.

A friend is a second self; another I. (ἄλλος ἐγώ.)

ZENO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec.
23.) "Alter ego" is, of course, the Latin.

A friend is, as it were, a second self. (Amicus est tamquam alter idem.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 80.

II—Friend: Apothegms

It is better to have one friend of great value than many friends who are good for nothing.

ANARCHARSIS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Anarchar-sis. Sec. 105.)

A friend to all is a friend to none. (᾽ὅ φίλοι, οὐδεὶς φίλος.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec.
21.)

All men's friend, no man's friend.

WODROEPE, Spared Houres, 475.

Friends are like fiddle-strings, they must not be screwed too tight.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs, 358.

Let me have no good thing unknown to a friend. (Ἐγνώστον δὲ φίλῳ μὴδὲν ἔχοιμι καλόν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Fragmenta Incertæ. No. 121.

O my friends, there is no friend. (᾽ὅ φίλοι
οὐδεὶς φίλος.)

CHILO. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilo.)

The number [of his friends] was fatal to him.
(Depedit numerus.)

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. The maxim of the wise.

She, that asks
Her dear five hundred friends, contemns them all,
And hates their coming.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 642.

He has friends, but no friend.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1779.)

To the rare few, who, early in life, have rid themselves of the friendship of the many.

One friend in a lifetime is much; two are many; three are hardly possible.

HENRY ADAMS, Education of, p. 312.

<sup>6</sup> Beware, I say, beware, how thou fallest in with indigent friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Introductio ad Prudentiam. Vol. i, p. 215.

I once had Money and a Friend;
Of either, thought I store.

I lent my Money to my Friend
And took his word therefor.

I sought my Money from my Friend,
Which I had wanted long.

I lost my Money and my Friend;
Now was not that a wrong?

UNKNOWN, Money and a Friend.

<sup>7</sup> Those friends who are above interest are seldom above jealousy.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 243.

<sup>8</sup> I have begun to be a friend to myself. (Amicus esse mihi coepi.)

HECATO, Fragments. Frag. 26.

That was indeed a great benefit; such a person can never be alone. You may be sure that such a man is a friend to all mankind.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. vi, sec. 7.
Commenting on Hecato's declaration.

Be a friend to thyself, and others will be too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 847.

He that is friend to himself, know, he is friend to all.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

<sup>9</sup> When a friend asks there is no to-morrow.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>10</sup> Be friends with the friendly, and visit him who visits you.

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 353.

A fresh, a free, a friendly man.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v.

<sup>11</sup> Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

New Testament: John, xv, 13.

<sup>12</sup> I lay it down as a fact that, if all men knew what others say of them, there would not be four friends in the world.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. ii, No. 101.

<sup>13</sup> A constant friend is a thing rare and hard to find.

PLUTARCH, Morals: On Abundance of Friends.

Friends are rare, for the good reason that men are not common.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. ix, No. 2.

<sup>14</sup> Yea, mine own familiar friend, in whom I trusted, which did eat of my bread, hath lifted up his heel against me.

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 9.

<sup>15</sup> But it was thou, a man mine equal, my guide, and mine acquaintance.

Old Testament: Psalms, lv, 13.

But it was even thou, my companion, my guide, and mine own familiar friend.

Book of Common Prayer: The Psalter. Psalm lv, 6.

Thou wert my guide, philosopher, and friend.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 390.

Ah! were I sever'd from thy side,

Where were my friend—and who my guide?

1 It is better to make one's friendships at home.
(Οἶκοι βελτιόν ἐστι ποιεῖσθαι φιλίας.)

SOLON. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Sec. 5.)

2 'Tis something to be willing to commend;
But my best praise is, that I am your friend.
THOMAS SOUTHERNE, To Mr. Congreve.

3 Such a good friend that she will throw all her acquaintances into the water for the pleasure of fishing them out again.

TALLEYRAND, of Madame de Staël. (COOPER, Talleyrand.)

4 I know the Table Round, my friends of old;
All brave, and many generous, and some chaste.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 814.

5 A man cannot be said to succeed in this life who does not satisfy one friend.

THOREAU, Winter: Journal, 19 Feb., 1857.

6 Change your pleasure, but never change your friends. (Changez de volupté, ne changez point d'amis.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Dépositaire.

Be slow in choosing a friend, slower in changing.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard.

7 Friends should be preferred to kings.

VOLTAIRE, Letter to Frederick, Crown Prince of Prussia, 26 Aug., 1736.

8 An egg of one hour old, bread of one day,
a goat of one month, wine of six months, flesh of a year, fish of ten years, a wife of thirty years, a friend among a hundred, are the best of all number.

WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, p. 253. (1623)

9 But since friends grow not thick on ev'ry
bough,

Nor ev'ry friend unrotten at the core.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 563.

10 The friends of my friends are my friends.
(Les amis de mes amis sont mes amis.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

III—Friend: Friends Share in Common

11 Friends share in common. (Κοινὰ τὰ φίλων.)

BION. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, 53.)

Friends share all things in common. (Κοινὰ δὲ τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

DIOGENES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes.
Sec. 72.)

Friends have all in common. (Κοινὰ τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

MENANDER, Adelphoi. Frag. 9.

Friends have all things in common. (Κοινὰ τὰ φίλων εἶναι.)

PYTHAGORAS. According to Timæus, Pythagoras was the first to say this. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 10.)

12 With friends all things are in common. (Ami-corum esse omnia communia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, sec. 16. Quoted as a Greek saying.

13 Common are the possessions of friends.
(Ὅ κοινὰ ἀποφαίνων τὰ τῶν φίλων.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Third Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 110. Quoted as a proverb.

14 Oh, how you wrong our friendship, valiant youth.

With friends there is not such a word as debt:

Where amity is tied with band of truth,
All benefits are there in common set.

ELIZABETH, LADY CAREY, The Tragedy of Marian.

15 The benefits of fortune are common among friends.

WILLIAM FULLWOOD, Enemie of Idleness, 91.
(1593)

16 What is thine is mine, and all mine is thine.
(Quod tuum'st meum'st: omne meum est autem tuum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 47.

17 He that has much in common with his fellow-men will have much in common with a friend.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xlviii, 3.

18 It is an old saying that friends have all things in common. (Communia esse amicorum inter se omnia.)

TERENCE, Adelphi, l. 803.

IV—Friends: Their Choice

19 He is like to be mistaken, who makes choice of a covetous man for a friend, or relieth upon the reed of narrow and poltroon friendship.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i,
sec. 36.

20 Friends should not be chosen to flatter. The quality we should prize is that rectitude which will shrink from no truth. Intimacies which increase vanity destroy friendship.

W. E. CHANNING, Note-Book: Friendship.

21 Acquaintance I would have, but when 't depends

Not on the number, but the choice of friends.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

True happiness
Consists not in the multitude of friends,
But in the worth and choice. Nor would I have Virtue a popular regard pursue:
Let them be good that love me, though but few.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act iii, sc. 2.

1
I would not enter on my list of friends, (Tho' grac'd with polish'd manners and fine
sense

Yet wanting sensibility) the man
Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 560.

2
Fate makes relatives, but choice makes friends. (Le sort fait les parents, le choix fait les amis.)

DELILLE, Pitié.

Friends—those relatives that one makes for one's self. (Les amis—ces parents que l'on se fait soi-même.)

DESCHAMPS, L'Ami.

'Tis thus that on the choice of friends
Our good or evil name depends.

JOHN GAY, Fables: Old Woman and Her Cats.

4
Choose thy friends like thy books, few but choice.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. (1659)

5
Friends are like melons. Shall I tell you why?
To find one good, you must a hundred try.

CLAUDE MERMET, Epigram.

Do not be rash to make friends and, when once they are made, do not drop them.

SOLON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 16.)

Choose for your friend him that is wise and good, secret and just, ingenious and honest, and in those things which have a latitude, use your own liberty.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

When I choose my friend, I will not stay till I have received a kindness; but I will choose such a one that can do me many if I need them; but I mean such kindnesses which make me wiser,
and which make me better.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

A good man is the best friend, and therefore soonest to be chosen, longer to be retained; and indeed, never to be parted with.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

V—Friends: Their Value

8
Without friends no one would choose to live, even if he had all other goods. ("Ἄνευ γὰρ φίλων οὐδεὶς ζήσει" ἂν ζῆν ἔχων τὰ λοιπὰ ἀγαθὰ πάντα.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, sec. 1.

Friends are an aid to the young, to guard them from error; to the elderly, to attend to their wants; and to supplement their failing power of action; to those in the prime of life, to assist them to noble deeds.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, sec. 1.

9
No receipt openeth the heart but a true
friend.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

From quiet homes and first beginning,

Out to the undiscovered ends,

There's nothing worth the wear of winning

But laughter and the love of friends.

HILAIRE BELLOC, Sonnets and Verse: Dedicatory Ode.

10
I wish my deadly foe no worse

Than want of friends, and empty purse.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Farewell to Town.

11
Hand Grasps at hand, eye lights eye in good friendship, and great hearts expand
And grow one in the sense of this world's life.

ROBERT BROWNING, Saul. St. 7.

12
Elysium is as far as to

The very nearest room,

If in that room a friend await

Felicity or doom.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iii, No. 4.

13
Who is more indefatigable in toil, when there is occasion for toil, than a friend? Who is readier to rejoice in one's good fortune?
Whose praise is sweeter? From whose lips does one learn the truth with less pain? What fortress, what bulwarks, what arms are more steadfast than loyal hearts?

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 31.

14
Best friend, my well-spring in the wilderness!

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii, l. 486.

Friend more divine than all divinities.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, l. 8.

15
A day for toil, an hour for sport,

But for a friend is life too short.

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

We take care of our health; we lay up money;
we make our roof tight, and our clothing sufficient; but who provides wisely that he shall not be wanting in the best property of all,—friends?

EMERSON, *Conduct of Life: Considerations by
the Way*.

16
O friend, my bosom said,

Through thee alone the sky is arched,
Through thee the rose is red.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Friendship.

17
Of all the means to insure happiness throughout the whole of life, by far the most important is the acquisition of friends.

EPICURUS, Sovran Maxims. No. 27.

18
A friend in the market is better than money
in the chest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 119.

1 Large was his bounty, and his soul sincere,
Heav'n did a recompense as largely send:
He gave to Mis'ry all he had, a tear,
He gain'd from Heav'n ('twas all he wish'd) a friend.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 121.

2 Of all the heavenly gifts that mortal men commend,
What trusty treasure in the world can countervail a friend?

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Of Friendship.

3 Thy friend put in thy bosom: wear his eyes Still in thy heart, that he may see what's there.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 46.

Life without a friend is death without a witness.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 We hae friends ane or twa that aft gie us a ca',
To laugh when we're happy or grieve when we're wa'.

JAMES HOGG, Moggy and Me.

5 Whilst in my senses I shall prefer nothing to a pleasant friend. (Nil ego contulerim jucundo sanus amico.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 5, l. 44.

6 Without a horse and a dog and a friend, man would perish.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Parnesius: On the Great Wall.

7 A true friend is the greatest of all blessings, and the one which we take least thought to acquire. (Un véritable ami est le plus grand de tous les biens et celui de tous qu'on songe le moins à acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 544.

8 The thread of our life would be dark, Heaven knows!

If it were not with friendship and love intertwined.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh! Think Not.

9 This is the comfort of friends, that though they may be said to die, yet their friendship and society are, in the best sense, ever present, because immortal.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruites of Solitude.

A true friend unbosoms freely, advises justly, assists readily, adventures boldly, takes all patiently, defends courageously, and continues a friend unchangeably.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruites of Solitude.

10 Honest men esteem and value nothing so much in this world as a real friend. Such a one is, as it were, another self.

PILPAY, Choice of Friends. Ch. iv.

11 Nothing but heaven itself is better than a friend who is really a friend. (Homini amico, qui est amicus ita uti nomen possidet, Nisi
deos ei nil præstare.

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 385. (Act iii, sc. 2.)

Above our life we love a steadfast friend.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sestiad ii.

To have the greatest blessing, a true friend.

MASSINGER, Parliament of Love. Act iii, sc. 2.

12 Where there are friends, there is wealth. (Ubi amici, esse ibidem opes.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act ii, l. 14.

They are rich who have true friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4957.

I am wealthy in my friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act ii, sc. 2,
l. 193.

13 Friends given by God in mercy and in love;
My counsellors, my comforters, and guides;
My joy in grief, my second bliss in joy;
Companions of my young desires; in doubt
My oracles; my wings in high pursuit.

O, I remember, and will ne'er forget
Our meeting spots, our chosen sacred hours,
Our burning words, that utter'd all the soul,
Our faces beaming with unearthly love;
Sorrow with sorrow sighing, hope with hope
Exulting, heart embracing heart entire.

POLLOCK, The Course of Time. Bk. v, l. 315.

14 Friend to my life (which did you not prolong,

The world had wanted many an idle song)!
POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 27.

15 Neither armies nor treasures form the bulwarks of a throne, but friends. (Non exercitus, neque thesauri, præsidia regni sunt, verum amici.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 10, sec. 4.

16 Keep thy friend Under thy own life's key.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
i, sc. 1, l. 75.

Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 62.

I count myself in nothing else so happy

As in a soul remembering my good friends.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 46.

17 But every road is rough to me that has no friend to cheer it.

ELIZABETH SHANE, Sheshkinbeg.

18 It is strange that a man can always tell how many sheep he has, but he cannot tell how many friends he has, so slight is the value he puts upon them.

SOCRATES. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 13.)

1 The best elixir is a friend.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, The Hip.

2 'Tis pleasant to have found and proved a friend;

For him who good for good returns I hold
A friend more precious than unnumbered gold.

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 671.

3 Nothing can be purchased which is better than a firm friend. (Amico firmo nihil emi melius potest.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. i, sec. 12.

4 Nothing makes the earth seem so spacious as to have friends at a distance; they make the latitudes and longitudes.

THOREAU, Letter to Mrs. E. Castleton, 22 May, 1843.

5 A friend is worth all hazards we can run.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 571.

6 There is no treasure which may be compared unto a faithful friend;

Gold soon decayeth, and worldly wealth consumeth, and wasteth in the wind;
But love once planted in a perfect and pure mind endureth weal and woe;

The frowns of fortune, come they never so unkind, cannot it overthrow.

UNKNOWN, The Bride's Good-Morning. (Roxburghe Ballads.)

VI—Friends: Their Loyalty

7 I have loved my friends as I do virtue, my soul, my God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 5.

8 Let us be friends, Cinna, it is I who invite you. (Soyons amis, Cinna, c'est moi qui t'en convie.)

CORNEILLE, Cinna. Act v, sc. 3.

9 Then come the wild weather, come sleet or come snow,

We will stand by each other, however it blow.
SIMON DACH, Annie of Tharaw, l. 7. (Longfellow, tr.)

10 "Wal'r, my boy," replied the captain; "in the Proverbs of Solomon you will find the following words: 'May we never want a friend in need, nor a bottle to give him!' When found, make a note of."

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Vol. i, ch. 15.

What is the odds so long as the fire of souls is kindled at the taper of conviviality, and the wing of friendship never moults a feather?

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 2.

11 Here's to the friends we can trust

When storms of adversity blow;

May they live in our songs and be nearest our hearts,

Nor depart like the year that's awa'.

JOHN DUNLOP, The Year That's Awa'.

12 A friend ought to shun no pain, to stand his friend in stead.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias.

13 So, if I live or die to serve my friend,

'Tis for my love—'tis for my friend alone,
And not for any rate that friendship bears
In heaven or on earth.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iii, l. 361.

14 Promises may get friends, but it is performance that must nurse and keep them.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Promises.

15 Particular contentment of mind that I have such an odd friend in a corner.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 80. (c. 1579)

And, Cæsar, you shall find—a friend in corner.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Play-House to Be Let. Act v.

16 True friends appear less mov'd than counterfeit. (Derisor vero plus laudatore movetur.)
HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 433. (Dillon, tr.)

17 A good friend never offends.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 23. (1659)

18 Friend of my bosom, thou more than a brother,

Why wert thou not born in my father's dwelling?

CHARLES LAMB, The Old Familiar Faces.

19 Yes, we must ever be friends; and of all who offer you friendship

Let me be ever the first, the truest, the nearest and dearest!

LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. vi, l. 72.

20 A true friend is forever a friend.

GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie.

21 A man that hath friends must shew himself friendly: and there is a friend that sticketh closer than a brother.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 24.

Neither make thy friend equal to a brother. (Μηδέ κασιγνήτῳ ἴσον ποιεῖσθαι ἑταῖρον.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 707.

22 But oh! if grief thy steps attend,
If want, if sickness be thy lot,

And thou require a soothing friend,

Forget me not, forget me not!

AMELIA OPIE, Go, Youth, Beloved.

1 Convey thy love to thy friend, as an arrow to the mark, to stick there, not as a ball against the wall, to rebound back to thee.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iv, No. 100.

2 He is a good friend that doth thee good.

RIVERS, Dictes and Sayings, 57. (1477)

But he is my friend

That helps me in the end.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, iii, 288. (1640)

He is my friend that succoureth me, not he that pitieth me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1926.

3 He was my friend, faithful and just to me.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 90.

4 If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2, l. 175.

5 Life hath no joy like his who fights with Fate
Shoulder to shoulder with a stricken friend.

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, Midshipman Lanyon.

6 To God, thy country, and thy friend be true.

HENRY VAUGHAN, Rules and Lessons. No. 8.

7 If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening

Tinge his brow with sunset glow.

Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

UNKNOWN, Say It Now.

VII—Friends: Their Faults

8 While friends we were, the hot debates
That rose 'twixt you and me!

Now we are mere associates,
And never disagree.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

9 In friendship I early was taught to believe; . . .

I have found that a friend may profess, yet deceive.

BYRON, Lines to the Rev. J. T. Becher. St. 7.

A good friend, but bad acquaintance.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 54.

10 No discord should arise between friends, but if it does, then our care should be that the friendships appear to have been burned out rather than to have been stamped out.

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 78.

Never break off friendship, rather untie it, when those you become bound to appear cheats. Hall says, "I will use my friend as Moses did his rod:

while it was a rod he held it familiarly in his hand: When once a serpent, he ran away from it."

JAMES PUCKLE, The Club.

11 All are not friends that speak us fair.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 128. (1639)

A slender acquaintance with the world must convince every man, that actions, not words, are the true criterion of the attachment of friends; and that the most liberal professions of good-will are very far from being the surest marks of it.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Social Maxims. Friendship.

12 There is a friend, which is only a friend in name.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxvii, 1.

13 Our best friends are the source of our greatest sorrow and bitterness.

FÉNELON, Letter to Destouches, 13 Aug., 1714.

CANDID FRIEND, see under CANDOR.

14 A broken friendship may be soldered, but will never be sound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 27.

15 He who betrays his friend, shall never be Under one roof, or in one ship, with me.

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2. (Swift, tr.)

16 A friend is long a-getting and soon lost.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 324. (1580)

They that study man say of a friend, There's nothing in the world that's harder found, nor sooner lost.

WEBSTER AND ROWLEY, Cure for a Cuckold.
Act iii, sc. 1. (1661)

17 Here our long web of friendship I untwist.

MASSINGER, The Fatal Dowry. Act. iii, sc. 1.

18 It is more shameful to mistrust one's friends than to be deceived by them. (Il est plus honteux de se défier de ses amis que d'en être trompé.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 84.

19 Nothing is more annoying than a tardy friend.
(Tardo amico nihil est quidquam inæquius.)

PLAUTUS, Pænulus, l. 504. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

20 Oft our displeasures, to ourselves unjust, Destroy our friends and after weep their
dust.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
v, sc. 3, l. 63.

21 Call you that backing of your friends? A plague upon such backing! give me them that will face me.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 165.

1 I am weary of friends, and friendships are all monsters.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella. 23 Oct., 1710.

2 The path of social advancement is, and must be, strewn with broken friendships.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. ii, ch. 5.

VIII—Friends and Enemies

3 If he draw aside from your proper end,
No enemy like a bosom friend.

WILLIAM ALLINGHAM, Blackberries.

4 For much better it is
To bide a friend's anger than a foe's kiss.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirror of Good Manners, 21. (1570)

A friend's frown is better than a foe's smile.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. (1659)

5 Our friends, the enemy. (Nos amis, les ennemis.)

BÉRANGER, L'Opinion de ces Demoiselles. The French are said to have used the expression, "Nos amis, nos ennemis," when the Allies entered Paris after the abdication of Napoleon in 1814.

6 I have tried to make friends by corporeal gifts, but have only made enemies. I have never made friends but by spiritual gifts, by severe contentions of friendship, and the burning fire of thought.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Jerusalem.

7 Thy friendship oft has made my heart to ache:—

Do be my enemy, for friendship's sake.

WILLIAM BLAKE, To Hayley.

8 In life it is difficult to say who do you the most mischief, enemies with the worst intentions, or friends with the best.

BULWER-LYTTON, What Will He Do With It? Bk. iii, ch. 17, heading.

9 Angry friendship is sometimes as bad as calm enmity.

EDMUND BURKE, An Appeal from the New to the Old Whigs.

10 For what man that hath friends through fortune,

Mishap will make them enemies, I guess:
This proverb is full sooth.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 254.

11 Greatly his foes he dreads, but more his friends;

He hurts me most who lavishly commends.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l. 19.

Friends I have made, whom Envy must commend,

But not one foe whom I would wish a friend.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Conference, l. 297.

12 Our enmities mortal, our friendships eternal.
(Mortalis inimicitias, sempiternas amicitias.)

CICERO, Pro Rabirio Postumo. Ch. 12, sec. 33.

13 We should render a service to a friend to bind him closer to us, and to an enemy to make a friend of him.

CLEOBULUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Cleobulus. Sec. 5.)

14 It is always safe to learn, even from our enemies; seldom safe to venture to instruct, even our friends.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. No. 286.

15 We read that we ought to forgive our enemies; but we do not read that we ought to forgive our friends.

COSIMO DE' MEDICI, of perfidious friends.
(BACON, Apothegms. No. 206.)

16 Friends are as dangerous as enemies.

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Essays: Schlosser's Literary History.

17 He that can be a worthy enemy, will, when reconciled, be a worthier friend.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves: Of Reconciling Enemies.

18 You and I were long friends; you are now my enemy, and I am

Yours,

Benjamin Franklin.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letter to William Strahan. 5 July, 1775.

19 Do good to thy friend to keep him, to thy enemy to gain him.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanac.

20 An open foe may prove a curse,
But a pretended friend is worse.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, No. 17.

21 He rose without a friend, and sat down without an enemy.

HENRY GRATTAN, of Dr. Lucas after a speech in the Irish Parliament.

22 It is a misfortune for a man not to have a friend in the world, but for that reason he shall have no enemy.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 243.

He will never have true friends who is afraid of making enemies.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 401.

No man's defects sought they to know;
So never made themselves a foe.

No man's good deeds did they commend;
So never rais'd themselves a friend.

MATTHEW PRIOR, An Epitaph.

He makes no friend who never made a foe.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1082.

1 Save a man from his friends, and leave him struggle with his enemies.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, 328.

2 Invite your friend to a feast, but leave your enemy alone. (Τὸν φιλέοντ' ἐπὶ δαῖτα καλεῖν, τὸν δ' ἐχθρὸν ἑάσαι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 342.

3 Not hate, but glory, made these chiefs contend;

And each brave foe was in his soul a friend.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 364. (Pope, tr.)

4 I can defend myself from my enemies, but not from my friends.

HONEIN BEN ISAAK, Moral Maxims. (c. 870)

Appears in various forms in all literatures.

A feigned friend God shield me from his danger,
For well I'll save myself from foe and stranger.
ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, and Fancies.

From him whom I trust, God defend me; for from him whom I trust not I will defend myself.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, letter 75.

Against a foe I can myself defend,—
But Heaven protect me from a blundering friend!
D'ARCY WENTWORTH THOMPSON, Sales Attici.

Defend me from my friends; I can defend myself from my enemies.

MARÉCHAL DE VILLARS, when taking leave of
Louis XIV. Also attributed in slightly different form to Voltaire: "May God defend me from my friends; I can defend myself from my enemies." The saying is, of course, much older. (See Notes and Queries, ser. vii, No. 10, p. 428.)

5 When fails our dearest friend,
There may be refuge with our direst foe.

J. S. KNOWLES, The Wife. Act v, sc. 2.

6 Nothing is so dangerous as an ignorant friend:
better have a wise enemy. (Rien n'est si dangereux qu'un ami ignorant; Mieux vaudrait un sage ennemi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 10.

Better to have a loving friend
Than ten admiring foes.

GEORGE MACDONALD, After Thomas à Kempis. St. 2.

7 Our best friend is a blundering enemy.

JOHN MACY, About Women, p. 82.

8 If you never tell your secret to your friend,
you will never fear him when he becomes your enemy.

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 695.

9 Trust not yourself; but your defects to know,
Make use of ev'ry friend—and ev'ry foe.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 13.

10 What war could ravish, commerce could bestow,

And he return'd a friend who came a foe.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 205.

11 To lasting toils expos'd, and endless cares,
To open dangers, and to secret snares;
To malice which the vengeful foe intends,
And the more dangerous love of seeming friends.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. iii, l. 75.

12 Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 5.

One cried: "The wounds are faithful of a friend:
The wilderness shall blossom as the rose."

One answered: "Rend the veil, declare the end, Strengthen her ere she goes."

CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, From House to House.

13 Treat your friend as if he might become an enemy.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 401.

14 Inflict not on an enemy every injury in your power, for he may afterwards become your friend.

SADI, The Gulistan: Rules for Conduct in Life. No. 10.

15 It is better to break off a thousand friendships, than to endure the sight of a single enemy.

SADI, The Gulistan: Of Youth and Love. No. 15.

16 Dear is my friend—yet from my foe, as from my friend, comes good:

My friend shows what I can do, and my foe what I should.

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: Friend and Foe.

17 The zeal of friends it is that razes me,
And not the hate of enemies.

(Der Freunde Eifer ist's, der mich
Zu Grunde richtet, nicht der Hass der Feinde.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act iii, sc. 18.

18 The angry prayers of our enemies make us falsely afraid, and the affection of our friends spoils us with kindly wishes.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 54.

19 The great man down, you mark his favourite flies;

The poor advanced makes friends of enemies,

And hitherto doth love on fortune tend;
For who not needs shall never lack a friend,
And who in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 214.

1 Give him all kindness: I had rather have Such men my friends, than enemies.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 4, l. 28.

2 The private wound is deepest: O Time most accurst

'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act v, sc. 4, l. 71.

3 Having some friends whom he loves dearly,
And no lack of foes, whom he laughs at sincerely.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Robert the Rhymer's Account of Himself.

4 Better new friend than an old foe.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto ii, st. 27.

Faint friends when they fall out most cruel foe-men be.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto ix, st. 27.

5 One enemy can do more hurt than ten friends can do good.

SWIFT, Letter, 30 May, 1710. (Quoted.)

6 He who has a thousand friends has not a friend to spare,
And he who has one enemy shall meet him everywhere.

ALI BEN ABU TALEB. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. Emerson ascribes the couplet to Omar Khayyám.)

Whatever the number of a man's friends, there will be times in his life when he has one too few;
but if he has only one enemy, he is lucky indeed
if he has not one too many.

BULWER-LYTON, What Will He Do With It?
Bk. ix, ch. 3.

The world is large when its weary leagues two loving hearts divide;

But the world is small when your enemy is loose
on the other side.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Distance.

7 Some great misfortune to portend,
No enemy can match a friend.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 119.

8 Foes in the forum in the field were friends,
By social danger bound.

JAMES THOMSON, Liberty. Pt. iii, l. 218.

9 It takes your enemy and your friend, working together, to hurt you to the heart: the one to slander you and the other to get the news to you.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

10 If I have not a friend, God send me an enemy, that I may hear of my faults.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Sermons.

11 As good a foe that hurts not, as a friend that helps not.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 19.

12 A foe to God was ne'er true friend to man;
Some sinister intent taints all he does.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 704.

13 Perish our friends, so foes may die withal.
(Ἐρρέτω φίλος σὺν ἐχθρῷ.)

UNKNOWN. Quoted by CICERO, Pro Rege Diotaro, ix, 25, who puts it into Latin: Pereant amici, dum inimici una interdicant. Cicero condemns the sentiment.

IX—Friends and Adversity

14 Faithful friends are hard to find:

Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend;
But if store of crowns be scant,
No man will supply thy want.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Passionate Pilgrim, l. 407.

15 Let no man grumble when his friends fall off,
As they will do like leaves at the first breeze:
When your affairs come round, one way or t' other,

Go to the coffee-house, and take another.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 48.

16 If thou be poor, thy brother hateth thee,
And all thy friends do flee from thee, alas!
CHAUCER, Man of Law's Tale: Prologue, l. 22.

17 While the pot boils, friendship blooms.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 95.

Pot friendship; cupboard love. (Ollæ amicitia.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb.

18 Interiorly, most people enjoy the inferiority of their best friends.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

19 Be more ready to visit friends in adversity than in prosperity.

CHILON. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 3.)
Come slowly to the banquets of thy friends, but swiftly to their misfortunes.

CHILON. (STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iii, 79, 7.)

20 The swallows are at hand in summer time, but in cold weather they are driven away.
. . . So false friends are at hand in life's clear weather, but as soon as they see the winter of misfortune, they all fly away.

CICERO, Ad Herennium. Bk. iv, sec. 48.

Like summer friends,
Flies of estate and sunshine.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Answer.

When the sun shines on you, you see your friends.
Friends are the thermometers by which one may judge the temperature of our fortunes.

COUNTESS OF BLESSINGTON, Commonplace Book.

O summer friendship,
Whose flattering leaves, that shadow'd us in
Our prosperity, with the least gust drop off
In th' autumn of adversity.

MASSINGER, Maid of Honour. Act ii, sc. 2.

For men, like butterflies,
Show not their mealy wings but to the summer.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 78.

1
In prosperity our friends know us; in adversity we know our friends.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms.

2
Our very best friends have a tincture of jealousy even in their fellowship.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon, p. 80.

3
For friendship, of itself a holy tie,
Is made more sacred by adversity.

DRYDEN, Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 47.

4
If we from wealth to poverty descend,
Want gives to know the flatterer from the
friend.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath: Her Tale, l. 485.

5
When Fortune's fickle, the faithful friend is found. (Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur.)

ENNIVS. (CICERO, De Amicitia, xvii, 64.)

6
In prosperity it is very easy to find a friend;
but in adversity it is the most difficult of all things.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 127.

7
Friends disappear with the dregs from the empty wine casks. (Diffugiunt cadis Cum face siccatis, amici.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 35, l. 26.

So vanish friendships only made in wine.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 379.

8
In time of prosperity friends will be plenty;
In time of adversity not one among twenty.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 20. (1659)

9
In the adversity of our best friends we always find something which does not displease us. (Dans l'adversité de nos meilleurs amis nous trouvons toujours quelque chose qui ne nous déplaît pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 99. This maxim was withdrawn from the third edition, probably because of the outcry it occasioned. (Maximes Supprimées. No. 583.)

This maxim more than all the rest
Is thought too base for human breast:

"In all distresses of our friends,
We first consult our private ends;
While nature, kindly bent to ease us,
Points out some circumstance to please us."

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 5. Swift defends the sentiment on the ground that good fortune is always sentimentally enhanced by contrast with the misfortunes of others.

Those who know the deception and wickedness of the human heart will not be either romantic or blind enough to deny what Rochefoucauld and Swift have affirmed as a general truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 129.

OTHERS.

10
The vulgar herd estimate friendship by its advantages. (Vulgus amicitias utilitate probat.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. iii, p. 8.

There is love for none, save him whom fortune favors. (Diligitur nemo, nisi cui fortuna secunda
est.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 23.

The rest of the crowd were friends of my fortune, not of me. (Cætera Fortunæ, non mea, turba fuit.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. v, l. 34.

11
Just as yellow gold is tested in the fire, so is friendship to be tested by adversity. (Scilicet ut fulvum spectatur in ignibus aurum, Tempore sic duro est inspicienda fides.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. v, l. 25.

12
So long as you are secure you will count many friends; if your life becomes clouded you will be alone. (Donec eris sospes, multos numerabis amicos; Tempora si fuerint nubila, solus eris.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. ix, l. 5.

Ants do not bend their ways to empty barns, so no friend will visit the place of departed wealth.
(Horrea formicæ tendunt ad inania nunquam Nullius ad amissas ibit amicus opes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 9.

If wealth totters, friends begin to waver simultaneously with it. Wealth finds friends. (Si res labat Itidem amici collabascunt: res amicos invenit.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus. Act ii, sc. 4.

13
Be the same to your friends, whether in prosperity or adversity.

PERIANDER. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander.

14
Prosperity makes friends and adversity tries them. (Amicum an nomen habeas, aperit calamitas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 872. Repeated in many Latin authors.

Prosperity gets followers, but adversity distinguishes them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3962.

15
He who begins to be your friend because it pays will also cease because it pays.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 9.

That friendship will not continue to the end that is begun for an end.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. iv, 100.

<sup>1</sup> Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels

Be sure you be not loose; for those you make friends

And give your hearts to, when they once perceive

The least rub in your fortunes, fall away

Like water from ye, never found again

But where they mean to sink ye.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 126.

<sup>2</sup> I have learned which friends of mine are true and which are false, now that I am no longer able to reward or punish either. (Tum se intellexisse, quos fidos amicos habuisset, quos infidos, cum jam neutris gratiam referre posset.)

TARQUIN, on going into exile. (CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xv, sec. 53.)

<sup>3</sup> Many thy boon companions at the feast,
But few the friends who cleave to thee in trouble.

THEOGNIS, Sententiæ. No. 115.

Feast, and your halls are crowded;

Fast, and the world goes by.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Solitude.

Now that I no longer need,

I can get full many a feed.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars.

<sup>4</sup> There is an old time toast which is golden for its beauty. "When you ascend the hill of prosperity may you not meet a friend."

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

X—Friend: A Friend in Need

<sup>5</sup> A friend is known in necessity.

GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 67. (c. 1470)

<sup>6</sup> He that is thy friend indeed,

He will help thee in thy need:

If thou sorrow, he will weep;

If thou wake, he cannot sleep;

Thus of every grief in heart

He with thee doth bear a part.

These are certain signs to show

Faithful friend from faltering foe.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, Passionate Pilgrim, l. 423.

<sup>7</sup> To be a strong hand in the dark to another in a time of need.

HUGH BLACK, The Culture of Friendship.

<sup>8</sup> Three things are known only in three places:

Valour, which knows itself only in war; Wisdom, only in anger; and Friendship, only in need.

EMERSON, Journal, 1863. Quoted as a Persian saying.

<sup>9</sup> Behold how much it stands a man in stead,

To have a friend answer in time of need.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No. 101. (1618)

<sup>10</sup>

But in deed,

A friend is never known till a man hath need.

<sup>11</sup>

At need shall men prove their friends.

ROBERT MANNING (ROBERT DE BRUNNE), Handlyng Synne, l. 2251. (1303)

<sup>12</sup>

A friend is not known but in need.

GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83. (1683)

<sup>13</sup>

A friend in a pinch is a friend in deed, when deeds are needed. (Is est amicus, qui in re dubia re juvat, ubi rest opus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 113. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Nothing is dearer to a man than a friend in need.

(Nihil homini amicost opportuno amicus.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 425. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

<sup>14</sup>

I am not of that feather to shake off

My friend when he must need me.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 1, l. 100.

<sup>15</sup>

A safe companion is he that helps at need.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Alfred, 247. (c. 1270)

A friend thou art in deed,

That helps thy friend in time of nipping need.

THOMAS HOWELL, Devises, 58. (1581)

A friend in need is a friend indeed.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. vii, ch. 22, heading. (1772)

<sup>16</sup>

It is good to have friends, but bad to need them.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, 15. (1669)

XI—Friends: Old and New

<sup>17</sup>

No friend's a friend until he prove a friend.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Faithful Friends. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 50.

Are new friends who are worthy of friendship, to be preferred to old friends? The question is unworthy of a human being, for there should be no surfeit of friendships as there is of other things; and, as in the case of wines that improve with age, the oldest friendships ought to be the most delightful; moreover, the well-known adage is true: "Men must eat many a peck of salt together before the claims of friendship are fulfilled." (Multos modios salis simul edendos esse, ut amicitiae munus expletum sit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 19, sec. 67. See also under SALT.

<sup>19</sup>

Old friends burn dim, like lamps in noisome air;

Love them for what they are; nor love them less,

Because to thee they are not what they were.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Duty Surviving Self-Love.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, ix, 10.

As old wood is best to burn, old horse to ride, old books to read, and old wine to drink, so are old friends always most trusty to use.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, 19. (1589)

For other quotations on old wine, old books, etc., see under AGE: ITS COMPENSATIONS.

<sup>2</sup> Old friendships are like meats served up repeatedly, cold, comfortless, and distasteful. The stomach turns against them.

<sup>3</sup> An old friend is a new house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>4</sup> It is delightful to me to go mad over a friend restored to me. (Recepto Dulci mihi furere est amico.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 7, l. 27.

They are twice as good friends as they were before [they quarrelled].

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 62.

<sup>5</sup> And newest friend is oldest friend in this: That, waiting him, we longest grieved to miss

One thing we sought.

HELEN HUNT JACKSON, My New Friend.

<sup>6</sup> I find friendship to be like wine, raw when new, ripened with age, the true old man's milk and restorative cordial.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 77.

<sup>7</sup> Ah, how good it feels!

The hand of an old friend.

LONGFELLOW, John Endicott. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> We have been friends together

In sunshine and in shade.

CAROLINE NORTON, We Have Been Friends.

<sup>9</sup> How much the best of a man's friends is his oldest friend! (Quam veterrimus homini optimus est amicus!)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2, l. 71.

<sup>10</sup> Old friends are best. King James used to call for his old shoes, for they were easiest for his feet.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Friends.

<sup>11</sup> Should auld acquaintance be forgot, and never thought upon?

FRANCIS SEMPILL, Auld Lang Syne. (JAMES

WATSON, Choice Collection of Scots Poems. Pt. iii. 1711.) This is the earliest known version of Auld Lang Syne, and is sometimes attributed to Sir Robert Ayton.

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
Though they return with scars?

ALLAN RAMSAY, Auld Lang Syne. 1721. (See FITZGERALD, Stories of Famous Songs.)

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And never brought to mind?

Should auld acquaintance be forgot,
And auld lang syne?

ROBERT BURNS, Auld Lang Syne. (1788) Burns himself in a letter to Mrs. Dunlop, speaks of Auld Lang Syne as an "old fragment," but, with the exception of the first stanza, the song is his. Allan Ramsay's song suggested nothing except the opening line and the title.

<sup>12</sup> It's an owercome sooth for age an' youth,
And it brooks wi' nae denial,

That the dearest friends are the auldest friends,

And the young are just on trial.

R. L. STEVENSON, It's an Owercome Sooth.

<sup>13</sup> Be courteous to all, but intimate with few, and let those few be well tried before you give them your confidence. True friendship is a plant of slow growth, and must undergo and withstand the shocks of adversity before it is entitled to the appellation.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter, Newburgh, 15 Jan., 1783.

<sup>14</sup> Friendship's the wine of life; but friendship new . . .

Is neither strong nor pure.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 582.

XII—Friends: Behavior

<sup>15</sup> We should behave to our friends as we would wish our friends to behave to us. (Ἄν ἀν ἐχθαίμεθα αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν προσφέρεσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 21.)

If men are friends, there is no need of justice between them; whereas when they are just, they still need friendship. The just possess friendliness in its highest form.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 1, sec. 5.

<sup>16</sup> My son, keep well thy tongue, and keep thy friend.

CHAUCER, The Maunciples Tale, l. 215.

<sup>17</sup> Between friends, frequent reproofs make the friendship distant.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 26.

Reprove your friends in secret, praise them openly. (Secrete amicos admone, lauda palam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae.

Alas! I then have chid away my friend!

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 87.

<sup>1</sup> Be kind to my remains; and O defend,
Against your judgment, your departed friend!
DRYDEN, To Mr. Congreve, l. 72.

<sup>2</sup> To act the part of a true friend requires more conscientious feeling than to fill with credit and complacency any other station or capacity in social life.

SARAH STICKNEY ELLIS, Pictures of Private Life. Ser. ii, ch. 4.

<sup>3</sup> There can never be deep peace between two spirits, never mutual respect, until, in their dialogue, each stands for the whole world.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

<sup>4</sup> Better be a nettle in the side of your friend than his echo.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

If I mayn't tell you what I feel, what is the use of a friend?

THACKERAY, Unpublished Letters.

<sup>5</sup> Do not expect friends to do for you what you can do for yourself. (Ne quid expectes amicos, quod tute agere possies.)

QUINTUS ENNIUS, Saturæ. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. ii, epis. 29, sec. 20.) The conclusion of a poetical rendering of Æsop's fable of the lark.

<sup>6</sup> When our friends are present, we ought to treat them well; and when they are absent, to speak of them well.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 155.

<sup>7</sup> He does good to himself who does good to his friend. (Sibi benefacit qui benefacit amico.)

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies.

<sup>8</sup> The discussing the characters and foibles of common friends is a great sweetener and cement of friendship.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Vol. ii, p. 78.

<sup>9</sup> When my friends are one-eyed, I look at their profile. (Quand mes amis sont borgnes, je les regarde de profil.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 4.

<sup>10</sup> A judicious friend is better than a zealous.
J. S. KNOWLES, The Love Chase. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>11</sup> The greatest endeavor of friendship is not to show our faults to a friend, but to make him see his own. (Le plus grand effort de l'amitié n'est pas de montrer nos défauts à un ami; c'est de lui faire voir les siens.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 410.

<sup>12</sup> Iron sharpeneth iron; so a man sharpeneth
the countenance of his friend.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 17.

<sup>13</sup> Unless you bear with the faults of a friend, you betray your own. (Amici vitium ni feras, facis tua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 10.

A friend should bear his friend's infirmities.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 86.

<sup>14</sup> A friend must not be wounded, even in jest.
(Amicum lædere ne joco quidem licet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 54.

<sup>15</sup> The inclination to lose a friend rather than a jest should be far from us. (Potius amicum quam dictum perendi.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. vi,
ch. 3.

He that will lose his friend for a jest, deserves to die a beggar by the bargain.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy and Profane
States: Of Jestings*.

It is better to lose a new jest than an old friend.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works. Vol. ii, p. 125. (1593)

<sup>16</sup> When friendship is settled, you must trust;
before friendship is formed, you must pass judgment.

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iii, sec. 2.

<sup>17</sup> The amity that wisdom knits not, folly
May easily untie.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 110.

<sup>18</sup> If it is abuse, why one is always sure to hear of it from one damned good-natured friend or another.

R. B. SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>19</sup> Hast thou a friend, as heart may wish at will?

Then use him so, to have his friendship still.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Posies for a Parlour.

<sup>20</sup> The smoothest course of nature has its pains,
And truest friends, through error, wound our
rest.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 278.

All like the purchase, few the price will pay,
And this makes friends such miracles below.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 556.

XIII—Friends: Their Loss

See also Death: They Are All Gone

<sup>21</sup> A man dies as often as he loses his friends.
(Homo toties moritur quoties amittit suos.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 17.

<sup>22</sup> Friends depart, and memory takes them
To her caverns, pure and deep.

THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY, Teach Me to Forget.

<sup>23</sup> Friends of my youth, a last adieu! haply some day we meet again;

Yet ne'er the self-same men shall meet; the years shall make us other men.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. i, st.
16.

Farewell, dear friend, that smile, that harmless
mirth,

No more shall gladden our domestic hearth.

H. F. CARY, Epitaph on Charles Lamb.

1
As we sail through life towards death,
Bound unto the same port—heaven,—
Friend, what years could us divide?

DINAH M. M. CRAIK, A Christmas Blessing.

2
Let the soul be assured that somewhere in the universe it should rejoin its friend, and it would be content and cheerful alone for a thousand years.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

3
Green be the turf above thee,
Friend of my better days!

None knew thee but to love thee,
Nor named thee but to praise.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, On the Death of Joseph Rodman Drake.

For my boyhood's friend hath fallen, the pillar of my trust,

The true, the wise, the beautiful, is sleeping in the dust.

G. S. HILLARD, On The Death of Motley.

4
I see no comfort in outliving one's friends, and remaining a mere monument of the times which are past.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 297.

5
Friendship between mortals can be contracted on no other terms than that one must sometime mourn for the other's death.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 17.

6
Thrice blessed are our friends:
They come, they stay—

And presently go away.

RICHARD R. KIRK, Thrice Blessed.

7
Let the loss of our friends be our only grief, and the apprehension of displeasing them
our only fear.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Epicurus, Leontion, and Ternissa.

8
Come back! ye friends, whose lives are ended,
Come back, with all that light attended,
Which seemed to darken and decay
When ye arose and went away!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

O friend! O best of friends! Thy absence more Than the impending night darkens the landscape o'er!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. i.

9
Friend after friend departs!

Who hath not lost a friend?
There is no union here of hearts
That finds not here an end.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Friends.

10
When I remember all
The friends, so link'd together,
I've seen around me fall,

Like leaves in wintry weather,
I feel like one Who treads alone
Some banquet-hall deserted,

Whose lights are fled, Whose garlands dead,
And all but he departed!

THOMAS MOORE, Oft in the Stilly Night.

The friends, who in our sunshine live,
When winter comes, are flown;

And he who has but tears to give,
Must weep those tears alone.

THOMAS MOORE, Oh, Thou! Who Dry'st the Mourner's Tear.

11
Of all my many friends, scarcely two or three of you are left to me. (Vix duo tresve mihi de tot superestis amici.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 5, l. 33.

12
For all are friends in heaven, all faithful
friends;

And many friendships in the days of time
Begun, are lasting here, and growing still.

ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. v,
l. 336.

13
Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided.

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 23.

These are two friends whose lives were undivided:

So let their memory be, now they have glided
Under the grave; let not their bones be parted,
For their two hearts in life were single-hearted.

SHELLEY, Epitaph.

14
To lose a friend is the greatest of all evils, but endeavour rather to rejoice that you possessed him than to mourn his loss.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Luciliūm. Epis. xcix, 3.

To wail friends lost
Is not by much so wholesome-profitable
As to rejoice at friends but newly found.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 759.

15
This passion, and the death of a dear friend, would go near to make a man look sad.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 293.

16
Friends I have had both old and young,
And ale we drank and songs we sung:
Enough you know when this is said,
That, one and all, they died in bed.
In bed they died, and I'll not go

Where all my friends have perished so.

CHARLES HENRY WEBB, Dum Vivamus Vigilamus.

1 But Fate ordains the dearest friends must part.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. ii, l. 232.

For friends, you know, must part.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, i, 253. (1620)

2 Each friend by fate snatch'd from us is a plume

Pluck'd from the wing of human vanity,
Which makes us stoop from our aerial heights.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 285.

FRIENDSHIP

I—Friendship: Definitions

3 It redoubleth joys and cutteth griefs in halves.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship.

4 Friendship is a word the very sight of which in print makes the heart warm.

AUGUSTINE BIRREL, Obiter Dicta: The Muse of History.

5 Friendship! mysterious cement of the soul! Sweet'ner of life, and solder of society!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 88.

6 Friendship is a slow grower, and never thrives unless ingrafted upon a stock of known and reciprocal merit.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 Oct., 1747.

7 Friendship is nothing else than an accord in all things, human and divine, conjoined with mutual good-will and affection. (Est enim amicitia nihil aliud nisi omnium divinarum humanarumque rerum cum benevolentia et caritate consensio.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 6, sec. 20.

8 Friendship is a sheltering tree.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

9 Friendship is the gift of the gods, and the most precious boon to man.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 16 July, 1855.

10 'Tis a French definition of friendship, rien que s'entendre, good understanding.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

I hate the prostitution of the name of friendship to signify modish and worldly alliances.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Friendship.

11 Without confidence there is no friendship. (Εἰ δ' ἀπίστων οὐδὲ φίλων.)

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 11.)

12 Friendship is a disinterested commerce between equals.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i, sc. 1.

Full of this maxim, often heard in trade, Friendship with none but equals should be made.

THOMAS CHATTERTON, Fragment.

There is a maxim indeed which says—"Friendship can only subsist between equals."

THOMAS HOLCROFT, The School for Arrogance. Act iii, sc. 1.

Friendship is seldom lasting, but between equals, or where the superiority on one side is reduced by some equivalent advantage on the other.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 64.

There is little friendship in the world, and least of all between equals.

BACON, Essays: Of Followers and Friends.

13 Fame is the scentless sunflower, with gaudy crown of gold;

But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold.

O. W. HOLMES, No Time Like the Old Time.

14 Friendship is only a reciprocal conciliation of interests, and an exchange of good offices; it is a species of commerce out of which self-love always expects to gain something.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 83.

15 That sacred and venerable name of friendship. (Illud amicitiae sanctum et venerabile nomen.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 15.

16 Friendship is a union of spirits, a marriage of hearts, and the bond thereof virtue.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude. Pt. i.

There can be no Friendship where there is no Freedom. Friendship loves a Free Air, and will not be fenced up in straight and narrow Enclosures.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude. Pt. i.

The vital air of friendship is composed of confidence. Friendship perishes in proportion as this air diminishes.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. ix, No. 3.

17 Nothing is meritorious but virtue and friendship, and, indeed, friendship is only a part of virtue.

ALEXANDER POPE, his last words. (JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope.)

18 Friendship is equality. (Φιλίαν ισότητα.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 10.)

19 To desire the same things and to reject the same things, constitutes true friendship. (Idem velle atque idem nolle, ea demum firma amicitia est.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Ch. 20, sec. 4.

1 Ceremony was but devised at first
To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown;
But where there is true friendship, there needs none.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 15.

Friendship should be surrounded with ceremonies and respects, and not crushed into corners. Friendship requires more time than poor, busy men can usually command.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.

Friendship cannot live with ceremony, nor without civility.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 243.

2 Friendship is the bond of reason.

R. B. SHEERDAN, The Duenna. Act i, sc. 2.

3 Friendship's the privilege
Of private men; for wretched greatness
knows

No blessing so substantial.

NAHUM TATE, The Loyal General.

4 Some friendships are made by nature, some by contract, some by interest, and some
by souls.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

Nature and religion are the bands of friendship, excellence and usefulness are its great endearments.

JEREMY TAYLOR, *A Discourse of the Nature,
Measures, and Offices of Friendship*.

5 Friendship is the marriage of the soul.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Friendship.

6 True friendship is of a royal lineage. It is of the same kith and breeding as loyalty and self-forgetting devotion and proceeds upon a higher principle even than they. For loyalty may be blind, and friendship must not be;
devotion may sacrifice principles of right choice which friendship must guard with an excellent and watchful care. . . . The object of love is to serve, not to win.

WOODROW WILSON, Baccalaureate Sermon,
Princeton, 9 May, 1907.

II—Friendship: Apothegms

7 Great souls by instinct to each other turn,
Demand alliance, and in friendship burn.

ADDISON, The Campaign, l. 101.

8 The bird a nest, the spider a web, man friendship.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

9 What a thing friendship is, world without end!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess.
Sec. 17.

10 Friendship is more than is catell.

CHAUCER, The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5540.

11 The firmest friendships have been formed in mutual adversity, as iron is most strongly united by the fiercest flame.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

True friendship is like sound health, the value of it is seldom known until it be lost.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

12 We were the twins of friendship.

JOHN FLETCHER, Wife for a Month. Act v, l.

13 A sudden thought strikes me,—let us swear an eternal friendship.

J. H. FRERE, The Rovers. Act i, sc. 1.

Madam, I have an inspiration! We will remain together!

GOETHE, Stella. Stella's paramour has shot himself in her presence and that of his wife, and makes the above remark to the latter.
It is this scene which Frere parodies in The Rovers.

Let us embrace and from this moment vow an eternal misery together.

THOMAS OTWAY, The Orphan. Act iv, sc. 2.

My fair one, let us swear an eternal friendship.
(Entre lui, vous et moi, jurons, jurons, ma belle, Une ardeur éternelle.)

MOLIÈRE, Bourgeois Gentilhomme. Act iv, sc. 1.

Madam, I have been looking for a person who disliked gravity all my life; let us swear eternal friendship.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, p.
257.)

14 Friendship is not to be bought at a fair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1619.

15 Friendship closes its eye, rather than see the moon eclipsed; while malice denies that it is ever at the full.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

16 Sweet is the scene where genial friendship plays

The pleasing game of interchanging praise.

O. W. HOLMES, An After-Dinner Poem.

17 If a man does not make new acquaintances, as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, Sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life. 1755)

Keep your friendships in repair.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

18 The endearing elegance of female friendship.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 46.

On firmer ties his joys depend
Who has a polished female friend!

CORNELIUS WEUR, The Female Friend.

<sup>1</sup> Friendships renewed demand more care than those which have never been broken. (Les amitiés renouées demandent plus de soins que celles qui n'ont jamais été rompues.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 560.

<sup>2</sup> The friendship between me and you I will not compare to a chain; for that the rains might rust, or the falling tree might break.

WILLIAM PENN, Treaty With the Indians. (BANCROFT, History of the United States.)

<sup>3</sup> When did friendship take
A breed for barren metal of his friend?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 134.

If I do vow a friendship, I'll perform it
To the last article.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 21.

<sup>4</sup> No friendship can survive the gift of gold.
The generous can indeed forget that they have given, but the grateful can never forget that they have received.

WILLIAM SMITH, Thorndale. Bk. ii, ch. 6.

<sup>5</sup> The virtue is no less to conserve friendship gotten, than the wisdom was great to get and win the same.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, ii, 177. (1567)

<sup>6</sup> Friendship is to be purchased only by friendship.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 52.

III—Friendship: Its Virtues

<sup>7</sup> The worst solitude is to have no true friendships.

<sup>8</sup> Friendship can smooth the front of rude despair.

RICHARD CAMBRIDGE, The Scribleraid. Bk i, l. 196.

<sup>9</sup> Friendship adds a brighter radiance to prosperity and lightens the burden of adversity by dividing and sharing it. (Nam et secundas res splendiores facit amicitia, et adversas, partiens communicansque leviores.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 6, sec. 22.

They seem to take the sun from the heavens who take friendship from life, for we receive from the immortal gods no better or more delightful boon. (Solem enim e mundo tollere videntur ei, qui amicitiam e vita tollunt, qua nihil a dis immortalibus melius habemus nihil jucundius.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 13, sec. 47.

<sup>10</sup> Complete unity of aim is the traditional condition of genuine and sincere friendship.

(Neque est ullum certius amicitiae vinculum quam consensus et societas consiliorum et voluntatum.)

CICERO, Pro Cnæo Plancio. Ch. ii, sec. 5.

<sup>11</sup> There is a magic in the memory of schoolboy friendships; it softens the heart, and even affects the nervous system of those who have no heart.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 52.

<sup>12</sup> To friendship every burden's light.

JOHN GAY, The Hare with Many Friends.

<sup>13</sup> A gen'rous friendship no cold medium knows, Burns with one love, with one resentment
glows;

One should our int'rests and our passions be:
My friend must hate the man that injures me.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 725. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>14</sup> Friendship, peculiar boon of Heav'n,
The noble mind's delight and pride,
To men and angels only giv'n,
To all the lower world denied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Friendship: An Ode.

<sup>15</sup> Pure friendship is something which men of an inferior intellect can never taste.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

<sup>16</sup> Life is to be fortified by many friendships.
To love, and to be loved, is the greatest happiness of existence.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir: Of Friendship. Vol. i, ch. 6, p. 122.)

IV—Friendship: Its Faults

<sup>17</sup> The friendships of the world are oft Confederacies in vice, or leagues of pleasure.
ADDISON, Cato. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>18</sup> The most fatal disease of friendship is gradual decay, or dislike hourly increased by causes too slender for complaint, and too numerous for removal.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 23.

The great effect of friendship is beneficence, yet by the first act of uncommon kindness it is endangered, like plants that bear their fruit and die.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 64.

<sup>19</sup> Safe and frequented is the path of deceit under the name of friendship. (Tuta frequensque via est per amici fallere nomen.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 585.

<sup>20</sup> Friendship is but a name. (Nomen amicitia est.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 740.

Friendship, like love, is but a name,
Unless to one you stint the flame.
The child, whom many fathers share,

Hath seldom known a father's care.
'Tis thus in friendships; who depend
On many, rarely find a friend.

JOHN GAY, The Hare with Many Friends.

And what is friendship but a name,
A charm that lulls to sleep;
A shade that follows wealth or fame,
But leaves the wretch to weep?
GOLDSMITH, A Ballad. (Vicar of Wakefield.
Ch. 8.)

Friendship's an empty name, made to deceive
Those whose good nature tempts them to believe:

There's no such thing on earth; the best that we
Can hope for here is faint neutrality.

SAMUEL TUKE, Adventures of Five Hours.
Act i. (An adaptation from Calderon.)

Friendship is but a word.

PHILIP MASSINGER, *A New Way to Pay Old
Debts*. Act ii, sc. 1.

1 The name of friend is common, but faith in friendship is rare. (Vulgare amici nomen, sed rara est fides.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 9, l. 1.

2 What ill-starr'd rage
Divides a friendship long confirm'd by age?
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 173.

3 Friendship's full of dregs.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2,
l. 240.

4 Trust not before you try,
For under cloak of great good-will
Doth feign'd friendship lie.
GEORGE TURBERVILLE, Of Light Belief, l. 1.

V—Friendship: Friendship and Love

5 One should master one's passions, (love, in chief)

And be loyal to one's friends.
ROBERT BROWNING, A Light Woman.

6 Yet I will but say what mere friends say,
Or only a thought stronger;
I will hold your hand just as long as all may,
Or so very little longer!
ROBERT BROWNING, The Lost Mistress.

No protesting, dearest!
Hardly kisses even!
Don't we both know how it ends?

How the greenest leaf turns serest,
Bluest outbreak—blankest heaven,
Lovers—friends?
ROBERT BROWNING, St. Martin's Summer.

7 Love is only chatter,
Friends are all that matter.
GELETT BURGESS, Willy and the Lady.

8 Friendship is Love without his wings.
BYRON, L'Amitié est l'Amour Sans Ailes. The line is a translation of the title, which is a familiar French proverb.

If Cupid has wings, is it not that he may flutter hither and thither? (Si l'amour porte des ailes N'est-ce pas pour voltiger?)

BEAUMARCHAIS, Mariage de Figaro.

9 Friendship's a noble name, 'tis love refined.
SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Stolen Heiress. Act
ii, sc. 2.

10 Friendship often ends in love; but love, in friendship—never.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

11 To be capable of steady friendship and lasting love, are the two greatest proofs, not only of goodness of heart, but of strength of mind.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 235.

12 But love is lost; the way of friendship's gone;

Though David had his Jonathan, Christ his John.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 46.

13 Love seeks a guerdon; friendship is as God,
Who gives and asks no payment.

RICHARD HOVEY, The Marriage of Guenevere.
Act i, sc. 1.

14 It is a rule in friendship, when Distrust enters in at the foregate, Love goes out at the postern.

JAMES HOWELL, *Familiar Letters: To Dr.
H. W.*

15 Friendship, like love, is destroyed by long absence, though it may be increased by short intermissions.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler, No. 23.

Time, which strengthens Friendship, weakens
Love.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 4.

16 The feeling of friendship is like that of being comfortably filled with roast beef; love, like being enlivened with champagne.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

17 Love and friendship exclude each other.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

In Friendship we only see those faults which may be prejudicial to our friends. In love we see no faults but those by which we suffer ourselves.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Ch. 5.

18 However rare true love may be, it is still less rare than true friendship. (Quelque rare que soit le véritable amour, il l'est encore moins que la véritable amitié.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 473.

19 A friendship that like love is warm;
A love like friendship, steady.

THOMAS MOORE, How Shall I Woo?

Oh call it by some better name,
For friendship sounds too cold.
THOMAS MOORE, Oh Call It by Some Better Name.

1 May the hinges of friendship never rust, or the wings of love lose a feather.

DEAN EDWARD BANNERMAN RAMSEY, Reminiscences of Scottish Life: A Toast.

2 Friendship is a prodigal, but love is a miser.
(L'amitié est prodigue, mais l'amour est avare.)

ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. vi, letter 14.

3 What is love? two souls and one flesh; friendship?
two bodies and one soul.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. ix, No. 31.

4 He who is a friend, loves; he who loves is not therefore always a friend. So friendship profits always, but love sometimes is hurtful.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxv.

5 Most friendship is feigning, most loving mere
folly.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 181.

6 Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the office and affairs of love.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 182.

7 But, if at first her virgin fear
Should start at love's suspected name,
With that of friendship soothe her ear—
True love and friendship are the same.

JAMES THOMSON, Song: Hard Is the Fate.

When Psyche's friend becomes her lover,
How sweetly these conditions blend!

But, oh, what anguish to discover
Her lover has become—her friend!

MARY AINGE DE VERE, Friend and Lover.

8 Friendship, take heed; if woman interfere,
Be sure the hour of thy destruction's near.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH. (FIELDING, Amelia.)

When love puts in, friendship is gone.

FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Lovers' Progress. Act i, sc. 1. Quoted as a proverb.

A friend married is a friend lost.

HENRIK IBSEN, Love's Comedy. Act ii. (Quoted as proverb.)

FROG

9 Though boys throw stones at frogs in sport,
the frogs do not die in sport, but in earnest.

BION. (PLUTARCH, Water and Land Animals. Sec. 7.)

Though this be play to you, 'Tis death to us.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, The Boys and the Frog.

10 Can these, indeed, be voices, that so greet

The twilight still? I seem to hear
Oboe and cymbal in a rhythmic beat
With bass-drum and bassoon; their drear
And droll crescendo louder growing,
Then falling back, like waters ebbing, flowing,—

Back to the silence sweet!

FLORENCE EARLE COATES, The Frogs.

11 Can I unmoved see thee dying
On a log, expiring frog?

DICKENS, The Pickwick Papers. Ch. xv.

12 There are not frogs wherever there is water;
but wherever there are frogs, water will be found.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

13 The frog's own croak betrays him.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

14 I don't see no p'int about that frog that's any better'n any other frog.

MARK TWAIN, The Celebrated Jumping Frog.

FROST

15 These Winter nights against my window-pane
Nature with busy pencil draws designs
Of ferns and blossoms and fine spray of pines,
Oak-leaf and acorn and fantastic vines.

T. B. ALDRICH, Frost-Work.

He went to the windows of those who slept,
And over each pane, like a fairy, crept;
Wherever he breathed, wherever he stepped,
By the light of the morn, were seen
Most beautiful things; there were flowers and trees;

There were bevvies of birds, and swarms of bees;
There were cities, with temples and towers; and these

All pictured in silver sheen!

HANNAH FLAGG GOULD, The Frost.

16 Frost and fraud have always foul ends.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 322. (1605)

Frost and fraud have dirty ends.

WILLIAM GURNALL, Christian in Complete Armour. Pt. ii, ch. 17. (1657)

17 The frost performs its secret ministry,
Unhelped by any wind.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Frost at Midnight, l. 1.

18 The frost which kills the harvest of a year, saves the harvests of a century, by destroying the weevil or the locust.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

19 On a lone winter evening, when the frost
Has wrought a silence.

KEATS, On the Grasshopper and Cricket.

20 An envious sneaping frost,

That bites the first-born infants of the spring.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc.
1, l. 100.

Hoary-headed frosts
Fall in the fresh lap of the crimson rose.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 107.

The earth, When it is baked with frost.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 256.

Fine as ice-ferns on January panes
Made by a breath.
TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 222.

What miracle of weird transforming
Is this wild work of frost and light,
This glimpse of glory infinite?
WHITTIER, The Pageant. St. 8.

FRUIT

Fruit is gold in the morning, silver in the afternoon and lead at night.

BISHOP SHUTE BARRINGTON, Rules of Health.
(See Notes and Queries. Ser. x, i, 251.) See also under APPLE.

The kindly fruits of the earth.
Book of Common Prayer: Prayer for All Conditions of Men.

We cannot eat the fruit while the tree is in blossom.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Alroy. Ch. 4.

Fruit out of season, sorrow out of reason.
HENRY FRIEND, Flowers and Fruit Lore, 207.

He that would have the fruit must climb the tree.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2366.

Who will the fruit that harvest yields, must take the pain.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis. Sig. M1.
(1577)

There is greater relish for the earliest fruit of the season.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, epig. 29, l. 4.

What beautiful fruit! I love fruit, when it is expensive.

PINERO, The Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act i.

You should go to a pear-tree for pears, not to an elm.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 674.

He who hopes this, would hope
To gather apples from the tamarisk,
And search for honey in the flowing stream.
OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 747.

You may as well expect pears from an elm.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 40.

Much bruit, little fruit. (Beaucoup de bruit, peu de fruit.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Fruit unripe, sticks on the tree;
But fall, unshaken, when they mellow be.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 200.

The weakest kind of fruit
Drops earliest to the ground.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 115.

Fruits that blossom first will first be ripe.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 383.

The ripest fruit first falls.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 153.

Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,
With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touched.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act i, sc. 1, l. 27.

Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 63.

When swelling buds their od'rous foliage shed,
And gently harden into fruit, the wise
Spare not the little offsprings, if they grow Redundant.

JOHN PHILIPS, Cider. Bk. i.

Fair fruit in an unwholesome dish
Are like to rot untasted.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc.
3, l. 129.

A little fruit a little while is ours,
And the worm finds it soon.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

FUNERAL

The care of funeral, the manner of burial, the pomp of obsequies, are rather a consolation to the living than of any service to the dead.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Civitas Dei. Bk. i, sec. 12.

Funeral pomp is more for the vanity of the living than for the honor of the dead. (La pompe des enterrements regarde plus la vanité des vivants que l'honneur des morts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No.
612.

Why is the hearse with scutcheons blazon'd round,
And with the nodding plume of ostrich crown'd?
No; the dead know it not, nor profit gain;
It only serves to prove the living vain.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 231.

Ye undertakers! tell us,
'Midst all the gorgeous figures you exhibit,
Why is the principal conceal'd, for which
You make this mighty stir?

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 171.

Of all The fools who flocked to swell or see the show,

Who cared about the corpse? The funeral
Made the attraction, and the black the woe.
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 10.

1 As grand
And griefless as a rich man's funeral.
SIDNEY DOBELL, A Musing on a Victory.

2 I've a great fancy to see my own funeral afore I die.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent: Continuation of Memoirs.

3 Worldly faces never look so worldly as at a funeral.

GEORGE ELIOT, Janet's Repentance.

If a man will observe as he walks the streets, I believe he will find the merriest countenances in mourning-coaches.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Works. Vol. iii, p. 400.

For sometimes they contain a deal of fun,
Like mourning coaches when the funeral's done.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 20. Referring to gondolas.

4 When this solemn mockery is o'er.

W. H. IRELAND, Vortigern. Act iii.

What tho' no friends in sable weeds appear,
Grieve for an hour, perhaps, then mourn a year,
And bear about the mockery of woe
To midnight dances, and the public show?

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 55.

5 What men prize most is a privilege, even if it be that of chief mourner at a funeral.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy.

6 There's a grim one-horse hearse in a jolly round trot;

To the churchyard a pauper is going I wot;
The road it is rough, and the hearse has no springs,

And hark to the dirge that the sad driver sings—

Rattle his bones over the stones,
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns.

THOMAS NOEL, The Pauper's Drive.

7 Run, someone, and fetch the undertaker.
(Ecquis currit pollictorem accersere.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 910. (Act v, sc. 2.)

Let me be his undertaker.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 223.

Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, 350.

8 After a funeral, a feast.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

After a funeral, one drinks. (Après tout deuil, boit on.)

UNKNOWN. A French proverb.

The funeral baked meats

Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 180.

9

His obscure funeral,

No trophy, sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones,

No noble rite, nor formal ostentation.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 213.

10

All things that we ordained festival,
Turn from their office to black funeral;
Our instruments to melancholy bells,

Our wedding cheer to a sad burial feast.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iv, sc. 5,
l. 84.

Hung be the heavens with black, yield day to night!

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

11

But safer triumph is this funeral pomp,
That hath aspired to Solon's happiness

And triumphs over chance in honour's bed.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 176.

12

We should have shone at a wake, but not at anything more festive.

MARK TWAIN, The Innocents Abroad. Ch. 2.

13

Fair youth, do you know what I'd do with you if you was my sun?—No, sez he.—Wall, sez I, I'd appoint your funeral to-morrow afternoon & the korps should be ready!

ARTEMUS WARD, *Artemus Ward, His Book:
Edwin Forrest as Othello*.

14

When we attend a funeral, we are apt to comfort ourselves with the happy difference that is betwixt us and our dead friend.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. No. 34.

15

There was a young fellow of Clyde
Who went to a funeral and cried;

When they asked who was dead,

He stammered and said,

"I don't know—I just came for the ride."

Still we persist; plough the light sand, and sow

Seed after seed, where none can ever grow.
(Nos tamen hoc agimus tenuique in pulvere Ducimus et litus sterili versamus arato.)
sulcos

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 48. (Gifford, tr.)

You may boldly say, you did not plough,
Or trust the barren and ungrateful sands
With the fruitful grain of your religious counsels.

MASSINGER, The Renegado. Act iv, sc. 3.

Plough the sands. (Arenas arantes.)

You are wounding a Hydra. ("Ἰδραν τέμνεις.)

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 426. The Hydra produced two heads for every one cut off.

'Tis a hydra's head contention; the more they strive the more they may: and as Praxiteles did by his glass, when he saw a scurvy face in it, brake it in pieces; but for that one he saw many more as bad in a moment.

ii, sec. iii, mem. 7.

6
That's a perilous shot out of an elder-gun.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 211.

7
He has spent all his life in letting down buckets into empty wells; and he is frittering away his age in trying to draw them up again.

SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Vol.
i, p. 259.)

Defend me, therefore, common sense, say I,
From reveries so airy, from the toil
Of dropping buckets into empty wells,
And growing old in drawing nothing up!

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 187.

To climb life's worn, heavy wheel
Which draws up nothing new.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 331.

11

I never think of the future. It comes soon enough.

ALBERT EINSTEIN, Interview, on Belgenland,
Dec., 1930.

12

When I am dead, let the earth be dissolved in fire. (Ἐμοῦ θανόντος γαῖα μευχθήτω πυρί.)

EURIPIDES, Bellerophon. Frag. 27. Put by Dio
(58, 23) into the mouth of Tiberius. Quoted by Suetonius (Twelve Cæsars: Nero, 38, 1), who says that Nero rejoined, "Nay, rather while I live" (Ἐμοῦ ζώντος.)

After us the deluge. (Après nous le déluge.)

MADAME DE POMPADOUR, after the battle of Rossbach. (LAROUSSE, Fleurs Historiques.
MADAME DE HAUSSET, Mémoires, p. 19.) This saying, an old French proverb, has also been attributed to Louis XV.

13

Remember this also, and be well persuaded of its truth: the future is not in the hands of Fate, but in ours.

JULES JUSSERAND, Farewell Radio Talk to America, 10 April, 1932.

14

We fight and die, but our hopes beat high,

In spite of the toil and tears,

For we catch the gleam of our vanished dream

Down the path of the untrod years.

WILMA KATE MCFARLAND, The Untrod Years.

15

The future is a world limited by ourselves;
in it we discover only what concerns us and,
sometimes, by chance, what interests those whom we love the most.

He is only anxious about the future to whom the present is unprofitable. (Ille enim ex futuro suspenditur, cui inritum est præsens.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 9.

3

How many ages hence

Shall this our lofty scene be acted over
In states unborn and accents yet unknown!

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 111.

4

Leave hereafter to the spirit and the wisdom of hereafter.

SYDNEY SMITH, Peter Plymley Letters. No. 2.

I dipt into the future far as human eye could see,
Saw the vision of the world and all the wonder that would be.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 15.

6

We see by the glad light

And breathe the sweet air of futurity,
And so we live, or else we have no life.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. ix, l. 24.

To whom in vision clear

The aspiring heads of future things appear,
Like mountain-tops whose mists have rolled away.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. No. 43.

II—Future: Knowledge of the Future

7

For my part, I think that a knowledge of the future would be a disadvantage. (Atque ego ne utilem quidem arbitror esse nobis futuram rerum scientiam.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 22.

Undoubtedly ignorance of future ills is more useful than knowledge of them. (Certe ignoratio futurorum malorum utilior est quam scientia.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 9, sec. 23.

Seek not to know what must not be reveal'd;
Joys only flow where Fate is most conceal'd.
Too-busy man would find his sorrows more
If future fortunes he should know before;
For by that knowledge of his Destiny
He would not live at all, but always die.

DRYDEN, The Indian Queen. Act iii, sc. 2.

8

No means of predicting the future really exists, and if it did, we must regard what happens according to it as nothing to us.

EPICURUS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 135.)

No man can tell what the future may bring forth.

DEMOSTHENES, Ad Leptinem. Sec. 162.

What the evening may bring forth is uncertain. (Quid vesper ferat incertum est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xlv, sec. 8.

The wise god covers with the darkness of night the issues of the future. (Prudens futuri temporis exitum, Caliginosa nocte premit Deus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 29, l. 30.

9

The mind of man is ignorant of fate, or of coming doom.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 501.

10

Cease to inquire what the future has in store, and take as a gift whatever the day brings forth. (Quid sit futurum cras, fuge quærere: et Quem Fors dierum cumque dabit, lucro Appone.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 13.

11

Oh, bless the law that veils the Future's face;
For who could smile into a baby's eyes,
Or bear the beauty of the evening skies,
If he could see what cometh on apace?

EUGENE LEE-HAMILTON, Mimma Bella.

12

Let the mind of man be blind as to future destiny. (Sit cæca futuri Mens hominum fati.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 14.

13

Heav'n from all creatures hides the Book of Fate,

All but the page prescribed, their present state:

From brutes what men, from men what spirits know;

Or who could suffer being here below?

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 77.

O blindness to the future! kindly giv'n,
That each may fill the circle mark'd by Heav'n;
Who sees with equal eye, as God of all,
A hero perish or a sparrow fall,
Atoms or systems into ruin hurl'd,

And now a bubble burst, and now a world.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 85.

Not present good or ill the joy or curse,
But future views of better or of worse.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 71.

14

Out of our reach the gods have laid

Of time to come th' event,

And laugh to see the fools afraid

Of what the knaves invent.

9 Why they call a feller that keeps losin' all the time a good sport gits me.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 28.

10 We cannot expect to have an honest horse race until we have an honest human race.

Attributed to CHARLES EVANS HUGHES, but denied by him in a letter to the compiler.

11 He began to think . . . that he had betted too deep . . . and that it was time to hedge.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. iv, ch. 17.

12 Lest he should lose, the gambler ceases not to lose. (Sic, ne perdiderit, non cessat perdere lusor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 451.

13 The better the gambler the worse the man. (Aleator quanto in arte est potior, tanto est nequior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 33.

A gamester, the greater master he is in his art, the worse man is he.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms.

14 Gie o'er when the play is gude.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish.

15 The most patient man in loss, the most coldest that ever turned up ace.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 2.

16 Were it good

To set the exact wealth of all our states

All at one cast? to set so rich a main

On the nice hazard of one doubtful hour?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 46.

I have set my life upon a cast,

And I will stand the hazard of the die!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 9.

By the hazard of the spotted die,

Let die the spotted.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 4, l. 34.

I'll lay my head to any good man's hat.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act i, sc. 1, l. 310.

17 In my school-days, when I had lost one shaft,

I shot his fellow of the self-same flight
The self-same way with more advised watch,
To find the other forth, and by adventuring both

I oft found both.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 139.

If Hercules and Lichas play at dice,
Which is the better man? the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 1, l. 32.

A wise player ought to accept his throws and score them, not bewail his luck.

SOPHOCLES, Phædra: Fragment. No. 862.

If there were two birds sitting on a fence,
he would bet you which one would fly first.

MARK TWAIN, The Jumping Frog.

There are two times in a man's life when he should not speculate: when he can't afford it, and when he can.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

II—Gambling a Vice

The devil invented dicing. (Aleam invenit Dæmon.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civitate Dei. Bk. iv.

The devil goes share in gaming.

H. G. BOHN, Hand-Book of Proverbs.

The devil is in the dice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 70. (1678)

The very dice obey him.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 33.

However for real harmony, the sort that is divine,
I'll take the animated dominoes. [Dice.]

STUART M. EMERY, I'll Say It's Music.

Cards and dice . . . the devil's books and the devil's bones.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin Almanack. (1676)

The winner's shout, the loser's curse
Shall dance before dead England's hearse.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

A man may play with decency; but if he games, he is disgraced.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

Gambling is the child of avarice, but the parent of prodigality.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

It is the child of avarice, the brother of iniquity,
and the father of mischief.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Bushrod Washington. 15 Jan., 1783. Referring to gaming.

The gamester, if he die a martyr to his profession, is doubly ruined. He adds his soul to every other loss, and by the act of suicide, renounces earth to forfeit Heaven.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

Who games, is felon of his wealth,
His time, his liberty, his health.

NATHANIEL COTTON, Pleasure.

By gaming, we lose both our time and treasure,— two things most precious to the life of man.

OWEN FELLTHAM, Resolves.

One begins by being a dupe and ends by being a rascal. (On commence par être dupe, On finit par être fripon.)

DESCAMPS, Réflexion sur le Jeu. Also attributed to Madame Deshoulières.

Death and the dice level all distinctions.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Minor. Act i, sc. 1.

Do not trust nor contend,
Nor lay wagers, nor lend,

And you'll have peace to your life's end.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6351.

Shake off the shackles of this tyrant vice;
Hear other calls than those of cards and dice;
Be learn'd in nobler arts than arts of play;
And other debts than those of honour pay.

DAVID GARRICK, The Gamester: Prologue.

Our Quixote bard sets out at monster-taming,
Arm'd at all points to fight that hydra, gaming.

DAVID GARRICK, The Gamester: Prologue.

Look round, the wrecks of play behold;
Estates dismember'd, mortgag'd, sold!
Their owners now to jails confin'd,
Show equal poverty of mind.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. ii, fab. 12.

Gaming, women, and wine, while they laugh
they make men pine.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Play, women, and wine undo men laughing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

Play, women, and wine, are enough to make a prince a pauper.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 11.

See also WINE AND WOMEN.

Gaming is the mother of lies and perjuries.
(Mendaciorum et perjuriarum mater est alea.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Bishop of Chartres, Polycraticus. Bk. i. (1175)

Hazard is very mother of lyings

And of deceit, and cursed forswearings.

CHAUCER, The Pardoner's Tale, l. 263.

Oh, this pernicious vice of gaming!

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act i, sc. 1.

I'll tell thee what it says: it calls me villain, a treacherous husband, a cruel father, a false brother; one lost to nature and her charities; or to say all in one short word, it calls me—gamester.

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act ii, sc. 1.

Ay, rail at gaming—'tis a rich topic, and affords noble declamation. Go, preach against it in the city—you'll find a congregation in every tavern.

EDWARD MOORE, The Gamester. Act iv, sc. 1.

1 How, sir! not damn the sharper, but the dice?

POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. ii, l. 13.

2 Sir, for a quart d'écu he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it; and cut the entail from all remainders.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 311.

3 And once or twice to throw the dice
Is a gentlemanly game,

But he does not win who plays with Sin
In the secret House of Shame.

OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol. Pt. iii, st. 23.

GAME

4 And who, 'mid e'en the Fools, but feels that half the joy is in the race.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 18.

5 Life's too short for chess.

H. J. BYRON, Our Boys. Act i.

He hates chess. He says it is a foolish expedient for making idle people believe they are doing something very clever, when they are only wasting their time.

BERNARD SHAW, The Irrational Knot. Ch. 14.

6 He's up to these grand games, but one of these days I'll loore him on to skittles, and astonish him.

H. J. BYRON, Our Boys. Act ii.

7 Without danger the game grows cold.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Quoting a Latin proverb.

No game was ever yet worth a rap

For a rational man to play,

Into which no accident, no mishap,

Could possibly find its way.

A. L. GORDON, Ye Weary Wayfarer. Fytte iv.

8 It is a silly game where nobody wins.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologiu.

9 The twelve good rules, the royal game of goose.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 232. The twelve good rules were ascribed to King Charles I: 1. Urge no healths. 2. Profane no divine ordinances. 3. Touch no state matters. 4. Reveal no secrets. 5. Pick no quarrels. 6. Make no comparisons. 7. Maintain no ill opinions. 8. Keep no bad company. 9. Encourage no vice. 10. Make no long meals. 11. Repeat no grievances. 12. Lay no wagers.

10

At the game's end we shall see who gains.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

11

Sport begets tumultuous strife and wrath, and wrath begets fierce quarrels and war to the death. (Ludus enim genuit trepidum certamen et iram, Ira truces inimicitias et funebre bellum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 48.

12

The only athletic sport I ever mastered was backgammon.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Douglas Jerrold's Wit.

Then ye contented your souls
With the flannelled fools at the wicket or the muddled oafs at the goals.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Islanders, l. 31.

Those athletic brutes whom undeservedly we call heroes.

DRYDEN, Fables: Preface.

You base foot-ball player.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 94.

14

In all time of our distress,

And in our triumph too,

The game is more than the player of the
game,

And the ship is more than the crew!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Song in Storm.

To love the game beyond the prize.

HENRY NEWBOLT, Clifton Chapel.

See also under REWARD.

15

The game is not worth the candle. (Le jeu ne vaut pas la chandelle.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 27.

It is a poor sport that is not worth the candle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. An adaptation of the French proverb.

Yet when the light of life is so near going out, and ought to be so precious, Le jeu ne vaut pas la Chandelle. The play is not worth the expense of the candle.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Essays. No. 10.

16

This they all with a joyful mind

Bear through life like a torch in flame,

And falling, fling to the host behind—

"Play up! Play up! and play the game!"

HENRY NEWBOLT, Vitai Lampada.

For when the One Great Scorer comes to write against your name,

He marks—not that you won or lost—but how you played the game.

GRANTLAND RICE, Alumnus Football.

17

The little pleasure of the game

Is from afar to view the flight.

MATTHEW PRIOR, To the Hon. Charles Montague.

<sup>1</sup> He'll play a small game rather than stand out.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>2</sup> If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and, of that natural luck,
He beats thee 'gainst the odds.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 24.

<sup>3</sup> Let's to billiards.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act ii,
sc. 5, l. 3.

To play billiards well is a sign of a misspent
youth.
HERBERT SPENCER, perhaps quoting from Noctes Ambrosianæ, March, 1827. (DUN-CAN, Life of Spencer.)

A man who wants to play billiards must have no other ambition. Billiards is all.
E. V. LUCAS, Character and Comedy.

<sup>4</sup> What work's, my countrymen, in hand?
where go you
With bats and clubs?
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act i, sc. 1, l. 56.

The faith they have in tennis, and tall stockings.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 3, l. 30.

<sup>5</sup> There's no game
So desperate, that the wisest of the wise
Will not take freely up for love of power,
Or love of fame, or merely love of play.
SIR HENRY TAYLOR, Philip von Artevelde. Pt. i,
act i, sc. 3.

<sup>6</sup> The game's up. (Illicit.)
TERENCE, Phormio, l. 208.

The game is up.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 107.

<sup>7</sup> There was ease in Casey's manner as he stepped into his place,
There was pride in Casey's bearing and a smile on Casey's face,
And when responding to the cheers he lightly
doft his hat,
No stranger in the crowd could doubt, 't was Casey at the bat.

ERNEST LAWRENCE THAYER, Casey at the Bat.
And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go,
And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow.

ERNEST LAWRENCE THAYER, Casey at the Bat.
Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright;
The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere
hearts are light,
And somewhere men are laughing, and little children shout;
But there is no joy in Mudville—mighty Casey has struck out.

ERNEST LAWRENCE THAYER, Casey at the Bat.

Erroneously ascribed to Joseph Quinlan Murphy and William Valentine; claimed, without foundation by George Whitefield D'Vys. (See STEVENSON, Famous Single Poems.)

These are the saddest of possible words:
"Tinker to Evers to Chance."

Trio of bear cubs, and fleetier than birds,
Tinker and Evers and Chance.

Ruthlessly pricking our gonfalon bubble,
Making a Giant hit into a double—

Words that are heavy with nothing but trouble:
"Tinker to Evers to Chance."

FRANKLIN P. ADAMS, Baseball's Sad Lexicon.

<sup>8</sup> Which would you rather be,—a conqueror in the Olympic games, or the crier who proclaims the conquerors?

THEMISTOCLES, when asked whether he would rather be Achilles or Homer. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles.)

<sup>9</sup> This is a sport which makes the body's very liver curl with enjoyment.

MARK TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi. Referring to piloting.

GARDEN

<sup>10</sup> God Almighty first planted a garden. And, indeed, it is the purest of human pleasures.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Gardens.

God the first garden made, and the first city Cain.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden. Essay v.

<sup>11</sup> Men but make monuments of sin
Who walk the earth's ambitious round;
Thou hast the richer realm within
This garden ground.

ALICE BROWN, A Benedictine Garden.

<sup>12</sup> A garden is a lovesome thing, God wot!
Rose plot, Fringed pool, Ferned grot—
The veriest school

Of peace; and yet the fool

Contentds that God is not.

Not God! in gardens! when the eve is cool?

Nay, but I have a sign:

'Tis very sure God walks in mine.

THOMAS EDWARD BROWN, My Garden.

<sup>13</sup> My tent stands in a garden
Of aster and golden-rod,
Tilled by the rain and the sunshine,
And sown by the hand of God.

BLISS CARMAN, An Autumn Garden.

<sup>14</sup> Which May had painted with his softe
showers

This garden full of leaves and of flowers.

CHAUCER, The Frankeleyns Tale, l. 179.

<sup>15</sup> Who loves a garden loves a greenhouse too.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 566.

<sup>16</sup> Speak not—whisper not;

Here bloweth thyme and bergamot; . . .
Dark-spiked rosemary and myrrh,
Lean-stalked, purple lavender. . . .

WALTER DE LA MARE, The Sunken Garden.

Here, in this sequestered close,
Bloom the hyacinth and rose;
Here beside the modest stock
Flaunts the flaring hollyhock;
Here, without a pang, one sees
Ranks, conditions, and degrees.

AUSTIN DOBSON, A Garden Song.

2
A garden is like those pernicious machineries which catch a man's coat-skirt or his hand, and draw in his arm, his leg, and his whole body to irresistible destruction.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth.

3
My garden is a forest ledge
Which older forests bound;
The banks slope down to the blue lake-edge,
Then plunge to depths profound.
EMERSON, My Garden. St. 3.

4
In green old gardens, hidden away
From sight of revel and sound of strife, . . .
Here may I live what life I please,
Married and buried out of sight.

VIOLET FANE, In Green Old Gardens.

5
What makes a garden
And why do gardens grow?
Love lives in gardens—
God and lovers know!

CAROLYN GILTINAN, The Garden.

6
As is the gardener, so is the garden.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 701.

7
The kiss of the sun for pardon,
The song of the birds for mirth;
One is nearer God's Heart in a garden
Than anywhere else on earth.
DOROTHY FRANCES GURNEY, God's Garden.

8
The market is the best garden.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. A London variant is, "Cheapside is the best garden."

9
Yes, in the poor man's garden grow
Far more than herbs and flowers—
Kind thoughts, contentment, peace of mind,
And joy for weary hours.

MARY HOWITT, The Poor Man's Garden.

10
I would be back in my own garden,
Watching my windy daffodils.
ALINE KILMER, A Guest Speaks.

11
I walk down the garden paths,
And all the daffodils
Are blowing, and the bright blue squills.

I walk down the patterned garden-paths
In my stiff, brocaded gown.
With my powdered hair, and jewelled fan,
I too am a rare
Pattern. As I wander down
The garden paths.

AMY LOWELL, Patterns.

12
Fair Quiet, have I found thee here,
And Innocence, thy sister dear?

ANDREW MARVELL, The Garden.

13
Jesus is in a garden, not of delight as the first Adam, where he lost himself and the whole human race, but in one of agony, where he saved himself and the whole human race.
PASCAL, Pensées. No. 553. Sometimes condensed to: "Man was lost and saved in a garden."

14
Grove nods at grove, each alley has a brother,
And half the platform just reflects the other.
The suff'ring eye inverted nature sees,
Trees cut to statues, statues thick as trees;
With here a fountain never to be play'd,
And there a summer-house that knows no
shade.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 117.

15
This rule in gardening ne'er forget,
To sow dry and set wet.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

16
There is no ancient gentlemen but gardeners.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 33. See also under ADAM.

17
The best place to seek God is in a garden.
You can dig for Him there.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God.

Oh, Adam was a gardener, and God who made him sees

That half a proper gardener's work is done upon his knees.

So when your work is finished, you can wash
your hands and pray

For the Glory of the Garden that it may not pass away!

And the glory of the Garden it shall never pass
away!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Glory of the Garden.

18
A little garden square and wall'd.

TENNYSON, Enoch Arden, l. 730.

19
Come into the garden, Maud,
For the black bat, night, has flown.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 1.

The splash and stir
Of fountains spouted up and showering down
In meshes of the jasmine and the rose:
And all about us peal'd the nightingale,
Rapt in her song, and careless of the snare.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 214.

20
That is well said, replied Candide, but we must cultivate our garden. (Cela est bien dit, répondit Candide, mais il faut cultiver notre jardin.)

VOLTAIRE, Candide. Ch. 30.

One should cultivate letters or his garden. (Il faut cultiver les lettres ou son jardin.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter to D'Alembert, July, 1773.

<sup>1</sup> A little garden Little Jowett made,
And fenced it with a little palisade;
If you would know the mind of little Jowett,
This little garden don't a little show it.

FRANCIS WRANGHAM, Jowett's Little Garden.
Referring to Dr. Joseph Jowett.

<sup>2</sup> I used to love my garden,
But now my love is dead,
For I found a bachelor's button
In black-eyed Susan's bed.

UNKNOWN. (Printed by Christopher Morley in his column in N. Y. Evening Post, c.
1922.)

GARRICK, DAVID

<sup>3</sup> If manly sense, if Nature link'd with art;
If thorough knowledge of the human heart;
If powers of acting vast and unconfined;
If fewest faults with greatest beauties
join'd, . . .

Deserve the preference;—Garrick! take the chair,

Nor quit it—till thou place an equal there.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad. Conclusion.

<sup>4</sup> Our Garrick's a salad; for in him we see
Oil, vinegar, sugar, and saltiness agree.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 11.

Here lies David Garrick: describe me, who can,
An abridgment of all that was pleasant in man;
As an actor, confess'd without rival to shine;
As a wit, if not first, in the very first line;
Yet, with talents like these, and an excellent heart,
The man had his failings—a dupe to his art.
Like an ill-judging beauty, his colours he spread,
And beplaster'd with rouge his own natural red.
On the stage he was natural, simple, affecting:
'Twas only that when he was off, he was acting.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 93.

He cast off his friends as a huntsman his pack,
For he knew, when he pleas'd, he could whistle them back.

Of praise a mere glutton, he swallow'd what
came,

And the puff of a dunce he mistook it for fame.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 107.

<sup>5</sup> But what are the hopes of man? I am disappointed by that stroke of death, which has eclipsed the gaiety of nations, and improv-erished the public stock of harmless pleasure.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, *Lives of the Poets: Edward
Smith*. Alluding to Garrick's death.

<sup>6</sup> Here lie together, waiting the Messiah

The little David and the great Goliath.

UNKNOWN, Note in Thespian Dictionary, appended to the life of Garrick. Garrick and Johnson are buried close together in Westminster Abbey.

GENIUS

I—Genius: Definitions

<sup>7</sup> Genius is mainly an affair of energy.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Literary Influence of Academies.

Genius . . . that energy which collects, combines, amplifies, and animates.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope.

<sup>8</sup> Genius, that power which dazzles mortal
eyes,

Is oft but perseverance in disguise.

HENRY AUSTIN, Perseverance Conquers All.

<sup>9</sup> What is genius? It is the power to be a boy again at will.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel, p. 249.

Genius has somewhat of the infantine:

But of the childish, not a touch nor taint.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwan-gau.

<sup>10</sup> As diamond cuts diamond, and one hone smooths a second, all the parts of intellect are whetstones to each other; and genius, which is but the result of their mutual sharpening, is character too.

C. A. BARTOL, Radical Problems: Individualism.

<sup>11</sup> Genius is patience. (Le Génie, c'est la patience.)

BUFFON. (STEVENS, Study of the Life and Times of Madame de Staël. Ch. iii, p. 61.)

The sentence is not in Buffon's works, but Herauld de Séchelles (Voyage à Montbar, p.
15) also ascribes the statement to Buffon in a slightly different form: "Le génie n'est qu'un plus grande aptitude à la patience," Genius is nothing but the greatest aptitude for patience.

Patience is a necessary ingredient of genius.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Pt. iv,
ch. 5.

<sup>12</sup> Every man who observes vigilantly and resolves steadfastly, grows unconsciously into genius.

BULWER-LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay 21.

<sup>13</sup> Genius, in one respect, is like gold,—numbers of persons are constantly writing about both,
who have neither.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

1 Genius is fostered by industry. (Ingenium industria alitur.)

CICERO, Pro Calio. Ch. xix, sec. 45.

No man's genius, however shining, can raise him from obscurity, unless he has industry, opportunity, and also a patron to recommend him. (Neque enim cuiquam tam clarum statim ingenium, ut possit emergere, nisi illi materia, occasio, fautor etiam commendatorque contingat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epis. 23.

Genius is the father of a heavenly line; but the mortal mother, that is industry.

THEODORE PARKER, Ten Sermons on Religion: Of the Culture of the Religious Powers.

If you have genius, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply its place.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Saying. As quoted by John Graham to Edinburgh Art Students.

Genius can never despise labour.

MADAME DE STAËL. (STEVENS, Life. Ch. 38.)

Genius is nothing but labour and diligence.

WILLIAM HOCARTH.

2 To think, and to feel, constitute the two grand divisions of men of genius—the men of reasoning and the men of imagination.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 2.

3 Time, place, and action may with pains be wrought,
But genius must be born, and never can be taught.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Congreve, l. 59.

4 Genius is one per cent inspiration and ninety-nine per cent perspiration.

THOMAS A. EDISON, Newspaper Interview. (Quoted in Golden Book, April, 1931.)

5 Genius is religious. It is a larger imbibing of the common heart.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: The Over-Soul.

To believe your own thought, to believe that what is true for you in your private heart is true for all men—that is genius.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

In every work of genius we recognize our own rejected thoughts: they come back to us with a certain alienated majesty.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

The miracles of genius always rest on profound convictions which refuse to be analyzed.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

6 Great geniuses have the shortest biographies. Their cousins can tell you nothing about them. They lived in their writings, and so their house and street life was trivial and commonplace.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Plato.

That necessity of isolation which genius feels.

Each must stand on his glass tripod if he would keep his electricity.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude.

Genius is lonely without the surrounding presence of people to inspire it.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Atlantic Essays: A Plea for Culture.

7 Genius even, as it is the greatest good, is the greatest harm.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Farming.

He is a blockhead; he is nothing but a genius
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk
Quoted as a French proverb.

8 Genius is the talent of a man who is dead.

EDMOND AND JULES DE GONCOURT, Journal

9 Rules and models destroy genius and art.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches and Essays: On Taste.

Genius is always impatient of its harness; its wild blood makes it hard to train.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 10.

Genius can only breathe freely in an atmosphere of freedom.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3.

A genius in a reverend gown
Must ever keep its owner down;
'Tis an unnatural conjunction,
And spoils the credit of the function.

SWIFT, To Dr. Delany.

10 Perhaps, moreover, he whose genius appears deepest and truest excels his fellows in nothing save the knack of expression; he throws out occasionally a lucky hint at truths of which every human soul is profoundly though unutterably conscious.

HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Procession of Life.

11 Man's genius is a deity.

HERACLITUS. (PLUTARCH, Platonic Questions. Sec. 1.)

12 Gift, like genius, I often think only means an infinite capacity for taking pains.

JANE ELLICE HOPKINS, Work Amongst Working Men. (1870) (A correspondent in Notes and Queries for 13 Sept., 1879, p. 213, states that Miss Hopkins was the first to use the exact phrase, "Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains." She was a social reformer, and her article referred to her work among the navvies at Cambridge.)

Charles Dickens in an after-dinner speech stated that genius was an infinite capacity for taking pains.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Cakes and Ale, p. 4.

Genius is an infinite love of taking pains.

J. M. BARRIE, Chancellor's Address, University of Edinburgh.

Genius . . . means the transcendent capacity of taking trouble.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

Genius has been defined as a supreme capacity for taking trouble. . . . It might be more fitly described as a supreme capacity for getting its possessors into trouble of all kinds.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 174.

Genius is the capacity of evading hard work.
ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xi, p. 114.

Genius, cried the commuter,
As he ran for the 8:13,
Consists of an infinite capacity
For catching trains.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, An Ejaculation.

2
Genius is the ability to act rightly without precedent—the power to do the right thing the first time.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 39.

3
The true Genius is a mind of large general powers, accidentally determined to some particular direction.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Cowley.

4
Many a genius has been slow of growth. Oaks that flourish for a thousand years do not spring up into beauty like a reed.

G. H. LEWES, Spanish Drama: Life of Lope De Vega. Ch. 2.

5
All the means of action—
The shapeless masses, the materials—
Lie everywhere about us. What we need
Is the celestial fire to change the flint
Into transparent crystal, bright and clear.
That fire is genius!

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 5.

6
I think it may as well be admitted that the disease of the endocrine glands called genius simply does not appear among women as frequently as it does among men. If one can find consolation in the thought, neither does idiocy.

ELSIE MCCORMICK, in New York World.

7
A good memory is an essential element of genius.

J. F. NISBET, The Insanity of Genius, p. 255.

8
Originality and genius must be largely fed and raised on the shoulders of some old tradition.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, The Life of Reason. Vol. ii, p. 101.

9
Genius consists in this, that the knowing faculty has received a considerably greater development than the service of the will demands. . . . The fundamental condition of genius is an abnormal predominance of sensibility over irritability and reproductive power.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, The World as Will and Idea. Sec. 20.

10
Only when genius is married to science, can the highest results be produced.

HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 1.

Genius without education is like silver in the mine.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.

11
Genius is essentially creative; it bears the stamp of the individual who possesses it.

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. vii, ch. 1.

12
When a true genius appears in the world, you may know him by this sign, that the dunces are all in confederacy against him.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects.

In the republic of mediocrity genius is dangerous.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty in Literature.

13
There is a certain characteristic common to all those whom we call geniuses. Each of them has a consciousness of being a man apart.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies, p. 44.

14
Of the three requisites of genius, the first is soul, and the second, soul, and the third, soul.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Literature and Life: Genius.

15
But on the whole, "genius is ever a secret to itself."

CARLYLE, Characteristics.

II—Genius: Apothegms

16
Improvement makes straight roads; but the crooked roads without improvement are the roads of Genius.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

17
Genius is of no country.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 207.

18
"Eccentricities of genius, Sam," said Mr. Pickwick.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 30.

Eccentricity is not a proof of genius, and even an artist should remember that originality consists not only in doing things differently, but also in "doing things better."

E. C. STEDMAN, Victorian Poets. Ch. 9.

19
Fortune has rarely condescended to be the companion of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Poverty of the Learned.

Genius and its rewards are briefly told:

A liberal nature and a niggard doom,
A difficult journey to a splendid tomb.

JOHN FORSTER, Oliver Goldsmith: Dedication.

1 Many men of genius must arise before a particular man of genius can appear.

ISAAC D'ISRAËLI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 12.

2 Nor mourn the unalterable Days
That Genius goes and Folly stays.

EMERSON, In Memoriam.

3 When Nature has work to be done, she creates a genius to do it.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The Method of Nature.

In all great works of art . . . the Genius draws up the ladder after him.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Shakspeare.

4 The first and last thing required of genius is the love of truth. (Das erste und letzte, was vom Genie gefordert wird, ist Wahrheits-Liebe.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. iii.

5 The freemasonry of genius.

WILLIAM HARVEY, Lectures: Burke and Goldsmith.

6 Genius, like humanity, rusts for want of use.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Application to Study.

7 A person of genius should marry a person of character. Genius does not herd with genius.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 12.

8 Unless one is a genius, it is best to aim at being intelligible.

ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 15.

9 Adversity reveals genius, prosperity hides it. (Ingenium res Adversæ nudare solent, celare secundæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73.

Ill fortune is often an incentive to genius. (Ingenium mala sæpe movent.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 43.

The worship of genius never makes a man rich. (Amor ingenii neminem unquam divitem fecit.)

PETRONIUS ARBITER, Satyricon. Sec. 83.

Genius and virtue, like diamonds, are best plain-set—set in lead, set in poverty.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Domestic Life.

Hunger is the handmaid of genius.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

See also POETRY AND POVERTY.

10 Genius never drops from the skies.

JAMES HUNEKER, Pathos of Distance, p. 103.

11 A man of genius has been seldom ruined but by himself.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 381.)

12 Many have genius, but, wanting art, are forever dumb.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 20.

13 How often the greatest geniuses lie hidden in obscurity! (Ut sæpe summa ingenia in occulto latent!)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 165. (Act i, sc. 2.)

14 For genius renown endures deathless. (Ingenio stat sine morte decus.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 2, l. 24.

The memory of genius is immortal. (Immortalis est ingenii memoria.)

SENECA, Ad Polybium. Sec. 37.

Genius survives: all else is claimed by death. (Vivitur ingenio: cætera mortis erunt.)

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: December: Colin's Emblem. Quoted probably from Consolatio ad Liviam, written shortly after the death of Mæcenas by an anonymous author. (See Notes and Queries, Jan., 1918, p. 12.)

Vivitur ingenio: that damn'd motto there
Seduced me first to be a wicked player.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love in a Bottle: Epilogue.
The motto, "Vivitur ingenio," (Genius survives), was probably displayed in Drury Lane Theatre.

15 Premature genius seldom arrives at maturity. (Illud ingenorum velut præcox genus, non temere unquam pervenit at frugem.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 10.

16 The lamp of genius burns more rapidly than the lamp of life. (Das Licht des Genie's bekam weniger Fett, als das Licht des Lebens.)

SCHILLER, Fiesco. Act ii, sc. 17.

17 If it were not for my respect for human opinion, I would not open my window to see the Bay of Naples for the first time; while I would go five hundred leagues to talk with a man of genius.

MADAME DE STAËL. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.)

18 When genius is punished, its fame is exalted. (Punitis ingeniis, gliscit auctoritas.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 35. Tacitus is telling of the burning, by order of the Roman Senate, of the books written by Crematius Cordus, and derides the stupidity which thinks it can suppress books by burning them, an action which, Tacitus says, has never produced any effect except infamy to the persons who ordered the burning and glory to the sufferers.

19 I have nothing to declare except my genius.

OSCAR WILDE, to the revenue officers, when he landed in America in January, 1882. (HARRIS, Oscar Wilde, p. 52.)

III—Genius: Its Virtues

<sup>1</sup> Genius hath electric power
Which earth can never tame,
Bright suns may scorch and dark clouds lower,
Its flash is still the same.

LYDIA MARIA CHILD, Marius Amid the Ruins of Carthage.

<sup>2</sup> Philosophy becomes poetry, and science imagination, in the enthusiasm of genius.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 12.

<sup>3</sup> To clothe the fiery thought
In simple words succeeds,
For still the craft of genius is
To mask a king in weeds.

EMERSON, The Poet.

We owe to genius always the same debt, of lifting the curtain from the common, and showing us that divinities are sitting disguised in the seeming gang of gypsies and peddlers.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

<sup>4</sup> Genius, indeed, melts many ages into one, and thus effects something permanent, yet still with a similarity of office to that of the more ephemeral writer. A work of genius is but the newspaper of a century, or perchance of a hundred centuries.

HAWTHORNE, Mosses from an Old Manse: The Old Manse.

<sup>5</sup> There is no work of genius which has not been the delight of mankind, no word of genius to which the human heart and soul have not, sooner or later, responded.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Rousseau and the Sentimentalists.

<sup>6</sup> It is the privilege of genius that to it life never grows commonplace as to the rest of us.

J. R. LOWELL, Democracy and Other Addresses: On Unveiling the Bust of Fielding.

<sup>7</sup> There are two kinds of genius. The first and highest may be said to speak out of the eternal to the present, and must compel its age to understand it; the second understands its age, and tells it what it wishes to be told.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Pope.

<sup>8</sup> This is the highest miracle of genius, that things which are not should be as though they were, that the imaginations of one mind should become the personal recollections of another.

MACAULAY, Essays: The Pilgrim's Progress.

<sup>9</sup> Nature with Genius stands united in league everlasting;

What is promised by one, surely the other performs.

SCHILLER, Steer, Bold Mariner, On.

IV—Genius: Its Faults

<sup>10</sup> There was never a great genius without a tincture of madness. (Nullam magnum ingenium sine mixtura dementiae fuit.)

ARISTOTLE. (SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Bk. i, sec. 15.) Also quoted by other writers.

Great wits are sure to madness near allied,
And thin partitions do their bounds divide.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 163. See also under SENSE.

I have heard, madam, your greatest wits have ever a touch of madness and extravagance in them.

DRYDEN AND CAVENDISH, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act v, sc. 1.

The heart and soul of genius may be mad, but the mind of true genius is ever as clear as the heavens seen through pine trees.

GEORGE JEAN NATHAN, Materia Critica.

<sup>11</sup> Men of genius are often dull and inert in society, as the blazing meteor when it descends to the earth is only a stone.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 13.

<sup>12</sup> Strange power of Genius, that can throw
Round all that's vicious, weak, and low,
Such magic lights, such rainbow dyes
As dazzle ev'n the steadiest eyes.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. Extract xvi, l. 1.

What an impostor Genius is;
How, with that strong, mimetic art,
Which forms its life and soul, it takes
All shapes of thought, all hues of heart,
Nor feels, itself, one throb it wakes;

How like a gem its light may smile
O'er the dark path, by mortals trod,
Itself as mean a worm, the while,
As crawls at midnight o'er the sod.

THOMAS MOORE, Rhymes on the Road. Extract xvi, l. 72.

<sup>13</sup> It is the characteristic of a certain blunderer called genius to see things too far in advance.

CHARLES READE, Recipe for Writing Novels.

V—Genius and Talent

<sup>14</sup> Doing easily what others find difficult is talent; doing what is impossible for talent is genius.

AMIEL, Journal, 17 Dec., 1856.

<sup>15</sup> The eagle never lost so much time as when he submitted to learn of the crow.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell.

Men of genius are like eagles, they live on what tha kill, while men ov talents is like crows, tha live on what has been killed for them.

JOSEPH BILLINGS, Talent and Genius.

1 Talent convinces—Genius but excites;
This tasks the reason, that the soul delights.
Talent from sober judgment takes its birth,
And reconciles the pinion to the earth;
Genius unsettles with desires the mind,
Contented not till earth be left behind;
Talent, the sunshine on a cultured soil,
Ripens the fruit, by slow degrees, for toil;
Genius, the sudden Iris of the skies,
On cloud itself reflects its wondrous dyes: . . .

Talent gives all that vulgar critics need—
And frames a horn-book for the Dull to read;
Genius, the Pythian of the Beautiful,
Leaves its large truths a riddle to the Dull—
From eyes profane a veil the Isis screens,
And fools on fools still ask—"What Hamlet means?"

BULWER-LYTTON, Talent and Genius.

Talent repeats; Genius creates. Talent is a cistern; Genius a fountain. Talent deals with the actual, with discovered and realized truths, analyzing, arranging, combining, applying positive knowledge, and in action looking to precedents; Genius deals with the possible, creates new combinations, discovers new laws, and acts from an insight into principles. Talent jogs to conclusions to which Genius takes giant leaps. Talent accumulates knowledge, and has it packed up in the memory; Genius assimilates it with its own substance, grows with every new accession, and converts knowledge into power. Talent gives out what it has taken in; Genius what has risen from its unsounded wells of living thought. Talent, in difficult situations, strives to untie knots, which Genius instantly cuts with one swift decision. Talent is full of thoughts, Genius of thought; one has definite acquisitions, the other indefinite power.

E. P. WHIPPLE, Literature and Life: Genius.

2 Talent, lying in the understanding, is often inherited; genius, being the action of reason and imagination, rarely or never.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

3 We call partial half-lights, by courtesy, genius; talent which converts itself into money; talent which glitters to-day that it may dine and sleep well tomorrow.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Prudence.

When the will is absolutely surrendered to the moral sentiment, that is virtue; when the wit is surrendered to intellectual truth, that is genius. Talent for talent's sake is a bauble and a show. Talent working with joy in the cause of universal truth lifts the possessor to new power.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Progress of Culture.

4 Mediocrities sweat blood to produce rubbish.

Geniuses create wonders without an effort.
ANATOLE FRANCE. (Opinions of Anatole France, p. 100.)

5 Nature is the master of talents; genius is the master of nature.

J. G. HOLLAND, Plain Talk on Familiar Subjects: Art and Life.

6 Unpretending mediocrity is good, and genius is glorious; but the weak flavor of genius in a person essentially common is detestable.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1.

7 There is the same difference between talent and genius that there is between a stone mason and a sculptor.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Shakespeare.

8 Genius begins great works; labor alone finishes them. (Le génie commence les beaux ouvrages, mais le travail seul les achève.)

JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 335.

9 Between talent and genius there is the same proportion as the whole to its part. (Entre esprit et talent il y a la proportion du tout à sa partie.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. No. 12.

10 Talent is that which is in a man's power; genius is that in whose power a man is.

J. R. LOWELL, Among My Books: Rousseau and the Sentimentalists.

11 Talk not of genius baffled. Genius is master of man.

Genius does what it must, and Talent does what it can.

OWEN MEREDITH, Last Words of a Sensitive Second-rate Poet.

12 Antony was not a genius; he was a gigantic commonplace.

ARTHUR WEIGALL, Life and Times of Cleopatra.

13 A genius bright, and base,
Of tow'ring talents, and terrestrial aims.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night-vi, l. 266.

GENTLEMAN

I—Gentleman: Definitions

14 He is a Gentleman, because his nature
Is kind and affable to every creature.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Shepherd's Content. St. 41.

Gentlemanliness, being another word for intense humanity.

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ix, ch. 7, sec. 23.

We must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act v, sc. 2, l. 164.

15 Look who that is most virtuous away,

Prive and apart, and most intendeth aye
To do that gentle deedes that he can,
And take him for the greatest gentle man.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Wyf of Bathe, l. 257.

He is gentle that doth gentle deeds.

CHAUCER, Tale of the Wyf of Bathe, l. 314.

It is almost a definition of a gentleman to say he is one who never inflicts pain.

CARDINAL NEWMAN.

<sup>1</sup> The character of gentleman . . . is frequent in England, rare in France, and found, where it is found, in age or the latest period of manhood; while in Germany the character is almost unknown. But the proper antipode of a gentleman is to be sought for among the Anglo-American democrats.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria: Satyrane's Letters. No. 2.

<sup>2</sup> Living blood and a passion of kindness does at last distinguish God's gentleman from Fashion's.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

The flowering of civilization is the finished man, the man of sense, of grace, of accomplishment, of social power—the gentleman.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: Fortune of the Republic.

<sup>3</sup> Manners and money make a gentleman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

It's not the gay coat makes the gentleman.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>4</sup> According to my mild way of thinking, it is not essential that a gentleman should be bright.

CORRA HARRIS. "I remember writing it, but have no idea where it occurs."—Letter to compiler.

<sup>5</sup> What's a gentleman but his pleasure?

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, 15. (1573)

<sup>6</sup> A gentleman is one who understands and shows every mark of deference to the claims of self-love in others, and exacts it in return from them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On the Look of a Gentleman.

<sup>7</sup> His ideal Gentleman is . . . the calculating adventurer who affects the supercilious aid of a shallow dandy and cherishes the heart of a frog.

OLIVER H. G. LEIGH, Lord Chesterfield's Letters: Introduction.

<sup>8</sup> He would be the finer gentleman that should leave the world untainted with falsehood, or dissimulation, or wantonness, or conceit.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 2.

<sup>9</sup> A gentleman's first characteristic is that fineness of structure in the body, which renders it capable of the most delicate sensations;

and of structure in the mind which renders it capable of the most delicate sympathies—one may say, simply, "fineness of nature."

RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Pt. ix, ch. 7, sec. 9.

<sup>10</sup> A gentleman of our days is one who has money enough to do what every fool would do if he could afford it: that is, consume without producing.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

A gentleman ain't a man—leastways not a common man—the common man bein' but the slave wot feeds and clothes the gentleman beyond the common.

BERNARD SHAW, An Unsocial Socialist. Ch. 4.

II—Gentleman: Apothegms

<sup>11</sup> I am a gentleman, though spoiled i' the breeding. The Buzzards are all gentlemen. We came in with the Conqueror.

RICHARD BROME, English Moor. Act ii, sc. 4.
See also under ANCESTRY.

<sup>12</sup> His lockèd, letter'd, braw brass collar
Show'd him the gentleman an' scholar.

BURNS, The Two Dogs. The phrase, "a gentleman and a scholar" dates from 1621.

A gentleman by nature, and a scholar by education.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon.

<sup>13</sup> Like two single gentlemen rolled into one.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *Broad Grins:
Lodgings for Single Gentlemen*.

You are not like a Cerberus, three gentlemen at once, are you?

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iv, sc. 2.

<sup>14</sup> Gentleman is written legibly on his brow.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, *The Heir-at-
Law*. Act iii, sc. 1. (1797)

Though modest, on his unembarrass'd brow
Nature had written "gentleman."

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 83. (1821)

<sup>15</sup> Take one more disguise, and put thyself into the habit of a gentleman.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Cutter of Coleman Street.
Act i, sc. 5. (1641) Hence: "Disguised as a gentleman."

<sup>16</sup> I had rather have a plain russet-coated Captain, that knows what he fights for, and loves what he knows, than that which you call a Gentleman and is nothing else. I honour a Gentleman that is so indeed.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Letter to Sir W. Spring and Maurice Barrow, Sept., 1643.

<sup>17</sup> Wherever I go the world cries "that's a gentleman, my life on't a gentleman!" and when y'ave said a gentleman, you have said all.

JOHN CROWNE, Sir Courtly Nice. (1685)

1 Once a gentleman, and always a gentleman.
DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 28.

To be a gentleman is to be one all the world over, and in every relation and grade of society.
R. L. STEVENSON, The American Emigrant.

2 I shall be a gen'l'm'n myself one of these days, perhaps, with a pipe in my mouth, and a summer-house in the back garden.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 16.

3 What fact more conspicuous in modern history than the creation of the gentleman?
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.

4 The genteel thing is the genteel thing at any time. If so be that a gentleman bees in a concatenation accordingly.
GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i, sc. 2.

5 A gentleman may make a king, and a clerk may prove a pope.
SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. v.

6 He that would be a gentleman let him go to an assault.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Who would be a gentleman let him storm a town.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 A fine-paced gentleman as you shall see walk The middle aisle.
BEN JONSON, The Staple of News. Act i, sc. 1.

8 A man may learn from his Bible to be a more thorough gentleman than if he had been brought up in all the drawing-rooms in London.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Water Babies. Ch. 3.

9 A gentleman who lives ill is a monster in nature. (Un gentilhomme qui vit mal est un monstre dans la nature.)
MOLIÈRE, Dom Juan. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 50.

10 No continuance of time, no favor of Prince, no office, no virtue, nor any wealth can make a clown to become a gentleman.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

Somebody has said that a king may make a nobleman, but he cannot make a gentleman.
EDMUND BURKE, Letter to William Smith, 29 Jan., 1795.

Any king or queen may make a lord, but only the devil himself—and the graces—can make a Chesterfield.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 23.

I can make a lord, but only God Almighty can make a gentleman.

JAMES I, Remark, to his old nurse, when she begged him to make her son a gentleman.

The king cannot make a gentleman of blood, nor

God Almighty, but he can make a gentleman by creation.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk.

Of seven peasants I can make as many lords; but of seven lords I could not make one Holbein.

HENRY VIII, when a nobleman complained of Holbein.

Do give thee five-fold blazon.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act i, sc. 5, l. 310.

He is complete in feature and in mind, With all good grace to grace a gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 73.

Well born, well dressed, and moderately learned. (Bene nati, bene vestiti, et modiocriter docti.) Statutes of All Souls College, Oxford. The qualifications of a Fellow of the College.

15 There cannot be a greater reproach to a gentleman than to be accounted a liar.

SIR HENRY SIDNEY, Letters to His Son.

16 Notwithstanding he be a dunghill gentleman, or a gentleman of the first head, as they used to term them.

PHILIP STUBBS, Anatomie of Abuses, 122. (1583) Huloet (Abced, sig. N 5), in 1552, defined a "gentleman of the first head" as "ironice to be applied to such as would be esteemed a gentleman, having no point or quality of a gentleman." Robertson (Phraseology Generalis, 710) stated that it was equivalent to "Novus homo."

<sup>1</sup> It don't cost nothin' to be a gentleman.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, reproving a rowdy.

<sup>2</sup> But if you fail, or if you rise,
Be each, pray God, a gentleman.

W. M. THACKERAY, The End of the Play.

The Pall Mall Gazette is written by gentlemen for gentlemen.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 32.

<sup>3</sup> If a man is a gentleman, he knows quite enough, and if he is not a gentleman, whatever he knows is bad for him.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Who was then the gentleman?

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act v, sc. 3, l. 238.

An absolute gentleman, full of the most excellent differences.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 112.

<sup>8</sup> I do not think a braver gentleman,
More active-valiant, or more valiant-young,
More daring or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter age with noble deeds.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 89.

This earth that bears thee dead
Bears not alive so stout a gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 92.

A kinder gentleman treads not the earth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 8, l. 35.

A sweeter and a lovelier gentleman,

Framed in the prodigality of nature,
Young, valiant, wise, and, no doubt, right royal,
The spacious world cannot again afford.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 2, l. 243.

An affable and courteous gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act i, sc. 2, l. 98.

<sup>9</sup> We are gentlemen,
That neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envy the great nor do the low despise.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 25.

<sup>10</sup> And thus he bore without abuse
The grand old name of gentleman,

Defamed by every charlatan,

And soil'd with all ignoble use.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. cxi, st. 6.

O selfless man and stainless gentleman!

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 790.

GENTLENESS

<sup>11</sup> The great mind knows the power of gentleness,

Only tries force because persuasion fails.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau.

<sup>12</sup> If there be any good in gentleness, I trowe it to be only this, that it seemeth a manner imposed to gentle men, that they should not disgrace or degenerate from the virtues of their noble kindred.

CHAUCER, Boethius. Bk. iii, prose 6.

CLAUDIAN, Panegyricus Dictus Manlio Theodoro Consuli, l. 239.

Gentleness succeeds better than violence. (Plus fait douceur que violence.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 3.

Might there not be
Some power in gentleness we dream not of?

STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i.

What would you have? Your gentleness shall force

More than your force move us to gentleness.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 102.

Let gentleness my strong enforcement be.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 118.

<sup>14</sup> Severity is allowable where gentleness has no effect. (La violence est juste où la douceur est vaine.)

<sup>15</sup> A gentle heart is tied with an easy thread.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

- 1
Gentle of speech, beneficent of mind.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 917. (Pope, tr.)
But he whose inborn worth his acts commend,
Of gentle soul, to human race a friend.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xix, l. 383. (Pope, tr.)
- 2
It is only people who possess firmness who can possess true gentleness. Those who appear gentle generally possess nothing but weakness, which is readily converted into harshness.
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 479.
- 3
Speak gently! 'tis a little thing
Dropped in the heart's deep well;
The good, the joy that it may bring
Eternity shall tell.
G. W. LANGFORD, Speak Gently.
- 4
Gentle to others, to himself severe.
SAMUEL ROGERS, The Voyage of Columbus.
Canto vi.
- 5
They are as gentle
As zephyrs blowing below the violet.
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 171.
This milky gentleness.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 4, l. 364.
Touch'd with human gentleness and love.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iv,
sc. 1, l. 25.
- 6
The gentleness of all the gods go with thee.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 46.
- 7
Gentle is that gentle does.
J. W. WARTER, Last of the Old Squires, p. 43.
Quoted as a proverb. See also under GENTLE-MAN.
- 8
Gentle in manner, strong in performance.
(Suavitur in modo, fortiter in re.)
A proverbial expression derived from a phrase of Claudio Aquaviva, "Fortes in fine conse-quendo, et suaves in modo." (Industrie ad Curandos Animæ Morbos, ii, 1.) Aquaviva was General of the Society of Jesus, and his treatise was published in Venice in 1606.

GEORGE

- 9
I sing the Georges Four,
For Providence could stand no more.
Some say that far the worst
Of all the Four was George the First.
But yet by some 'tis reckoned
That worser still was George the Second.
And what mortal ever heard
Any good of George the Third?
When George the Fourth from earth descended,
Thank God the line of Georges ended.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram, after hearing
Thackeray's lectures on the Four Georges.

- The injured Stewart line is gone,
A race outlandish fills their throne:
An idiot race, to honour lost—
Who know them best despise them most.
BURNS, On Seeing the Royal Palace at Stirling in Ruins.
- 10
Here every virtue pleased thou mayst behold
Which raised a hero to a god of old;
To form this One, the mixed ideas draw
From Edward, Henry, and the loved Nassau.
LAURENCE EUSDEN, Poet Laureate, 1718,
Birthday Ode to George I.
- 11
Great friend of Liberty! in Kings a name
Above all Greek, above all Roman fame.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 1, l. 25. Referring to George II.
- 12
In the first year of freedom's second dawn
Died George the Third; although no tyrant,
one
Who shielded tyrants. . . .
A better farmer ne'er brush'd dew from lawn,
A worse king never left a realm undone!
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 8.
He ever warr'd with freedom and the free:
Nations as men, home subjects, foreign foes,
So that they utter'd the word "Liberty!"
Found George the Third their first opponent.
BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 45.
Talk no more of the lucky escape of the head
From a flint so unhappily thrown;
I think very different from thousands; indeed
'Twas a lucky escape for the stone.
JOHN WOLCOT, *On a Stone Thrown at George
III*.
- 13
And where is Fum the Fourth, our royal bird?
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 78. Referring to George IV.
How Monarchs die is easily explain'd,
And thus it might upon the Tomb be chisell'd,
"As long as George the Fourth could reign he reign'd,
And then he mizzled."
THOMAS HOOD, On a Royal Demise.
That he was the handsomest prince in the whole world was agreed by men, and, alas! by many women.
THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George the Fourth.
A corpulent Adonis of fifty.
LEIGH HUNT, who was imprisoned for thus referring to George IV, when Regent. (Examiner, 1813.)
- 14
Let George do it. (Laissez faire à Georges, il est homme d'âge.)
LOUIS XII of France. A satirical reference to his prime minister, Cardinal Georges d'Amboise. (c. 1500.) (See SLAUGHTER, Two Children in Old Paris, p. 233.) Translated into modern slang as meaning, "Let the other fellow do it."

GERMANY AND THE GERMANS

I—Germany: National Songs

1
This is the German's fatherland,
Where wrath pursues the foreign band,—
Where every Frank is held a foe,
And Germans all as brothers glow;—

That is the land,—
All Germany's thy fatherland.
(Das ist des Deutschen Vaterland,
Wo Zorn vertilgt den wälschen Tand,
Wo jeder Franzmann heisset Feind,
Wo jeder Deutsche heisset Freund—
Das soll es sein!

Das ganze Deutschland soll es sein!)
ERNST MORITZ ARNDT, Des Deutschen Vaterland.

2
Germany, Germany over all, over all in the world! (Deutschland, Deutschland über Alles, über Alles in der Welt!)

A. H. HOFFMAN VON FALLERSLEBEN, Das Lied der Deutschland. First published in 1841, this song became very popular as a marching song during the World War.

Austria over all, whenever it will. (Oesterreich über Alles wann es nur will.)

UNKNOWN. Title of pamphlet published in 1684.

Prussia over all. (Preussen über Alles.)

UNKNOWN. Title of song which appeared in 1817.

3
French and Russian they matter not,
A blow for a blow and a shot for a shot,
We love them not, We hate them not;
We hold the Weichsel and Vosges gate,
We have but one and only hate;
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe and one alone,
England!

(Was schiert uns Russe und Franzos?
Schuss wider Schuss und Stoss um Stoss,
Wir lieben sie nicht, Wir hassen sie nicht,
Wir schützen Weichsel und Wasgaupass,—
Wir haben nur einen einzigen Hass,
Wir lieben vereint, wir hassen vereint,
Wir haben nur einen einzigen Feind,
England!)

ERNST LISSAUER, Hassgesang Gegen England.
St. 1. (1914) (Barbara Henderson, tr.)

We will never forego our hate,
We have all but a single hate,
We love as one, we hate as one,
We have one foe, and one alone,
England!

(Wir wollen nicht lassen von unserem Hass,
Wir haben alle nur einen Hass,
Wir lieben vereint, wir hassen vereint,
Wir haben all nur einen Feind:
England!)

ERNST LISSAUER, Hassgesang Gegen England.
St. 1.

At the Captain's mess, in the Banquet-hall,
Sat feasting the officers, one and all—
Like a sabre-blow, like the swing of a sail,
One raised his glass, held high to hail,
Sharp snapped like the stroke of a rudder's play,
Spoke three words only: "To the day!"

ERNST LISSAUER, Hassgesang Gegen England.

St. 2. "To the day!" (Auf den Tag!), the day, that is, on which war would begin.

Twelve men of iron, drinking late,
Strike hands, and pledge a cup of hate:

"The Day!"

C. A. RICHMOND, The Day.

I pray that every passing hour
Your hearts may bruise and beat,

I pray that every step you take
May bruise and burn your feet.

ÉMILE CAMMAERTS, Vœux du Nouvel An, 1915, À L'Armée Allemande. (Lord Curzon, tr.) Published in the Observer, London, 10
Jan., 1915.

For agony and spoil

Of nations beat to dust,

For poisoned air and tortured soil,

And cold, commanded lust,

And every secret woe

The shuddering waters saw—

Willed and fulfilled by high and low—

Let them relearn the Law.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Justice. 24 Oct., 1918.

Dear Fatherland, no danger thine
Firm stand thy sons to watch the Rhine!
(Lieb Vaterland, magst ruhig sein, Fest stet und treu die Wacht am Rhein!)

MAX SCHNECKENBURGER, Die Wacht am Rhein:
Chorus.

5
Hail! thou as victor crowned! (Heil dir im Siegeskranz.)

B. G. SCHUMACHER. Title and refrain of Prussian national hymn.

II—Germany: Some Familiar Phrases

6
Our next war will be fought for the highest interests of our country and of mankind.
This will invest it with importance in the world's history. "World power or downfall" will be our rallying cry.

FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. 7.

We Germans have a far greater and more urgent duty towards civilization to perform than the Great Asiatic Power. We, like the Japanese, can only fulfil it by the sword.

FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI, Germany and the Next War. Ch. xiii.

7
Just for a word, "neutrality," a word which in wartime had so often been disregarded—just for a scrap of paper, Great Britain is going to make war on a kindred nation who desires nothing better than to be friends with
her.

THEOBALD VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG, German

Foreign Minister, to Sir Edward Goschen, British Ambassador, 4 Aug., 1914. (Despatch by Sir Edward Goschen to British Foreign Office. War Encyclopedia, Govt. Ptg. Office, Wash., 1918.)

I will do my duty as I see it, without regard to scraps of paper called constitutions.

KING WILHELM I of Germany, Speech, to the Prussian Diet, when the latter refused to grant appropriations. (Harper's Weekly, 26 March, 1887.)

For what this whirlwind all aflame?
This thunderstroke of hellish ire,
Setting the universe afire?
While millions upon millions came
Into a very storm of war?

For a scrap of paper.
(Pourquoi cette trombe enflammée
Qui vient foudroyer l'univers?
Cet embrasement de l'enfer?
Ce tourbillonnement d'armées
Par mille milliers de milliers?
—C'est pour un chiffon de papier.)

PÈRE HYACINTHE LOYSON, Pour un Chiffon de Papier. (Edward Brabrook, tr.)

1
Let us put Germany, so to speak, in the saddle! you will see that she can ride. (Setzen wir Deutschland, so zu sagen, in den Sattel! Reiten wird es schon können.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Parliament of the Confederation, 11 March, 1867.

We are not going to Canossa. (Nach Canossa gehen wir nicht.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Reichstag, May 14, 1872. It was to Canossa that Emperor Henry IV went to do three days' penance, barefoot, bareheaded, in the snow, before Pope Gregory VII, in January, 1077. Bismarck used the phrase at the beginning of the "Kulturkampf" contest with the Pope in 1872, to indicate that the revived German Empire would not surrender to the Papal claims. In the end the Pope won.

We Germans fear God, but nothing else in the world. (Wir Deutschen fürchten Gott, sonst aber Nichts in der Welt.)

BISMARCK, Speech, in the Reichstag, 1887.

BLOOD AND IRON, see WAR: DEFINITIONS.

2
German fury. (Furor teutonicus.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 255.

Destroyed by German fury, rebuilt by American generosity.

WHITNEY WARREN, Inscription, for library at Louvain, Belgium; finally rejected.

3
I beg that the small steamers . . . be spared if possible, or else sunk without a trace being left. (Spurlos versenkt.)

COUNT KARL VON LUXBURG, Chargé d'Affaires at Buenos Aires, Telegram, to the Berlin Foreign Office, 19 May, 1917.

If neutrals were destroyed so that they disappeared without leaving any trace, terror would soon keep seamen and travelers away from the danger zones.

PROF. OSWALD FLAMM, Berlin Woche. (See New York Times, 15 May, 1917.)

4
Der Kaiser auf der Vaterland
Und Gott on high, all dings gommand,
Ve too, ach, don'd you understand?
Meinself—und Gott.

ALEXANDER MACGREGOR ROSE, Kaiser & Co. St. 1. First published in the Toronto Herald in 1897; recited by Captain Joseph Bullock Coghlan at a banquet at the Union League Club, New York, 21 April, 1899, on his return from the battle of Manila. Usually called, "Hoch der Kaiser." (For full history of the poem, see Stevenson, Famous Single Poems, p. 32.)

5
Shout! Let it reach the startled Huns!
And roar with all thy festal guns!
It is the answer of thy sons,
Carolina!

HENRY TIMROD, Carolina. Written in 1865, referring to Sherman's army. "Huns" became the popular name for the Germans among the Allies in 1914.

6
Our German Fatherland to which I hope will be granted . . . to become in the future as closely united, as powerful, and as authoritative as once the Roman world-empire was, and that, just as in the old times they said, "Civis romanus sum," hereafter, at some time in the future, they will say, "I am a German citizen."

WILHELM II, Speech, Oct., 1900.

What was the old formula of Pan-Germanism? From Bremen to Bagdad, wasn't it?

WOODROW WILSON, Address, St. Louis, Mo., 5 Sept., 1919.

7
It will now be my duty to see to it that this place in the sun shall remain our undisputed possession.

WILHELM II, Emperor of Germany, Speech, on the acquisition of Kiaochow, China, 18 June, 1901.

"That dog is mine," said those poor children; "that place in the sun is mine." Such is the beginning and type of usurpation throughout the earth. ("Ce chien est à moi," disaient ces pauvres enfants; "c'est là ma place au soleil." Voilà le commencement et l'image de l'usurpation de toute la terre.)

PASCAL, Pensées. No. 295.

8
A German quarrel. (Querelle d'allemand.)
A French proverbial expression, meaning an unjust quarrel.

III—Germany: Praise and Criticism

9
Germany is the only country I have visited where the hands of the men are better cared for than the hands of the women.

PRICE COLLIER, Germany and the Germans,
p. 280.

The Germans since 1870 have taken the place of the English as the boors of Europe.

PRICE COLLIER, England and the English, p.
429.

<sup>1</sup> The wee wee German Lairdie.

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, Jacobite Song. Claimed by some authorities to be a traditional Scottish song long antedating Cunningham.

<sup>2</sup> The German's wit is in his fingers.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>3</sup> They say ve for we, and wisy wersy.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine.

<sup>4</sup> Think of the man who first tried German sausage.

JEROME K. JEROME, Three Men in a Boat.
Ch. 14.

<sup>5</sup> Little things make Germany a lovely place:
Small square fields where cabbages grow red,
Fire glowing golden on blue tiles,
Flowered cloth around a feather bed.

JOSEPHINE MILES, Germany.

<sup>6</sup> If a man were drowning to-day he would have to shout for help in German.

SIR OSWALD MOSLEY, Speech, 1931. At a time when Germany was pleading for the cancellation of reparations.

<sup>7</sup> It was a dictum of Porson, that "Life is too short to learn German"; meaning, I apprehend, not that it is too difficult to be acquired within the ordinary space of life, but that there is nothing in it to compensate for the portion of life bestowed on its acquirement.

THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, Gryll Grange. Ch. 3.

<sup>8</sup> Germans are honest men.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iv, sc. 5, l. 73.

<sup>9</sup> Ah, a German and a genius! a prodigy! Admit him.

GHOST

See also Spirits, Vision, Witch

<sup>11</sup> Great Pompey's shade complains that we are slow,
And Scipio's ghost walks unaveng'd amongst us!

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 1.

<sup>12</sup> Then, like the last priest of a vanished nation,
The Shadow drew the cowl about its head,
And with a web-like hand made salutation,
And went back to the Dead.

HERVEY ALLEN, Shadow to Shadow.

<sup>13</sup> Ghosts, like ladies, never speak till spoke to.

R. H. BARHAM, The Ghost.

<sup>14</sup> Horrid apparition, tall and ghostly,
That walks at dead of night, or takes his stand

O'er some new-open'd grave; and (strange to tell!)

Evanishes at crowing of the cock.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 67.

<sup>15</sup> Where Entity and Quiddity,
The ghosts of defunct bodies, fly.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 145.

<sup>16</sup> Are we not Spirits, that are shaped into a body, into an Appearance; and that fade away again into air and Invisibility? Oh, Heaven, it is mysterious, it is awful to consider that we not only carry a future Ghost within us; but are, in very deed, Ghosts!

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus: Natural Supernaturalism.

<sup>17</sup> He flits across the stage a transient and embarrassed phantom.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 3.

<sup>18</sup> By midnight moons, o'er moistening dew,
In habit for the chase arrayed,
The hunter still the deer pursues,

The hunter and the deer—a shade!

PHILIP FRENEAU, The Indian Burying-Ground.
(1787)

Now o'er the hills in chase he flits,
The hunter and the deer a shade!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, O'Connor's Child. St. 4.
(1809) Campbell's appropriation of Fre-neau's line is one of the most barefaced in literary history.

Fond man! the vision of a moment made!
Dream of a dream! and shadow of a shade!

EDWARD YOUNG, Paraphrase on Part of the Book of Job, l. 187.

A hunter of shadows, himself a shade.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 574. Referring to Orion. See also under SHADOW.

<sup>19</sup> At first cock-crow the ghosts must go Back to their quiet graves below.

THEODOSIA GARRISON, The Neighbors.

<sup>20</sup> O'er all there hung a shadow and a fear;
A sense of mystery the spirit daunted,
And said as plain as whisper in the ear,
The place is Haunted.

THOMAS HOOD, The Haunted House.

1 Thin, airy shoals of visionary ghosts.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 48. (Pope, tr.)

2 All argument is against it, but all belief is for it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to the appearance of men's spirits after death. (BOSWELL, Life, 1778.)

I look for ghosts; but none will force
Their way to me: 'tis falsely said

That there was ever intercourse
Between the living and the dead.

WORDSWORTH, The Affliction of Margaret, l. 57.

I expressed just now my mistrust of what is called Spiritualism . . . I owe it a trifle for a message said to have come from Voltaire's Ghost. It was asked, "Are you now convinced of another world?" and rapped out, "There is no other world—Death is only an incident in Life."

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Joseph Vance. Ch. 11.

3 What gentle ghost, besprent with April dew,
Hails me so solemnly to yonder yew?

BEN JONSON, Elegy on Lady Jane Pawlet, l. 1.

What beck'ning ghost along the moonlight shade
Invites my steps, and points to yonder glade?

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 1.

4 So many ghosts, and forms of fright,
Have started from their graves to-night,
They have driven sleep from mine eyes
away;

I will go down to the chapel and pray.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. iv.

5 All houses wherein men have lived and died
Are haunted houses. Through the open doors

The harmless phantoms on their errands
glide,

With feet that make no sound upon the floors.

LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 1.

The stranger at my fireside cannot see

The forms I see, nor hear the sounds I hear;

He but perceives what is; while unto me

All that has been is visible and clear.

LONGFELLOW, Haunted Houses. St. 4.

6 A thousand fantasies
Begin to throng into my memory
Of calling shapes, and beck'ning shadows dire,
And airy tongues, that syllable men's names
On sands, and shores, and desert wildernesses.

MILTON, Comus, l. 205.

The other shape,
If shape it might be call'd that shape had none
Distinguishable in member, joint, or limb;
Or substance might be call'd that shadow seem'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 666.

Whence and what are thou, execrable shape?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 681.

7 But O as to embrace me she inclin'd,
I wak'd, she fled, and day brought back my
night.

MILTON, Sonnet on His Deceased Wife.

With a slow and noiseless footstep

Comes that messenger divine,

Takes the vacant chair beside me,

Lays her gentle hand in mine.

LONGFELLOW, Footsteps of Angels.

8 Men say that in this midnight hour,

The disembodi'd have power

To wander as it liketh them,

By wizard oak and fairy stream.

WILLIAM MOTHERWELL, Midnight.

9 Peace, break thee off; look, where it comes again!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 40.

A figure like your father,

Armed at point exactly, cap-a-pe.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 199.

10 Angels and ministers of grace defend us!
Be thou a spirit of health or goblin damn'd,

Bring with thee airs from heaven or blasts
from hell,

Be thy intents wicked or charitable,

Thou comest in such questionable shape

That I will speak to thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 39.

Alas, poor ghost!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 4.

11 Unhand me, gentlemen.

By heaven, I'll make a ghost of him that lets
me!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 84.

12 I am thy father's spirit,
Doom'd for a certain term to walk the night.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 9.

No ghost should be allowed to walk

And make such havoc with its talk:

When folks are dead, they should retire—

I have no patience with you, Sir!

CHARLES DALMON, To the Ghost of Hamlet's Father.

13 There needs no ghost, my lord, come from the grave

To tell us this.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 125.

It is an honest ghost, that let me tell you.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 138.

Art thou there, truepenny?

Come on,—you hear this fellow in the cellarage.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 150.

14 The time has been,
That, when the brains were out, the man
would die,

And there an end; but now they rise again,

With twenty mortal murders on their crowns.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 79.

Avaunt! and quit my sight! let the earth hide thee!

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with!

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 93.

Hence, horrible shadow! Unreal mockery, hence!
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 106.

1
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprite,
In the church-way paths to glide.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act v, sc. 1, l. 386.

2
For all that here on earth we dreadful hold,
Be but as bugs to fearen babes withall.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto xii, st. 25.

Warwick was a bug that fear'd us all.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 2.

To the world no bugbear is so great
As want of figure and a small estate.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 67.

At desperate doings with a bauble-sword,
And other bugaboo-and-baby-work.

ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
Pt. v, l. 949.

3
I seem'd to move among a world of ghosts,
And feel myself the shadow of a dream.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. i, l. 17.

A footstep, a low throbbing in the walls,
A noise of falling weights that never fell,
Weird whispers, bells that rang without a hand,
Door-handles turn'd when none was at the door,
And bolted doors that open'd of themselves;
And one betwixt the dark and light had seen
Her, bending by the cradle of her babe.

TENNYSON, The Ring, l. 375.

4
There came a ghost to Marg'ret's door,

With many a grievous groan,
And aye he tirl'd at the pin,

But answer made she none.

UNKNOWN, Sweet William and May Marg'ret.

GIANT

5
The giant loves the dwarf.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Lorna Doone. Ch. 1. Quoted as a proverb.

6
Pigmies placed on the shoulders of giants see more than the giants themselves. (Pigmæi gigantum humeris impositi plusquam ipsi gigantes vident.)

DIDACUS STELLA. (LUCAN, De Bello Civili, x, ii.) Quoted by Burton, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader.

For as our modern wits behold,
Mounted a pick-back on the old,

Much farther off, much further he,
Rais'd on his aged beast, could see.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 71.

A dwarf sees farther than the giant when he has the giant's shoulders to mount on.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend. Sec. i, ch. 8.

A dwarf on a giant's shoulders sees farther of the two.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7
A giant will starve with what will surfeit a dwarf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 209.

8
There were giants in the earth in those days.
Old Testament: Genesis, vi, 4.

Strong were our sires, and as they fought they writ,

Conqu'ring with force of arms and dint of wit:
Theirs was the giant race before the flood.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Mr. Congreve, l. 3.

A fellow thirteen cubits high. (τρισκαίδεκάπηνχus.)
THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xv, l. 17.

9
Great giants work great wrongs—but we are small,

For love goes lowly; but Oppression's tall.

THOMAS HOOD, Plea of the Midsummer Fairies.

You Stump-o'-the-Gutter, you Hop-o'-my-Thumb,

Your husband must from Lilliput come.

KANE O'HARA, Midas.

10
Far be it from me to tell them of the battles of the giants.

PLATO, The Republic. Sec. 378. (Jowett, tr.)

11
A dwarf is not tall, though he stand upon a mountain-top; a giant keeps his height, even though he stands in a well. (Non est magnus pumilio, licet in monte constiterit; colossus magnitudinem suam servabit, etiam si steterit in puteo.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, 32.

Pigmies are pigmies still, though perch'd on alps,
And pyramids are pyramids in vales.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 309.

12
A stirring dwarf we do allowance give
Before a sleeping giant.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii,
sc. 3, l. 146.

13
Shall a man go hang himself because he belongs to the race of pygmies, and not be the biggest pygmy that he can?

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

GIFTS AND GIVING

I—Gifts: Apothegms

14
To treat a poor wretch with a bottle of Burgundy, and fill his snuff-box, is like giving a pair of laced ruffles to a man that has never a shirt on his back.

TOM BROWN, Laconics.

But hang it—to poets who seldom can eat,
Your very good mutton's a very good treat;
Such dainties to them, their health it might hurt:
It's like sending them ruffles, when wanting a shirt.

GOLDSMITH, The Haunch of Venison, l. 33.

1 When they offer thee a heifer, run with a halter.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 4.

When the pig's proffered, hold up the poke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs.

2 Gifts break rocks. (Dadivas quebrantan peñas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 35. Quoted by Fuller, Gnomologia. See also under BRIBERY.

3 Giving and keeping require brains.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

To give and keep there is need of wit.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4 Be careful to whom you give. (Cui des videto.)

DION CATO, Sententiae. No. 23.

He that's liberal

To all alike, may do a good by chance,

But never out of judgement.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Spanish Curate. Act i, sc. 1.

Who gives to all denies all.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

5 One must be poor to know the luxury of giving.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

To give is the business of the rich. (Denn Geben ist Sache des Reichen.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto i, l. 15.

Poor and liberal; rich and covetous.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6 It is said that gifts persuade even the gods. (Πείθειν δῶρα καὶ θεοὺς λόγος.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 964.

Gifts persuade the gods, gifts persuade noble kings. (Δῶρα θεοὺς πείθει δῶρ' αἰδολοὺς βασιλῆας.)

PLATO, De Republica. Bk. iii. Quoted. Attributed to Hesiod by Suidas.

7 One gift well given recovereth many losses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

8 Give a thing, take a thing.
That's an old man's plaything.

UNKNOWN. (HALLIWELL, Proverb-Rhymes.)

Give a thing and take again,
And you shall ride in hell's wain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 Steal the hog, and give the feet for alms.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Steal the goose and give the gibles in alms.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

10 When I gave you an inch, you took an ell.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9.

Give an inch, he'll take an ell.

JOHN WEBSTER, Sir Thomas Wyatt.

11 What shall I give? What shall I not give?
(Quid dem? Quid non dem?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 63.

12 The greatest grace of a gift, perhaps, is that it anticipates and admits of no return.

LONGFELLOW, Journals and Letters, 28 Feb., 1871.

13 Giving calls for genius. (Res est ingeniosa dare.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 62.

For what he has he gives, what thinks he shows;
Yet gives he not till judgement guide his bounty.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 101.

14 Let your portal be deaf to prayers, but wide to the giver. (Surda sit oranti tua janua, laxa ferenti.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 77. Ovid's advice to a woman.

15 Blessed is he who gets the gift, not he for whom it is meant. (Cui datum est, non cui destinatum.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 43.

A gift is as a precious stone in the eyes of him that hath it.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 8.

16 Length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honour.

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 16.

17 Giff-gaff makes gude friends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Scottish. Giff-gaff means one gift for another.

Giff-gaff was a good man, but he is soon weary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

18 I am not in the giving vein today.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 119.

Sure the duke is in the giving vein.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act v, sc. 3.

19 The Gods themselves cannot recall their gifts.
TENNYSON, Tithonus, l. 49. Quoted.

20 Only he can be trusted with gifts who can present a face of bronze to expectations.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal. (EMERSON, Thoreau.)

II—Gifts: The Gift Horse

St. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Epistulae ad Ephesus: Proem. Sometimes given: "Equi donati dentes non inspiciuntur." Referred to as "ut vulgare proverbium est." The expression was used by St. Jerome, according to Archbishop Trench (Study of Words), when he replied to certain critics that they ought not to find fault with his writings, since they were free-will offerings.

A given horse may not be looked in the teeth.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria. Sig. C4. (c. 1520)

<sup>2</sup> He always looked a given horse in the mouth.
RABELAIS, Works. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1532)

<sup>3</sup> A given horse (we say) may not be looked in the mouth.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 49. (1539)

No man ought to look a given horse in the mouth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>4</sup> I am resolved to ride this way [facing the tail], to make good the proverb, that I may not look a gift horse in the mouth.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, English Rogue, iii, 158. (1674)

<sup>5</sup> He ne'er consider'd it, as loth
To look a gift-horse in the mouth,
And very wisely would lay forth
No more upon it than 'twas worth;
But as he got it freely, so
He spent it frank and freely too:
For saints themselves will sometimes be,
Of gifts that cost them nothing, free.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 489.

III—Giving and Receiving

<sup>6</sup> It is more blessed to give than to receive.

New Testament: Acts, xx, 35.

It is more blissful to give than to take.

UNKNOWN, Dives and the Pauper. Fo. 2. (1536)

It is better to give than to take.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. v. (1546)

<sup>7</sup> There was a man, though some did count him mad,

The more he cast away the more he had.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii.

So that the more she gave away,

The more, y-wis, she had alway.

CHAUCER, Romaunt of the Rose, l. 1159. Referring to Largesse.

The only things we ever keep

Are what we give away.

LOUIS GINSBERG, Song.

<sup>8</sup> That man may last, but never lives,
Who much receives, but nothing gives;

Whom none can love, whom none can thank,
Creation's blot, creation's blank.

THOMAS GIBBONS, When Jesus Dwelt.

<sup>9</sup> To get by giving, and to lose by keeping,
Is to be sad in mirth, and glad in weeping.

CHRISTOPHER HARVIE, The Synagogue: The Church Stile.

<sup>10</sup> Give is a good girl, but Take is bad and she brings death. (Δὲς ἀγαθή, ἄρπαξ δὲ κακή, θανάτου δότειρα.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 356.

<sup>11</sup> Who shuts his hand, hath lost his gold:
Who opens it, hath it twice told.

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots.

Giving much to the poor

Doth enrich a man's store;

It takes much from the account

To which his sin doth amount.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> The truly generous is the truly wise.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act iii, sc. 1.

<sup>13</sup> The wise man does not lay up treasure. The more he gives to others, the more he has for his own.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 81.

<sup>14</sup> Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over.

New Testament: Luke, vi, 38. (Date et dabitur vobis.—Vulgate.)

In giving, a man receives more than he gives, and the more is in proportion to the worth of the thing given.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 5.

<sup>15</sup> Who gives to friends so much from Fate secures.

That is the only wealth forever yours.

(Extra fortunam est quidquid donatur amicis:

Quas dederis solas semper habebis opes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 42.

<sup>16</sup> Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 21.

The poor work miracles every day: we give them, and they give us treasure in heaven.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, 29.

<sup>17</sup> For all you can hold in your cold, dead hand
Is what you have given away.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Peter Cooper. A translation of an ancient Sanscrit proverb.

<sup>18</sup> The liberal soul shall be made fat.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 25.

<sup>19</sup> The goods we spend we keep; and what we save we lose; and only what we lose we have.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Divine Fancies. Bk. iv, sec.

70. An apothegm which occurs in various forms in many writers.

1 Whatever I have given I still possess. (Hoc habeo quodcumque dedi.)

C. RABIRIUS. (SENECA, De Beneficiis, vi, 3, 1.)

2 The hand that gives, gathers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

3 Back of the sound broods the silence, back of the gift stands the giving;

Back of the hand that receives thrill the sensitive nerves of receiving.

RICHARD REALF, Indirection.

4 What we give to the wretched is given to Fortune. (Misero datur quodcumque, fortunæ datur.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 697.

5 What we gave, we have;
What we spent, we had;
What we left, we lost.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devon. (1419) (CLEVELAND, Genealogical History of the Family of Courtenay, p. 142.) Similar inscriptions are found on many old tombstones.

Quod expendi habui;

Quod donavi habeo;

Quod servavi perdidit.

RAVENSHAW, Antiente Epitaphes, p. 5. Quoted as the epitaph under the effigy of a priest.

6 I have spent; I have given; I have kept; I have possessed; I do possess; I have lost; I am punished; what I spent, I had; what I gave away, I have.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale xvi. Quoted as the epitaph on a sarcophagus.

IV—Gift and Giver

7 If thou doest aught good, do it quickly. For what is done quickly will be acceptable. Favors slowly granted are unfavorably received. (Si bene quid facias, facias cito. Nam cito factum Gratum erit. Ingratum gratia tarda facit.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xvii.

He gives by halves, who hesitates to give.

WILLIAM BROOME, Letter to Lord Cornwallis.

8 For whoso giveth a gift, or doth a grace,
Does it betimes, his thank is well the more.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 451.

Whate'er you give, give ever at demand,
Nor let old age stretch long his palsied hand;
Those who give late are importun'd each day,
And still are teas'd because they still delay.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 457.

He that's long a-giving knows not how to give.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 Give nobly to indigent merit, and do not refuse your charity even to those who have no merit but their misery.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. (Undated. To be delivered after his death.)

Shut not thy purse-strings always against painted distress. . . . Rake not into the bowels of unwelcome truth to save a half-penny.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Decay of Beggars.

10 The good received, the giver is forgot.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, To Lord Halifax, l. 39. See also under DEVIL.

11 Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit.

New Testament: I Corinthians, xii, 4.

It is not the weight of jewel or plate,

Or the fondle of silk or fur;

'Tis the spirit in which the gift is rich,

As the gifts of the Wise Ones were,

And we are not told whose gift was gold,

Or whose was the gift of myrrh.

EDMUND VANCE COOKE, The Spirit of the Gift.

12 God loveth a cheerful giver.

New Testament: II Corinthians, ix, 7.

13 He giveth oft who gives what's oft refused.

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epigrammata Sacra, l. 103.

14 We do not quite forgive a giver. The hand that feeds us is in some danger of being bitten.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

15 The gift, to be true, must be the flowing of the giver unto me, correspondent to my flowing unto him.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

Rings and jewels are not gifts, but apologies for gifts. The only gift is a portion of thyself. . . . Therefore the poet brings his poem; the shepherd, his lamb; the farmer, corn; the miner, a gem; the sailor, coral and shells; the painter, his picture; the girl, a handkerchief of her own sewing.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

For the will and not the gift makes the giver. (Denn der Wille und nicht die Gabe macht den Geber.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act i, sc. 5.

16 Give, if thou canst, an alms: if not, afford, Instead of that, a sweet and gentle word.

ROBERT HERRICK, Alms.

Give unto all, lest he whom thou deny'st
May chance to be no other man but Christ.

ROBERT HERRICK, Alms.

17 From Zeus are all strangers and beggars. (Πρὸς γὰρ Διὸς εἰσιν ἅπαντες ξένοι τε πτωχοί τε.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 207.

By Jove the stranger and the poor are sent,
And what to those we give, to Jove is lent.

<sup>1</sup> To give awkwardly is churlishness. The most difficult part is to give, then why not add a smile?

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Of the Court.

<sup>2</sup> That is no true alms which the hand can hold;
He gives only the worthless gold

Who gives from a sense of duty.

J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal. Pt. i, st. 6.

Not what we give, but what we share,
For the gift without the giver is bare;
Who gives himself with his alms feeds three,
Himself, his hungering neighbor, and me.

J. R. LOWELL, Vision of Sir Launfal. Pt. ii, st. 8.

<sup>3</sup> When you give, Give not by halves.

MASSINGER, The Bashful Lover. Act ii, sc. 3.

<sup>4</sup> Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them. . . . But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 1-3.

<sup>5</sup> The obligation of a gift hath reference wholly unto the will of him that giveth.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5.

<sup>6</sup> Thanks are not forthcoming for a service which has come late through delay. (Gratia-que officio, quod mora tardet, abest.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 52.

The gift which stays too long in the hands of the donor is not thankfully received. (Ingratum est beneficium quod diu inter manus dantis hæsit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, l. 1.

<sup>7</sup> The gift derives its value from the rank of the giver (Majestatem res data dantis habet.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. ix, l. 68.

While you look at what is given, look also at the giver. (Cum quod datur spectabis, et dantem adspice.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 416.

<sup>8</sup> Gifts are scorned where givers are despised.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 64.

<sup>9</sup> Gifts which the giver makes precious are always the most acceptable. (Acceptissima semper Munera sunt, auctor quæ pretiosa facit.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xvii, l. 71.

<sup>10</sup> That which is desired becomes doubly acceptable if you offer it spontaneously. (Bis est gratum quod opus est, si ultro sit datum.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 54.

<sup>11</sup> He gives a double favor to a poor man who gives quickly. (Inopi beneficium bis dat, qui dat celeriter.)

SENECA. (PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Proverbs of Seneca. No. 235.) Usually quoted, "Bis dat, qui cito dat," "He gives twice who gives quickly."
Bacon quoted it in this form when he took his seat in Chancery, 7 May, 1617. It appears in some form in many of the classics, attributed to various authors. Langius (Polyanth. Noviss., p. 382) credits it to Publius Mimus. Erasmus (Adagia, p. 265) credits it to Seneca.

Who gives at once gives twice. (El que luego Da, da dos veces.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 34.

He gives doubly who gives quickly. (Duplex fit bonitas, simul accessit celeritas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 161.

He giveth twice that gives in a trice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>12</sup> Hamlet: I never gave you aught.

Ophelia: My honour'd lord, you know right well you did;

And, with them, words of so sweet breath composed,

As made the things more rich: their perfume
lost,

Take these again; for to the noble mind,
Rich gives wax poor when givers prove unkind.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 96.

<sup>13</sup> To loyal hearts the value of all gifts
Must vary as the giver's.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1207.

<sup>14</sup> Enhance our gift with words as much as you can. (Munus nostrum ornato verbis, quod poteris.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 214. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

<sup>15</sup> It is not the shilling I give you that counts, but the warmth that it carries with it from my hand.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Essays and Soliloquies,
p. 136.

<sup>16</sup> Behold, I do not give lectures or a little charity,

When I give I give myself.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 40.

V—Gifts: Great and Small

<sup>17</sup> Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee.

New Testament: Acts, iii, 6.

'Twas all he gave, 'twas all he had to give.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Pleasures of Memory. Pt. i,
l. 132.

<sup>18</sup> I give thee sixpence! I'll see thee damned first.
GEORGE CANNING, The Friend of Humanity and the Knife-Grinder.

- 1
Give plenty of what is given to you,
Listen to pity's call;
Don't think the little you give is great,
And the much you get is small.
PHEBE CARY, A Legend of the Northland.
- 2
But covet earnestly the best gifts.
New Testament: 1 Corinthians, xii, 31.
- 3
The great gifts are not got by analysis. . . .
Nature hates calculators.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.
- 4
He that gives me small gifts would have me live.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
A little given seasonably excuses a great gift.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 5
A gift though small is welcome. (Δόσις δ' ὀλίγη τε, φίλη τε.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 208.
- 6
Rare gift! but oh, what gift to fools avails!
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. x, l. 29. (Pope, tr.)
A gift worthy of Apollo. (Munus Apolline dignum.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 216. Referring to a book or poem.
- 7
"Here it is," said Father Phil, "here it is, and no denying it—down in black and white; but if they who give are in black, how much blacker are those who have not given at all?"
SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 28.
- 8
Great gifts are for great men.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.
- 9
Seven hundred pounds and possibilities is good gifts.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 1, l. 66.
- 10
If thou hast abundance, give alms accordingly; if thou hast but a little, be not afraid to give according to that little.
Apocrypha: Tobit, iv, 8.
Give what you have. To some one, it may be better than you dare to think.
LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 30.
- 11
I have found out a gift for my fair;
I have found where the wood-pigeons breed.
(Parta meæ Veneri sunt munera: nam que notavi Ipse locum, aëriæ quo congressere palumbes.)
VERGIL, Eclogues. No. iii, l. 68. (William Shenstone, tr.)
- 12
Give all thou canst: high Heaven rejects the lore

Of nicely-calculated less or more.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, 43.

VI—Gifts: Their Danger

- 13
We must take care to indulge only in such generosity as will help our friends and hurt no one . . . for nothing is generous, if it is not at the same time just. (Nihil est liberale, quod non idem justum.)
CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 43.
- 14
A gift destroyeth the heart.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 7.
- 15
The gifts of a bad man bring no good with them. (Κακοῦ γὰρ ἀνθρώπου δῶρ' ὀνησιὺν οὐκ ἔχει.)
EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 618.
A wicked man's gift hath a touch of its master.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 16
Thou shalt take no gift: for the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous.
Old Testament: Exodus, xxiii, 8.
- 17
The generous man pays for nothing so much as for what is given him.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.
I find nothing so dear as what is given me.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9.
- 18
He is very fond of making things which he doesn't want, and then giving them to people who have no use for them.
ANTHONY HOPE, The Dolly Dialogues. No. 17.
- 19
The prodigal and the fool give what they despise and hate, and this seed produces a crop of ingrates. (Prodigus et stultus donat quæ spernit et odit; Hæc seges ingratos tulit.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 20.
- 20
He who has given this to-day, may, if he pleases, take it away to-morrow. (Qui dedit hoc hodie, cras, si volet, auferet.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 33.
The good that can be given, can be removed. (Dari bonum quod potuit, auferri potest.)
LUCILIUS. (SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 10.)
What can be given can also be taken away. (Quod dari posset, et eripi posse.)
SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, 13.
- 21
"He sent out great gifts indeed." But he sent them on a hook, and is it possible that the fish can love the fisherman? ("Munera magna tamen misit." Sed misit in hamo; Et piscatorem piscis amare potest?)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, ep. 63, l. 5.
Whoever makes great presents, expects great presents in return. (Quisquis magna dedit, voluit sibi magna remitti.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. lix, l. 3.

Take gifts with a sigh: most men give to be paid.
JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

1 I give that you may give. (Do ut des.)
BISMARCK, Maxim.

2 Thy pompous delicacies I contemn,
And count thy specious gifts no gifts but guiles.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. ii, l. 390.

Their offers should not charm us,
Their evil gifts would harm us.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, Goblin Market.

3 All the other gifts appertinent to man, as the malice of this age shapes them, are not worth a gooseberry.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 194.

4 The gifts of a foe are not gifts, and have no value. (Ἐχθρῶν ἄδωρα δῶρα κοῦκ ἐνθήσιμα.)
SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 665. A proverb.

The gifts of an enemy seemed to them much to be feared. (Les dons d'un ennemi leur semblaient trop à craindre.)
VOLTAIRE, Henriade. Ch. 2.

5 The deadly gift of Minerva. (Donum exitiale Minervæ.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 31. Referring to the gift of the wooden horse which led to Troy's downfall. See also under GREECE.

VII—Gifts: Generosity

6 Our generosity should never exceed our means. (Ne benignitas major esset quam facultates.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 14, sec. 44.

Bounty has no bottom. (Largitionem fundum non habere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 15, sec. 55. Quoted as "a common proverb."

7 A hand as liberal as the light of day.
COWPER, Hope, l. 410.

8 It is always so pleasant to be generous, though very vexatious to pay debts.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Gifts.

9 A man being sometimes more generous when he has but a little money than when he has plenty, perhaps through fear of being thought to have but little.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

10 Generosity is the flower of justice.

HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 19 Dec., 1850.

11 I had rather be a beggar and spend my last dollar like a king, than be a king and spend my money like a beggar.

INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

12 What is called liberality is often merely the vanity of giving. (Ce qu'on nomme libéralité n'est le plus souvent que la vanité de donner.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 263.

13 The very name of Liberality sounds Liberty.
(Le nom même de la Libéralité sonne Liberté.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 6.

14 He partly begs
To be desir'd to give. It much would please
him,

That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii,
sc. 13, l. 66.

For his bounty,
There was no winter in 't; and autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act v,
sc. 2, l. 86.

My purse, my person, my extremest means
Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 138.

15 Good-humour and generosity carry the day with the popular heart all the world over.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On Vagabonds.

16 I have always been deeply impressed by an old Jewish proverb which says, "What you give for the cause of charity in health is gold; what you give in sickness is silver;
what you give after death is lead."

NATHAN STRAUS. First paragraph of Will.

VIII—Gifts of the Gods

17 God's gifts put man's best dreams to shame.
E. B. BROWNING, Sonnets from the Portuguese.
No. xxvi.

18 That gift of his, from God descended.
Ah! friend, what gift of man's does not?

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Canto xvi.

19 Gifts come from above in their own peculiar forms. (Die Gaben Kommen von oben herab, in ihren eignen Gestalten.)

GOETHE, Hermann und Dorothea. Canto v,
l. 69.

20 Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning.

New Testament: James, i, 17.

21 How blind men are to Heaven's gifts! (O munera nondum Intellecta deum!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 528.

22 God has given some gifts to the whole human race, from which no one is excluded. (Deus quædam munera universo humano generi dedit, a quibus excluditur nemo.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 28.

1

O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away?

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 23.

2

For whatever a man has, is in reality only a gift. (Denn was ein Mensch auch hat, so sind's am Ende Gaben.)

WIELAND, Oberon. Pt. ii, l. 19.

A gift of that which is not to be given
By all the blended powers of earth and heaven.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 1.

That every gift of noble origin
Is breathed upon by Hope's perpetual breath.

WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. No. 20.

GIRL

4

Oh, you mysterious girls, when you are fifty-two we shall find you out. You must come into the open then.

J. M. BARRIE, The Little White Bird. Ch. 1.

5

Girls are so massive and complete,
The ponderous important feet . . .
These awe me so I half-way miss
The fact that girls are made to kiss.

ROBERT LOUIS BURGESS, Girls.

'Tis true, your budding Miss is very charming,
But shy and awkward at first coming out,
So much alarm'd that she is quite alarming,
All Giggle, Blush—half Pertness, and half Pout, . . .

The Nursery still lisps out in all they utter—
Besides, they always smell of bread and butter.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 39.

7

Let every girl attend to her spinning. (Cada puta hile.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 46.

8

I grudge no expense in your education, but I positively will not keep you a Flapper.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 22 Sept., 1749.

Chesterfield's reference is to Swift (Gulliver's Travels: Voyage to Laputa), who tells how the Laputans were so absent-minded that a "flapper" was necessary to brush their eyelids from time to time, to keep them from falling over precipices, etc.

See the three skirts in the back? That's the Missus and the two squabs. Young one's only a flapper.

HARRY LEON WILSON, Bunker Bean. (1912)

"Flapper" was further popularized by Scott Fitzgerald in 1920.

If there's anything in a beauty nap most o' the flappers I see must suffer from insomnia.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 119.

If a davenport is a sheik's workbench, a rumble seat is a flapper's showcase.

G. E. SAMS. (Pathfinder. No. 1866.)

9

One of those little prating girls,
Of whom fond parents tell such tedious stories.

DRYDEN, The Rival Ladies. Act i, sc. 1.

10

My gal is a high born lady,
She's black but none too shady,
Feather'd like a peacock, just as gay,
She is not colored, she was born that way.

BARNEY FAGAN, My Gal Is a High Born Lady.

11

They are not young ladies, they are young persons.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i.

12

Girls like to be played with, and rumpled a little, too, sometimes.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act v, l. 1.

But lest, by frail desires misled,
The girls forbidden paths should tread,
Of ignorance raised the safe high wall;
We sink ha-has, and show them all.
Thus we at once solicit sense,
And charge them not to break the fence.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 274.

Defiant love sonnets demanding nude joys lure girls to be naughty
and live like the boys.

ALFRED KREYMBORG, E.S.V.M.—Authors in Epigram.

You may tempt the upper classes
With your villainous demi-tasses,
But Heaven will protect the working-girl!

EDGAR SMITH, Heaven Will Protect the Working-Girl. Sung with great success by Marie Dressler in Tillie's Nightmare, 1909.

13

When she was a girl (forty summers ago)
Aunt Tabitha tells me they never did so.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table: Aunt Tabitha.

14

Wretched, un-idea'd girls.

15

This all girls learn before their alphabet.
(Hoc discunt omnes ante alpha et beta puellæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 209. Referring to love of money.

16

There was a little girl
Who had a little curl

Right in the middle of her forehead,
When she was good

She was very, very good,

But when she was bad she was horrid.

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW. According to Longfellow's son, this little chant was composed while the poet was walking up and down his garden, carrying his second daughter in his arms. (See also BLANCHE R. T. MACHETTA, Home Life of Longfellow.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Remark, to his wife, as they stood beside the coffin of their only daughter.

<sup>2</sup> Your Rome has as many girls as the sky has stars. (Quot cœlum stellas, tot habet tua Roma puellas.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 59.

<sup>3</sup> Dear to the heart of girls is their own beauty. (Virginibus cordi grataque forma sua est.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 32.

<sup>4</sup> Men seldom make passes

At girls who wear glasses.

DOROTHY PARKER, News Item.

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 521. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

<sup>6</sup> We yet call a wench that skippeth or leapeth like a boy, a tomboy.

RICHARD ROWLANDS (alias VERSTEGEN), Antiquities Concerning the English Nation, p. 234. (1605)

<sup>7</sup> You bring up your girls as if they were meant for sideboard ornaments; and then complain of their frivolity.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Queen's Gardens. Sec. 80.

<sup>8</sup> But the full sum of me . . .
Is an unlesson'd girl, unschool'd, unpractis'd:
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learn; happier than this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learn.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 159.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis a credit to any good girl to be neat,
But quite a disgrace to be fine.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Hymns for Sunday Schools.

For a good-natured girl is loved best in the main,
If her dress is but decent, though ever so plain.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, Finery.

<sup>10</sup> Queen rose of the rosebud garden of girls.

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 22, st. 9.

<sup>11</sup> Sweet girl-graduates in their golden hair.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 142.

<sup>12</sup> It is no sin to look at a nice girl.

LEO TOLSTOY, The Cossacks. Ch. 12.

Thir breeks o' mine, my only pair,
That ance were plush o' guid blue hair,
I wad hae gi'en them off my hurdies,
For ae blink o' the bonnie burdies!

BURNS, Tam o' Shanter.

A sight to make an old man young.

TENNYSON, The Gardener's Daughter, l. 140.

<sup>13</sup> And after him a finikin lass,
Did shine like glistering gold.

UNKNOWN, Robin Hood and Allen-a-Dale.

<sup>14</sup> What man can calculate on what a girl will say or do.

UNKNOWN. Said of Fortunata, a Rajput Princess, 12th c. (History's Most Famous Words.)

GLADSTONE, W. E.

<sup>15</sup> An almost spectral kind of phantasm of a man—nothing in him but forms and ceremonies and outside wrappings.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter, 23 March, 1873.

<sup>16</sup> A sophisticated rhetorician, inebriated with the exuberance of his own verbosity, and gifted with an egotistical imagination that can at all times command an interminable and inconsistent series of arguments to malign an opponent and glorify himself.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 27 July, 1878.

He has not a single redeeming defect.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI. Referring to Gladstone.

<sup>17</sup> He has one gift most dangerous to a speculator, a vast command of a kind of language, grave and majestic, but of vague and uncertain import.

MACAULAY, Essays: Gladstone on Church and State.

The rising hope of those stern and unbending Tories.

MACAULAY, Gladstone on Church and State.

<sup>18</sup> The faculty of concealing his thoughts in words, of separating conviction from argument, was not the least striking of the great statesman's talents.

AGNES REPPLIER. In Life.

GLORY

See also Fame, Renown

I—Glory: Definitions

<sup>19</sup> True glory takes deep root and spreads its branches wide; but all pretences soon fall to the ground like fragile flowers, and nothing counterfeit can be lasting. (Vera gloria radices agit atque etiam propagatur, ficta omnia celeriter tamquam flosculi decidunt, nec simulatum potest quicquam esse diuturnum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 12, sec. 43.

1
Glory follows virtue as if it were its shadow.
(Gloria virtutem tanquam umbra sequitur.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 45, sec. 110.

Of all the rewards of virtue, if we are to take any account of rewards, the most splendid is glory; for it is glory alone that can offer us the memory of posterity as a consolation for the shortness of life, so that, though absent, we are present, though dead, we live; it is by the ladder of glory only that mere men appear to rise to the heavens.

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 35, sec. 97.

Glory is never where virtue is not. (La gloire n'est jamais où la vertu n'est pas.)

LE FRANC, Didon.

He that would have his virtue published, is not the servant of virtue, but glory.

BEN JONSON, Explorata.

Glory, built
On selfish principles, is shame and guilt.
COWPER, Table Talk, l. 1.

The chequered spectacle of so much glory and so much shame.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mackintosh's History of the Revolution.

On Butler who can think without just rage,
The glory and the scandal of the age.

JOHN OLDHAM, Satire Against Poetry.

3
He will have true glory who despises glory.
(Gloriam qui spreverit, veram habet.)

FABIUS MAXIMUS. (LIVY, History. Bk. xxii, 39.)

4
True glory dwells where glorious deeds are done,

Where great men rise whose names athwart the dusk

Of misty centuries gleam like the sun!

WILLIAM DUDLEY FOULKE, The City's Crown.

5
Popular glory is a perfect coquette; her lovers must toil, feel every inquietude, indulge every caprice, and perhaps at last be jilted into the bargain. True glory, on the other hand, resembles a woman of sense; her admirers must play no tricks. They feel no great anxiety, for they are sure in the end of being rewarded in proportion to their merit.

GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 6.

6
No flowery road leads to glory. (Aucun chemin de fleurs ne conduit à la gloire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 14.

I climb a difficult road, but glory gives me strength. (Magnum iter adscendo, sed dat mihi gloria vires.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iv, eleg. 10, l. 3.

Great is the glory, for the strife is hard!

WORDSWORTH, To B. R. Haydon, l. 14.

7
The glory of great men should always be measured by the means which they have used to acquire it. (La gloire des grands hommes se doit toujours mesurer aux moyens dont ils se sont servis pour l'acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 157.

8
Glory is the true and honorable recompense of gallant actions.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 12.

9
Military glory—the attractive rainbow that rises in showers of blood.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, House of Representatives. (GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 53.)

10
Glory the reward
That sole excites to high attempts the flame
Of most erected spirits.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 25.

11
Glory is a mighty spur. (Immensum gloria calcar habet.)

OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. ii, l. 36.

Glory and honour serve as goads and spurs to virtue.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. vi, ch. 3.

12
The nearest way to glory—a short-cut, as it were,—is to strive to be what you wish to be thought to be. (Viam ad gloriam proximam et quasi compendiarium dicebat esse, si quis id ageret, ut, qualis haberi vellet, talis esset.)

SOCRATES. (CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, 12, 43.)

13
The glory of good men is in their conscience and not in the mouths of men.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

II—Glory: Apothegms

14
So may a glory from defect arise.

ROBERT BROWNING, Deaf and Dumb.

15
The glory dies not, and the grief is past.

SIR SAMUEL BRYDGES, On the Death of Scott.

16
Who track the steps of Glory to the grave.

BYRON, Monody on the Death of Sheridan.

Their glory illumines the gloom of their grave.

BYRON, To the Rev. J. T. Becher.

The paths of glory lead but to the grave.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy in a Country Churchyard. St. 9.

17
Go then, Patroclus, where thy glory calls.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act iv, sc. 1.

Go where glory waits thee;

But, while fame elates thee,

O, still remember me!

THOMAS MOORE, Go Where Glory Waits Thee.

This goin' ware glory waits ye haint one agreeable featur.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 2.

<sup>1</sup> Weep for the voiceless, who have known
The cross without the crown of glory!
O. W. HOLMES, The Voiceless.

<sup>2</sup> The first in glory, as the first in place.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 441. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>3</sup> To please great men is not the lowest glory.
(Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 35.

<sup>4</sup> Sound, sound the clarion, fill the fife,
To all the sensual world proclaim
One crowded hour of glorious life
Is worth an age without a name.

MAJOR THOMAS OSBERT MORDAUNT, A Poem, Written During the Last German War. First published in The Bee, Edinburgh, 12 Oct., 1791. Used by Sir Walter Scott at the head of ch. 13, bk. ii, of Old Mortality. The "Last German War" referred to in the title of the poem was the Seven Years' War, 1756-1763, between Austria and Prussia. Major Mordaunt was with the 10th Dragoons, which was in Germany at the close of the war. (See Literary Digest, 11 Sept., 1920, p. 38.)

<sup>5</sup> When the moon shone, we did not see the candle;

So doth the greater glory dim the less.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v, sc. 1, l. 92. See also under CANDLE.

III—Glory: The Thirst for Glory

<sup>6</sup> Glory pursue, and generous shame,
Th' unconquerable mind, and freedom's holy flame.

THOMAS GRAY, The Progress of Poesy, l. 64.

<sup>7</sup> Chase brave employments with a naked sword Throughout the world. Fool not, for all may have,

If they dare try, a glorious life, or grave.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 15.

<sup>8</sup> Glory drags all men captive at the wheel of her glittering car. (Fulgente trahit constrictos Gloria curru.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 6, l. 23.

<sup>9</sup> When I rush on, sure none will dare to stay;
'Tis Beauty calls and Glory shows the way.
NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens. Act iv, sc.
2. Usually quoted, "Glory leads the way," which is the text of the stage editions of the play.

<sup>10</sup> Our aim is glory, and to leave our names
To aftertime.

MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>11</sup> Yet years, and to ripe years judgment mature,

Quench not the thirst of glory, but augment.
MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 37.

<sup>12</sup> Higher, higher will we climb
Up the mount of glory,
That our names may live through time
In our country's story.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Aspirations of Youth.

<sup>13</sup> Here is her witness: this, her perfect son,
This delicate and proud New England soul
Who leads despised men, with just-unshackled feet,
Up the large ways where death and glory
meet.

WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, An Ode in Time of Hesitation.

<sup>14</sup> How shall we rank thee upon Glory's page?
Thou more than soldier and just less than sage!

THOMAS MOORE, To Thomas Hume, Esq.

<sup>15</sup> Ye know right well, how meek soe'er he seem,
No keener hunter after glory breathes.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 154.

<sup>16</sup> Slight is the field of toil, but not slight the glory. (In tenui labor; at tenuis non gloria.)
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 6.

<sup>17</sup> Of some for glory such the boundless rage,
That they're the blackest scandal of their age.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 65.

IV—Glory: Its Emptiness

<sup>18</sup> Glory comes late to our ashes. (Cineri gloria sera venit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 25, last line.

Those glories come too late
That on our ashes wait.

A translation of Martial's epigram used on the title-page of the posthumous poems of Richard Lovelace, 1659.

Seldom comes Glory till a man be dead.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 624.

<sup>19</sup> If glory comes after death, I am in no hurry. (Si post fata venit gloria non propero.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 10, l. 12.

<sup>20</sup> Who pants for glory finds but short repose:
A breath revives him, or a breath o'erthrows.
POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii,
epis. 2, l. 300.

A breath can make them, as a breath has made.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 54.

<sup>21</sup> Alas! how difficult it is to retain glory! (Heu, quam difficilis gloriae custodia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 233.

<sup>22</sup> Glory is like a circle in the water,
Which never ceaseth to enlarge itself

Till by broad spreading it disperse to nought.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 2, l. 133.

I have ventured,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
This many summers in a sea of glory,
But far beyond my depth.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 358.
Like madness is the glory of this life.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 139.

Who would be so mock'd with glory?
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 33.

Avoid shame, but do not seek glory; nothing
so expensive as glory.
SYDNEY SMITH. (LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 4.)

How swiftly passes away the glory of the world! (O quam cito transit gloria mundi.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 3.

So passes away the glory of the world. (Sic transit gloria mundi.)

The sentence used during the ceremony of enthroning a new Pope at the moment that flax is burned to indicate the transitoriness of earthly grandeur. Perhaps derived from the phrase by Thomas à Kempis. A similar rite is said to have been used in the triumphal processions of the Roman Republic.
(ZONARA, Annales. Basle, 1553.)

Short is the glory that is given and taken by men; and sorrow followeth ever the glory of the world.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. ii, ch. 6.

We rise in glory as we sink in pride.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 508.

GLOW-WORM

Tasteful illumination of the night,
Bright scattered, twinkling star of spangled
earth.

JOHN CLARE, To the Glowworm.

While many a glowworm in the shade
Lights up her love torch.
COLERIDGE, The Nightingale.

Glow-worms on the ground are moving,
As if in the torch-dance circling.
HEINE, Donna Clara. St. 17.

Her eyes the glow-worm lend thee.
ROBERT HERRICK, The Night-Piece, to Julia.

Ye living lamps, by whose dear light
The nightingale does sit so late;
And studying all the summer night,

Her matchless songs does meditate.
ANDREW MARVELL, The Mower to the Glow-worm.

Here's a health to the glow-worm, Death's sober lamplighter.

OWEN MEREDITH, Au Café.

When evening closes Nature's eye,
The glow-worm lights her little spark
To captivate her favourite fly
And tempt the rover through the dark.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Glow-worm.

Shine, little glow-worm, glimmer.
LILLA CAYLEY ROBINSON, The Glow-Worm.
The great song success of *The Girl Behind
the Counter.* (1905)

The glow-worm shows the matin to be near,
And 'gins to pale his uneffectual fire.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 5, l. 89.

Twenty glow-worms shall our lanterns be,
To guide our measure round about the tree.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act v, sc. 5, l. 82.

Like a glow-worm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light.
SHAKESPEARE, Pericles. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 43.

Among the crooked lanes, on every hedge,
The glow-worm lights his gem; and, through the dark,
A moving radiance twinkles.

THOMSON, The Seasons: Summer. l. 1682.

There the glow-worms hang their lamps.
WORDSWORTH, The Primrose of the Rock.

I—God: Definitions

God's wisdom and God's goodness!—Ay, but
fools

Mis-define these till God knows them no
more.

Wisdom and goodness, they are God!—what schools

Have yet so much as heard this simpler lore?
This no Saint preaches, and this no Church
rules:

'Tis in the desert, now and heretofore.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Divinity. St. 3.

God is the poet, men are but the actors.
HONORÉ DE BALZAC, Christian Socrates.

God Himself is the best Poet,
And the Real is his song.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 36.

God is the perfect poet,
Who in his person acts his own creations.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. ii, ad fin.

God on His throne is eldest of poets:
Unto His measures moveth the Whole.

WILLIAM WATSON, England My Mother. Pt. ii.

1 When we say God, we seem to denote a substance, but it is a substance that is supersubstantial. (Nam cum dicimus "deus," substantiam quidem significare videmur, sed eam quæ sit ultra substantiam.)

BOETHIUS, De Trinitate. Ch. 4, sec. 15.

The gods possess the form of man; yet their form is not corporeal, but only resembles bodily substance. (Homines esse specie deos contitendum est; nec tamen ea species corpus est, sed quasi corpus.)

GAIUS VELLEIUS, expounding the Epicurean doctrine. (CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 49.)

"God has not body, but a semblance of body": what "a semblance of body" may mean, in the case of God, I cannot understand; nor can you either, Velleius, only you won't admit it. (Non corpus esse in deo sed quasi corpus: . . . in deo quid sit quasi corpus intellegere non possum. Ne tu quidem, Vellei, sed non vis fateri.)

COTTA, refuting Velleius. (CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 24, sec. 68.)

2 God is not one thing because He is, and another thing because He is just; with Him to be just and to be God are one and the same. (Neque enim aliud est quod est, aliud est quod justus est, sed idem est esse deo quod justo.)

BOETHIUS, De Trinitate. Ch. 4, sec. 19.

3 No worldly thing
Can a continuance have
Unless love back again it bring
Unto the cause which first the essence gave.
(Quia non aliter durare queant,
Nisi converso rursus amore
Refluant causæ quæ dedit esse.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. iv, ch. 6, l. 46.

From thee, great God, we spring, to thee we tend,
Path, motive, guide, original, and end.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 7. Paraphrasing Boethius.

God shall be my hope,
My stay, my guide and lantern to my feet.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 24.

4 A picket frozen on duty—
A mother starved for her brood—
Socrates drinking the hemlock,
And Jesus on the rood;
And millions who, humble and nameless,
The straight, hard pathway trod—
Some call it Consecration,
And others call it God.

W. H. CARRUTH, Evolution.

5 God is to me that creative Force, behind and in the universe, who manifests Himself as energy, as life, as order, as beauty, as thought, as conscience, as love.

HENRY SLOANE COFFIN. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 125.)

6 God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite, Mind, Spirit, Soul, Life, Truth, Love.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 465.

Every law of matter or the body, supposed to govern man, is rendered null and void by the law of Life, God.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 380.

7 God is not a cosmic bell-boy for whom we can press a button to get things.

HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK, Prayer.

8 Who believes that equal grace
God extends in every place,

Little difference he scans

'Twixt a rabbit's God and man's.

BRET HARTE, Battle Bunny: Envoi.

9 O thou, whose certain eye foresees
The fix'd event of fate's remote decrees.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 627. (Pope, tr.)

10 The God of many men is little more than their court of appeal against the damnatory judgment passed on their failures by the opinion of the world.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 138.

11 God is a Spirit: and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth.

New Testament: John, iv, 24.

There are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost: and these three are one.

New Testament: I John, v, 7.

12 God, to be God, must transcend what is. He must be the maker of what ought to be.

RUFUS M. JONES. (NEWTON, My Idea of God, p. 63.)

13 One sole God; One sole ruler,—his Law;
One sole interpreter of that law—Humanity.

MAZZINI, Young Europe: General Principles.

14 God is a geometrician. (ὁ Θεὸς γεωμετρῆς.)

PLATO. (PLUTARCH, Symposium.) Quoted as a traditional saying of Plato, but not found in his works.

God is like a skillful geometrician.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 16.

Nature geometrized and observeth order in all things.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Garden of Cyrus. Ch. 3.

God acts the part of a Geometrician. . . . His government of the world is no less exact than His creation of it.

JOHN NORRIS, Practical Discourses. Vol. ii, p. 228. Paraphrasing Plato.

By a carpenter mankind was created and made, and by a carpenter meet it was that man should be repaired.

ERASMUS, Paraphrase of St. Mark.

1 God is truth and light his shadow.

PLATO. Not Plato's exact words, but the essence of Secs. 506–510 of The Republic.

God is light

And never but in unapproached light Dwelt from eternity.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 3.

The Lord is my light and my salvation.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxvii, 1. (Dominus illuminatio mea.—Vulgate.)

God is a light that is never darkened; an unwearied life that cannot die; a fountain always flowing; a garden of life; a seminary of wisdom; a radical beginning of all goodness.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. i.

2 God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Old Testament: Psalms, xli, 1.

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.

Old Testament: Psalms, xci, 2.

A mighty fortress is our God,

A bulwark never failing.

(Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott Ein gute Wehr und Waffen.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Ein Feste Burg. (Hedge, tr.)

God is our fortress, in whose conquering name

Let us resolve to scale their flinty bulwarks.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 26.

3 I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last.

New Testament: Revelation, xxii, 13.

God is alpha and omega in the great world: endeavour to make Him so in the little world; make Him thy evening epilogue and thy morning prologue . . . so shall thy rest be peaceful, thy labours prosperous, thy life pious, and thy death glorious.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchiridion. Cent. ii, No. 28.

4 God is an unutterable sigh, planted in the depths of the soul. (Gott ist ein unaussprechlicher Seufzer, im Grunde der Seele gelegen.)

JEAN PAUL RICHTER.

God is an unutterable Sigh in the Human Heart, said the old German mystic. And therewith said the last word.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. i, p. 190.

5 Tell them, I AM, Jehovah said

To Moses; while earth heard in dread,

And, smitten to the heart,

At once above, beneath, around,
All Nature, without voice or sound,
Replied, O LORD THOU ART.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 574.

From God derived, to God by nature joined,
We act the dictates of His mighty mind;
And tho' the priests are mute, and temples still,
God never wants a voice to speak His will.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 574.

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode xiii, l. 104.

The mind is hopeful; success is in God's hands.
(Sperat quidem animus: quo evenat dis in manu.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 144. (Act i, sc. 2.) Usually translated, "Man proposes, but God disposes."

Where God and hard fortune call us, let us follow. (Quo Deus, et quo dura vocat fortuna sequamur.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 677.

IV—God Helps Them Who Help Themselves

<sup>10</sup> God loves to help him who strives to help himself. (Φιλεῖ δὲ τῷ κάμνοντι συσπεύδειν θεός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragment. Frag. 223.

To the man who himself strives earnestly, God also lends a helping hand. (Ἄλλ' ὅταν σπεύδῃ τις αὐτός, χῶ θεὸς συνάπτεται.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Persæ, l. 742.

<sup>11</sup> God helps everyone with what is his own. (Ayude Dios con le suyo á cada uno.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 26.

<sup>12</sup> Try first thyself, and after call in God;
For to the worker God himself lends aid.

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus. Frag. 435.

<sup>13</sup> Help yourself and Heaven will help you.
(Aide toi, le ciel t'aidera.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 18.

<sup>14</sup> To complete the design of the Gods we have to put a stitch here and there.

GEORGE MOORE, Aphrodite in Aulis, p. 28.

<sup>15</sup> Heaven ne'er helps the men who will not act.
SOPHOCLES, Fragment. No. 288.

<sup>16</sup> "Let God do it all," someone will say; but if man folds his arms, God will go to sleep.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 286.

A proverb in all languages: Spanish, "Quien se muda, Dios le ayuda"; French, "À qui se lève matin, Dieu aide et prête sa main." An early use in English, ALGERNON SIDNEY, Discourse Concerning Government. (1698)

<sup>18</sup> The whole trouble is that we won't let God help us.

GEORGE MACDONALD, The Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 27.

V—God: His Invention

<sup>19</sup> He was a wise man who invented God. (Σοφὸς ἦν τις, ὃς τὸ θεῖον εἰσηγήσατο.)

PLATO, Sisyphus. This dialogue is included in editions of Plato, but is generally thought to be spurious. It has been attributed to Æschines and Euripides.

The being of God is so comfortable, so convenient, so necessary to the felicity of Mankind, that, (as Tully admirably says) Dii immortales ad usum hominum fabricati pene videantur, if God were not a necessary being of himself, he might almost seem to be made on purpose for the use and benefit of men.

ARCHBISHOP JOHN TILLOTSON, Works. Vol. i, p. 696. Sermon 93.

<sup>1</sup> If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him. (Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer.)

VOLTAIRE, Épître à l'Auteur du Livre des Trois Imposteurs. See Œuvres Complètes. Vol. i, p. 1076.

Consulte Zoroastre, et Minos et Solon,
Et le grand Socrate, et le grand Ciceron,
Ils ont adoré tous un maître, un juge, un père.
Ce système sublime à l'homme est nécessaire,
C'est le sacré lien de la société,
Le premier fondement de la sainte équité,
Le frein au scelerat, l'espérance du juste,
Si les cieus dépouillés de leur empreinte auguste
Pouvait cesser jamais de le manifester,
Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer.

VOLTAIRE, Épître à l'Auteur du Livre des Trois Imposteurs. Voltaire was very proud of this last line. "Though I am seldom satisfied with my lines," he wrote to Frederick the Great, "I must confess that I feel for this one the tenderness of a father." He perhaps did not know that the idea had been anticipated by Plato or Euripides, in Sisyphus, and by Archbishop Tillotson quoting from Cicero. Tillotson died in 1694, the year of Voltaire's birth.

<sup>2</sup> We had needs invent heaven if had not been revealed to us.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives.

VI—God and the Watchmaker

<sup>3</sup> In all the parts of Nature's spacious sphere
Of art ten thousand miracles appear;
And will you not the Author's skill adore
Because you think He might discover more?
You own a watch, the invention of the mind,
Though for a single motion 'tis designed,
As well as that which is with greater thought,
With various springs, for various motions wrought.

SIR RICHARD BLACKMORE, The Creation. Bk. iii. (1712)

<sup>4</sup> Suppose I had found a watch upon the ground. . . . The mechanism being observed, . . . the inference we think is inevitable that the watch must have a maker; that there must have existed, at some time, and at some place or other, an artificer or artificers, who formed it for the purpose which we find it actually to answer; who comprehended its construction, and designed its use.

WILLIAM PALEY, Natural Theology. Ch. i. Probably derived from Nieuwentyt's The Religious Philosopher, translated into English from the Dutch in 1718. Paley's book was published in 1784. Hallam (Literature of Europe, ii, 385) traces the idea back to Cicero, De Natura Deorum, and it was used by Herbert of Cherbury (De Religione Gentilium) and by Sir Matthew Hale (Primitive Origination of Mankind).

<sup>5</sup> Paley's simile of the watch . . . must be replaced by the simile of the flower. The universe is not a machine but an organism with an indwelling principle of life. It was not made, but it has grown.

JOHN FISKE. (NEWTON, My Idea of God.)

<sup>6</sup> The reasoning by which Socrates in Xenophon's hearing confuted the little atheist Aristodemus, is exactly the reasoning of Paley's Natural Theology. Socrates makes precisely the same use of the statues of Polycletus and the pictures of Zeuxis which Paley makes of the watch.

MACAULAY, Essays: Von Ranke.

<sup>7</sup> The world embarrasses me, and I cannot think
That this watch exists and has no Watch-maker.

(Le monde m'embarrasse, et je ne puis pas songer Que cette horloge existe et n'a pas d'Horloger.)

VOLTAIRE, Epigram.

VII—God: His Mercy

<sup>8</sup> When all thy mercies, O my God,
My rising soul surveys,
Transported with the view I'm lost,
In wonder, love, and praise.

ADDISON, Hymn: With All Thy Mercies.

<sup>9</sup> The mercy of God [may be found] between the bridge and the stream. (Misericordia Domine inter pontem et fontem.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Of a man falling into a river.

My friend, judge not me,
Thou seest I judge not thee.
Betwixt the stirrup and the ground
Mercy I asked, mercy I found.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain, p. 392. An epitaph for a man falling from his horse and breaking his neck. Quoted as "made by a good friend of the author."

Between the stirrup and the ground,
I mercy asked, I mercy found.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, misquoting Camden. (Boswell, Life, 28 April, 1783.)

<sup>10</sup> God never made mouth but he made meat.
THOMAS BECON, Catechism, 602. (c. 1560)
Quoted as a proverb "no less true than common."

Be sure that God
Ne'er dooms to waste the strength he deigns impart.

ROBERT BROWNING, Paracelsus. Pt. 1.

God who gives the wound gives the salve.
(Dios que da la llaga da la medicina.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19.

To the bird's young ones he gives food. (Aux petits des oiseaux il donne la pâture.)

CORNEILLE, Athalie. Gozlan added a second line: "Et sa bonté s'arrête qu'à la littérature," And His bounty stops only with men-of-letters.

1 Oft have I heard, and now believe it true,
Whom man delights in, God delights in too.

PONS CAPDUELL. (EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Poetry and Imagination.)

2 God tempers the cold to the shorn lamb.
(Dieu mesure le froid à la brébis tondue.)

HENRI ESTIENNE, Prémices, p. 47. (1594)
Quoted from an older collection.

To a close shorn sheep God gives wind to measure.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

She had travelled all over Lombardy without money, and through the flinty roads of Savoy without shoes: how she had borne it, she could not tell; but "God tempers the wind," said Maria,
"to the shorn lamb." "Shorn, indeed! and to the quick," said I.

STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: Maria.

God sends men cold according to their cloth; viz.
afflictions according to their faith.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

God moderates all at His pleasure. (Dieu mo-dère tout à son plaisir.)

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. ii.

3 The greatest attribute of heaven is mercy;
And 'tis the crown of justice, and the glory,
Where it may kill with right, to save with pity.

JOHN FLETCHER, Lover's Progress. Act iii, sc. 3.

Mercy's indeed the attribute of heaven.

THOMAS OTWAY, Windsor Castle.

4 Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.
New Testament: Hebrews, xii, 6.

Whom the Lord loveth he correcteth.
Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 12.

Heaven is not always angry when he strikes,
But most chastises those whom most he likes.

JOHN POMFRET, Verses to a Friend Under Affliction, l. 89.

5 God strikes not with both hands, for to the sea He made havens, and to rivers fords.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

God strikes with his finger, and not with all his arm.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

6 God gives his wrath by weight, and without weight his mercy.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

7 God hath two wings, which He doth ever move,

The one is Mercy, and the next is Love:

Under the first the Sinners ever trust;

And with the last he still directs the Just.

ROBERT HERRICK, Mercy and Love.

8 And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

New Testament: Luke, xviii, 13.

Have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

Book of Common Prayer: Litany.

For heathen heart that puts her trust

In reeking tube and iron shard,

All valiant dust that builds on dust,

And guarding, calls not Thee to guard,

For frantic boast and foolish word—

Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord!

KIPLING, Recessional.

A sentinel angel sitting high in glory
Heard this shrill wail ring out from Purgatory:
"Have mercy, mighty angel, hear my story!"

JOHN HAY, A Woman's Love.

9 Though God have iron hands which when they strike pay home, yet hath he leaden feet which are as slow to overtake a sinner.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 172. (1579)

God comes with leaden feet, but strikes with iron hands.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 11. (1670)

10 Praise be to Allah, the Lord of creation,
The merciful, the compassionate

Ruler of the Day of Judgment

Help us, lead us in the path.

MAHOMET, Sura, i.

11 Whoever falls from God's right hand
Is caught into his left.

EDWIN MARKHAM, The Divine Strategy.

12 The corn that makes the holy bread
By which the soul of man is fed,

The holy bread, the food unpriced,

Thy everlasting mercy, Christ.

MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 88.

13 Our father which art in heaven.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 9. (Pater noster, qui es in cœlis.—Vulgate.)

For in him we live, and move, and have our being; as certain also of your own poets have said,
For we are also his offspring.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 28.

For we also are his offspring.

ARATUS, Phænomena.

<sup>1</sup> The mercy of the Lord is from everlasting to everlasting upon them that fear Him.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 17.

Who crowneth thee with lovingkindness and tender mercies.

Old Testament: Psalms, ciii, 4.

Marvelous mercies and infinite love.

SWINBURNE, Les Noyades.

<sup>2</sup> Pardon, not wrath, is God's best attribute.

BAYARD TAYLOR, *The Temptation of Hassan
Ben Khaled*. St. 11.

<sup>3</sup> Forgive me if, midst all Thy works
No hint I see of damning;

And think there's faith among the Turks,
And hope for e'en the Brahmin.

SAMUEL BOYSE, The Deity.

14 O Rock of Israel, Rock of Salvation, Rock struck and cleft for me, let those two streams of blood and water which once gushed out of thy side . . . bring down with them salvation and holiness into my soul.

DANIEL BREVINT, Works, p. 17. (1679)

These waters are the Well of Life, and lo! The Rock of Ages there, from whence they flow.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. ii, canto iii, st. 39.

Rock of Ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.

AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE TOPLADY, Rock of Ages. "Rock of Ages" is a rendering of the Hebrew in Isaiah xxvi, 4, which in the accepted version is translated as "everlasting strength."

15 And I smiled to think God's greatness flowed around our incompleteness,— Round our restlessness, His rest.

E. B. BROWNING, Rhyme of the Duchess May. Conclusion.

16 Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God.

New Testament: I Corinthians, x, 31.

17 O majesty unspeakable and dread!

Wert thou less mighty than Thou art,
Thou wert, O Lord, too great for our belief,
Too little for our heart.

FREDERICK WILLIAM FABER, Greatness of God.

<sup>1</sup> Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty!
Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee;

Holy, Holy, Holy! Merciful and Mighty!
God in Three Persons, blessed Trinity!
REGINALD HEBER, Holy, Holy, Holy.

<sup>2</sup> Sure, Lord, there is enough in thee to dry Oceans of ink; for as the deluge did
Cover the earth, so doth thy majesty.
Each cloud distils thy praise, and doth forbid
Poets to turn it to another use.

GEORGE HERBERT. (IZAACK WALTON, Life, p. 325.)

<sup>3</sup> Lord of the night unfading
From day to reborn day;
God of the worlds brooding
This planet's nightly way;
Master of hope, and builder
Of life's immortal span,
Now, when the days bewilder,
Thunder again to man.

LEIGH MITCHELL HODGES, Processional 1933.

<sup>4</sup> Spontaneously to God should tend the soul
Like the magnetic needle to the Pole.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson. See also

<sup>5</sup> Far better in its place the lowliest bird
Should sing aright to Him the lowliest song,
Than that a seraph strayed should take the word
And sing His glory wrong.

JEAN INGELow, Honours. Pt. ii.

<sup>6</sup> Trust ye in the Lord for ever: for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength.

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxvi, 4.

In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxi, 1. (In te, Domine, speravi.—Vulgate.)

Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him.
Old Testament: Job, xiii, 15.

Courage, brother! do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble;
Trust in God, and do the Right.

NORMAN MACLEOD, Trust in God.

Passive to His Holy will,
Trust I in my Master still,
Even though He slay me.

WHITTIER, Barclay of Ury. St. 7.

<sup>7</sup> Praise God, from whom all blessings flow;
Praise Him, all creatures here below;
Praise Him above, ye heavenly host:

Praise Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

THOMAS KEN, Morning and Evening Hymn.

<sup>8</sup> All but God is changing day by day.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy.

Let nothing disturb thee,
Let nothing affright thee,
All things are passing,
God changeth never.

LONGFELLOW, Santa Teresa's Bookmark. (After Santa Teresa de Avila.)

Darkness is strong, and so is Sin,
But surely God endures forever!

J. R. LOWELL, Villa Franca. Conclusion.

All things change, creeds and philosophies and outward systems—but God remains.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. iv, ch. 26.

<sup>9</sup> And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

New Testament: Luke, ii, 13, 14.

<sup>10</sup> Abide with me: fast falls the even-tide;
The darkness deepens: Lord, with me abide:
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me!

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, Abide with Me.

I fear no foe with Thee at hand to bless;
Ills have no weight, and tears no bitterness.

HENRY FRANCIS LYTE, Abide with Me.

<sup>11</sup> God doth not need
Either man's work or his own gifts; who best Bear his mild yoke, they serve him best; his

Is kingly. Thousands at his bidding speed
And post o'er land and ocean without rest:
They also serve who only stand and wait.

MILTON, On His Blindness.

God for His service needeth not proud work of human skill;
They please Him best who labour most to do in peace His will.

WORDSWORTH, The Poet's Dream, l. 65.

That we devote ourselves to God, is seen

Just are the ways of God,
And justifiable to men.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 293.

Laugh where we must, be candid where we can,
But vindicate the ways of God to man.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 15.

1 Steal from the throng to haunts untrod,
And commune there alone with God.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Night. St. 8.

2 Trumpeter sound for the splendour of God!
ALFRED NOYES, Trumpet Call.

3 Father of all! in ev'ry age,
In ev'ry clime, ador'd
By saint, by savage, and by sage,
Jehovah, Jove, or Lord!
POPE, Universal Prayer.

If I am right, thy grace impart,
Still in the right to stay;
If I am wrong, O teach my heart
To find that better way!
POPE, Universal Prayer.

4 "A still small voice" comes through the wild,
Like a father consoling his fretful child,
Which banishes bitterness, wrath, and fear,
Saying—Man is distant, but God is near!
THOMAS PRINGLE, Afar in the Desert.

But his little daughter whispered,
As she took his icy hand,
"Isn't God upon the ocean,
Just the same as on the land?"
JAMES T. FIELDS, The Captain's Daughter.

5 I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxiv, 10.

I would rather walk with God in the dark than go alone in the light.

MARY GARDINER BRAINARD, Not Knowing.

6 The Lord reigneth; let the earth rejoice.
Old Testament: Psalms, xcvi, 1.

Without Thy presence, wealth are bags of cares;
Wisdom, but folly; joy, disquiet, sadness:
Friendship is treason, and delights are snares;
Pleasure's but pain, and mirth but pleasing madness.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. v, emb. 6.

7 Give ear, my children, to my words,
Whom God hath dearly bought,
Lay up his laws within your heart,
And print them in your thought.

JOHN ROGERS, Advice to His Children, a few days before his martyrdom. (From The New England Primer.)

8 He who has known God reverences him.
(Deum colit qui novit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 48.

God is not to be worshipped with sacrifices and blood, for what pleasure can he have in the slaughter of the innocent? but with a pure mind, a good and honest purpose. Temples are not to be built for him with stones piled on high, but he is to be consecrated in one's own breast.

SENECA, Fragments. No. 204.

9 Come ill or well, the cross, the crown,
The rainbow or the thunder,
I fling my soul and body down

R. L. STEVENSON, Youth and Love. No. 2.

10 Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—
Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet.

TENNYSON, The Higher Pantheism, l. 11.

11 I fled Him, down the nights and down the days;
I fled Him, down the arches of the years;
I fled Him, down the labyrinthine ways
Of my own mind; and in the midst of tears

I hid from Him, and under running laughter.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

Still with unhurrying chase,
And unperturb'd pace,
Deliberate speed, majestic instancy,
Came on the following Feet,

"Naught shelters thee, who wilt not shelter Me."
FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Hound of Heaven.

12 None but God can satisfy the longings of an immortal soul; that as the heart was made for Him, so He only can fill it.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, Notes on the Parables: The Prodigal Son.

13 A dear Companion here abides;
Close to my thrilling heart He hides;
The holy silence is His Voice:
I lie and listen, and rejoice.
J. T. TROWBRIDGE, Midsummer.

14 To God the Father, God the Son,
And God the Spirit, Three in One,
Be honour, praise, and glory given
By all on earth, and all in heaven.

ISAAC WATTS, Doxology.

15 O God! our help in ages past,
Our hope for years to come,
Be Thou our guide when troubles last,
And our eternal home!

ISAAC WATTS, O God! Our Help in Ages Past.

16 "God . . . is the only King." . . . Then after a time he said: "Our sons who have

17 Our fathers' God! From out whose hand
The centuries fall like grains of sand,
We meet to-day, united, free,
And loyal to our land and Thee,
To thank Thee for the era done,

And trust Thee for the opening one.

WHITTIER, Centennial Hymn.

God's ways seem dark, but, soon or late,
They touch the shining hills of day.

WHITTIER, For Righteousness' Sake. St. 5.

1 Thou, my all!
My theme! my inspiration! and my crown!
My strength in age! my rise in low estate!
My soul's ambition, pleasure, wealth!—my world!

My light in darkness! and my life in death!
My boast thro' time! bliss thro' eternity!
Eternity, too short to speak thy praise!
Or fathom thy profound of love to man!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 586.

A deity believ'd, is joy begun;
A deity ador'd, is joy advanc'd;
A deity belov'd, is joy matur'd.
Each branch of piety delight inspires.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 713.

2 God's might to direct me,
God's power to protect me,
God's wisdom for learning,
God's eye for discerning,
God's ear for my hearing,
God's word for my clearing.

The earliest Christian hymn written in Gælic, and attributed to St. PATRICK. (Sigerson, tr.)

XI—God and the Universe

3 Set God apart from mortal men, and deem not that he, like them, is fashioned out of flesh.
Thou knowest him not; now he appeareth as fire, now as water, now as gloom; and he is dimly seen in the likeness of wild beasts, of wind, of cloud, of lightning, thunder, and of rain. All power hath he; lo, this is the glory of the Most High God.

ÆSCHYLUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 239.

4 The celestial order and the beauty of the universe compel me to admit that there is some excellent and eternal Being, who deserves the respect and homage of men.

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 72, sec. 148.

5 Face to face with the universe, man will be the sole evidence of his audacious dreams of divinity, since the God he vainly sought is himself.

GEORGES CLEMENCEAU, In the Evening of My Thought, p. 503.

Creation's golden steps, to climb to Thee.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 592.

7 God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm.

COWPER, Light Shining Out of Darkness.

Nor God alone in the still calm we find,
He mounts the storm, and walks upon the wind.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 109.

8 There is a God! the sky his presence shares,
His hand upheaves the billows in their
mirth,

Destroys the mighty, yet the humble spares
And with contentment crowns the thought of worth.

CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN, There Is a God.

9 God of the granite and the rose,
Soul of the sparrow and the bee,
The mighty tide of being flows
Thro' countless channels, Lord, from Thee.
ELIZABETH DOTEN, Reconciliation.

10 By tracing Heav'n his footsteps may be
found:

Behold! how awfully he walks the round!
God is abroad, and wondrous in his ways
The rise of empires, and their fall surveys.

DRYDEN, Britannia Rediviva, l. 75.

O God, I am thinking Thy thoughts after Thee.
JOHN KEPLER, When Studying Astronomy.

11 I believe in God the Father Almighty because wherever I have looked, through all that I see around me, I see the trace of an intelligent mind, and because in natural laws, and especially in the laws which govern the social relations of men, I see, not merely the proofs of intelligence, but the proofs of beneficence.

HENRY GEORGE, Speech, New York, 1887.

14 Has God any dwelling-place save earth and sea, the air of heaven and virtuous hearts?
Why seek the Deity further? Whatever we see is God, and wherever we go. (Estque dei sedes, nisi terra et pontus et aer et Cælum et virtus? Superos quid quærimus ultra?

Juppiter est, quodcumque vides, quodcumque moveris.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ix, l. 578. The last line sums up the doctrine of Pantheism.

Know first, the heaven, the earth, the main,
The moon's pale orb, the starry train,

Are nourished by a soul,
A bright intelligence, whose flame
Glows in each member of the frame,

And stirs the mighty whole.
(Principio cælum ac terras camposque liquentis
Lucentemque globum Lunæ Titaniaque astra

2

These are thy glorious works, Parent of good.

3

Who coverest thyself with light as with a garment: who stretchest out the heavens like a curtain: Who layeth the beams of his chambers in the waters: who maketh the clouds his chariot: who walketh upon the wings of the wind: Who maketh his angels spirits; his ministers a flaming fire.

Old Testament: Psalms, civ, 2-4.

4

He bowed the heavens also, and came down: and darkness was under his feet.

Old Testament: Psalms, xviii, 9.

The Lord descended from above
And bow'd the heavens high;
And underneath his feet he cast

The darkness of the sky.

XII—God the Unknowable

7

God is more truly imagined than expressed, and he exists more truly than is imagined. (Verius cogitatur Deus quam dicitur, et verius est quam cogitatur.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, De Trinitate. Pt. vii, sec. 6.

8

It were better to have no opinion of God at all, than such an opinion as is unworthy of him: for the one is unbelief, the other is contumely.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Superstition.

It is better to have no belief in the gods than a dishonouring belief. (Præstat nullam habere de dis opinionem, quam contumeliosam.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Superstitio.

9

God never meant that man should scale the heav'ns

By strides of human wisdom. In his works,
Though wondrous, he commands us in his word

To seek him rather where his mercy shines.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 221.

'Tis revelation satisfies all doubts,
Explains all mysteries except her own,
And so illuminates the path of life,
That fools discover it, and stray no more.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 527.

10

'Tis hard to find God, but to comprehend Him, as He is, is labour without end.

ROBERT HERRICK, God Not to be Comprehended.

God is above the sphere of our esteem,
And is the best known, not defining him.

ROBERT HERRICK, What God Is.

To seek of God more than we well can find,
Argues a strong distemper of the mind.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sobriety in Search.

11

I askt the seas and all the deeps below
My God to know,

I askt the reptiles, and whatever is
In the abyss;

Even from the shrimps to the leviathan
Enquiry ran;

But in those deserts that no line can sound,
The God I sought for was not to be found.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Searching After God.

Dangerous it were for the feeble brain of man to wade far into the doings of the Most High. . . . Our soundest knowledge is to know that we know him not as indeed he is, neither can know him; and our safest eloquence concerning him is our silence, when we confess without confession that his glory is inexplicable, his greatness above our capacity and reach.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 3.

12

Canst thou by searching find out God?

Old Testament: Job, xi, 7.

13

Who thou art I know not,

But this much I know:

Thou hast set the Pleiades

In a silver row.

PLUTARCH, Of Isis and Osiris.

<sup>7</sup> Say first, of God above or Man below
What can we reason but from what we know?
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 17.

Thou Great First Cause, least understood,
Who all my sense confin'd
To know but this, that thou art good,
And that myself am blind.
POPE, Universal Prayer.

<sup>8</sup> Every conjecture we can form with regard to the works of God has as little probability as the conjectures of a child with regard to the works of a man.

THOMAS REID, Intellectual Powers. Vol. i.

VOLTAIRE, La Loi Naturelle: Exordium.

The God I know of, I shall ne'er
Know, though he dwells exceeding nigh.

Raise thou the stone and find me there,

Cleave thou the wood and there am I.

Yea, in my flesh his spirit doth flow,

Too near, too far, for me to know.

WILLIAM WATSON, The Unknown God. The third and fourth lines are a translation of a Hebrew proverb.

We may scavenge the dross of the nation, we may shudder past bloody sod,
But we thrill to the new revelation that we are parts of God.

R. H. SCHAUFFLER, New Gods for Old.

<sup>14</sup> The Somewhat which we name but cannot know,

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 835.

XIII—God: Some Questionings

<sup>16</sup> I sometimes wish that God were back
In this dark world and wide;

For though some virtues he might lack,
He had his pleasant side.

GAMALIEL BRADFORD, Exit God.

<sup>17</sup> There is no God, no man-made God; a bigger, stronger, crueller man;

Black phantom of our baby-fears, ere
Thought, the life of Life, began.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. iv, 2.

<sup>18</sup> Some men treat the God of their fathers as they treat their father's friend. They do not deny him; by no means: they only deny themselves to him, when he is good enough to call upon them.

Takes that as thanks for all He's given.
The book he lent is given back
All blotted red and smutted black.

MASEFIELD, The Everlasting Mercy. St. 27.

3
I see little evidence in this world of the so-called goodness of God. On the contrary, it seems to me that, on the strength of His daily acts, He must be set down a most stupid, cruel and villainous fellow.

H. L. MENCKEN. (DURANT, On the Meaning of Life, p. 34.)

4
As far remov'd from God and light of Heav'n,
As from the centre thrice to th' utmost pole.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 73.

5
Give us a God—a living God,
One to wake the sleeping soul,
One to cleanse the tainted blood
Whose pulses in our bosoms roll.
C. G. ROSENBERG, The Winged Horn.

6
At last I heard a voice upon the slope
Cry to the summit, "Is there any hope?"
To which an answer peal'd from that high land,

But in a tongue no man could understand;
And on the glimmering limit far withdrawn,
God made Himself an awful rose of dawn.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin, l. 219.

7
When the universe began
God, they say, created man.
Later, with a mocking nod,
Man annihilated God.

MIRIAM VEDDER, Warning.

8
When whelmed are altar, priest, and creed;
When all the faiths have passed;
Perhaps, from darkening incense freed,
God may emerge at last.

WILLIAM WATSON, Revelation.

9
Devoutly, thus, Jehovah they depose,
The pure! the just! and set up, in his stead
A deity that's perfectly well-bred.

Where man is met
The gods will come; or shall I say man's spirit
Hath operative faculties to mix
And make his gods at will?

ROBERT BRIDGES, Achilles in Scyros, l. 552.

GODS AND GODDESSES

To be a god First I must be a god-maker.
We are what we create.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, Jottings: To Be a God.

Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a flea, and yet he will be making gods by dozens.
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

11
The belief in the gods has not been established by authority, custom or law, but rests upon the unanimous and abiding consensus of mankind. (Cum enim non instituta maneatque aut lege sit opinio constituta maneatque ad unum omnium firma consensio.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 17, 44.

I do not know whether there are gods, but there ought to be.

DIODEGENES. (TERTULLIAN, Ad Nationes. Bk. ii, ch. 2.)

12
The gods of fable are the shining moments of great men.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

13
I have always said, and will say, that there is a race of gods,
But I fancy that what men do is to them but little odds.

ENNIUS, Telamon. (King, tr.) These lines were preserved by Cicero who used them in De Inventione Rhetorica, ii, 50, 104.

14
The gods we stand by are the gods we need and can use.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 331.

15
The gods appear, and their serene abodes,
Which winds fret not, nor clouds bedew with showers.

(Apparet divom numen, sedesque quietæ,
Quas neque concutiant ventei, nec nubia nimbeis.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 18.

16
It is pleasant to die, if there be gods; and sad to live, if there be none.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 11.
(EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.)

17
It is expedient there should be gods, and,
since it is expedient, let us believe that gods exist. (Expedit esse deos, et, ut expedit, esse putemus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 637.

18
There is a god within us, we are in touch with heaven. (Est deus in nobis, et sunt commercia cæli.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 549.

There is a god within us; when he stirs, our bosom warms. (Est deus in nobis; agitante ca-lescimus illo.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 5.

1 A god is won by the humblest offering of incense, no less than by the outpoured blood of a hundred bulls. (Sed tamen, ut fuso taurorum sanguine centum, Sic capitur minimo turis honore deus.)

OID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 75.

The gods despise enforced offerings.
When the heart brings its dearest and its last
Then only will they hear—if then, if then!
WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, Fire-Bringer. Act ii.

2 The first way to worship the gods is to believe in the gods. (Primus est deorum cultus deos credere.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 50.

3 Gods fade; but God abides and in man's heart

Speaks with the clear unconquerable cry
Of energies and hopes that can not die.

J. A. SYMONDS, On the Sacro Monte.

II—Gods: Apothegms

4 'Tis only of your own desire that you curse the gods. (Σὺ θνητὰ χρήσεις, ταῦτ' ἐπιγνώσῃ Διός.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 928.

Small praise man gets dispraising the high gods.
SWINBURNE, Atalanta in Calydon: Chorus.

5 He is to be feared who fears the gods. (Δεινὸς δὲ θεὸς σέβει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, The Seven Against Thebes, l. 596.

6 Make not my path offensive to the Gods
By spreading it with carpets.

(Μηδ' εἰμασι στρώσας ἐπιφθονον πορον τίθει.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 891.

7 The gods are careful about great things and neglect small ones. (Magna di curant, parva negligunt.)

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. ii, ch. 66, 167.

Ye immortal gods! where in the world are we?
(O dii immortales! ubinam gentium sumus?)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, sec. 4.

8 Human murmurs never touch the gods.
(Humanæ superos numquam tetigere querellæ.)

CLAUDIAN, Epigrams. No. xxii, l. 9.

9 Never, believe me,
Appear the Immortals,
Never alone.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Visit of the Gods. Imitating Schiller.

Heartily know,
When half-gods go,
The gods arrive.

EMERSON, Give All to Love.

10 The gods are athirst. (Les dieux ont soif.)
CAMILLE DESMOULINS, Vieux Cordelier, 3 Feb.,

1794; closing words of last issue. Title of novel by Anatole France dealing with the French Revolution. See HATE AND THE GODS.

11 Gods meet gods, and jostle in the dark.

DRYDEN AND LEE, Ædipus. Act iv, last line.

Birds met birds, and jostled in the dark.

DRYDEN, The Hind and the Panther. Pt. iii, l. 604.

12 If we meet no gods, it is because we harbor none.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

13 Slowly but surely withal moveth the might of the gods. (Ὁρμᾶται μόλις, ἀλλ' ὅμως πιστόν τι τὸ θεῖον σθένος.)

EURIPIDES, Bacchæ, l. 882.

Let us beware the jealousy of the gods. (Μή τις θεῶν φθόνος ἔλθῃ.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia at Aulis, l. 1098.

14 Shakes his ambrosial curls, and gives the nod,
The stamp of fate, and sanction of the god.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. i, l. 684. (Pope, tr.)

He caused all Olympus to tremble with his nod.
(Totum nutu tremefecit Olympum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ix, l. 106.

With ravish'd ears The monarch hears;
Assumes the god, Affects to nod,
And seems to shake the spheres.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 37.

15 She moves a goddess, and she looks a queen.
(Δία γυναικῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 228. (Pope, tr.)

Where'er he mov'd, the goddess shone before.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xx, l. 127. (Pope, tr.)

Oh! a goddess surely! (O dea certe!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 328.

By her gait one knew the goddess. (Incessu patuit dea.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 405.

16 For verily these things lie on the knees of the gods. ('Αλλ' ἦ τοι μὲν ταῦτα θεῶν ἐν γούνασι κεῖται.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 514. Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 267.

The rest leave to the gods. (Permitte divis cetera.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 9, l. 9.

The gods my protectors. (Di me tuentur.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 17, l. 13.

17 To that large utterance of the early gods!

KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 51.

18 Much must he toil who serves the Immortal Gods.

LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. ii.

19 The god from the machine. (Θεὸς ἐκ μηχανῆς.)

LUCIAN, Hermotimus, l. 86. Usually quoted in its Latin form, "Deus ex machina," as indicating divine help from some contrivance unseen or unexpected. It was a reference to the way in which the gods appeared suddenly upon the Greek stage by the help of mechanism.

A god from the machine. (Θεὸς ἡμῖν ἐπεφάνης.)
MENANDER, Theophrone. Frag. 227.

Nor let a god intervene, unless the difficulty is worthy his intervention. (Nec deus intersit, nisi dignus vindice nodus.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 191.

Walk with the gods. (Συῆν θεοῖς.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 27.

Those whom the gods care for are gods. (Cura deum di sunt.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. viii, l. 724.

The gods profit the man to whom they are propitious. (Cui homini dii propitii sunt aliquid obijcunt lucri.)

PLAUTUS, Persa. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 1.

The gods are with me and love me. (Di me servant atque amant.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 613. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

WHOM THE GODS LOVE DIES YOUNG, see under DEATH.

The gods are a law unto themselves. (Sunt superis sua jura!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ix, l. 500.

It was fear first brought gods into the world, when the lightning fell from high heaven, and the ramparts of the world were rent with flame. (Primus in orbe deos fecit timor, ardua cælo Fulmina cum caderent discussaque mœnia flammis.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. No. 76.

It was fear that first made gods in the world. (Primus in orbe deos fecit timor.)

STATIUS, Thebais. Bk. iii, l. 664.

'Twas only fear first in the world made gods.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act ii, sc. 2.

Fear made the gods; audacity has made kings.

PROSPER JOLYOT DE CRÉBILLON, Catiline.

As dreadful as the Manichean god,
Ador'd through fear, strong only to destroy.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. v, l. 444. The Manichean god was the Power of Evil.

The gods play games with men as balls. (Di nos quasi pilas homines habent.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi: Prologue, l. 22.

In wondrous ways do the gods make sport with men. (Miris modis di ludos faciunt hominibus.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 593. (Act iii, sc. 1.)

As flies to wanton boys, are we to the gods;
They kill us for their sport.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 38.

I have with me two gods, Persuasion and Compulsion. (Πειθὼ καὶ βίαν.)

THEMISTOCLES, to the Andrians, when demanding a tribute. To which the Andrians replied that they were protected by two great gods, Penury and Powerlessness. (Πενίαν καὶ Ἀπορίαν.) PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Sec. 21.

Would you placate the gods? Then be a good man. Whoever imitates them is worshipping them. (Vis deos propitiare? Bonus esto. Satis illos coluit, quisquis imitatus est.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, 50.

For thou, if ever godlike foot there trod
These fields of ours, wert surely like a god.

SWINBURNE, In the Bay. St. 18.

Alas! it is not well to be confident when the gods are adverse. (Heu! nihil invitis fas quemquam fidere divis!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 402.

Be warned: learn justice, and not to despise the gods. (Discite justitiam moniti et non temnere divos.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 620.

First and foremost reverence the Gods. (Impimis venerare Deos.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 338.

III—Gods and Goddesses: Individuals

For Venus, see under separate heading

Clio, singing of famous deeds, restores the past to life. Euterpe's breath fills the sweet-voiced flutes. Thalia rejoices in the careless speech of comedy. Melpomene cries aloud with the echoing voice of gloomy tragedy. Terpsichore with her lyre stirs and governs the emotions. Erato bearing the plectrum harmonizes foot and song in the dance. Urania examines the motions of the stars. Calliope commits heroic songs to writing. Polymnia expresses all things with her hands and speaks by gesture. The power of Apollo's will enlivens the whole circle of these muses: he sits in their midst and in himself possesses all their gifts.

AUSONIUS [?], Nomina Musarum.

Atlas, we read in ancient song,
Was so exceeding tall and strong,
He bore the skies upon his back,
Just as the pedler does his pack;
But, as the pedler overpress'd
Unloads upon a stall to rest,
Or, when he can no longer stand,
Desires a friend to lend a hand,
So Atlas, lest the ponderous spheres
Should sink, and fall about his ears,
Got Hercules to bear the pile,
That he might sit and rest awhile.

SWIFT, Atlas; or, the Minister of State.

1 Who knows not Circe,
The daughter of the Sun, whose charmed cup
Whoever tasted, lost his upright shape,
And downward fell into a groveling swine?
MILTON, Comus, l. 50.

2 Great is Diana of the Ephesians.
New Testament: Acts, xix, 28.

3 Sweet Europa's mantle blew unclasp'd,
From off her shoulder backward borne;
From one hand droop'd a crocus; one hand
grasp'd
The mild bull's golden horn.
TENNYSON, The Palace of Art, l. 117.

Or else flush'd Ganymede, his rosy thigh
Half buried in the eagle's down,
Sole as a flying star shot thro' the sky
Above the pillar'd town.
TENNYSON, The Palace of Art, l. 121.

4 Janus am I; oldest of potentates;
Forward I look, and backward, and below
I count, as god of avenues and gates,
The years that through my portals come and go.

I block the roads, and drift the fields with snow;
I chase the wild-fowl from the frozen fen;
My frosts congeal the rivers in their flow,
My fires light up the hearths and hearts of
men.

LONGFELLOW, The Poet's Calendar: January.

5 Or ask of yonder argent fields above
Why Jove's satellites are less than Jove.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 41.

6 The ox-eyed awful Juno.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 144; Bk. vii, l. 10; Bk.
xviii, l. 40.

7 Great Pan is dead.
PLUTARCH, De Defectu Oraculorum. Sec. xvii.
See also under PAN.

8 Pluto, the grisly god, who never spares,
Who feels no mercy, and who hears no prayers.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 209. (Pope, tr.)

9 Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UN-KNOWN GOD.

New Testament: Acts, xvii, 22, 23. (Ignoto Deo.—Vulgate.)

The presiding genius of the place. (Genius loci.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 136. Genius in this sense signifies a divinity. The Romans often raised monumental stones inscribed "Genio loci."

GOLD

See also Money, Riches

I—Gold: Apothegms

10 Gold is tried with the touchstone, and men with gold.

CHILLO. (BACON, Apothegms. No. 225.)

As the touch-stone trieth gold, so gold trieth
men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 736.

Men have a touchstone whereby to try gold;
but gold is the touchstone whereby to try men.

FULLER, The Holy State: The Good Judge.

11 Gold is pale because it has so many thieves plotting against it.

DIOGENES. (DIOCENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Sec 51.)

12 That is gold which is worth gold.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

The balance distinguisheth not between gold and lead.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

13 If gold knew what gold is,
Gold would get gold, I wis.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Foul cankering rust the hidden treasure frets,
But gold that's put to use more gold begets.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 767.

14 This is the famous stone
That turneth all to gold.
GEORGE HERBERT, The Elixir.

If by fire
Of sooty coal th' empiric alchymist
Can turn, or holds it possible to turn,
Metals of drossiest ore to perfect gold.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 439.

You are an alchemist; make gold of that.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 117.

15 And gold but sent to keep the fools in play,
For some to heap, and some to throw away.
POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 5.

16 We live by the gold for which other men die.
PRIOR, The Thief and the Cordelier. St. 12.

17 When we have gold we are in fear; when we have none we are in danger.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 12.

18 Thou gaudy gold, Hard food for Midas!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

19 Now do I play the touch,
To try if thou be current gold indeed.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 9.

Gold is proved by touch. (À la touche l'on epreuve l'or.)

J. DE LA VÉPRIE, Les Proverbes Communs.

ALL IS NOT GOLD THAT GLITTERS, see under APPEARANCES.

II—Gold: The Lust for Gold

1
O cursed lust of gold! when, for thy sake,
The fool throws up his interest in both worlds;
First starved in this, then damned in that to come.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 347.

2
A thirst for gold,
The beggar's vice, which can but overwhelm
The meanest hearts.

BYRON, The Vision of Judgment. St. 43.

3
For gold in physic is a cordial;
Therefore he loved gold in special.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 443.

4
The lust of gold succeeds the rage of conquest;
The lust of gold, unfeeling and remorseless!
The last corruption of degenerate man.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act i, sc. 1.

5
Men dig the earth for gold, seed of unnumbered ills: (Effodiuntur opes, inritamenta malorum.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. i, l. 140.

Where the pale children of the feeble sun
In search of gold through every climate run:
From burning heat to freezing torrents go,
And live in all vicissitudes of woe.

CHATTERTON, Narva and Mored, l. 55.

Days of old and days of gold,
And the days of Forty-nine.

UNKNOWN, The Days of Forty-Nine.

6
Gold is a child of Zeus; neither moth nor rust devoureth it; but the mind of man is devoured by this supreme possession.

PINDAR, Fragments. No. 222.

7
To what dost thou not drive the hearts of men, O accursed lust for gold! (Quid non mortalia pectora cogis, Auri sacra fames!)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iii, l. 56.

O love of gold! thou meanest of amours!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iv, l. 350.

III—Gold: Its Power

8
Even to ugliness gold gives a look of beauty.
(L'or même à la laideur donne un teint de beauté.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 209.

Gold gives to the ugliest a certain pleasing charm.
(L'or donne aux plus laids certain charme pour plaire.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. 1, l. 49.

9
Though wisdom cannot be gotten for gold, still less can it be gotten without it. . . No gold, no Holy Ghost.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books, p. 172.

10
Gold dust blinds all eyes.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, 98.

11
Now gold hath sway; we all obey
And a ruthless king is he.

H. F. CHORLEY, The Brave Old Oak.

12
Gold begets in brethren hate;

Gold in families debate;

Gold does friendship separate;

Gold does civil wars create.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Anacreontics: Gold, l. 17.

13
Gold hath been the ruin of many.

APOCRYPHA: Ecclesiasticus, xxi, 6.

Gold maketh an honest man an ill man.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 63. Cited as "a by-word among us."

14
An ass loaded with gold climbs to the top of the castle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. See also Ass.

15
Chains of gold are stronger than chains of iron.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1079.

16
The tongue hath no force when gold speaketh.

GUAZZO, Civil Conversation, p. 88.

Man prates, but gold speaks.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 179.

17
Gold opens all locks, no lock will hold against the power of gold.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Every door is barred with gold, and opens but to golden keys.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall. St. 50.

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!

Bright and yellow, hard and cold,

Molten, graven, hammer'd, and roll'd;

Heavy to get, and light to hold;

Hoarded, barter'd, bought, and sold,

Stolen, borrow'd, squander'd, doled:

Spurn'd by the young, but hugg'd by the old

To the very verge of the churchyard mould;

Price of many a crime untold:

Gold! Gold! Gold! Gold!

Good or bad a thousand-fold!

How widely its agencies vary—

To save—to ruin—to curse—to bless—

As even its minted coins express,

Now stamp'd with the image of Good Queen Bess,

And now of a Bloody Mary.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Moral.

18
Gold can a path through hosts of warders clear,

And walls of stone more swiftly can displace
Than ever lightning could.

(Aurum per medios ire satellites
Et perrumpere amat saxa, potentius
Ictu fulmineo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 9.

The cities of Greece were taken not by Philip but by Philip's gold. (Tὰς πόλεις αἰρεῖ τῶν Ἑλλήνων οὐ Φίλιππος, ἀλλὰ τὸ Φιλίππου χρυσίον.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Æmilius Paulus. Ch. 12,
sec. 6.

The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

SHAKESPEARE, The Passionate Pilgrim, l. 327.

1 But brief to be, what can you crave,
That now for gold you may not have?

THOMAS HOWELL, Howell His Devises, 54.

2 But here more slow, where all are slaves to
gold,
Where looks are merchandise, and smiles are sold.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, London, l. 178.

3 Whilst that for which all virtue now is sold,
And almost every vice,—almighty gold.

BEN JONSON, Epistle to Elizabeth, Countess of Rutland.

Almighty gold.

FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act iii, sc. 2.

No, let the monarch's bags and others hold
The flattering, mighty, nay, al-mighty gold.

JOHN WOLCOT, To Kien Long. Ode iv.

4 Truly now is the golden age; the highest honor comes by means of gold; by gold love is procured. (Aurea nunc vere sunt sæcula; plurimus auro Venit honos; auro conciliatur amor.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk ii, l. 277. For other quotations relating to the Golden Age see under AGE: THE GOLDEN AGE.

Piety is vanquished and all men worship gold.
Gold has banished faith, gold has made judgment to be bought and sold, gold rules the law, and, law once gone, rules chastity as well. (*Aures omnes victa jam pietate colunt. Auro pulsa fides, auro venalia jura, Aurum lex sequitur, mox sine
lige pudor.*)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 13, l. 47.

Judges and senates have been bought for gold;
Esteem and love were never to be sold.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 187.

5 What nature wants, commodious gold bestows;

'Tis thus we eat the bread another sows.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 21.

6 Gold goes in at any gate, except Heaven's.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

7 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance, . . . and 'tis gold

Which makes the true man kill'd and saves the thief.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 72.

8 Gold were as good as twenty orators.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 38.
(1592)

Gold is a deep-persuading orator.

RICHARD BARNFIELD, The Affectionate Shepherd, 48. (1594)

Saint-seducing gold.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 220.

9 Commerce has set the mark of Selfishness,
The signet of its all-enslaving power
Upon a shining ore, and called it gold;
Before whose image bow the vulgar great,
The vainly rich, the miserable proud,
The mob of peasants, nobles, priests, and kings,

And with blind feelings reverence the power
That grinds them to the dust of misery.
But in the temple of their hireling hearts
Gold is a living god, and rules in scorn
All earthly things but virtue.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Pt. v, l. 53.

10 What words won't do, gold will.

EDWARD WARD, The London Spy, p. 400.

IV—Gold: Its Worthlessness

11 All's alike at the latter day,
A bag of gold and a wisp of hay.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 215.

12 What is fame? an empty bubble;
Gold? a transient, shining trouble.

JAMES GRAINGER, Ode to Solitude.

13 Gold is but muck.

BEN JONSON, The Case Is Altered. Act iv, sc.
4. Cited as "the old proverb."

1
Poison is drunk out of gold. (Venenum in auro bibitur.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 453.

There is thy gold, worse poison to men's souls,
Doing more murders in this loathsome world,
Than these poor compounds that thou mayst not sell.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1,
l. 80.

2
All gold and silver rather turn to dirt!
As 'tis no better reckon'd, but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 6, l. 54.

GOLDEN RULE, THE

3
We should behave to friends as we would wish friends to behave to us. (Ὡς ἂν εὐχαίμεθα αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν προσφέρειν.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle.
Sec. 21.)

4
Do as you would be done by is the surest method that I know of pleasing.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

To do as you would be done by, is the plain,
sure, and undisputed rule of morality and justice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

Is there one word which may serve as a rule of practice for all one's life? The master said, Is not reciprocity such a word? What you do not want done to yourself, do not do to others.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. v, ch. 11. A negative statement of the Golden Rule.

6
The Golden Rule works like gravitation.

C. F. DOLE, Cleveland Address.

7
Every man takes care that his neighbor does not cheat him. But a day comes when he begins to care that he do not cheat his neighbor. Then all goes well.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

8
Therefore if anyone would take these two words to heart and use them for his own guidance, he will be almost without sin. These two words are bear (ἀνέχου) and forbear (ἀπέχου).

EPICTETUS. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ.
Bk. xvii, ch. 19, sec. 6.)

9
The Golden Law, "do as ye would be done by."

ROBERT GODFREY, Physics. (1674)

Thence arises that Golden Rule of dealing with others as we would have others deal with us.

ISAAC WATTS, Logick. (1725)

Such is that golden principle of morality which our blessed Lord has given us.

ISAAC WATTS, Improving the Mind. (1741)

In our dealings with each other we should be guided by the Golden Rule.

W. D. HOWELLS, The Rise of Silas Lapham.
Vol. ii, p. 26. (1885)

10
Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 12.

11
Men are used as they use others.

PILPAY, The King Who Became Just. Fable 9.
Look to be treated by others as you have treated others. (Ab alio expectes alteri quod feceris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 1.

You must expect to be treated by others as you yourself have treated them. (Ab alio expectes, alteri quod feceris.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec.
43. Quoted.

12
The rule of proportion which, for excellency, is called the Golden Rule.

ROBERT RECORDE, The Grounde of Arts, p. 240.
(1540) This is the earliest known use of the words "Golden Rule." It is not in connection with the verse from Matthew, but refers to mathematics.

The rule of three, or golden rule, as it is called in sacred algebra.

DANIEL FEATLEY, Clavis Mystica, p. 279. (c.
1635)

13
Treat your inferiors as you would be treated by your betters. (Sic cum inferiore vivas, quemadmodum tecum superiorem velis vi-vere.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, 11.

In your dealings with others, harm not that you be not harmed. (Alterum intueri, ne læ-daris, alterum ne lædas.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ciii, 3.

14
Be as just and gracious unto me,
As I am confident and kind to thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act i, sc. 1,
l. 60.

15
The golden rule is that there are no golden
rules.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

Do not do unto others as you would they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16
If it be a duty to respect other men's claims,
so also is it a duty to maintain our own.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch.
21, sec. 8.

17
Do unto the other feller the way he'd like to do unto you, an' do it fust.

EDWARD NOYES WESTCOTT, David Harum.

18
His statecraft was the Golden Rule,

His right of vote a sacred trust;
Clear, over threat and ridicule,
All heard his challenge: "Is it just?"
J. G. WHITTIER, Summer.

1 Deal with another as you'd have Another deal with you;
What you're unwilling to receive,
Be sure you never do.
UNKNOWN, The New England Primer.

GOLDSMITH, OLIVER

2 Here lies Nolly Goldsmith, for shortness called Noll,

Who wrote like an angel, and talk'd like poor Poll.

DAVID GARRICK, Impromptu Epitaph. Goldsmith himself admitted that he wrote better than he talked. "I always get the better when I argue alone," he said; and "I have only ninepence in my pocket, but I can draw for a thousand pounds." Of de Tréville, a fluent talker, he remarked, "He vanquishes me in the drawing-room, but surrenders to me at discretion on the stairs."

No man was more foolish when he had not a pen in his hand, or more wise when he had.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, referring to Goldsmith.
(BOSWELL, Life. Vol. ii, ch. 10.)

While he talks he is great, but goes out like a taper,

If you shut him up closely with pen, ink, and paper.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 649. Of Bronson Alcott.

Tom Birch is as brisk as a bee in conversation; but no sooner does he take a pen in his hand, than it becomes a torpedo to him, and benumbs all his faculties.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1743.)
The exact antithesis of Goldsmith.

3 Poet, Naturalist, Historian, who left scarcely any style of writing untouched, and touched nothing which he did not adorn. (Poetæ, Physici, Historici, Qui nullum fere scribendi genus non tetigit, Nullum quod tetigit non ornavit.)

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Epitaph of Goldsmith. (BOSWELL, Life. Vol. vii, ch. 3.) Dr. Johnson's Latin, it will be noted, is by no means above reproach. The antithesis had already been used by Lord Chesterfield in writing of Bolingbroke, and by Fénelon with reference to Cicero. See also under ELOQUENCE.

Goldsmith, however, was a man who, whatever he wrote, did it better than any other man could.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 3.)

4 Goldsmith was a plant that flowered late.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 3.)

5 Was ever poet so trusted before?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 4 July,

1774. Referring to Goldsmith's debts at his death.

I—Goodness: Definitions

6 True goodness springs from a man's own heart. All men are born good.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (Giles, tr.)

If you wish to be good, first believe that you are bad.

EPICETUS, Fragments. (Long, tr.)

7 That is good which commends to me my country, my climate, my means and materials, my associates.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

8 It is good to be zealously affected always in a good thing.

New Testament: Galatians, iv, 18.

9 Who is the "good man"? He who keeps the decrees of the Fathers, the laws and ordinances. (Vir bonus est quis? Qui consulta patrum, qui leges juraque servat.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 40.

The good hate to sin through love of virtue. (Oderunt peccare boni virtutis amore.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 52.

10 It is not growing like a tree
In bulk, doth make man better be;
Or standing long an oak, three hundred year,
To fall a log at last, dry, bald, and sere:

A lily of a day

Is fairer far in May,

Although it fall and die that night;

It was the plant and flower of light.

In small proportions we just beauties see;

And in short measures life may perfect be.

BEN JONSON, A Pindaric Ode to the Immortal Memory and Friendship of that Noble Pair, Sir Lucius Cary and Sir H. Morison. St. 7.

11 A good man doubles the length of his life, for to be able to enjoy in memory one's past life is to live twice. (Ampliat ætatis spatium sibi vir bonus. Hoc est Vivere bis vita posse priore frui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 23, l. 7.

Thus would I double my life's fading space;

For he, that runs it well, runs twice his race.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Myself.

For he lives twice who can at once enjoy

The present well, and e'en the past enjoy.

POPE, Imitation of Martial.

The good live longest; to the good alone

The record of the past remains their own.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Critics.

1 There needs but thinking right, and meaning well.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 32.

2 The good, as I conceive it, is happiness, happiness for each man after his own heart, and for each hour according to its inspiration.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Soliloquies in England.

3 That which is good makes men good. (Quod bonum est, bonos facit.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, 12.

That's my good that does me good.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

4 The larger part of goodness is the will to become good. (Itaque pars magna bonitatis est velle fieri bonum.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xxxiv, 3.

5 My meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you understand me that he is sufficient.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i, sc. 3, l. 16.

6 Good is no good, but if it be spend:
God giveth good for none other end.

SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: Maye, l. 71.

7 Hold thou the good; define it well;
For fear divine Philosophy

Should push beyond her mark, and be Procuress to the Lords of Hell.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liii, st. 4.

8 He can never be good that is not obstinate.

BISHOP THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 126.

II—Goodness: Apothegms

9 Tread softly and circumspectly in this funambulatory track and narrow path of goodness.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Sec. 1.

10 Our best is bad, nor bears Thy test;
Still, it should be our very best.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas Eve. Canto iv.

There's a further good conceivable
Beyond the utmost earth can realise.

ROBERT BROWNING, Prince Hohenstiel-Schwangau.

11 A good heart is better than all the heads in the world.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Disowned. Ch. 33.

12 It's guid to be merry and wise,

It's guid to be honest and true,

BURNS, Here's a Health to Them That's Awa.
That pure pride, which, lessening to her breast

Life's ills, gave all its joys a treble zest,
Before the mind completely understood
That mighty truth—how happy are the good!

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 322.

Goodness does not more certainly make men happy than happiness makes them good.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lord Brooke and Sir Philip Sidney.

For the good are always the merry,
Save by an evil chance.

W. B. YEATS, The Fiddler of Dooney.

13 He cannot long be good that knows not why he is good.

RICHARD CAREW, Survey of Cornwall, p. 219. (1602)

14 Be good and leave the rest to Heaven.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto vii.

15 Who soweth good seed shall surely reap.

JULIA C. R. DORR, To the "Bouquet Club."

16 If you wish any good thing, get it from yourself. (Εἰ τι ἀγαθὸν θέλεις, παρὰ σεαυτοῦ λάβε.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 29, sec. 4.

Your good qualities should face inwards. (Introsus bona tua spectent.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. vii, sec. 12.

17 Hard was their lodging, homely was their food,

For all their luxury was doing good.

SAMUEL GARTH, Claremont, l. 149. (c. 1700)

Learn the luxury of doing good.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 22. (1765)

Now, at a certain time, in pleasant mood,
He tried the luxury of doing good.

CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Bk. iii. (1819)

18 Good is not good, where better is expected.

THOMAS FULLER, Church History. Bk. xi, 3.

Good is good, but better carries it.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Though good be good, yet better is better.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 97.

Better is the enemy of good.

VOLTAIRE, La Bégueule, who ascribed the saying to "a wise Italian."

19 Let them be good that love me, though but few.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act iii, sc. 4.

20 Look round the habitable world! How few Know their own good, or knowing it, pursue!
(Omnibus in terris, . . . pauci dinoscere possunt Vera bona atque illis multum diversa.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 1. (Dryden, tr.)

IV—Goodness: Some Doubts

5 Good me no goods.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Chances. Act i, sc. 9.

Good critics who have stamped out poet's hope,
Good statesmen who pulled ruin on the state,
Good patriots who for a theory risked a cause,
Good kings who disembowelled for a tax,
Good popes who brought all good to jeopardy,
Good Christians who sat still in easy chairs
And damned the general world for standing up.—
Now may the good God pardon all good men!

has not spirit enough to be bad: goodness, for the most part, is nothing but indolence or weakness of will. (Nul ne mérite d'être loué de bonté, s'il n'a pas la force d'être méchant:
toute autre bonté n'est le plus souvent

<sup>10</sup> Evil and good are God's right hand and left.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proem.

<sup>11</sup> Make good things from ill things, best from worst,
As men plant tulips upon dunghills when they wish them finest.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. ii, l. 284.
There shall never be one lost good! What was shall live as before;
The evil is null, is nought, is silence implying sound;

What was good shall be good, with, for evil, so much good more;
On the earth the broken arcs; in the heaven a perfect round.

ROBERT BROWNING, Abt Vogler. St. 9.
There is no Good, there is no Bad; these be the whims of mortal will:
What works me weal that call I "good," what harms and hurts I hold as "ill."

SIR RICHARD BURTON, The Kasidah. Pt. v, st. 1.
<sup>12</sup> O, why is the good of man with evil mixt?
Never were days yet called two
But one night went betwixt.

THOMAS CAMPION, When We Submit to Women So.

<sup>13</sup> Inability to tell good from evil is the greatest worry of man's life. (Ignorantia rerum bonarum et malarum, maxime hominum vita vexetur.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 13, sec. 43.
Few are able to distinguish true good from what is widely different from it. (Pauci dignoscere possunt, Vera bona atque illis multum diversa.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 1.

One that confounds good and evil is an enemy to good.

EDMUND BURKE, Impeachment of Warren
Hastings, 16 Feb., 1788.

<sup>14</sup> What we all love is good touched up with evil—

Religion's self must have a spice of devil.
A. H. CLOUGH, Dipsychus. Pt. i, sc. 3.

<sup>15</sup> When you see a good man, think of emulating him; when you see a bad man, examine your own heart.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (Giles, tr.)

<sup>16</sup> By evil report and good report.
New Testament: II Corinthians, vi, 8.

<sup>17</sup> The essence of good and evil is a certain kind of moral purpose. (Οὐσία τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ . . . τοῦ κακοῦ προαίρεσις ποιά.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 29, sec. 1.

1 Most good hath he to whom no ill befalls as days wear on. (Κείνος ἀλβιώτατος, ὅτω κατ' ἡμᾶρ τυγχάνει μηδὲν κακόν.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 627.

Enough, and more, of good is his who hath no ill. (Nimium boni est cui nihil est mali.)

ENNIUS, Hecuba. (CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 41.)

2 There is no good without ill in the world, But everything is mixed in due proportion. (Οὐκ ἄν γένοιτο χωρὶς ἐσθλὰ καὶ κακὰ. Ἀλλ' ἐστὶ τις σύγκρασις, ὥστ' ἔχειν καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES. (PLUTARCH, Morals: On Contentedness. Sec. 15.)

There is no evil in human affairs that has not some good mingled with it. (Non è male alcuno nelle cose umane che non abbia congiunto seco qualche bene.)

FRANCESCO GUICCIARDINI, Storia d'Italia.

See also ROSE AND THORN.

3 Good and evil are chiefly in the imagination. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1699. See also THOUGHT: ITS POWER.

4 Do not grudge To pick out treasures from an earthen pot. The worst speak something good.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 72.

5 How wicked we are, and how good they were then.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast-Table: Aunt Tabitha.

6 Two urns by Jove's high throne have ever stood,

The source of evil, one, and one of good.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 663. (Pope, tr.)

Jove weighs affairs of earth in dubious scales, And the good suffers while the bad prevails.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 229. (Pope, tr.)

7 And would'st thou evil for his good repay?

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvi, l. 448.

Evil for good and good for evil. (Bene merenti mala es, male merenti bona es.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 129. (Act i, sc. 2.)

But then I sigh; and, with a piece of Scripture, Tell them that God bids us do good for evil.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 3, l. 334.

8 The Bad among the Good are here mixt ever: The Good without the Bad are here plac'd never.

ROBERT HERRICK, Good and Bad.

The world in all doth but two nations bear,— The good, the bad; and these mixed everywhere.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Loyal Scot.

All things are mixed, the useful with the vain, The good with bad, the noble with the vile.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, No. 7.

There are only two qualities in the world: efficiency and inefficiency; and only two sorts of people: the efficient and the inefficient.

G. B. SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iv.

There are two kinds of people on earth to-day, Just two kinds of people, no more, I say. Not the good and the bad, for 'tis well understood

That the good are half bad and the bad are half good. . . .

No! the two kinds of people on earth I mean Are the people who lift and the people who lean.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Lifting and Leaning.

It is absurd to divide people into good and bad. People are either charming or tedious.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act i.

9 Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; and put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 20.

10 As in this bad world below

Noblest things find vilest using.

KEBLE, The Christian Year: Palm Sunday.

11 To good and evil equal bent, He's both a devil and a saint.

SHEPARD KOLLOCK, of Samuel Loudon. (A. J. WALL, N. Y. Hist. Soc. Quart. Bull., Oct., 1922.) See also CHARACTER: GOOD AND BAD.

12 We often do good in order that we may do evil with impunity. (On fait souvent du bien pour pouvoir impunément faire du mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 121.

13 The end of good is an evil, and the end of evil is a good. (La fin du bien est un mal, et la fin du mal est un bien.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 519.

14 Men have less lively perception of good than of evil. (Segnius homines bona quam mala sentiunt.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, sec. 21.

In doing good we are generally cold, and languid, and sluggish; and of all things afraid of being too much in the right. But the works of malice and injustice are quite in another style. They are finished with a bold masterly hand.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, at Bristol.

Good and quickly seldom meet.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

15 Evil is only good perverted.

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii.

16 From lower to the higher next, Not to the top, is Nature's text;

And embryo Good, to reach full stature,
Absorbs the Evil in its nature.

J. R. LOWELL, Festina Lente: Moral.

<sup>1</sup> Good and evil, we know, in the field of this world grow up together almost inseparably.
MILTON, Areopagitica.

If then his Providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 162.

All good to me is lost; Evil, be thou my good.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 109.

Knowledge of good bought dear by knowing ill.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 222.

<sup>2</sup> Where good and ill, together blent,
Wage an undying strife.
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, A Martyr Convert.

<sup>3</sup> Evil things are neighbors to good. (Et mala sunt vicina bonis.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 323.

<sup>4</sup> To a good man nothing that happens is evil.
("Οτι οὐκ ἔστιν ἀνδρὶ ἀγαθῷ κακόν.")
PLATO, Apology of Socrates. Ch. 33, sec. 41.

<sup>5</sup> Good men make me poor, bad ones make me rich. (Bonī me viri pauperant, improbi aug-ent.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 1128. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

<sup>6</sup> All partial evil, universal good.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 292.

<sup>7</sup> The good are better made by ill,
As odours crushed are sweeter still.
SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline. Pt. iii, l. 16. See also under ADVERSITY.

<sup>8</sup> Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 9.

Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 21.

<sup>9</sup> He was always for ill, and never for good.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto iii,
st. 12.

<sup>10</sup> From lowest place when virtuous things proceed,

The place is dignified by the doer's deed:
Where great additions swell's, and virtue none,

It is a drossied honour. Good alone
Is good without a name. Vileness is so:
The property by what it is should go,
Not by the title.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 3, l. 132.

In working well, if travail you sustain,
Into the wind shall lightly pass the pain;
But of the deed the glory shall remain,
And cause your name with worthy wights to reign.

In working wrong, if pleasure you attain,
The pleasure soon shall fade, and void as vain;
But of the deed throughout the life the shame
Endures, defacing you with foul defame.

NICHOLAS GRIMALD, Musonius the Philosopher's Sayings.

<sup>11</sup> The web of our life is of a mingled yarn, good and ill together.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
iv, sc. 3, l. 83.

<sup>12</sup> There is some soul of goodness in things
evil,

Would men observingly distil it out; . . .
Thus may we gather honey from the weed,
And make a moral of the devil himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 4.

We too often forget that not only is there "a soul of goodness in things evil," but very generally also, a soul of truth in things erroneous.

HERBERT SPENCER, First Principles. Pt. i, ch. 1,
sec. 1.

<sup>13</sup> The evil that men do lives after them;
The good is oft interred with their bones.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 80.

<sup>14</sup> Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filths savour but themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 37.

<sup>15</sup> I am in this earthly world; where to do harm

Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 75.

<sup>16</sup> Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
Unwholesome weeds take root with precious
flowers;

The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
What virtue breeds, iniquity devours:

We have no good that we can say is ours.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 869.

O, no! the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 300.

<sup>17</sup> For nought so vile that on the earth doth live

But to the earth some special good doth give,
Nor aught so good but strain'd from that fair use

Revolts from true birth, stumbling on abuse.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, 3, 17.

Two such opposed kings encamp them still
In man as well as herbs, grace and rude will;
And where the worse is predominant,

Full soon the canker death eats up that plant.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 27.

1 Evil minds Change good to their own nature.

SHELLEY, Prometheus Unbound. Act i, l. 380.

2 There is no man suddenly either excellently good or extremely evil.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. i.

3 So far as any one shuns evils, so far he does good.

SWEDENBORG, Doctrine of Life. Sec. 21.

4 For good ye are and bad, and like to coins, Some true, some light.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 25.

5 O, yet we trust that somehow good

Will be the final goal of ill,

To pangs of nature, sins of will,

Defects of doubt, and taints of blood.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. liv, st. 1. "Somehow Good" was used by William de Morgan as the title of a novel.

One may not doubt that, somehow Good

Shall come of Water and of Mud;

And sure, the reverent eye must see

A purpose in Liquidity.

RUPERT BROOKE, Heaven.

6 From seeming evil still educing good,
And better thence again, and better still,
In infinite progression.

JAMES THOMSON, Hymn on the Seasons, l. 114.

7 If not good, why then evil,
If not good god, good devil.

Goodness!—you hypocrite, come out of that,
Live your life, do your work, then take your hat.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers.

The greater part of what my neighbors call good I believe in my soul to be bad, and if I repent of anything, it is very likely to be my good behavior.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

8 Roaming in thought over the Universe, I saw the little that is Good steadily hastening towards immortality,

And the vast all that is call'd Evil I saw hastening to merge itself and become lost and dead.

WALT WHITMAN, Roaming in Thought.

Evil perpetually tends to disappear.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Evanescence of Evil.

9 The evil cannot brook delay,

The good can well afford to wait.

Give ermined knaves their hour of crime;

Ye have the future grand and great,

The safe appeal of Truth to Time!

WHITTIER, For Righteousness' Sake.

10 'Tis a habit of the foolish and the vulgar

To value equally the good and bad.

(Siempre acostumbra hacer el vulgo necio, De la bueno y lo malo igual aprecio.)

YRIARTE, Fables. No. 28.

GOOSE

11 Let the long contention cease!

Geese are swans, and swans are geese,

Let them have it how they will!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Last Word.

For the goose of To-day still is Memory's swan.

J. R. LOWELL, In the Half-Way House. St. 6.

12 What meaneth he by blinking like a goose in the rain?

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fevèr Pestilence. (1564)

13 Goslings lead the geese to water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1740.

Shall the goslings teach the goose to swim?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1741.

14 As is the gander, so is the goose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 700.

15 What was sauce for the goose was sauce for the gander.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt. ii, l. 120. (1671)

Sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 24 Jan., 1785.

Let Attius have the same rights as Tettius. (Attio idem, quod Tettio, jus esto.)

MARCUS VARRO, The Will. Frag. 543. A clause in Varro's will, providing that a son born to him eleven months after his death shall have the same rights as one born in ten months. (AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, ch. 16, sec. 13.) Frequently quoted, "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

16 As deep drinketh the goose as the gander.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

When the goose drinks as deep as the gander, pots are soon empty, and the cupboard is bare.

C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 136.

17 It is thus that you silence the goose [huss], but a hundred years hence there will arise a swan whose singing you shall not be able to silence.

Attributed to JOHN HUSS, as he was being burned at the stake, 6 July, 1415. Luther is supposed to have fulfilled the prophecy.

18 Dark flying rune against the western glow—
It tells the sweep and loneliness of things,
Symbol of Autumns vanished long ago.

Symbol of coming Springs!
FREDERICK PETERSON, Wild Geese.

POOLE, Archaic Words, 25. Poole says the presumed foundation for the proverb is that it was the reply of a Walsall man when asked if he and his wife were going to have a goose for their Christmas dinner.

<sup>2</sup> There swims no goose so grey, but soon or late

She finds some honest gander for her mate.
POPE, The Wife of Bath: Her Prologue, l. 98.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. To "shoe the goose" was to do something futile or silly.

<sup>4</sup> Goose, gander, and gosling,
Are three sounds, but one thing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>5</sup> Here you may roast your goose.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 18.

Thou cream-faced loon,

Where got'st thou that goose look?

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 3, l. 11.

<sup>6</sup> When the rain raineth and the goose winketh,
Little wots the gosling what the goose thinketh.

JOHN SKELTON, Works. Vol. i, p. 418. (c. 1520)

<sup>7</sup> In faith, else I had gone too long to school,
But if I could know a goose from a swan.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 302. (1529)

That by his art, can make a goose a swan.

JOHN ANDREWS, Anatomy of Baseness, p. 30. (1615)

All our geese are swans.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 14.

<sup>8</sup> The wild goose is more cosmopolite than we; he breaks his fast in Canada, takes a luncheon in the Susquehanna, and plumes himself for the night in a Louisiana bayou.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 21 March, 1840.

<sup>9</sup> A goose is a goose still, dress it as you will.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

<sup>10</sup> He gabbles like a goose among melodious swans. (Argutos inter strepere anser olores.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. ix, l. 36.

I dare not hope to please a Cinna's ear,
Or sing what Varus might vouchsafe to hear;
Harsh are the sweetest lays that I can bring,
So screams a goose where swans melodious sing.

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. 9, l. 34. (Beattie, tr.)

Shall I, like Curtius, desp'rate in my zeal,
O'er head and ears plunge for the Commonweal?
Or rob Rome's ancient geese of all their glories,

And cackling save the monarchies of Tories?
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 209.

<sup>11</sup> He is not able to say bo to a goose.

UNKNOWN, Mar-Prelate's Epistle, 60. (1588)

He never durst say so much as boh to a mouse.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-all, 15. (1610)

Can hardly tell how to cry bo to a goose.

SWIFT, The Grand Question Debated.

The phrase originates from the second fable of Æsop, first translated into English in 1484 by William Caxton. It soon became proverbial.

I—Government: Definitions

<sup>13</sup> The essence of a free government consists in an effectual control of rivalries.

JOHN ADAMS, Discourses on Davila. (1789)

<sup>14</sup> If any ask me what a free government is, I answer, that, for any practical purpose, it is what the people think so.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter to the Sheriffs of Bristol.

In all forms of government the people is the true legislator.

EDMUND BURKE, Tracts on the Popery Laws. Ch. 3, pt. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Government is a contrivance of human wisdom to provide for human wants. Men have a right that these wants should be provided by this wisdom.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

The moment you abate anything from the full rights of men each to govern himself, and suffer any artificial positive limitation upon those rights, from that moment the whole organization of government becomes a consideration of convenience.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

Obedience is what makes government, and not the names by which it is called.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

<sup>16</sup> Government is emphatically a machine: to the discontented a "taxing machine," to the contented a "machine for securing property."

CARLYLE, Signs of the Times.

<sup>17</sup> Of governments, that of the mob is most sanguinary, that of soldiers the most expensive, and that of civilians the most vexatious.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i.

1 The divine right of kings may have been a plea for feeble tyrants, but the divine right of government is the keystone of human progress, and without it government sinks into police and a nation into a mob.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Lothair: Preface.

2 Realms are households which the great must guide.

DRYDEN, Annus Mirabilis, l. 552.

For just experience tells, in every soil,
That those who think must govern those that toil;

And all that freedom's highest aims can reach,
Is but to lay proportion'd loads on each.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 371.

3 A sober prince's government is best.

DRYDEN, Epistles: To Sir Robert Howard, l. 54.

What government is the best? That which teaches us to govern ourselves. (Welche Regierung die beste sei? Diejenige die uns lehrt uns selbst zu regieren.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. Pt. iii.

That is the best government which desires to make the people happy, and knows how to make them happy.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece.

For forms of government let fools contest;
Whate'er is best administer'd is best.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 303.

The best of human governments is the patriarchal rule.

TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Subjection.

4 Government has been a fossil: it should be a plant.

EMERSON, Miscellanies: To the Mercantile Library Association.

5 All government is an evil, but of the two forms of that evil, democracy or monarchy, the sounder is monarchy; the more able to do its will, democracy.

B. R. HAYDON, Table-Talk.

6 Nothing appears more surprising to those who consider human affairs with a philosophical eye, than the easiness with which the many are governed by the few.

DAVID HUME, Essays: First Principles of Government.

7 The whole of government consists in the art of being honest.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 186.

8 Freedom of men under government is to have a standing rule to live by, common to every one of that society, and made by the legislative power vested in it; a liberty to follow my own will in all things, when the rule prescribes not, and not to be subject to the inconstant, uncertain, unknown, arbitrary will of another man.

JOHN LOCKE, On Government. Bk. x, ch. 4.

9 It is a great error, in my opinion, to suppose that government founded on force has more weight or stability than that which is bound together by the tie of good-will. (Et errat longe mea quidem sententia, Qui imperium credat gravius esse aut stabilius Vi quod fit quam illud quod amicitia adiungitur.)

PLAUTUS, Adelphi, l. 65. (Act i, sc. 1.)

Unjust rule never endures perpetually. (Iniqua numquam regna perpetuo morant.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 196.

A hated government does not endure long. (Invisa numquam imperia retinentur diu.)

SENECA, Phœnissæ, l. 660.

No one has long maintained a violent government; temperate rule endures. (Violenta nemo imperia continuit diu; Moderata durant.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 258.

No government is safe unless buttressed by good-will. (Nullum imperium tutum nisi benevolentia munitum.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS. (DIONYSIUS CATO, Lives: Cornelius Nepos.)

No Government can be long secure without a formidable Opposition.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 1.

10 As in men's bodies, so in government, that disease is most dangerous which proceeds from the head. (Utque in corporibus sic in imperio gravissimus est morbus, qui a capite diffunditur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iv, epis. 22.

Every wand or staff of empire is forsooth curved at the top. (Adeo ut omnes imperii virga sive bacillum vere superius inflexum sit.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Sapientia Veterum: Pan, Sive Natura. Sometimes condensed to, "All sceptres are crooked at the top." Referring to the shepherd's crook of Pan.

The deterioration of a government begins almost always by the decay of its principles. (La corruption de chaque gouvernement commence presque toujours par celle des principes.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Lois. Bk. viii, ch. 1.

11 The body politic, like the human body, begins to die from its birth, and bears in itself the causes of its destruction. (Le corps politique, aussi bien que le corps de l'homme, commence à mourir dès sa naissance, et porte en lui-même les causes de sa destruction.)

ROUSSEAU, Contrat Social. Bk. iii, ch. 11.

12 The very idea of the power and the right of the People to establish Government, presupposes the duty of every individual to obey the established Government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Farewell Address, 1796. I believe every citizen should support the government when final action is taken, whether he approves of the action or not.

W. J. BRYAN, Interview. (New York Times, 2 June, 1898.)

Though the people support the Government, the Government should not support the people.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Veto of Texas Seed Bill, 16 Feb., 1887.

Recall the principle of President Cleveland that it is the business of the people to support the government, not of the government to support the people.

CALVIN COOLIDGE. (Calvin Coolidge Says, 1931.)

1 No man ever saw a government. I live in the midst of the Government of the United States, but I never saw the Government of the United States.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Pittsburgh, Pa., 29 Jan., 1916.

II—Government: Apothegms

2 Nero could touch and tune the harp well; but in government, sometimes he used to wind the pins too high, sometimes to let them down too low.

APPOLONIUS, when Vespasian asked him the cause of Nero's overthrow. (BACON, Essays: Of Empire.)

Nothing destroyeth authority so much, as the unequal and untimely interchange of power pressed too far, and relaxed too much.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Empire.

3 The four pillars of government . . . religion, justice, counsel, treasure.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions.

4 In government change is suspected, though to the better.

FRANCIS BACON, Filum Labyrinthi.

In a change of government the poor change nothing but the name of their masters. (In principatu commutando civium Nil præter domini nomen mutant pauperes.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 15, l. 1.

5 "Separa et imperia," that same cunning maxim.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to James I, 1615, quoting Machiavelli.

Divide et imperia, that exploded adage.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. iv, ch. 1.

Divide and govern, a capital motto! Unite and lead, a better one! (Entzwei' und gebiete! Tüchtig Wort; Verein' und leite! Bess'rer Hort.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Reimen, 516.

Divide and govern. (Divide et imperia.)

LOUIS XI OF FRANCE, his motto when dealing with his nobles.

6 To govern mankind one must not over-rate them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Feb., 1754.

You can only govern men by serving them. The rule is without exception. (On ne gouverne les hommes qu'en les servant. Le règle est sans exception.)

VICTOR COUSIN.

7 The good governor should have a broken leg and keep at home.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

8 It were better to be a poor fisherman, than to meddle with the government of men!

GEORGES JACQUES DANTON. (CARLYLE, French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. vi, ch. 2.)

9 I have been carried into the ministry by a cannon-ball.

GEORGES JACQUES DANTON, after the insurrection of August, 1792. (TAINE, French Revolution.)

10 An institution is the lengthened shadow of one man.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

No institution will be better than the institutor.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Character.

11 He has erected the negation of God into a system of government.

W. E. GLADSTONE, referring to the King of Naples. (EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Work-ship.)

12 I will govern according to the commonweal, but not according to the common will.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Address, to the House of Commons, 1621.

13 I would not give half a guinea to live under one form of government rather than another. It is of no moment to the happiness of an individual.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 170.)

14 A wise man neither suffers himself to be governed, nor attempts to govern others.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères.

15 Every country has the government it deserves. (Toute nation a le gouvernement qu'elle mérite.)

JOSEPH DE MAISTRE, Letter, Aug., 1811.

16 He that would govern others, first should be The master of himself.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 3. See also under SELF-CONTROL.

17 Republics end through luxury; monarchies through poverty. (Les républiques finissent par le luxe; les monarchies, par la pauvreté.)

MONTESQUIEU, De l'Esprit des Lois. Bk. vii, ch. 4.

<sup>1</sup> The vanity and presumption of governing beyond the grave is the most ridiculous and insolent of all tyrannies. Man has no property in the generations which are to follow.

THOMAS PAINE, Reply to Burke, 1791.

<sup>2</sup> They that govern the most make the least noise.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Power.

<sup>3</sup> May I govern so,
To heal Rome's harms, and wipe away her woe!

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act v, sc. 3, l. 147.

<sup>4</sup> Ill can he rule the great that cannot reach the small.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. v, canto ii, st. 43.

<sup>5</sup> By common consent, he would have been deemed capable of governing had he never governed. (Omnium consensu capax imperii, nisi imperasset.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. i, sec. 49. Said of Galba. A masterpiece of epigrammatic point as written in the Latin.

But who can penetrate man's secret thought,
The quality and temper of his soul,
Till by high office put to frequent proof,
And execution of the laws?

SOPHOCLES, Antigone.

Command shows the man. (Ἀρχὰ ἀνδρα δείξει.)

BIAS. (ARISTOTLE, Ethics, v, i, 16.)

<sup>6</sup> The Athenians govern the Greeks; I govern the Athenians; you, my wife, govern me; your son governs you.

THEMISTOCLES. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 18, sec. 5.)

<sup>7</sup> Influence is not government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Political Maxims.

<sup>8</sup> We have been taught to regard a representative of the people as a sentinel on the watch-tower of liberty.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, U. S. Senate, 7 May, 1834.

III—Government: Its Purpose

<sup>9</sup> The principal business of government is to further and promote human strivings.

WILBUR L. CROSS, Interview, New York Times, 29 March, 1931.

<sup>10</sup> The care of human life and happiness, and not their destruction, is the first and only legitimate object of good government.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 359.

The only orthodox object of the institution of government is to secure the greatest degree of happiness possible to the general mass of those associated under it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xviii, p. 135.

The legitimate powers of government extend to such acts only as are injurious to others.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 221.

<sup>11</sup> A wise and frugal government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned—this is the sum of good government.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. iii, p. 320.

<sup>12</sup> When a white man governs himself, that is self-government; but when he governs himself and also governs another man, that is despotism. . . . No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854. Lincoln-Douglas Debates.

<sup>13</sup> Our object in the construction of the state is the greatest happiness of the whole, and not that of any one class.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iv, sec. 1.

<sup>14</sup> That wise Government, the general friend, Might every where its eye and arm extend.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. ii, canto iv, st. 47.

<sup>15</sup> The aggregate happiness of society, which is best promoted by the practice of a virtuous policy, is, or ought to be, the end of all government.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Political Maxims.

IV—Government: Its Faults

<sup>16</sup> A Parliament is nothing less than a big meeting of more or less idle people.

WALTER BAGEHOT, English Constitution, p. 180.

To be acquainted with the merit of a ministry, we need only observe the condition of the people.

JUNIUS, Letters. Letter 1.

The Commons, faithful to their system, remained in a wise and masterly inactivity.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, Vindiciæ Gallicæ. Sec. 1.

As though conduct could be made right or wrong by the votes of some men sitting in a room in Westminster!

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30, sec. 7.

<sup>17</sup> Law represents the effort of men to organize society; government, the efforts of selfishness to overthrow liberty.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

1 I have in general no very exalted opinion of the virtue of paper government.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech on Conciliation with America.

2 The quacks of government (who sate At th' unregarded helm of State).

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 333.

Nothing's more dull and negligent
Than an old, lazy government,
That knows no interest of state,
But such as serves a present strait.

BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 159.

3 An oppressive government is more to be feared than a tiger.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

4 A government of statesmen or of clerks? Of Humbug or of Humdrum?

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. ii, ch. 4.

5 The depositary of power is always unpopular.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13.

Men are suspicious; prone to discontent:
Subjects still loathe the present government.

HERRICK, Present Government Grievous.

He that goeth about to persuade a multitude that they are not so well governed as they ought to be, shall never want attentive and favourable hearers.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiastical Polity.

6 No government has ever been, or ever can be, wherein time-servers and blockheads will not be uppermost.

DRYDEN, Examen Poeticum: Dedication.

The foul, corruption-gendered swarm of state.
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Joan of Arc. Bk. iv.

Every actual State is corrupt.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Politics.

7 The teaching of politics is that the Government, which was set for protection and comfort of all good citizens, becomes the principal obstruction and nuisance with which we have to contend. . . . The cheat and bully and malefactor we meet everywhere is the Government.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

8 I am convinced that those societies (as the Indians) which live without government, enjoy in their general mass an infinitely greater degree of happiness than those who live under the European governments. Among the former, public opinion is in the place of law, and restrains morals as powerfully as laws ever did anywhere. Among the latter, under pretense of governing, they have divided their nations into two classes, wolves and sheep.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter, Paris, 16 Jan., 1787.

It is error alone which needs support of government. Truth can stand by itself.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Judge Tyler, 1804.

It is really more questionable than may at first be thought, whether Bonaparte's dumb legislature, which said nothing and did much, may not be preferable to one which talks much and does nothing.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 86.

9 There is no state in Europe where the least wise have not governed the most wise.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Rousseau and Malesherbes.

10 Nothing is so galling to a people, not broken in from the birth, as a paternal or, in other words, a meddling government, a government which tells them what to read and say and eat and drink and wear.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies.

11 Government, even in its best state, is but a necessary evil; in its worst state, an intolerable one.

THOMAS PAINE, Common Sense. Ch. 1.

12 Government arrogates to itself that it alone forms men. . . . Everybody knows that government never began anything. It is the whole world that thinks and governs.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Lecture: Idols, Boston, 4 Oct., 1859.

13 The punishment which the wise suffer who refuse to take part in the government, is to live under the government of worse men.

PLATO. (EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Eloquence.)

14 One of the greatest delusions in the world is the hope that the evils of this world can be cured by legislation. I am happy in the belief that the solution of the great difficulties of life and government are in better hands even than that of this body.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

15 The art of government is the organization of idolatry. The bureaucracy consists of functionaries; the aristocracy, of idols; the democracy, of idolaters. The populace cannot understand the bureaucracy: it can only worship the national idols.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

16 My reading of history convinces me that most bad government has grown out of too much government.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS, Thomas Jefferson, p. 49.

The world is governed too much.

UNKNOWN, Motto, of the Boston Globe.

I confess the motto of the "Globe" newspaper is so attractive to me that I can seldom find much appetite to read what is below it in its columns.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: New England Reformers.

1
Let's be jovial, fill our glasses;
Madness 'tis for us to think

How the world is ruled by asses,
And the wise are swayed by chink.

UNKNOWN, Let's Be Jovial. (Charms of Melody, Dublin, c. 1810.)

V—Government: Its Lack of Wisdom

2
Learn, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed. (Nescis, mi fili, quantilla sapientia regitur mundus.)

POPE JULIUS III, to a Portuguese monk who pitied him because he had the weight of the world on his shoulders. (BÜCHMANN, Ge-flügelte Worte.) Also attributed to Count Axel von Oxenstierna, Chancellor of Sweden, when urging his son to accept an appointment to the Peace Congress of Westphalia in 1648. Told also in connection with Conrad von Benningen, the Dutch statesman.

It calls to my mind what some pope, Alexander VI or Leo, said to a son of his afraid to undertake governing,—i. e., confounding the Christian world: "Nescis, mi fili, quam parva sapientia his noster mundus regitur."

LORD CHATEAUM, Letter to Lord Shelburne, 25 Jan., 1775.

He was a wise pope that, when one that used to be merry with him before he was advanced to the popedom refrained afterwards to come at him (presuming he was busy in governing the Christian world), sent for him and bade him come again, and (says he) we will be merry as we were before, for thou little thinkest what a little foolery governs the world.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pope.

With how little wisdom the world is governed. (Quam pauca sapientia mundus regitur.)

DR. JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Letter to Swift, 1732. Quoted.

4
Yet if thou didst but know how little wit governs this mighty universe.

APERA BEHN, The Round Heads. Act i, sc. 2.

5
It is indeed astonishing with how little wisdom mankind can be governed, when that little wisdom is its own.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 171.)

GRACE

I—Grace: Spiritual and Divine

6
Grace groweth after governance.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 395. (1566)

Sure 'tis an orthodox opinion,
That grace is founded in dominion.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 3, l. 1173.

7
There, but for the grace of God, goes John Bradford.

JOHN BRADFORD, Works. Vol. ii, p. 13, in biographical notice. (FARRAR, Eternal Hope: Fourth Sermon.) Bradford uttered the sentence on seeing a criminal pass by. It has been credited also to John Bunyan and John Wesley.

8
'Cause grace and virtue are within
Prohibited degrees of kin;
And therefore no true Saint allows
They shall be suffer'd to espouse.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto 1, l. 1293.

9
My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness.

New Testament: II Corinthians, xii, 9.

10
Thus all below is strength, and all above is grace.

DRYDEN, Epistle to Congreve, l. 19.

11
An outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace.

Book of Common Prayer: Catechism.

12
Ye are fallen from grace.

New Testament: Galatians, v, 4.

13
So grace is a gift of God and kind wit a chance.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Passus xv, l. 33.

14
Prevenient grace descending had remov'd
The stony from their hearts.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 3.

15
From vulgar bounds with brave disorder
part,

And snatch a grace beyond the reach of Art.
POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 154.

16
In his own grace he doth exalt himself.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 67.

Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right: we would, and we would not.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 36.

Hail to thee, lady! and the grace of heaven,
Before, behind thee and on every hand,
Enwheel thee round!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 85.

God give him grace to groan!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 21.

1 Grace me no grace, nor uncle me no uncle.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 87.

2 He made it a part of his religion never to say grace to his meat.

SWIFT, Tale of a Tub. Sec. 11.

She ask'd him for stuffing, she ask'd him for gravy,

She ask'd him for gizzard;—but not for Grace.

R. H. BARHAM, A Lay of St. Nicholas.

II—Grace: Physical

3 Her gracious, graceful, graceless Grace.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xvi, st. 49.

4 Beauty without grace is the hook without the bait.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Beauty.

Grace is more beautiful than beauty.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims.

Grace will last, beauty will blast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6292.

5 Stately and tall he moves in the hall

The chief of a thousand for grace.

KATE FRANKLIN, Life at Olympus.

6 Grace is to the body what judgment is to the mind. (La bonne grâce est au corps ce que le bon sens est à l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 67.

7 And grace that won who saw to wish her stay.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 43.

8 Absence of grace and inharmonious movement and discord are nearly allied to ill words and ill nature, as grace and harmony are the sisters and images of goodness and virtue.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 401.

9 See, what a grace was seated on this brow; Hyperion's curls; the front of Jove himself; An eye like Mars, to threaten and command; A station like the herald Mercury New-lighted on a heaven-kissing hill; A combination and a form indeed, Where every god did seem to set his seal, To give the world assurance of a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 55.

10 One woman is fair, yet I am well; another is wise, yet I am well: another virtuous, yet I am well; but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 28.

11 Whatever she does, wherever she goes, grace orders her actions and follows her movements. (Illam, quidquid agit, quoquo vestigia movit, componit furtim subsequiturque Decor.)

TIBULLUS, De Sulpicia. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 7.

12 Narcissus is the glory of his race:

For who does nothing with a better grace?

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. iv, l. 85.

He does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 88.

III—Grace: The Graces

13 Take time enough: all other graces

Will soon fill up their proper places.

JOHN BYROM, Advice to Preach Slow.

Learn to read slow: all other graces

Will follow in their proper places.

WILLIAM WALKER, The Art of Reading.

14 There are Batavian graces in all he says.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, retorting to Beresford Hope, who had referred to Disraeli as an "Asian mystery." Hope was descended from an Amsterdam family, and Disraeli's reference was to a sentence from Erasmus' Naufragium: "O crasum ingenium! Suspitor fuisse Batavum," "O dense intelligence! I suspect that it was Batavian," i. e. from the Netherlands, otherwise Batavia.

15 Alas! when all the gods assembled around his cradle to present their gifts, the graces were not there, and he to whom the favor of these fair powers is wanting may indeed possess much and be able to confer much, yet on his bosom we can never rest.

GOETHE, Tasso. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 197.

16 And joined with the Nymphs the lovely Graces. (Junctæque Nymphis Gratia decen-tes.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 4, l. 6.

Such stains there are—as when a Grace

Sprinkles another's laughing face

With nectar, and runs on.

W. S. LANDOR, Catullus.

17 Every man of any education would rather be called a rascal than accused of deficiency in the graces.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, iii, 54.)

18 Around the child bend all the three Sweet Graces—Faith, Hope, Charity.

Around the man bend other faces—

Pride, Envy, Malice, are his Graces.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram.

The three black graces, Law, Physic, and Divinity.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Punch's Holiday.

<sup>1</sup> My good Xenocrates, sacrifice to the Graces.
(Ὁ μακάριε Ξενοκράτης, θύε ταῖς Χάρισιν.)

PLATO, his advice to Xenocrates, whom he considered too grave and dignified. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Caius Marius. Ch. 2, sec. 3. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Xenocrates. Bk. iv, ch. 2, sec. 6.)

Dear Boy: I must from time to time remind you of what I have often recommended to you, and of what you cannot attend to too much: Sacrifice to the Graces.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

The Graces, the Graces; remember the Graces!

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 Jan., 1749.

Adorn yourself with all those graces and accomplishments, which, without solidity, are frivolous; but without which solidity is, to a great degree, useless.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Jan., 1750.

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. v, no. 95. Sometimes attributed to Callimachus.

Two goddesses now must Cyprus adore;
The Muses are ten, and the Graces are four;
Stella's wit is so charming, so sweet her fair face,
She shines a new Venus, a Muse, and a Grace.

SWIFT's rendering of the above epigram from the Greek Anthology.

PLATO, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, No. 506.)

GRAMMAR

<sup>4</sup> Idly curious race of grammarians, ye who dig up by the roots the poetry of others, . . . away with you, bugs that bite secretly the eloquent.

ANTIPEANES OF MACEDONIA. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xi, epig. 322.)

<sup>5</sup> So hath man sought to come forth of the second general curse, which was the confusion of tongues, by the art of grammar.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>6</sup> Heedless of grammar, they all cried, "That's him"!

R. H. BARHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims.

<sup>7</sup> More fault of those who had the hammering
Of prosody into me, and syntax,
And did it, not with hobnails but tintacks!

ROBERT BROWNING, The Flight of the Duchess. Sec. 15.

<sup>8</sup> For all a rhetorician's rules

Teach nothing but to name his tools.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 89.

<sup>9</sup> A heretic in grammar. (Hæreticus in Grammatica.)

ERASMUS, Synodus Grammaticorum.

<sup>10</sup> The grammarians are at variance, and the matter is still undecided. (Grammatici certant, et adhuc sub iudice lis est.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 78.

In all the mazes of metaphorical confusion.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 7, 3 Mar., 1769.

<sup>11</sup> Grammar is the grave of letters.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 114.

<sup>12</sup> Who climbs the Grammar-Tree, distinctly knows

Where Noun, and Verb, and Participle grows.
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 583. (John Dryden, tr.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Femmes Savantes. Act ii, sc. 6, l. 38.

<sup>14</sup> The greater part of this world's troubles are due to questions of grammar. (La plus part des occasions des troubles du monde sont grammairiennes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12.

<sup>15</sup> An aspersion upon my parts of speech!

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3.

EMPEROR SIGISMUND, at the Council of Constance, 1414, to a prelate who called his attention to a grammatical error in his opening speech. (MENZEL, History of the Romans, p. 325.)

Cæsar is above grammar.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, to Voltaire, when the latter urged him to write better French than Louis XIV.

<sup>17</sup> When I read some of the rules for speaking and writing the English language correctly, . . . I think—

Any fool can make a rule

And every fool will mind it.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Feb., 1860.

<sup>18</sup> Why care for grammar as long as we are good?

ARTEMUS WARD, Natural History. Pt. v,

GRANT, ULYSSES S.

1
Great Captain, glorious in our wars—
No meed of praise we hold from him;
About his brow we wreath the stars
The coming ages shall not dim.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, "*Great Captain,
Glorious in Our Wars.*"

The cloud-sent man! Was it not he
That from the hand of adverse fate
Snatched the white flower of victory?
He spoke no word, but saved the State.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, "*Great Captain,
Glorious in Our Wars.*"

2
Let us have peace: our clouded eyes
Fill, Father, with another light,
That we may see with clearer sight
Thy servant's soul in Paradise.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Death of Grant.

His was the heavy hand, and his
The service of the despot blade;
His the soft answer that allayed
War's giant animosities.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Death of Grant.

3
The Conquerer of a hundred fields
To a mighty Conqueror yields;
No mortal foeman's blow
Laid the great Soldier low;
Victor in his latest breath—
Vanquished but by Death.

FRANCIS FISHER BROWNE, Vanquished.

And if asked what state he hails from,
This our sole reply shall be,
"From near Appomattox Court-house,
With its famous apple-tree."

CHARLES GRAHAM HALPINE, A Bumper to Grant.
(Quoted by Roscoe Conkling in nominating Grant for the Presidency, June, 1880.)

5
Strong, simple, silent, such was he
Who helped us in our need. . . .
Nothing ideal, a plain people's man. . . .
Doer of hopeless tasks which praters shirk,
One of those still plain men that do the world's rough work.

J. R. LOWELL, On a Bust of General Grant.

6
The iron shackles which Lincoln declared should be loosed from the limbs and souls of the black slaves, Grant, with his matchless army, melted and destroyed in the burning glories of the war.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Address, on Grant's birthday, 1893.

7
How history repeats itself
You'll say when you remember Grant,
Who, in his boyhood days, once sought
Throughout the lexicon for "can't."
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, Grant.

GRAPES

8
The grapes are sour. (Pāyes ὀμφακίζουσι
μάλα.)

ÆSOP, Fables: The Fox and the Grapes.

"They are too green," said he, "and only good for fools." ("Ils sont trop verts," dit-il, "et bons pour des goudjats.")

LA FONTAINE, Le Renard et les Raisins. The fable is that the fox, seeing the lovely ripe grapes high on a trellis, and being unable to reach them, passed by with the above remark, and La Fontaine adds, "Wasn't that better than complaining?" (Fit-il pas mieux que de se plaindre?)

9
I see full well the fox will eat no grapes because he cannot reach them.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi. Sig. E3.
(1580)

10
There, economy was always "elegant," and money-spending always "vulgar" and osten-tationous—a sort of sour grapeism, which made us very peaceful and satisfied.

MRS. GASKELL, Cranford. Ch. 1.

11
Winter grape sour, whedder you kin reach
'im or not.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs.

12
The fox, when he cannot reach the grapes, says they are not ripe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

And like the fox, to cry the grapes are sour.
UNKNOWN, Wit for Money. Act iv. (1691)

13
Prudish clods of barren clay,
Who mope for heaven because earth's grapes are sour.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, The Saint's Tragedy. Act
ii, sc. 3.

14
The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xviii, 2.

The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxxi, 29.

15
And he looked that it should bring forth grapes, and it brought forth wild grapes.

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 2.

16
Is not the gleaning of the grapes of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abi-ezer?

Old Testament: Judges, viii, 2.

17
Poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 601.

GRASS

18
Go to grass.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Little French
Lawyer.* Act iv, sc. 7.

1
Here I come creeping, creeping everywhere;
My humble song of praise
Most joyfully I raise
To Him at whose command
I beautify the land,
Creeping, silently creeping everywhere.
SARAH ROBERTS BOYLE, The Voice of the Grass.

2
Grass and hay, we are all mortal.
RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimzies, 73. (1631)
See also under MORTALITY.

3
The grey horse, while his grass groweth, may starve for hunger, thus saith the proverb.
JOHN CAPGRAVE, Life of St. Katherine, ii, 253.
(c. 1440)

While the grass groweth the horse starveth.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Yet the old proverb I would have them know,
The horse may starve whilst the grass doth grow.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, *A Kicksey-
Winsey*. Pt. iv, last line.

Whilst grass doth grow, oft starves the silly steed.
GEORGE WHEATSTONE, Promos and Cassandry.

While the grass grows—
The proverb is something musty.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 358.

Live, horse! and thou shalt have grass.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

4
Grass grows at last above all graves.
JULIA C. R. DORR, Grass-Grown.

Pile the bodies high at Austerlitz and Waterloo.
Shovel them under and let me work—
I am the grass; I cover all.
CARL SANDBURG, Grass.

5
We say of the oak, "How grand of girth!"
Of the willow we say, "How slender!"
And yet to the soft grass clothing the earth
How slight is the praise we render.
EDGAR FAWCETT, The Grass.

6
Grass springeth not where the grand signior's horse setteth his foot.
THOMAS FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 30. Referred to as "the old proverb." (1639)

Of whom you may say, as of the Great Sultan's horse, where he treads the grass grows no more.
JOHN CLEVELAND, Works, p. 77. (1658)

7
I am tired of four walls and a ceiling;
I have need of the grass.
RICHARD HOVEY, Along the Trail: Spring.

8
A blade of grass is always a blade of grass,
whether in one country or another.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (MRS. PROZZI, Anecdotes of Johnson, p. 100.)

9
The green grass floweth like a stream
Into the ocean's blue.
J. R. LOWELL, The Sirens, l. 87.

10
The murmur that springs
From the growing of grass.
EDGAR ALLAN POE, Al Aaraaf. Pt. ii, l. 124.

The grass you almost hear it growing,
You hear it now, if e'er you can.
WORDSWORTH, The Idiot Boy, l. 285.

11
Grass grows not upon the highway.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 149.

12
How lush and lusty the grass looks! how green!

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 52.
O'er the smooth enamell'd green
Where no print of step hath been.
MILTON, Arcades, l. 84.

The scented wild weeds and enamelled moss.
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 15.

13
In the world's audience hall, the simple blade of grass sits on the same carpet with the sunbeam, and the stars of midnight.
RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 74.

14
There hath grown no grass on my heel since I went hence.

NICHOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act
iii, sc. 3.

I have not been idle—I have not let grass grow
under my feet.

UNKNOWN, The Spanish Bawd. Act iv, sc. 3.

15
A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands;

How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.

I guess it must be the flag of my disposition,
out of hopeful green stuff woven.

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord,
A scented gift and remembrancer designedly
dropt. . . .

And now it seems to me the beautiful uncut hair of graves.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 6.

GRASSHOPPER

16
Because half a dozen grasshoppers under a fern make the field ring with their importu-nate chink, whilst thousands of great cattle, reposed beneath the shadow of the British oak, chew the cud and are silent, pray do not imagine that those who make the noise are the only inhabitants of the field; that, of course, they are many in number; or that,
after all, they are other than the little, shrivelled, meagre, hopping, though loud and troublesome, insects of the hour.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France.

17
Happy insect! what can be
In happiness compared to thee?

Fed with nourishment divine,
The dewy morning's gentle wine!
Nature waits upon thee still,
And thy verdant cup does fill;
'Tis fill'd wherever thou dost tread,
Nature's self's thy Ganymede.

COWLEY, Anacreontiques: The Grasshopper.

<sup>1</sup> The grasshopper shall be a burden, and desire shall fail: because man goeth to his long home, and the mourners go about the streets.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5.

<sup>2</sup> Green little vaulter, in the sunny grass,
Catching your heart up at the feel of June,
Sole noise that's heard amidst the lazy noon.
LEIGH HUNT, To the Grasshopper and the Cricket.

Divine insect,
That sips of dew And sings!
WILLIAM GRIFFITH, Grasshopper.

<sup>3</sup> When all the birds are faint with the hot sun,
And hide in cooling trees, a voice will run
From hedge to hedge about the new-mown mead;
That is the grasshopper's—he takes the lead
In summer luxury—he has never done
With his delights; for when tired out with fun,
He rests at ease beneath some pleasant weed.
KEATS, On the Grasshopper and Cricket.

<sup>4</sup> The Grasshopper, the Grasshopper,
I will explain to you:—
He is the Brownies' Racehorse,
The Fairies' Kangaroo.
VACHEL LINDSAY, The Grasshopper.

GRATITUDE

I—Gratitude: Definitions

<sup>5</sup> Gratitude is a burden upon our imperfect nature.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 7 Nov., 1765.

Gratitude is a burden, and every burden is made to be shaken off. (La reconnaissance est un fardeau, et tout fardeau est fait pour être secoué.)
DIDEROT, Encyclopédie.

<sup>6</sup> While I would fain have some tincture of all the virtues, there is no quality I would rather have, and be thought to have, than gratitude. For it is not only the greatest virtue, but even the mother of all the rest. (Hæc est enim una virtus non solum maxima, sed etiam mater virtutum omnium reliquarum.)
CICERO, Pro Plancio. Ch. 33, sec. 80.

<sup>7</sup> Gratitude is one of those things that cannot be bought. It must be born with men, or else all the obligations in the world will not create it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 205.

<sup>8</sup> Gratitude is a fruit of great cultivation; you do not find it among gross people.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Tour to the Hebrides, 20 Sept., 1773.

<sup>9</sup> Justice is often pale and melancholy; but Gratitude, her daughter, is constantly in the flow of spirits and the bloom of loveliness.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Hume and Home.

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 298.

The gratitude of place-expectants is a lively sense of future favours.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE. (HAZLITT, Wit and Humour.)

<sup>11</sup> Gratitude is the memory of the heart. (La reconnaissance est la mémoire du cœur.)

JEAN BAPTISTE MASSIEU, Letter to the Abbé Sicard.

<sup>12</sup> And name it gratitude, the word is poor.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Sage Enamoured.

<sup>13</sup> Gratitude is a nice touch of beauty added last of all to the countenance, giving a classic beauty, an angelic loveliness, to the character.

THEODORE PARKER, Sermon: Of Moral Dangers Incident to Prosperity.

<sup>14</sup> If you do anything well, gratitude is lighter than a feather; if you give offense in anything, people's wrath is as heavy as lead. (Si quid bene facias, levior pluma est gratia: Si quid peccatumst, plumbeas iras gerunt.)

<sup>15</sup> Evermore thanks, the exchequer of the poor.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 65.

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 30.)

They say late thanks are ever best.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to Robert, Lord Cecil, July 1603.

II—Gratitude: Apothegms

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 18.)

1 Next to ingratitude, the most painful thing to bear is gratitude.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit.

2 Some people always sigh in thanking God.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 445.

I am glad that he thanks God for anything.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1775.)

3 In grateful looks,
Seraphs write lessons more divine than books.
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. i, sec. ii, l. 58.

4 Thank you for nothing.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 8.

5 Words are but empty thanks.
COLLEY CIBBER, Woman's Wit. Act v.

Accept my thoughts for thanks; I have no words.
HANNAH MORE, Moses.

Though my mouth be dumb, my heart shall thank you.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act ii, sc. 1.

6 Praise the bridge that carried you over.
GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, The Heir-at-Law. Act i, sc. 1.

It is strange men cannot praise the bridge they go over, or be thankful for favours they have had.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 368.

When our perils are past, shall our gratitude sleep?

No,—here's to the pilot that weathered the storm!

GEORGE CANNING, The Pilot. Sung in honor of William Pitt at a public dinner, 28 May, 1802.

7 When I'm not thanked at all I'm thanked enough.

FIELDING, Tom Thumb the Great. Act i, sc. 2.

8 Sweet music's melting fall, but sweeter yet
The still small voice of Gratitude.

THOMAS GRAY, Ode for Music, l. 63.

9 Thanksgiving for a former doth invite
God to bestow a second benefit.

ROBERT HERRICK, Thanksgiving.

10 Lord, for the erring thought
Not into evil wrought:

Lord, for the wicked will Betrayed and baffled still:

For the heart from itself kept,
Our thanksgiving accept.

WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS, Thanksgiving.

11 To receive honestly is the best thanks for a good thing.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Mary Marston. Ch. 5.

12 A grateful mind

By owing owes not, but still pays, at once
Indebted and discharg'd.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 55.

13 Thanks are justly due for boons unbought.
(Gratia pro rebus merito debetur inemptis.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 43.

14 One good turn deserves another. (Manus manum lavat.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 45.

Scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours. (Serva me, servabo te.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44.

15 Th' unwilling gratitude of base mankind!

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 14.

16 Possessions gained by the sword are not lasting; gratitude for benefits is eternal. (Non est diuturna possessio in quam gladio ducimus; beneficiorum gratia sempiterna est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, viii, 8, 11.

17 Let the man, who would be grateful, think of repaying a kindness, even while receiving it. (Qui gratus futurus est statim dum accipit de reddendo cogitet.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, l. 25.

18 Nothing is more honorable than a grateful heart. (Nihil esse grato animo honestius.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, 30.

19 Thou thought'st to help me; and such thanks
I give

As one near death to those that wish him live.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 133.

For this relief, much thanks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 8.

Such thanks As fits a king's remembrance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 25.

20 Beggar that I am, I am even poor in thanks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 280.

21 Let never day nor night unhallow'd pass,
But still remember what the Lord hath done.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 85.

22 Let but the commons hear this testament—
Which, pardon me, I do not mean to read—
And they would go and kiss dead Cæsar's wounds

And dip their napkins in his sacred blood,
Yea, beg a hair of him for memory,
And, dying, mention it within their wills,
Bequeathing it as a rich legacy

Unto their issue.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 135.

1 Within this wall of flesh
There is a soul counts thee her creditor.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 20.

2 Thank me no thankings, nor proud me no prouds.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 153.

3 Do you like gratitude? I don't. If pity is akin to love, gratitude is akin to the other thing.
BERNARD SHAW, Arms and the Man. Act iii.

4 And though I ebb in worth, I'll flow in thanks.
JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER-POET, *A Very
Merry-Wherry-Ferry Voyage*, l. 520.

5 In everything give thanks. ('Εν παντι εὐχαριστεῖτε.)
New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 18.

6 I've heard of hearts unkind, kind deeds
With coldness still returning;
Alas! the gratitude of men
Hath oftener left me mourning.
WORDSWORTH, Simon Lee, l. 93.

7 But whether we have less or more,
Always thank we God therefor.
UNKNOWN, Fabliau of Sir Cleyes. (c. 1450)
Be thankful f'r what ye have not, Hinnissy—
'tis the on'y safe rule.
PETER F. DUNNE, Thanksgiving.

GRAVE

I—Grave: Definitions

8 The grave is Heaven's golden gate,
And rich and poor around it wait;
O Shepherdess of England's fold,
Behold this gate of pearl and gold!
WILLIAM BLAKE, Dedication of the Designs to Blair's "Grave": To Queen Charlotte.

9 Our noblest piles and stateliest rooms,
Are mere out-houses to our tombs;
Cities, tho' ere so great and brave,
But mere warehouses to the grave.
SAMUEL BUTLER, The Weakness and Misery of Man, l. 85.

The most magnificent and costly dome
Is but an upper chamber to the tomb.
YOUNG, The Last Day. Bk. ii, l. 87.

The gay assembly's gayest room
Is but the upper story of some tomb.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 481.

Build houses of five hundred by a hundred feet,
forgetting that of six by two.
FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. ii, ch. 8.

10 A clayey tenement.
THOMAS CAREW, Epitaphs: On the Lady Mary Villiers.

A pick-axe and a spade,
And eke a shrouding-sheet,
A house of clay for to be made
For such a guest most meet.
THOMAS VAUX, *The Aged Lover Renounceth
Love*.

11 Man goeth to his long home.
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 5.

And thy travail shalt thou soon end,
For to thy long home soon shalt thou wend.
ROBERT MANNYNG (ROBERT DE BRUNNE),
Handlyng Synne, l. 9195. (1303)

12 The grave is the general meeting-place.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4563.

13 If the heats of hate and lust
In the house of flesh are strong,
Let me mind the house of dust
Where my sojourn shall be long.
A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad, p. 19.

14 The house appointed for all living.
Old Testament: Job, xxx, 23.

15 The grave itself is but a covered bridge,
Leading from light to light, through a brief
darkness!
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. v.

16 He spake well who said that graves are the footprints of angels.
LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. iv, ch. 5.

17 Laid up in the wardrobe of the grave.
BISHOP JOHN PEARSON, Exposition of the Creed. Art. iv.

18 To that dark inn, the grave!
SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto vi, l. 717.
Inn of a traveller on his way to Jerusalem.
UNKNOWN, Inscription, on monument of Henry Alford, Dean of Canterbury, St. Martin's Churchyard, Canterbury.

19 The houses that he makes last till doomsday.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 1, l. 66.

20 That small model of the barren earth
Which serves as paste and cover to our bones.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 148.

21 All roads end at the grave, which is the gate of nothingness.
BERNARD SHAW, *The Adventures of the Black
Girl in Her Search for God*.

22 The lone couch of his everlasting sleep.
SHELLEY, Alastor, l. 57.

1 The grave
Is but the threshold of eternity.
SOUTHEY, Vision of the Maid of Orleans. Bk. ii.

2 The low green tent
Whose curtain never outward swings.
WHITTIER, Snow-Bound. St. 13.

II—Grave: Apothegms

3 Measure not thyself by thy morning shadow, but by the extent of thy grave; and reckon thyself above the earth by the line thou must be contented with under it.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i,
sec. 19.

4 An untimely grave.
THOMAS CAREW, On the Duke of Buckingham.

5 Even if he had one foot in the grave. (Etsi alterum pedem in sepulchro haberem.)

POMPONIUS, speaking of Julian. (Quoted by Erasmus.) The original phrase was "One foot in the ferry boat," indicating Charon's boat. (LUCIAN, Dialogues of the Dead.)

An old doting fool, with one foot already in the grave.

PLUTARCH, Morals: On the Training of Children.

One foot in the grave.
BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, *The Little French
Lawyer*. Act i, sc. 1.

In shepherd's phrase,
With one foot in the grave.
WORDSWORTH, Michael, l. 89.

6 Earth is the best shelter.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

No sure dungeon but the grave.
SCOTT, The Talisman. Ch. 19.

7 Of all the pulpits from which human voice is ever sent forth there is none from which it reaches so far as from the grave.

RUSKIN, Seven Lamps of Architecture. Ch. vi,
sec. 9.

Still from the grave their voice is heard.
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iii, Introduction.

8 Renowned be thy grave!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 281.
The graves of those that cannot die.
BYRON, The Giaour, l. 140.

9 Taking the measure of an unmade grave.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 3,
l. 70.

10 Cruel as death, and hungry as the grave!
THOMSON, The Seasons: Winter, l. 393.

III—Grave: Its Democracy

See also Death the Leveler

11 Earth to earth and dust to dust!

Here the evil and the just,
Here the youthful and the old,
Here the fearful and the bold,
Here the matron and the maid
In one silent bed are laid;
Here the sword and sceptre rust—
Earth to earth and dust to dust.
GEORGE CROLY, A Dirge.

12 Earth laughs in flowers, to see her boastful boys

Earth-proud, proud of the earth which is not theirs;

Who steer the plough, but can not steer their feet

Clear of the grave.
EMERSON, Hamatreya.

13 The boast of heraldry, the pomp of pow'r,
And all that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Awaits alike th' inevitable hour.

The paths of glory lead but to the grave.
THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 33 (1751)

Ah me! what boots us all our boasted power,
Our golden treasure, and our purple state.
They cannot ward the inevitable hour,
Nor stay the fearful violence of fate.

RICHARD WEST, Monody on Queen Caroline.
(1737)

14 Fond fool! six feet shall serve for all thy store,
And he that cares for most shall find no
more.

JOSEPH HALL, Satires. Ser. ii, sat. 3.

15 And now he has no single plot of ground,
Excepting that in which he sleeps so sound!

HENRY HARRISON, Epitaph for a Real-Estate Dealer.

16 A piece of a Churchyard fits everybody.
GEORGE HERBERT, Iacula Prudentum.

Both, heirs to some six feet of sod,
Are equal in the earth at last.
J. R. LOWELL, The Heritage.

17 Now limb doth mingle with dissolvèd limb
In nature's busy old democracy
WILLIAM VAUGHN MOODY, An Ode in Time of Hesitation.

18 For who's a prince or beggar in the grave?
THOMAS OTWAY, Windsor Castle.

19 The grave unites; where ev'n the great find
rest,
And blended lie th' oppressor and th' opprest!
POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 317.

20 And my large kingdom for a little grave,

A little little grave, an obscure grave.
 SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 153.
 1 I'll take a turn among the tombs,
 And see whereto all glory comes.
 ISAAC WATTS, The Hero's School.

IV—Grave: Its Comfort

2 Mine be the breezy hill that skirts the down;
 Where a green grassy turf is all I crave,
 With here and there a violet bestrown,
 Fast by a brook, or fountain's murmuring
 wave;
 And many an evening sun shine sweetly on my grave!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. ii, st. 17.

3 I gazed upon the glorious sky
 And the green mountains round,
 And thought that when I came to lie
 At rest within the ground,
 'Twere pleasant, that in flowery June,
 When brooks send up a cheerful tune,
 And groves a joyous sound,
 The sexton's hand, my grave to make,
 The rich, green mountain turf should break.
 WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT, June, l. 1.

4 I would rather sleep in the southern corner of a little country churchyard than in the tomb of the Capulets.
 EDMUND BURKE, Letter to Matthew Smith.
 Family vault of "all the Capulets."
 EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution
in France.

5 Soft sigh the winds of Heaven o'er their
 grave!
 THOMAS CAMPBELL, Battle of the Baltic. St. 8.

6 Once there, one will not be bothered. (Oui, alors je serai sans souci.)
 FREDERICK THE GREAT, looking at the royal tombs at Potsdam. The country house he built close by was called "Sans Souci."

7 Oh, the grave!—the grave!—It buries every error—covers every defect—extinguishes every resentment! From its peaceful bosom spring none but fond regrets and tender recollections. Who can look down upon the grave even of an enemy and not feel a compunctious throb, that he should ever have warred with the poor handful of earth that lies mouldering before him?

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch-book: Rural Funerals.

8 A very worthless rogue may dig the grave,
 But Hands unseen will dress the turf with daisies.
 F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, A Human Skull.

9 For rain it hath a friendly sound

To one who's six feet underground;
 And scarce the friendly voice or face:
 A grave is such a quiet place.
 EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Renascence.

10 There is a calm for those who weep,
 A rest for weary pilgrims found,
 They softly lie and sweetly sleep
 Low in the ground.
 JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Grave.

11 A grave seems only six feet deep
 And three feet wide,
 Viewed with the calculating eye
 Of one outside.

But when fast bound in the chill loam
 For that strange sleep,
 Who knows how wide its realm may be?
 Its depths, how deep?
 JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, A Grave.

12 Let children play
 And sit like flowers upon thy grave
 And crown with bowers,—that hardly have
 A briefer blooming-tide than they.
 FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE, A Danish Barrow.

13 Yet shall thy grave with rising flowers be dress'd,
 And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast;
 There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow,
 There the first roses of the year shall blow.
 POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate
Lady, l. 65.

14 But I must go before him; and, 'tis said,
 The grave's good rest when women go first to bed.
 WILLIAM ROWLEY, A Woman Never Vexed.
 Act v.

15 So be my grave my peace.
 SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 127.

16 This little life is all we must endure,
 The grave's most holy peace is ever sure.
 JAMES THOMSON, City of Dreadful Night, xiv.

17 All things have rest, and ripen towards the grave.

TENNYSON, Lotos Eaters: Choric Song, l. 51.
 A quiet passage to a welcome grave.

Angler's Wish.

And gently slope our passage to the grave.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 689.

V—Grave: Its Terror

18 Far from famous sepulchres, toward a lonely cemetery, my heart, like a muffled drum, goes beating a funeral march. (Loïn des sépultures célèbres, Vers un cimetière isolé,

Mon cœur, comme un tambour voilé, Va battant des marches funèbres.)

CHARLES BAUDELAIRE, Le Guignon.

Our lives are but our marches to the grave.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Humorous Lieutenant.
Act iii, sc. 5, l. 76.

Our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

1
But when shall spring visit the mouldering urn!

O when shall it dawn on the night of the grave!

JAMES BEATTIE, The Hermit. St. 4.

2
Here are sands, ignoble things,
Dropt from the ruined sides of kings.

FRANCIS BEAUMONT, On the Tombs of Westminster Abbey.

3
For in the silent grave, no conversation,
No joyful tread of friends, no voice of lovers!

No careful father's counsels, nothing's heard,
For nothing is, but all oblivion,
Dust and an endless darkness.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Tragedy of Thierry and Theodoret. Act iv, sc. 1.

The grave's a fine and private place,
But none, I think, do there embrace.

ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress.

4
Done with the work of breathing; done
With all the world; the mad race run
Through to the end; the golden goal
Attained and found to be a hole!

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary, p. 63.

5
The grave, dread thing!
Men shiver when thou'rt named: Nature
appalled,
Shakes off her wonted firmness.

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 9.

6
There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 10.

7
Graves, they say, are warm'd by glory;
Foolish words and empty story.

HEINE, Latest Poems: Epilogue, l. 1.

8
Lost to the world, lost to myself, alone
Here now I rest under this marble stone,
In depth of silence, heard and seen of none.

ROBERT HERRICK, On Himself.

9
The eyes of the sage, and the heart of the brave,

Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.

WILLIAM KNOX, Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?

10
She smiled; then drooping mute and broken-
hearted

To the cold comfort of the grave departed.
H. H. MILMAN, The Apollo Belvidere.

11
There are three things that are never satisfied, yea, four things say not, It is enough:
The grave; and the barren womb; the earth that is not filled with water; and the fire that saith not, It is enough.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxx, 15, 16.

12
The sepulchre,
Wherein we saw thee quietly inurn'd,
Hath op'd his ponderous and marble jaws.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 4, l. 48.

They bore him barefac'd on the bier; . . .
And in his grave rain'd many a tear.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 164.

13
Gilded tombs do worms infold.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act
ii, sc. 7, l. 69.

14
O heart, and mind, and thoughts! what thing
do you
Hope to inherit in the grave below?

SHELLEY, Sonnet: Ye Hasten to the Grave!

15
Hark from the tombs a doleful sound.
ISAAC WATTS, Funeral Thoughts.

The shadows of the grave.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 236.

GRAVEYARD

17
Here's an acre sown indeed,
With the richest royalest seed.
FRANCIS BEAUMONT, On the Tombs in Westminster Abbey.

There is an acre sown with royal seed.
JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living and Dying.
Ch. 1.

18
What's hallow'd ground? Has earth a clod
Its Maker meant not should be trod
By man, the image of his God,
Erect and free,

Unscourged by Superstition's rod
To bow the knee?

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Hallowed Ground.

19
This passive place a Summer's nimble mansion,
Where Bloom and Bees
Fulfilled their Oriental Circuit,
Then ceased like these.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. v, No. 74.

1
The solitary, silent, solemn scene,
Where Cæsars, heroes, peasants, hermits lie,
Blended in dust together; where the slave Rests from his labours; where th' insulting proud

Resigns his powers, the miser drops his hoard:

Where human folly sleeps.

JOHN DYER, Ruins of Rome, l. 540.

2
And in some little lone churchyard,
Beside the growing corn,

Her mightiest peasant-born.
EBENEZER ELLIOTT, Elegy on William Cobbett.

3
Beneath those rugged elms, that yew-tree's
shade,

Where heaves the turf in many a molder-
ing heap,

Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.
THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 13.

4
What corpse is curious on the longitude
And situation of his cemetery!

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Act vi, sc. 7.

5
Nowhere probably is there more true feeling, and nowhere worse taste, than in a churchyard.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Letters, p. 244.

6
I like that ancient Saxon phrase, which calls
The burial-ground God's-Acre! It is just;
It consecrates each grave within its walls,
And breathes a benison o'er the sleeping
dust.

LONGFELLOW, God's-Acre.

This is the field and Acre of our God,
This is the place where human harvests grow.

LONGFELLOW, God's-Acre.

We give to each a tender thought, and pass
Out of the graveyards with their tangled grass.

LONGFELLOW, Morituri Salutamus, l. 124.

There are slave-drivers quietly whipped underground,

There bookbinders, done up in boards, are fast bound,

There card-players wait till the last trump be played,

There all the choice spirits get finally laid,
There the babe that's unborn is supplied with a berth,

There men without legs get their six feet of earth,

There lawyers repose, each wrapped up in his case,

There seekers of office are sure of a place,
There defendant and plaintiff get equally cast,

There shoemakers quietly stick to the last.

happy memorial places,
Full of the stately repose and the lordly delight of the dead.

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hesperia.

10
There is a certain frame of mind to which a cemetery is, if not an antidote, at least an alleviation. If you are in a fit of the blues, go nowhere else.

GRAVITY

13
Gravity is only the bark of wisdom's tree,
but it preserves it.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

14
Never make people laugh. If you would succeed in life, you must be solemn, solemn as an ass. All the great monuments are built over solemn asses.

THOMAS CORWIN, advice to a young speaker, based upon his own experience.

15
His smile is sweetened by his gravity.

GEORGE ELIOT, Spanish Gypsy. Bk. i.

16 Gravity is the ballast of the soul, which keeps the mind steady.

THOMAS FULLER, Holy and Profane States: Gravity.

17 Gravity is a trick of the body devised to conceal deficiencies of the mind. (La gravité est un mystère du corps inventé pour cacher les défauts de l'esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 257.

18
Gravity is of the very essence of imposture.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics, i, 11.

19
What doth gravity out of his bed at midnight?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 324.

'Tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with Satan.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, l.
129.

20
As grave as judge that's giving charge.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots.

Grave as an owl in a barn.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Inconstant. Act iii, sc. 2.

GREATNESS

I—Greatness: Definitions

1 Great men are the true men, the men in whom nature has succeeded.

AMIEL, Journal. 13 Aug., 1865.

2 Greatness is a spiritual condition worthy to excite love, interest, and admiration; and the outward proof of possessing greatness is, that we excite love, interest, and admiration.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Culture and Anarchy: Sweetness and Light.

3 Greatness, after all, in spite of its name, appears to be not so much a certain size as a certain quality in human lives. It may be present in lives whose range is very small.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Sermons: Purpose and Use of Comfort.

4 All things that we see standing accomplished in the world are properly the outer material result, the practical realization and embodiment of Thoughts that dwell in the Great Men sent into the world.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lecture i, sec. 1.

5 For he seems to me to be the greatest man, who rises to a high position by his own merit, and not one who climbs up by the injury and disaster of another.

CICERO, Pro Roscio Amerino. Sec. 30.

6 Some must be great. Great offices will have Great talents.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 788.

7 Man is only truly great when he acts from the passions.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13.

8 The measure of a master is his success in bringing all men round to his opinion twenty years later.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Culture.

He is great who confers the most benefits.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-reliance.

I count him a great man who inhabits a higher sphere of thought, into which other men rise with labor and difficulty.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

He is great who is what he is from nature, and who never reminds us of others.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

9 Nothing great comes into being all at once; not even the grape or the fig. If you say to me now, "I want a fig," I shall answer, "That requires time." Let the tree blossom first, then put forth its fruit, and finally let the fruit ripen.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 7.

The heights by great men reached and kept

Were not attained by sudden flight,

But they, while their companions slept,
Were toiling upward in the night.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Ladder of St. Augustine. Inscribed beneath Longfellow's bust in the Hall of Fame.

10 Great men are the gifts of kind Heaven to our poor world; instruments by which the Highest One works out his designs; light-radiators to give guidance and blessing to the travelers of time.

MOSES HARVEY, Columbus.

11 Great men are rarely isolated mountain-peaks; they are the summits of ranges.

T. W. HIGGINSON, Atlantic Essays: Plea for Culture.

12 To be a great man, one must know how to make the most of fortune. (Pour être un grand homme, il faut savoir profiter de toute sa fortune.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 343.

It is not enough to have great qualities; one must make good use of them. (Ce n'est pas assez d'avoir de grandes qualités; il en faut avoir l'économie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 159.

13 Great spirits are not those who have fewer passions and greater virtue than ordinary men, but only those who have the greatest aims. (Les grandes âmes ne sont pas celles qui ont moins de passions et plus de vertu que les âmes communes, mais celles seulement qui ont de plus grands desseins.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées. No. 602.

Great hopes make great men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1759.

14 The great man is the man who can get himself made and who will get himself made out of anything he finds at hand.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. ii, ch. 15.

15 A great man is made up of qualities that meet or make great occasions.

J. R. LOWELL, My Study Windows: Garfield.

1 The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart.

MENCIUS, Works. Bk. iv, pt. 2, ch. 12.

2 That man is great, and he alone,
Who serves a greatness not his own,
For neither praise nor pelf:
Content to know and be unknown:
Whole in himself.

OWEN MEREDITH, A Great Man.

3 He alone is worthy of the appellation who either does great things, or teaches how they may be done, or describes them with a suitable majesty when they have been done; but those only are great things which tend to render life more happy, which increase the innocent enjoyments and comforts of existence, or which pave the way to a state of future bliss more permanent and more pure.

MILTON, The Second Defence of the People of England.

4 My formula for greatness in man is amor fati: that a man should wish to have nothing altered, either in the future, the past, nor for all eternity.

FRIEDRICH NIETZSCHE, Ecce Homo.

5 That man is great who can use the brains of others to carry on his work.

DONN PIATT, Memories of Men Who Saved the Union: W. H. Seward.

6 Look next on Greatness: say where Greatness lies:

"Where but among the heroes and the wise?"

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 217.

Who wickedly is wise, or madly brave,
Is but the more a fool, the more a knave.
Who noble ends by noble means obtains,
Or failing, smiles in exile or in chains,
Like good Aurelius let him reign, or bleed
Like Socrates:—that man is great indeed!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 231.

7 It is true greatness to have the frailty of a man with the security of a god. (Vere magnum, habere fragilitatem hominis, securitatem dei.)

SENECA. (BACON, Essays: Of Adversity.)

8 He is a great man who uses earthenware dishes as if they were silver; but he is equally great who uses silver as if it were earthenware. (Magnus ille est, qui fictilibus sic utitur quemadmodum argento. Nec ille minor est, qui sic argento utitur quemadmodum fictilibus.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 6.

Greatness is not absolute; comparison increases it or lessens it. A ship which looms large in the river seems tiny when on the ocean. (Nam magnitudo non habet modum certum; comparatio illam aut tollit aut deprimit. Navis, quæ in flumine magna est, in mari parvula est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xliii, 2.

None of those who have been raised to a loftier height by riches and honors is really great. Why then does he seem great to you? It is because you are measuring the pedestal along with the man.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, 31.

Why, then, is a wise man great? Because he has a great soul. (Quare ergo sapiens magnus est? Quia magnum animum habet.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxvii, sec. 18.

That man has shown himself great who has never grieved in evil days and never bewailed his destiny. (Magnus apparuit qui numquam malis ingemuit, numquam de fato suo questus est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cxx, 13.

9 Rightly to be great
Is not to stir without great argument,
But greatly to find quarrel in a straw,
When honour's at the stake.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 53.

10 He only is a great man who can neglect the applause of the multitude, and enjoy himself independent of its favour.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 172.

11 He is truly great that is little in himself, and that maketh no account of any height of honors.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3.

Yea, all things good await
Him who cares not to be great,
But as he saves or serves the state.

TENNYSON, Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington. St. 3.

12 What is a great life? It is the dream of youth realized in old age. (Qu'est-ce qu'une grande vie? C'est un rêve de jeunesse réalisé dans l'âge mûr.)

ALFRED DE VIGNY. (LOUIS RATISBONNE, Journal des Débats, 4 Oct., 1863.)

II—Greatness: Apothegms

13 We have not the love of greatness, but the love of the love of greatness.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics.

No sadder proof can be given by a man of his own littleness than disbelief in great men.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. 1.

14 Great men are seldom over-scrupulous in the arrangement of their attire.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2.

The defects of great men are the consolation of dunces.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius: Preface.

1 The great man who thinks greatly of himself, is not diminishing that greatness in heaping fuel on his fire.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Literary Character of Men of Genius. Ch. 15.

2 Great men have great faults.

THOMAS DRAKE, Biblio. Scholas. Instruct., 127.

Only great men have a right to great faults. (Il n'appartient qu'aux grands hommes d'avoir des grands défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 190.

Great men too often have greater faults than little men can find room for.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato.

It is not by his faults, but by his excellences, that we must measure a great man.

G. H. LEWES, On Actors and Acting. Ch. 1.

The only things worth remembering about a great man are his greatnesses; his littlenesses are of no importance.

BURTON STEVENSON, Great Americans: Introduction.

3 To become a great man, it is necessary to be a great rascal.

CARDINAL GUILLAUME DUBOIS, preceptor to the Duc de Chartres, later the Regent Orleans. While he was archbishop of Cambrai, he was kicked five times by the regent, once each for the rogue, the pimp, the priest, the minister, and the archbishop. He stood waiting for another kick. "What are you waiting for?" the regent demanded. "I beg your pardon," answered Dubois, "I await the sixth as cardinal." The regent gave him both kick and red hat.

4 Every great man is unique.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.

5 The great man makes the great thing. Wherever Macdonald sits, there is the head of the table.

EMERSON, Nature Addresses and Lectures: The American Scholar. Often erroneously quoted, "Where Macgregor sits," etc.

6 France has been considered thus far as the asylum of unfortunate monarchs: I wish that my capital should become the temple of great men.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 7 Oct., 1743.

7 In short, whoever you may be,
To this conclusion you'll agree,
When everyone is somebody,
Then no one's anybody!

W. S. GILBERT, The Gondoliers. Act ii.

8 No really great man ever thought himself so.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Ser. ii, ch. 4.

On wind and wave the boy would toss,
Was great, nor knew how great he was.
S. T. COLERIDGE, William Tell.

9 He who comes up to his own idea of greatness must always have had a very low standard of it in his mind.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk. Ser. ii, ch. 4.

10 Our grandeur lies in our illusions.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Grandeur.

11 Great in the council, glorious in the field.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 335. (Pope, tr.)

Great in glory, greater in arms. (O fama ingens, ingentior armis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 124.

Too huge for mortal tongue, or pen of scribe.
KEATS, Hyperion. Bk. i, l. 159.

Gallantly great.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 9 June, 1660.

12 The civilities of the great are never thrown away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. vi, p. 446.

13 Great men will always pay deference to greater.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Southey and Porson.

A great man knows the value of greatness; he does not hazard it, he will not squander it.

W. S. LANDOR, Pericles and Aspasia: Aspasia to Cleone.

14 He would be greater to posterity if he had been willing to be less great. (Major et apud posteros futuros, si minor esse voluisset.)

AUBROTUS MIREUS, Elogia Belgica. Of Erasmus.

15 And all the courses of my life do show
I am not in the roll of common men.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 42.

Greatness knows itself.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 74.

16 Yea, the elect o' the land.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 60.

The choice and master spirits of this age.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 163.

The foremost man of all this world.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 22.

17 But be not afraid of greatness: some are born great, some achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon 'em.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 156.

18 In me there dwells

No greatness, save it be some far-off touch
Of greatness to know well I am not great.
TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 447.

it,

And purple greatness met my ripened years.
DRYDEN, All for Love. Act i, sc. 1.

But thou art fair, and at thy birth, dear boy,

Nature and Fortune join'd to make thee great.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 51.

He was great ere fortune made him so.

DRYDEN, Death of Oliver Cromwell. St. 6.

<sup>9</sup> Great men, great nations, have not been boasters and buffoons, but perceivers of the terror of life, and have manned themselves to face it.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>10</sup> When divine souls appear, men are compelled by their own self-respect to distinguish them.

EMERSON, Journal, 1865.

Nature never sends a great man into the planet,
without confiding the secret to another soul.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

<sup>11</sup> The greatest truths are the simplest; and so are the greatest men.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

<sup>12</sup> A great man, living for high ends, is the divinest thing that can be seen on earth.

G. S. HILLARD, Life and Service of Webster.

<sup>13</sup> They would not be the great, were not the cause

They love so great that it must needs be lost.

MARY SINTON LEITCH, Pity the Great.

<sup>14</sup> Great men stand like solitary towers in the city of God.

LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 1.

<sup>15</sup> Great truths are portions of the soul of
man;

Great souls are portions of eternity.

J. R. LOWELL, Sonnets. No. vi.

<sup>16</sup> His the impartial vision of the great,
Who see not as they wish, but as they find.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm.

<sup>17</sup> A great man who neither sought nor shunned greatness, who found glory only because glory lay in the plain path of duty.

MACAULAY, Essays: John Hampden.

<sup>18</sup> No great intellectual thing was ever done by great effort; a great thing can only be done by a great man, and he does it without effort.

RUSKIN, Pre-Raphaelitism.

<sup>19</sup> One can be helped by a great man, even when he is silent. (Et est aliquid, quod ex magno viro vel tacente.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 40.

<sup>20</sup> He fought a thousand glorious wars,
And more than half the world was his,

And somewhere, now, in yonder stars,
Can tell, mayhap, what greatness is.
THACKERAY, The Chronicle of the Drum.

<sup>1</sup>
Dost thou look back on what hath been,
As some divinely gifted man,
Whose life in low estate began
And on a simple village green; . . .

And moving up from high to higher,
Becomes on Fortune's crowning slope
The pillar of a people's hope,
The centre of a world's desire?

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Sec. lxiv.

<sup>2</sup>
Great let me call him, for he conquered me.
YOUNG, The Revenge. Act i, sc. 1.

IV—Greatness and Goodness

<sup>3</sup>
They're only truly great who are truly good.
GEORGE CHAPMAN, Revenge for Honour. Act v, sc. 2.

The essence of greatness is the perception that virtue is enough.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

There was never yet a truly great man that was not at the same time truly virtuous.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Busy-body. No. 3.

<sup>4</sup>
He is at no end of his actions blest
Whose ends will make him greatest, and not best.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Tragedy of Charles, Duke of Byron. Act v, sc. 1.

Greatness and goodness are not means, but ends!
Hath he not always treasures, always friends,
The good great man? three treasures, Love, and Light,

And Calm Thoughts, regular as infant's breath;
And three firm friends, more sure than day and night,

Himself, his Maker, and the Angel Death!

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Good Great Man.

<sup>5</sup>
Great and good are seldom the same man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1752.

Too good for great things and too great for good.

There have, undoubtedly, been bad great men; but inasmuch as they were bad, they were not great.

LEIGH HUNT, Table Talk: Bad Great Men.

<sup>8</sup>
For he that once is good, is ever great.

BEN JONSON, The Forest: To Lady Aubigny.

<sup>9</sup>
Goodness is not tied to greatness, but greatness to goodness.

THOMAS MOFFETT, Healthis Improvement, 161. (1655) Quoted as a Greek proverb.

<sup>10</sup>
Ah God, for a man with heart, head, hand,
Like some of the simple great ones gone
For ever and ever by,
One still strong man in a blatant land,
Whatever they call him—what care I?—
Aristocrat, democrat, autocrat—one
Who can rule, and dare not lie!

TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 10, st. 5.

Dear Lord, but once before I pass away
Out of this Hell into the starry night
Where still my hopes are set in Death's despite,
Let one great man be good, let one pure ray
Shine through the gloom of this my earthly day
From one tall candle set upon a height.

ALFRED BRUCE DOUGLAS, Lighten Our Darkness.

<sup>11</sup>
The happy only are the truly great.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 300.

V—Greatness: Its Falsity

<sup>12</sup>
Great men are not always wise.
Old Testament: Job, xxxii, 9.

<sup>13</sup>
The more one approaches great men the more one finds that they are men. (Plus on approche les grands hommes, plus on trouve qu'ils sont hommes.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères.

<sup>14</sup>
Dignity without pride was formerly the characteristic of greatness; the revolution in morals is completed, and it is now pride without dignity.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Lopez Banos and Romero Alpuente.

<sup>15</sup>
Great is advertisement! 'tis almost fate;
But, little mushroom men, of puff-ball fame,
Ah, do you dream to be mistaken great
And to be really great are just the same?

RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, Alfred Tennyson.

<sup>16</sup>
To those who walk beside them, great men seem

Mere common earth; but distance makes them stars.

GERALD MASSEY, Hood, l. 11.

The Great Man is a man who lives a long way off.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xii, 36.

<sup>17</sup>
Great men,
Till they have gain'd their ends, are giants in Their promises, but, those obtain'd, weak pigmies

In their performance. And it is a maxim
Allow'd among them, so they may deceive,
They may swear any thing.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Great Duke of Florence. Act ii, sc. 3.

<sup>18</sup>
Consider first, that great

Or bright infers not excellence.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 90.

1 But still the great have kindness in reserve:
He help'd to bury whom he help'd to starve.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 247.

2 The great are only great because we are on our knees. Let us rise! (Les grands ne sont grands que parceque nous sommes à genoux;
relevons nous.)

P. J. PROUDHON, Révolutions de Paris: Motto.

The great are only great because we carry them on our shoulders; when we throw them off they sprawl on the ground.

DUBOSCQ-MONTANDRÉ, Point de l'Ovale.

Great men have to be lifted upon the shoulders of the whole world, in order to conceive their great ideas, or perform their great deeds.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 7 May, 1850.

3 He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act
ii, sc. 1, l. 139.

4 There is no such thing as a great man or a great woman. People believe in them, just as they used to believe in unicorns and dragons.
The greatest man or woman is 99 per cent
just like yourself.

BERNARD SHAW, Radio Address, 11 July, 1932.

Yet what are they, the learned and the great?
Awhile of longer wonderment the theme!
Who shall presume to prophesy their date,
Where nought is certain, save the uncertainty of fate?

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Cui Bono?

5 Ah vanity of vanities!

How wayward the decrees of fate are,

How very weak the very wise,

How very small the very great are!

THACKERAY, Vanitas Vanitatum. St. 9.

7 Pay not thy praise to lofty things alone.
The plains are everlasting as the hills.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home.

8 "There's nothing great
Nor small," has said a poet of our day, Whose voice will ring beyond the curfew of eve

And not be thrown out by the matin's bell.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. vii, l. 809.

There is no great and no small

To the soul that maketh all.

EMERSON, History.

To him no high, no low, no great, no small;
He fills, he bounds, connects and equals all!

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 279.

9 We find great things are made of little things
And little things go lessening, till at last Comes God behind them.

BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

10 Squirrels for nuts contend, and, wrong or right,

For the world's empire kings ambitious fight.
What odds?—to us 'tis all the self-same thing,

A nut, a world, a squirrel, and a king.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 203.

If I cannot carry forests on my back,
Neither can you crack a nut.

EMERSON, Fable. The squirrel's retort to the

RICHARD SAVAGE, Letter to a Friend.

3
Why, man, he doth bestride the narrow world
Like a Colossus, and we petty men
Walk under his huge legs and peep about
To find ourselves dishonourable graves.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 135.

4
Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel.
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 33.

Glory in excess is fraught with peril; 'tis the lofty peak which is smitten by heaven's thunderbolt. (Τὸ δ' ὑπερκόρας κλύειν εὖ βαρύ-βάλλεται γὰρ ὅσοις Διόθεν κάρανα.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 468.

The god smites with his thunderbolt creatures of greatness more than common, nor suffers them to display their pride; but such as are little move him not to anger; and it is ever on the tallest buildings and trees that his bolts fall; for it is heaven's way to bring low all things of surpassing bigness.

ARTABANUS. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, sec. 10.)

'Tis the tall pine that is oftenest shaken by the wind; 'tis the lofty towers that fall with heaviest crash; 'tis the highest mountains that the lightning strikes.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotas. Act iv, sc. 1.

9
Men in great place are thrice servants: servants of the sovereign or state, servants of fame, and servants of business. So as they have no freedom, neither in their persons, nor in their actions, nor in their times.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

The rising unto place is laborious, and by pains men come to greater pains; and it is sometimes base; and by indignities, men come to dignities. The standing is slippery, and the regress is either a downfall, or at least an eclipse.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place.

Glorious men are the scorn of wise men, the admiration of fools, the idols of parasites, and the slaves of their own vaunts.

16 I fear the Greeks, even when bringing gifts.
(Timeo Danaos et dona ferentis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 49.

Learn now of the treachery of the Greeks, and from one know the wickedness of all. (Accipe nunc Danaum insidias et crimine ab uno.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 65.

II—Greece: Her Glory

17 Cold is the heart, fair Greece, that looks on thee,

Nor feels as lovers o'er the dust they loved;
Dull is the eye that will not weep to see

Thy walls defaced, thy mouldering shrines removed

By British hands.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 15.

Fair Greece, sad relic of departed worth!
Immortal, though no more; though fallen, great!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 73.

And yet how lovely in thine age of woe,
Land of lost gods and godlike men, art thou!

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 85.

Where'er we tread 'tis haunted, holy ground.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 88.

<sup>1</sup> The isles of Greece, the isles of Greece!
Where burning Sappho loved and sung,

Where grew the arts of war and peace,

Where Delos rose, and Phœbus sprung!

Eternal summer gilds them yet,

But all, except their sun, is set.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

The mountains look on Marathon—

And Marathon looks on the sea;

And musing there an hour alone,

I dream'd that Greece might still be free.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

Earth! render back from out thy breast

A remnant of our Spartan dead!

Of the three hundred grant but three,

To make a new Thermopylæ!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

You have the Pyrrhic dance as yet,

Where is the Pyrrhic phalanx gone?

Of two such lessons, why forget

The nobler and the manlier one?

You have the letters Cadmus gave—

Think ye he meant them for a slave?

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iii, st. 86.

<sup>2</sup> Such is the aspect of this shore;

'Tis Greece, but living Greece no more!

So coldly sweet, so deadly fair,

We start, for soul is wanting there.

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 90.

Clime of the unforgotten brave!

Whose land from plain to mountain-cave

Was Freedom's home or Glory's grave!

Shrine of the mighty! can it be

That this is all remains of thee?

BYRON, The Giaour, l. 103.

<sup>3</sup> Again to the battle, Achæians!

Our hearts bid the tyrants defiance;

Our land, the first garden of Liberty's tree,

It has been, and shall yet be, the land of the free.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song of the Greeks.

<sup>4</sup> Earth proudly wears the Parthenon,

As the best gem upon her zone.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, The Problem.

<sup>5</sup> Bozzaris! with the storied brave

Greece nurtured in her glory's time,

Rest thee—there is no prouder grave,

Even in her own proud clime.

FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 156.

<sup>7</sup> The duration of the freedom and the glory of Greece was short. But a few such years are worth myriads of ages of monkish slumber, and one such victory as Salamis or Bannockburn is of more value than the innumerable triumphs of the vulgar herds of conquerors.

J. G. LOCKHART. (Blackwood's Magazine. Vol. i, No. 2.)

<sup>8</sup> On desperate seas long wont to roam,

Thy hyacinth hair, thy classic face,

Thy Naiad airs, have brought me home

To the glory that was Greece

And the grandeur that was Rome.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen.

III—Greece: Athens

<sup>9</sup> Ancient of days! august Athena! where,
Where are thy men of might? thy grand in soul?

Gone—glimmering through the dream of things that were:

First in the race that led to Glory's goal,

They won, and pass'd away—is this the whole?

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 2.

<sup>10</sup> I would rather live on a few grains of salt at Athens than dine like a prince at Craterus's table. ('Ἀλλὰ βούλομαι ἐν Ἀθήναις ἅλα λείχειν ἢ παρὰ Κρατέρῳ τῆς πολυτελοῦς τραπέζης ἀπολαύειν.)

DIOGENES, when Craterus invited him for a visit. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 57.) See also under NEW YORK.

<sup>11</sup> Wherever literature consoles sorrow or assuages pain, wherever it brings gladness to eyes which fail with wakefulness and tears, and ache for the dark house and the long sleep, there is exhibited, in its noblest form, the immortal influence of Athens.

MACAULAY, Essays: Mitford's History of Greece.

This is the gift of Athens to man. . . . her intellectual empire is imperishable. And when those who have rivalled her greatness shall have shared her fate; . . . when the sceptre shall have passed away from England; when, perhaps, travellers from distant regions shall in vain labour to decipher on some mouldering pedestal the name of our proudest chief; shall hear savage hymns chanted to some misshapen idol over the ruined dome of our proudest temple; and shall see a single naked fisherman wash his nets in the river of the ten thousand masts; her influence and her glory will still survive, fresh in eternal youth, exempt from mutability and decay, immortal as the intellectual principle from which they derived their origin, and over which they exercise their control.

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 11.

<sup>10</sup> Of all the many evils common to all men, the greatest is grief. (Πολλῶν φύσει τοῖς πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις κακῶν ὄντων μέγιστον ἔστιν ἡ λύπη κακόν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 668.

What philosophers can praise grief, the one thing most detestable of all? (Ægritudinem laudare, unam rem maxime detestabilem, quorum est tandem philosophorum?)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iv, ch. 25, sec. 55.

Grief is to man as certain as the grave:

Tempests and storms in life's whole progress rise, And hope shines dimly through o'er-clouded skies;

Some drops of comfort on the favour'd fall, But showers of sorrow are the lot of all.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Library, l. 641.

<sup>11</sup> Nothing becomes offensive so quickly as grief. When fresh, it finds some one to console it, but when it becomes chronic, it is ridiculed, and rightly.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxviii, 13.

<sup>12</sup> Oft have I heard that grief softens the mind And makes it fearful and degenerate.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 1.

For Grief is proud, and makes his owner stoop.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 69.

<sup>13</sup> Each substance of a grief hath twenty shadows,

Which shows like grief itself, but is not so; For sorrow's eye, glazed with blinding tears, Divides one thing entire to many objects.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 14.

<sup>14</sup> Some grief shows much of love;

But much of grief shows still some want of wit.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 73.

how many would be pitied who are now envied!

METASTASIO, Giuseppe Riconosciuto. Pt. i.

What private griefs they have, alas, I know not.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 216.

<sup>5</sup> Alas, how easy it is, though sorrow has touched us all, to speak brave words in another's grief! (Ei mihi, quam facile est, quamvis hic contigit omnes, Alterius luctu fortia verba loqui.)

OVID, Consolatio ad Liviam, l. 9.

Every one can master a grief but he that has it.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 29.

Men

Can counsel and speak comfort to that grief
Which they themselves not feel; but, tasting it,
Their counsel turns to passion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act v, sc. 1, l. 20.

<sup>6</sup> I followed rest; rest fled and soon forsook me;

I ran from grief; grief ran and overtook me.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 12.

<sup>7</sup> Much is needed to bring us grief, little to console us.

JEAN ROSTAND, Journal d'un Caractère.

<sup>8</sup> It is idle to grieve if you get no help from grief. (Supervacuum est dolore, si nihil dolendo proficias.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, 6.

<sup>9</sup> O, grief hath changed me since you saw me last.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act v, sc. 1, l. 297.

His grief grew puissant and the strings of life
Began to crack.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 216.

Alas, poor man! grief has so wrought on him,
He takes false shadows for true substances.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 79.

So full of artless jealousy is guilt,
It spills itself in fearing to be spilt.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 19.

15

Guilt is the source of sorrow, 'tis the fiend,
Th' avenging fiend, that follows us behind
With whips and stings.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Fair Penitent. Act iii, sc. 1.

16

Haste, holy Friar,
Haste, ere the sinner shall expire!
Of all his guilt let him be shriven,
And smooth his path from earth to heaven!
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 22.

17

And then it started like a guilty thing
Upon a fearful summons.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 148.

18

The lady doth protest too much, methinks.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 240.

19

My stronger guilt defeats my strong intent.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 40.

O wretched state! O bosom black as death!
O limed soul, that, struggling to be free,
Art more engaged!

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 67.

20

Suspicion always haunts the guilty mind.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act v, sc. 6, l. 11.

Terror haunts the guilty mind.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Rival Queens. Act v, sc. 1.

Guiltiness will speak
Though tongues were out of use.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 1, l. 109. See also under MURDER.

<sup>1</sup> What heavy guilt upon him lies!
How cursed is his name!
The ravens shall pick out his eyes,

And eagles eat the same.

I—Habit: Definitions

<sup>2</sup> Men acquire a particular quality by constantly acting in a particular way.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iii, ch. 5, sec. 10.

<sup>3</sup> If you want to do something, make a habit of it; if you want not to do something, refrain from doing it.

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 4.

<sup>4</sup> Habit is the approximation of the animal system to the organic. It is a confession of failure in the highest function of being, which involves a perpetual self-determination, in full view of all existing circumstances.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7.

<sup>5</sup> Habit is the enormous fly-wheel of society, its most precious conservative agent.

WILLIAM JAMES, Psychology. Vol. i, p. 121.

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xv, l. 83.

We sow our thoughts, and we reap our actions; we sow our actions, and we reap our habits; we sow our habits, and we reap our characters; we sow our characters, and we reap our destiny.

C. A. HALL.

Sow an act and you reap a habit. Sow a habit and you reap a character. Sow a character and you reap a destiny.

CHARLES READE.

<sup>7</sup> Habits are the daughters of action, but then they nurse their mother, and produce daughters after her image, but far more beautiful and prosperous.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Sermons. Vol. i, p. 181.

A thought,—good or evil,—an act, in time a habit,—so runs life's law.

RALPH WALDO TRINE, Life's Law.

<sup>8</sup> In ways and thoughts of weakness and of wrong,
Threads turn to cords, and cords to cables strong.

ISAAC WILLIAMS, The Baptistry. Image 18.

<sup>9</sup> Habit rules the unreflecting herd.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. ii, No. 28.

II—Habit: Apothegms

<sup>10</sup> The old coachman likes to hear the whip.
GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 30.

<sup>11</sup> Used to it, no doubt, as eels are to be flay'd.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 7.

<sup>12</sup> We are all, more or less, des animaux d'habitude.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 Sept., 1757.

Man is a bundle of habits.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>13</sup> Habit with him was all the test of truth;
"It must be right: I've done it from my youth."

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter iii, l. 138.

<sup>14</sup> A nail is driven out by another nail, habit is overcome by habit. (Clavus clavo pellitur, consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

ERASMUS, Diluculum.

Habit is overcome by habit. (Consuetudo consuetudine vincitur.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 21, sec. 5.

<sup>15</sup> Cultivate only the habits that you are willing should master you.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 62.

<sup>16</sup> Fixed as a habit or some darling sin.

JOHN OLDHAM, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town.

<sup>17</sup> Use established habit. (Morem fecerat usus.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 345.

PERIANDER. (AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 215.)

Practice is the best of all instructors.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 439. The origin, perhaps, of the proverb: "Practice makes perfect."

PLATO, when a man whom he had rebuked for gambling protested that he played only for a trifle. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato, 38.)

Plato did once chide a child for playing with nuts, who answered him, "Thou chidest me for a small matter." "Habit" (replied Plato) "is no small matter."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22.

1 Evil habits, once settled, are more easily broken than mended. (Frangas enim citius quam corrigas quæ in parvum inducerunt.)

QUINTILIAN, De Institutione Oratoria. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 12.

2 For the ordinary business of life, an ounce of habit is worth a pound of intellect.

THOMAS B. REED. (W. A. ROBINSON, Life.)

3 But when the fox hath once got in his nose, He'll soon find means to make the body follow.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 25.

To evil habit's earliest wile
Lend neither ear, nor glance, nor smile—
Choke the dark fountain ere it flows,
Nor e'en admit the camel's nose.

LYDIA H. SIGOURNEY, The Camel's Nose.

Lord! how they chided with themselves,
That they had let him in;
To see him grow so monstrous now,
That came so small and thin.

THOMAS HOOD, The Wee Man.

III—Habit: Its Power

4 That which has become habitual becomes, as it were, a part of our nature; in fact, habit is something like nature, for the difference between "often" and "always" is not great, and nature belongs to the idea of "always," habit to that of "often."

ARISTOTLE, Rhetorica. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 3.

Habit becomes a sort of second nature, which supplies a motive for many actions. (Consuetudine quasi alteram quandam naturam effici, qua impulsus multa faciant.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 25, sec. 74.

Habit is second nature.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10.

For in physique this I find,
Usage is the second kind.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. vi, l. 664. (c. 1390)

5 This restless world
Is full of chances, which by habit's power
To learn to live is easier than to shun.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health. Bk. ii, l. 474.

6 Great is the power of habit. (Consuetudinis magna vis est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 17, sec. 40.

7 Men's natures are alike; it is their habits that carry them far apart.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (Giles, tr.)

8 Nothing really pleasant or unpleasant subsists by nature, but all things become so by habit.

EPICETUS, Fragments. No. 143.

9 There is nothing greater than habit. (Nil adsuetudine majus.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 345.

10 Ill habits gather by unseen degrees,
As brooks make rivers, rivers run to seas.

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xv, l. 155. (Dryden, tr.)

Small habits well pursued betimes
May reach the dignity of crimes.

HANNAH MORE, Florio. Pt. i.

11 Through habit you will be led into it again.
(Consuetudine animus rursus te huc inducet.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 1001. (Act v, sc. 4.)

12 Habit is stronger than nature. (Consuetudo natura potentior est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. v, sec. 5, l. 21.

For use almost can change the stamp of nature.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 169.

Habit is ten times nature.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Sayings.

13 For me, who have spent my whole life in the practice of virtue, right conduct has become a habit. (Mihi, qui omnem ætatem in optumis artibus egi, bene facere jam ex consuetudine in naturam vortit.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 85, sec. 9.

14 How many unjust and wicked things are done from habit. (Quam multa injusta ac prava fiunt moribus!)

TERENCE, Heauton Timoroumenos, l. 839. (Act iv, sc. 7.)

15 To fall into a habit is to begin to cease to be.
MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 206.

HAIR

I—Hair: Apothegms

16 And though it be a two-foot trout,
'Tis with a single hair pull'd out.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto iii, l. 13.

BEAUTY DRAWS WITH A SINGLE HAIR, see BEAUTY: Sec. vii.

17 Loose his beard, and hoary hair
Stream'd, like a meteor, to the troubled air.
THOMAS GRAY, The Bard. Pt. i, st. 2.

Like a red meteor on the troubled air.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Four Prentices of London.

Shone like a meteor streaming to the wind.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 537.

18 A hairy body, and arms stiff with bristles, give promise of a manly soul. (Hispidamembra quidem et duræ per brachia sætæ Promittunt atrocem animum.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat ii, l. 11.

1 Katterfelto, with his hair on end,
At his own wonders, wond'ring for his bread.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 86. See also FEAR: ITS EFFECTS.

2 When friends leave we're downhearted;
Hair knows what 'tis to be parted!
W. S. LAPSLEY, Parting.

3 A fine head of hair adds beauty to a good face, and terror to an ugly one.
LYCURGUS. (PLUTARCH, Lives: Lycurgus. Ch.
22, sec. 1.)

4 The very hairs of your head are all numbered.
New Testament: Matthew, x, 30.

5 Even a hair has its own shadow. (Vel capillus habet umbram suam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 228.
Even a hair has its own shadow. (Etiam capillus unus habet umbram suam.)

BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 10.
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 191.

6 Long hair, little wit.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs. The French form is: "Longues cheveux, courte cheville."

TO SPLIT A HAIR, see under ARGUMENT.

7 Our heads are some brown, some black, some auburn, some bald.
SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 21.

8 Never shake Thy gory locks at me.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 50.

II—Hair: Women's Hair

9 Those curious locks so aptly twin'd,
Whose every hair a soul doth bind.
THOMAS CAREW, To A. L.: Persuasions to Love.

10 Tresses, that wear
Jewels, but to declare
How much themselves more precious are.
RICHARD CRASHAW, Wishes to His (Supposed)
Mistress.

11 For whom do you bind your hair, plain in your neatness? (Cui flavem religias comam Simplex munditiis?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 5, l. 4.
'Tis with elegance we are caught: let not your locks be lawless. (Munditiis capimur: non sint sine lege capilli.)

OID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 133.
Locks not wide-dispread,
Madonna-wise on either side her head.
TENNYSON, Isabel.

12 A chaste woman ought not to dye her hair yellow. (Τὴν γυναικα γὰρ τὴν σώφρον' οὐ δεῖ τὰς τρίχας ξανθὰς ποιεῖν.)
MENANDER, Fragments. No. 610.

13 To sport with Amaryllis in the shade
Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair.
MILTON, Lycidas, l. 68.

14 She, as a veil, down to the slender waist
Her unadorned golden tresses wore
Dishevelled, but in wanton ringlets wav'd
As the vine curls her tendrils.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 304.

15 I warn you that no rude goat find his way beneath your arms, and that your legs be not rough with bristling hairs! (Admonui, ne trux caper iret in alas, Neve forent duris aspera crura pilis!)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 193.

16 Her head was bare,
But for her native ornament of hair;
Which in a simple knot was tied above,
Sweet negligence, unheeded bait of love!
OVID, Metamorphoses: Meleager and Atalanta,
l. 68. (Dryden, tr.)

17 The meeting points the sacred hair dis sever
From the fair head, for ever, and for ever.
POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto iii, l. 153.

18 Even nature herself abhors to see a woman shorn or polled; a woman with cut hair is a filthy spectacle, and much like a monster;
. . . it being natural and comely to women to nourish their hair, which even God and nature have given them for a covering, a token of subjection, and a natural badge to distinguish them from men.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-Mastix.

III—Hair: Blonde and Brunette

19 Dear, dead women, with such hair, too—what's become of all the gold
Used to hang and brush their bosoms?
ROBERT BROWNING, A Toccata of Galuppi's.
St. 15.

20 When you see fair hair be pitiful.
GEORGE ELIOT, The Spanish Gypsy. Bk. iv, sc.
ii, l. 107.

21 Beware of her fair hair, for she excels
All women in the magic of her locks;
And when she winds them round a young man's neck,
She will not ever set him free again.
GOETHE, Faust: The Hartz Mountain, l. 335.
(Shelley, tr.)

22 It was brown with a golden gloss, Janette,
It was finer than silk of the floss, my pet;
'Twas a beautiful mist falling down to your wrist,
'Twas a thing to be braided, and jewelled,
and kissed—

'Twas the loveliest hair in the world, my pet.
CHARLES GRAHAM HALPINE, Janette's Hair.

1 And yonder sits a maiden,
The fairest of the fair,
With gold in her garment glittering,
And she combs her golden hair.
HEINE, The Lorelei. St. 3.

2 The little wind that hardly shook
The silver of the sleeping brook
Blew the gold hair about her eyes,—
A mystery of mysteries.
So he must often pause, and stoop,
And all the wanton ringlets loop
Behind her dainty ear—emprise
Of slow event and many sighs.
W. D. HOWELLS, Through the Meadow.

3 Borgia, thou once wert almost too august
And high for adoration; now thou'rt dust.
All that remains of thee these plaits unfold,
Calm hair meandering in pellucid gold.
W. S. LANDOR, On Lucretia Borgia's Hair.

4 Sabrina fair,
Listen where thou art sitting,
Under the glassy, cool, translucent wave,
In twisted braids of lilies knitting
The loose train of thy amber-dropping hair.
JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 859.

5 His . . . hyacinthine locks
Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clust'ring, but not beneath his shoulders broad.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 300.

6 The red-gold cataract of her streaming hair.
STEPHEN PHILLIPS, Herod. Act i.

7 Golden hair, like sunlight streaming
On the marble of her shoulder.
J. G. SAXE, The Lover's Vision. St. 3.

8 Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow:
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act iv, sc. 4, l. 194.

And her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 1, l. 169.

9 Thy fair hair my heart enchained.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Neapolitan Villanelle.

10 Her long loose yellow locks like golden wire, Sprinkled with pearl, and pearly flowers between,
Do like a golden mantle her attire.
SPENSER, Epithalamion. St. 9, l. 154.

Her golden hair was hanging down her back.
FELIX MCGLENNON. Title and refrain of popular song. (1884)

11 Rosalind: His hair is of a good colour.
Celia: An excellent colour: your chestnut was ever the only colour.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 11.

12 But she is vanish'd to her shady home
Under the deep, inscrutable; and there
Weeps in a midnight made of her own hair.
THOMAS HOOD, Hero and Leander. St. 116.

13 Within the midnight of her hair,
Half-hidden in its deepest deeps.
BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Pearl Weavers.

14 Rising up,
Robed in the long night of her deep hair.
TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 469.

IV—Hair: Gray

See also Age: Its Crown of Glory

15 My hair is gray, but not with years,
Nor grew it white
In a single night,
As men's have grown with sudden fears.
BYRON, The Prisoner of Chillon, l. 1.

Beauty, for confiding youth
Those shocks of passion can prepare
That kill the bloom before its time,
And blanch, without the owner's crime,
The most resplendent hair.
WORDSWORTH, Lament of Mary Queen of Scots. St. 6.

16 Then shall ye bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.
Old Testament: Genesis xlii, 38.

17 Since time a thousand cares
And griefs hath filed upon my silver hairs.
HERRICK, Hesperides: The Parting Verse.

18 'Tis not white hair that engenders wisdom.
(Οὐχ αὖ τρίχες ποιοῦσιν αὖ λευκαὶ φρονεῖν.)
MENANDER, Fragments. No. 639.

19 Bind up those tresses. O, what love I note
In the fair multitude of those her hairs!
Where but by chance a silver drop hath fallen.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 61.

V—Hair: Baldness

20 It is foolish to pluck out one's hair for sorrow, as if grief could be assuaged by baldness.
(Stultissimum in luctu capillum sibi evellere quasi calvitio mæror levaretur.)

BION OF BORYSTHENES, Sententiæ. (CICERO,
Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch.
26, sec. 62.)

Ofte tearing in his grief his unshorn hair. (Scindens dolore identidem intonsam comam.)

ACCIUS, Fragment. (Quoted by Cicero, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 26, sec. 62.)

Many were the hairs that he pulled from his head by the very roots. (Πολλὰς ἐκ κεφαλῆς προθελύνουσ ἔλκετο χαίτας.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 15.

1 A bald head is soon shaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 836.

2 No stealth of time has thinned my flowing hair.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. Elegy iv, st. 5.

3 He used to cut his hair, but now his hair has cut him.

THEODORE HOOK, of Planché. (THOMS, Nineteenth Century, Dec., 1881.)

4 He was as ballid as a cote.

LYDGATE, Troy-Book. Bk. ii, l. 4673. (1415)

Older than my father, more bald than a coot.

APULEIUS, The Golden Ass. Bk. v.

5 As incredulous as those who think none bald until they see his brains.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 267. (1580)

6 You manufacture, with the aid of unguents, a false head of hair, and your bald and dirty scalp is covered with painted locks. There is no need to call a hairdresser for your head. A sponge, Phoebus, would do the business better.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vi, epig. 57.

You collect your straggling hairs on either side, Marinus, endeavoring to conceal the vast expanse of your shining bald pate by the locks which still grow on your temples. . . . Why not confess yourself an old man? . . . There is nothing more contemptible than a bald man who pretends to have hair.

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 83.

7 Ugly is a field without grass, a plant without leaves, or a head without hair. (Turpis sine gramine campus, Et sine fronde frutex, et sine crine caput.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 249.

8 There's no time for a man to recover his hair that grows bald by nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 73.

Time himself is bald and therefore to the world's end will have bald followers.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 108.

A curled pate will grow bald.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act v, sc. 2, l. 169.

HAND

I—Hand: Apothegms

9 Go—let thy less than woman's hand Assume the distaff—not the brand.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto i, st. 4.

10 This hand hath offended—this unworthy hand. THOMAS CRANMER, putting into the fire his right hand, which had previously subscribed to the doctrines of Papal supremacy, as he was being burned at the stake, 1556.

11 Living from hand to mouth, soon satisfi'd.

My right hand is to me as a god. (Dextra mihi deus.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 773.

<sup>3</sup> Yet many hands together make light work.

WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 106. (1401)

Many hands make light work.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife. 1460. (HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, i, 188.) These are the earliest known uses in English of a proverb common to all languages.

II—Hand: Description

<sup>4</sup> There is a hand that has no heart in it, there is a claw or paw, a flipper or fin, a bit of wet cloth to take hold of, a piece of unbaked dough on the cook's trencher, a cold clammy thing we recoil from, or greedy clutch with the heat of sin, which we drop as a burning coal. What a scale from the talon to the horn of plenty, is this human palm-leaf! Sometimes it is like a knife-shaped, thin-bladed tool we dare not grasp, or like a poisonous thing we shake off, or unclean member, which, white as it may look, we feel polluted by!

C. A. BARTOL, The Rising Faith: Training.

<sup>5</sup> Your soft hand is a woman of itself, And mine the man's bared breast she curls inside.

ROBERT BROWNING, Andrea del Sarto.

<sup>6</sup> Even to the delicacy of their hand There was resemblance, such as true blood wears.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 45.

For through the South the custom still commands

The gentleman to kiss the lady's hands.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 105.

<sup>7</sup> Her hand seemed milk in milk, it was so white.

WILLIAM DRUMMOND, Of Phyllis.

'Twas a hand

White, delicate, dimpled, warm, languid, and bland.

The hand of a woman is often, in youth, Somewhat rough, somewhat red, somewhat graceless, in truth;

Does its beauty refine, as its pulses grow calm, Or as Sorrow has cross'd the life-line in the palm?

OWEN MEREDITH, Lucile. Pt. i, canto iii, sec. 14.

<sup>8</sup> Hands, that the rod of empire might have sway'd,

Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 47.

<sup>9</sup> Pale hands I loved beside the Shalimar, Where are you now? Who lies beneath your spell?

LAURENCE HOPE, Kashmiri Song.

Pale hands, pink-tipped, like lotus buds that float

On those cool waters where we used to dwell, I would have rather felt you round my throat, Crushing out life, than waving me farewell.

LAURENCE HOPE, Kashmiri Song.

<sup>10</sup> Hands of invisible spirits touch the strings Of that mysterious instrument, the soul, And play the prelude of our fate.

LONGFELLOW, The Spanish Student. Act i, sc. 3.

<sup>11</sup> His trembling hand had lost the ease, Which marks security to please.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction.

<sup>12</sup> What if this cursed hand Were thicker than itself with brother's blood, Is there not rain enough in the sweet heavens To wash it white as snow?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 43.

Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood Clean from my hand? No, this my hand will rather

The multitudinous seas incarnadine, Making the green one red.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 60.

All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act v, sc. 1, l. 58.

Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 2.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 393.

<sup>14</sup> See, how she leans her cheek upon her hand! O, that I were a glove upon that hand, That I might touch that cheek!

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act ii, 2, 23.

The white wonder of dear Juliet's hand.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act iii, 3, 35.

O had the monster seen those lily hands Tremble like aspen leaves, upon a lute.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act ii, 5, 45.

"Adieu," she cried, and waved her lily hand.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell.

<sup>15</sup> O, that her hand, In whose comparison all whites are ink, Writing their own reproach, to whose soft seizure

The cygnet's down is harsh and spirit of sense
Hard as the palm of ploughman.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act i, sc.
1, l. 55.

1
She has certainly the finest hand of any woman in the world.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 113. Sir
Roger is speaking of the widow.

HANGING

2
He who was knotting a halter for his neck, found gold and buried the halter in the treasure's place. But he who had hidden the gold, not finding it, fitted about his neck the halter which he had found.

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. xiv.

3
Three merry boys, and three merry boys,
And three merry boys are we,
As ever did sing in a hempen string
Under the gallows-tree.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Bloody
Brother*. Act iii, sc. 2.

4
Hanging is too good for him, said Mr.
Cruelty.

BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology.

5
Were it not that they are loath to lay out money on a rope, they would be hanged forthwith, and sometimes die to save charges.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
i, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 12.

6
No Indian prince has to his palace
More followers than a thief to the gallows.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 273.

For next to that interesting job,
The hanging of Jack, or Bill, or Bob,
There's nothing so draws a London mob
As the noosing of very rich people.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Dream.

The rope must not be mentioned in the house
of a man who has been hanged.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25.

Mention not a halter in the house of him that was hanged.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Name not a rope in his house who hanged himself.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs.

8
A halter made of silk's a halter still.

9
See the hangman when it comes home to him!

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 76.

Far better hang wrong flier than no flier.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 53.

10
They hanged a man today. . . . He died as game as if he was wan of th' Christyan martyrs instead iv a thief that'd hit his man wan crack too much. Saint or murderer, 'tis little different whin death comes up face front.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Mr. Dooley in the Hearts of his Countrymen: The Idle Apprentice.

11
The humorous thief who drank a pot of beer at the gallows blew off the foam because he had heard it was unhealthy.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Old Age.

12
Yes, we must, indeed, all hang together, or,
most assuredly, we shall all hang separately.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Retort, to John Hancock, who, in his address to the Continental Congress, just previous to the signing of the Declaration of Independence, had said, "It is too late to pull different ways; the members of the Continental Congress must hang together."

13
They were suffered to have rope enough till they had haltered themselves.

FULLER, Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1639)

Give him rope enough and he'll hang himself.
CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 3.

You shall never want rope enough.

RABELAIS, Works: Bk. v, Prologue.

14
He that is born to be hanged will never be drowned.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

He hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 1, l. 32.

15
And naked to the hangman's noose
The morning clocks will ring

A neck God made for other use
Than strangling in a string.

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 9.

For they're hangin' Danny Deeever, you can hear the Dead March play,

The regiment's in 'ollow square—they're hangin'
him to-day;

They've taken of his buttons off an' cut his stripes away,

An' they're hangin' Danny Deeever in the mornin'.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Danny Deeever.

16
And folks are beginning to think it looks odd,
To choke a poor scamp for the glory of God.
J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 492.

17
I will not leave you until I have seen you hanged. (Je ne te quitterai point que je ne t'aie vu pendu.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act iii, sc.
9, l. 18.

18
I went out to Charing Cross to see Major-General Harrison hanged, drawn, and quartered; which was done there, he looking as cheerful as any man could do in that condition.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 13 Oct., 1660.

<sup>1</sup> Go and hang yourself. (Exige, ac suspende te.)
PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 903. (Act iv, sc. 8.)

Get yourself a fine thick rope and hang yourself.
(Restim tu tibi cape crassam ac suspende te.)
PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 815. (Act v, sc. 2.)

Go, hang yourselves all!

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 4, 136.

Hang yourself, brave Crillon: we have fought at Arques and you were not there; but I love you all the same. (Pend-toi, brave Crillon, nous avons vaincu à Arques, et tu n'y étais pas.)

HENRY IV OF FRANCE, Letter, to his friend Crillon, the Ney of the sixteenth century. (VOLTAIRE, Henriade, viii, 109.) But Voltaire, that "inventor of history," changed the king's letter to suit himself, for it was written before Amiens, 20 Sept., 1597, not after Arques in 1589. Crillon had not joined Henry's party at that time. The sentence is engraved on a plaque at the Hotel de Crillon, Paris.

<sup>2</sup> Now fitted the halter, now travers'd the cart,
And often took leave, but was loth to depart.
MATTHEW PRIOR, The Thief and the Cordelier.

Nay, nay, quoth Stringer, when his neck was in the halter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 82.

<sup>3</sup> First Clown: What is he that builds stronger than either the mason, the shipwright, or the carpenter?

Second Clown: The gallows-maker; for that frame outlives a thousand tenants.

I—Happiness: Definitions

<sup>1</sup> Happiness does away with ugliness, and even makes the beauty of beauty.

AMIEL, Journal, 3 April, 1865.

<sup>2</sup> No one praises happiness as one praises justice, but we call it "a blessing," deeming it something higher and more divine than things we praise.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 4.

Felicity is the perfect virtue in a perfect life.

ARISTOTLE. (TRAHERNE, Centuries of Meditations.)

<sup>3</sup> Happiness is but a name.

CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, sec. 20.

A happy life must be to a great extent a quiet life, for it is only in an atmosphere of quiet that true joy can live.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, The Conquest of Happiness, p. 67. See also under QUIET.

<sup>5</sup> To fill the hour—that is happiness; to fill the hour, and leave no crevice for a repentance or an approval.

EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Experience.

Just to fill the hour—that is happiness.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

<sup>6</sup> I can find no meaning which I can attach to what is termed good, if I take away from it the pleasures obtained by taste, the pleasures which come from listening to music, the charm derived by the eyes from the sight of figures in movement, or other pleasures produced by any of the senses in the whole man.

EPICURUS, Athens, vii, 280. Quoted by Cicero, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iii, 18.

<sup>7</sup> Whoever does not regard what he has as most ample wealth, is unhappy, though he be master of the world.

EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 474.

A man may rule the world and still be unhappy, if he does not feel that he is supremely happy.

SENECA, paraphrasing Epicurus. (Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ix, sec. 21.)

Unblest is he who thinks himself unblest. (Non est beatus, esse se qui non putat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis., ix, sec. 21. Quoted from an unknown author.

He is not happy who does not think himself so. PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 984.

No man can enjoy happiness without thinking that he enjoys it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 150.

<sup>8</sup> Now happiness consists in activity: such is the constitution of our nature: it is a running stream, and not a stagnant pool.

J. M. GOOD, Book of Nature. Ser. iii, lect. 7.

<sup>9</sup> Happiness is a habit—cultivate it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

The hardest habit of all to break
Is the terrible habit of happiness.

THEODOSIA GARRISON, The Lake.

<sup>10</sup> Happiness is above all things the calm, glad certainty of innocence.

HENRIK IBSEN, Rosmersholm. Act iii.

It is only the spirit of rebellion which craves for happiness in this life. What right have we human beings to happiness?

HENRIK IBSEN, Ghosts. Act i.

Man is not born for happiness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. iv, p. 206.

We're born to be happy, all of us.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Perfect Lover. Act ii.

<sup>11</sup> Happiness is the only good, reason the only torch, justice the only worship, humanity the only religion, and love the only priest.

R. G. INGERSOLL, A Tribute to Eben Ingersoll.

<sup>12</sup> Happiness is not a reward—it is a consequence. Suffering is not a punishment—it is a result.

R. G. INGERSOLL, The Christian Religion.

Happiness is the legal tender of the soul.

INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child.

<sup>13</sup> Happiness consists in the multiplicity of agreeable consciousness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 1766.)

Happiness is not found in self-contemplation; it is perceived only when it is reflected from another.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 41.

Happiness is nothing if it is not known, and very little if it is not envied.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 80.

<sup>14</sup> We deem those happy who, from the experience of life, have learned to bear its ills, without being overcome by them.

<sup>15</sup> To be strong Is to be happy!

LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii, l. 731.

<sup>16</sup> Happiness, to some elation;
Is to others, mere stagnation.

AMY LOWELL, Happiness.

1 Happiness is a by-product of an effort to make some one else happy.

GRETTA PALMER, Permanent Marriage.

Happiness and Beauty are by-products.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

2 Happiness is a way-station between two little and too much.

CHANNING POLLOCK, Mr. Moneypenny.

3 O happiness! our being's end and aim!

Good, Pleasure, Ease, Content! whate'er thy name,

That something still which prompts th' eternal sigh,

For which we bear to live, or dare to die.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 1.

Happiness is the goal of every normal human being. As it is given to few men to die happy, the best that man can hope and strive and pray for is momentary happiness during life, repeated as frequently as the cards allow.

G. J. NATHAN, Testament of a Critic, p. 6.

4 Happiness: a good bank account, a good cook, and a good digestion.

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU.

5 Happiness lies in the consciousness we have of it, and by no means in the way the future keeps its promises.

GEORGE SAND, Handsome Lawrence. Ch. 3.

6 Happiness is the only sanction of life; where happiness fails, existence remains a mad and lamentable experiment.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 251.

7 Happiness is a wine of the rarest vintage, and seems insipid to the vulgar taste.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts.

HERBERT SPENCER, Essays: Representative Government.

9 He is happy that knoweth not himself happy.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs. Fo. 51. (1539)

He is happy that knoweth not himself to be otherwise.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1918. (1732)

10 The happiness of a man consisteth not in having temporal things in abundance, but a moderate competency sufficeth.

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt. i, ch. 22. See also under MODERATION.

11 What wisdom, what warning can prevail against gladness? There is no law so strong which a little gladness may not transgress.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 3 Jan., 1853.

12 The happiness of man consists in life, and life is in labor.

TOlstoy, What Is to Be Done? Ch. 38.

13 Happiness is the shadow of things past, Which fools shall take for that which is to be.

FRANCIS THOMPSON, The Night of Forebeing.

There is that in me—I do not know what it is—but I know it is in me. . . .

I do not know it—it is without name—it is a word unsaid;

It is not in any dictionary, utterance, symbol.

Something it swings on more than the earth I swing on.

To it the creation is the friend whose embracing awakes me. . . .

It is not chaos or death—it is form, union, plan—it is eternal life—it is Happiness.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of Myself. Sec. 50.

14 True happiness ne'er enter'd at an eye;

True happiness resides in things unseen.

 One is never as happy or as unhappy as one thinks. (On n'est jamais si heureux ni si malheureux qu'on s' imagine.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 49.
 A man is never as unhappy as he thinks, nor as happy as he had hoped. (On n'est jamais si malheureux qu'on croit, ni si heureux qu'on avait espéré.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 572.

 ii, sc. 1, l. 318.

9
 If it be my lot to crawl, I will crawl contentedly; if to fly, I will fly with alacrity; but, as long as I can avoid it, I will never be unhappy.

SYDNEY SMITH, Table Talk.

10
 Be happy, but be happy through piety.
 MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. xx, ch. 3.

11
 There is no duty we so much under-rate as
 the duty of being happy.

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

12
 So long as we can lose any happiness, we possess some.

BOOTH TARKINGTON, Looking Forward, p. 172.

13
 O thrice, four times happy they! (O terque quaterque beati.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 94.

Be happy ye, whose fortunes are already completed. (Vivite felices, quibus est fortuna peracta Jam sua.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iii, l. 493.

14
 Happy days are here again,
 The skies above are clear again.
 Let us sing a song of cheer again,
 Happy days are here again!

JACK YELLEN, Happy Days Are Here Again.
 Sung in a musical comedy, Chasing Rainbows. (1929)

 The spider's most attenuated thread
 Is cord, is cable, to man's tender tie
 On earthly bliss; it breaks at every breeze.
 YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 178.

III—Happiness: How It Is Won

16
 Inwardness, mildness, and self-renouncement
 do make for man's happiness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma.
 Ch. 3.

The eternal not ourselves which makes for happiness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma.
 Ch. 8.

17
 Oh, make us happy and you make us good.
 ROBERT BROWNING, The Ring and the Book.
 Pt. iv, l. 302

To be happy here is man's chief end,
 For to be happy he must needs be good.

KIRKE WHITE, To Contemplation.

18 Happiness seems made to be shared. (Le bonheur semble fait être partagé.)

CORNEILLE, Notes par Rochefoucauld. Also attributed to Racine.

All who joy would win
 Must share it,—Happiness was born a twin.
 BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 172.

19
 The best way to secure future happiness is to be as happy as is rightfully possible to-day.
 CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Happy Life.

20
 Human felicity is produced not so much by great pieces of good fortune that seldom happen, as by little advantages that occur every day.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1.

21
 Who is the happiest of men? He who values
 the merits of others,

And in their pleasure takes joy, even as though 'twere his own.

GOETHE, Distichs.

<sup>1</sup> Happiness in this world, when it comes, comes incidentally. Make it the object of pursuit, and it leads us a wild-goose chase, and is never attained.

HAWTHORNE, Journals. 21 Oct., 1852.

<sup>2</sup> I stumbled upon happiness once
In a forgotten cove
Between impassable ranges.

DuBOSE HEYWARD, I Stumbled Upon Happiness.

<sup>3</sup> Is it by riches or by virtue that men are made happy? (Utrumne Divitiis homines an sint virtute beati?)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 6, l. 73.

It's pretty hard to tell what does bring happiness.
Poverty an' wealth have both failed.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 191.

<sup>4</sup> The happy people are those who are producing something; the bored people are those who are consuming much and producing nothing.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 76.)

The happiest people seem to be those who have no particular cause for being happy except that they are so.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 223.)

<sup>5</sup> Do you wish never to be sad? Live rightly!
(Vis nunquam tristis esse? Recte vive!)

ISIDORUS, Scriptura, xiii, 223.

<sup>6</sup> How to gain, how to keep, how to recover happiness is in fact for most men at all times the secret motive of all they do, and of all they are willing to endure.

WILLIAM JAMES, Varieties of Religious Experience, p. 78.

<sup>7</sup> Happiness or misery usually go to those who have the most of the one or the other. (Le bonheur ou le malheur vont d'ordinaire à ceux qui ont le plus de l'un ou de l'autre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No.
551.

<sup>8</sup> You have to believe in happiness,
Or happiness never comes.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, You Have to Believe.

<sup>9</sup> A man's happiness is to do a man's true work.
(Εὐφροσύνη ἀνθρώπου ποιεῖν τὰ ἴδια ἀνθρώπου.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. viii, 26.

The happiness and unhappiness of the rational social animal depends not on what he feels, but on what he does.

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 16.

I sat there hard at work, happy as the day's long.
GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Bk. iii, ch. 12.

<sup>10</sup> Fix'd to no spot is Happiness sincere;
'Tis nowhere to be found, or ev'rywhere;
'Tis never to be bought, but always free.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 15.

<sup>11</sup> And if thou wouldst be happy, learn to please.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 266.

<sup>12</sup> Obviously the right to be happy demands that people should in so far as is humanly possible learn what they wish to know, and exercise the talents and faculties which bring them the most pleasure.

DORA RUSSELL, The Right to Be Happy, p. 126.

<sup>13</sup> You need never believe that a man can become happy through the unhappiness of another. (Non est quod credas quemquem fieri aliena infelicitate felicem.)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, 67.

<sup>14</sup> We have no more right to consume happiness without producing it than to consume wealth without producing it.

BERNARD SHAW, Candida. Act i.

<sup>15</sup> Ye seek for happiness—alas, the day!
Ye find it not in luxury nor in gold,
Nor in the fame, nor in the envied sway
For which, O willing slaves to Custom old,
Severe taskmistress! ye your hearts have sold.

SHELLEY, The Revolt of Islam. Canto xi, st. 17.

<sup>16</sup> Happiness never lays its finger on its pulse.
If we attempt to steal a glimpse of its features it disappears.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Death and Dying.

<sup>17</sup> In every part and corner of our life, to lose oneself is to be gainer; to forget oneself is to be happy.

R. L. STEVENSON, *Memories and Portraits:
Old Mortality*.

<sup>18</sup> Be not glad but when thou hast done well.
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Pt.
ii, ch. 6.

<sup>19</sup> No man is bless'd by accident or guess;
True wisdom is the price of happiness.
YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 191.

IV—Happiness: The Happy Man

<sup>20</sup> 'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago,
Tall and slender, and fallow and dry;
His form was bent, and his gait was slow,
His long thin hair was white as snow,
But a wonderful twinkle shone in his eye.
And he sang every night as he went to bed,
"Let us be happy down here below;

The living should live, though the dead be dead,"

Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

GEORGE ARNOLD, The Jolly Old Pedagogue.

1 She was a soft landscape of mild earth,
Where all was harmony, and calm, and quiet,
Luxuriant, budding; cheerful without mirth,
Which, if not happiness, is much more nigh it
Than are your mighty passions.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 53.

2 There is in man a higher than love of happiness;
he can do without happiness, and instead thereof find blessedness.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus: The Everlasting Yea.

3 The happiest heart that ever beat
Was in some quiet breast
That found the common daylight sweet,
And left to Heaven the rest.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Happiest Heart.

The message from the hedge-leaves,
Heed it, whoso thou art;

Under lowly eaves

Lives the happy heart.

JOHN VANCE CHENEY, The Hedge-bird's Message.

4 I do not understand what the man who is happy wants in order to be happier. (Qui beatus est non intelligo quid requirat, ut sit beator.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 8, sec. 23.

5 I've touched the height of human happiness,
And here I fix nil ultra.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act iv, sc. 6.

6 Happy the man, who, innocent,
Grieves not at ills he can't prevent;
His skiff does with the current glide,
Not puffing pulled against the tide.
He, paddling by the scuffling crowd,
Sees unconcerned life's wager rowed,
And when he can't prevent foul play,
Enjoys the folly of the fray.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 365.

7 The happy man is he that knows the world and cares not for it.

JOSEPH HALL. (INGE, Wit and Wisdom: Preface.)

8 Not him who possesses much, would one rightly call the happy man, but him who knows how to use with wisdom the blessings of the gods, and to endure hard poverty, who fears dishonor worse than death, and is not afraid to die for cherished friends or fatherland.

(Non possidentem multa vocaveris

Recte beatum; rectius occupat

Nomen beati, qui deorum
Muneribus sapienter uti

Duramque callet pauperiem pati
Peiusque leto flagitium timet,
Non ille pro caris amicis
Aut patria timidus perire.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 45.

9 Now the heart is so full that a drop overfills it,

We are happy now because God wills it.

LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Prelude.

10 Some have much, and some have more,
Some are rich, and some are poor,
Some have little, some have less,
Some have not a cent to bless
Their empty pockets, yet possess
True riches in true happiness.

JOHN OXENHAM, True Happiness.

11 Happy the man, who, void of cares and strife,
In silken or in leathern purse retains
A Splendid Shilling.

JOHN PHILIPS, The Splendid Shilling.

12 The blest today is as completely so
As who began a thousand years ago.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 75.

Heav'n to mankind impartial we confess,
If all are equal in their happiness:

But mutual wants this happiness increase;

All Nature's diff'rence keeps all Nature's peace.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 53.

13 That man is happy whom nothing makes less strong than he is; he keeps to the heights, leaning upon none but himself; for one who sustains himself by any prop may fall.

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. xcii, sec. 2.

14 Mankind are always happy for having been happy; so that if you make them happy now, you make them happy twenty years hence
by the memory of it.

SYDNEY SMITH, Lectures: Benevolent Affections. See also under REMEMBRANCE.

15 A happy man or woman is a better thing to find than a five-pound note.

R. L. STEVENSON, An Apology for Idlers.

16 If I have faltered more or less
In my great task of happiness;
If I have moved among my race
And shown no glorious morning face; . . .
Lord, thy most pointed pleasure take,
And stab my spirit broad awake;
Or, Lord, if too obdurate I,
Choose thou, before that spirit die,
A piercing pain, a killing sin,
And to my dead heart run them in!

R. L. STEVENSON, The Celestial Surgeon.

<sup>1</sup> We think no greater bliss than such
To be as be we would,
When blessed none but such as be
The same as be they should.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England. Bk. x,
ch. 59, st. 68.

V—Happiness: The Greatest Happiness of the Greatest Number

<sup>2</sup> That action is best which procures the greatest happiness for the greatest numbers; and that worst, which, in like manner, occasions misery.

FRANCIS HUTCHESON, Inquiry into the Original of Our Ideas of Beauty and Virtue:
Pt. ii, sec. 3, *An Inquiry Concerning Moral
Good and Evil*. (1720)

<sup>3</sup> The greatest happiness of the greatest number. (La massima felicità divisa nel maggior numero.)

CESARE DI BONESANA BECCARIA, *Trattato dei
Delitti e Delle Pene: Introduction*. (1764)

<sup>4</sup> Priestley was the first (unless it was Beccaria) who taught my lips to pronounce this sacred truth—that the greatest happiness of the greatest number is the foundation of morals and legislation.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works. Vol. x, p. 142.
(1830) The real author of the phrase was Francis Hutcheson, as given above. Bentham was responsible for its general introduction into literature, never losing an opportunity to enforce it as the basic principle of legislation and morality.

It is the greatest good to the greatest number which is the measure of right and wrong.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works. Vol. x, p. 142.

<sup>5</sup> That truth once known, all else is worthless lumber;

The greatest pleasure of the greatest number.

BULWER-LYTTON, King Arthur. Bk. viii, l. 70.

<sup>6</sup> No one can be perfectly happy till all are happy.

HERBERT SPENCER, Evanescent of Evil. Pt.
iii, ch. 30, sec. 16.

The production of the greatest happiness . . . is the true end of morality.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Ch. 31, sec. 2.

<sup>7</sup> The greatest happiness of the greatest number is best secured by a prudent consideration for Number One.

BULWER-LYTTON, Kenelm Chillingly.

VI—Happiness: Near not Far

<sup>8</sup> Wherefore, O mortal men, why seek you for your felicity abroad, which is placed within yourselves? (Quid igitur o mortales extra petitis intra uos positam felicitatem?)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiæ Consolationis. Bk. ii,
sec. 4, l. 72.

<sup>9</sup> To enjoy true happiness we must travel into a very far country, and even out of ourselves; for the pearl we seek for is not to be found in the Indian but in the Empyrean ocean.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt.
iii, sec. 11.

<sup>10</sup> If happiness hae not her seat
An' centre in the breast,

We may be wise, or rich, or great,
But never can be blest.

ROBERT BURNS, Epistle to Davie. St. 5.

If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast this jewel lies,
And they are fools who roam.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside.

Thus happiness depends, as Nature shows,
Less on exterior things than most suppose.

COWPER, Table Talk, l. 246.

<sup>11</sup> Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 431.

<sup>12</sup> Happiness grows at our own firesides, and is not to be picked in strangers' gardens.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Happiness.

<sup>13</sup> The foolish man seeks happiness in the distance;

The wise grows it under his feet.

JAMES OPPENHEIM, The Wise.

<sup>14</sup> The will of a man is his happiness. (Des Menschen Wille, das ist sein Glück.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Lager, vii, 25.

<sup>15</sup> Man is the artificer of his own happiness.

THOREAU, Journal, 21 Jan., 1838.

<sup>16</sup> True happiness is to no spot confined.

If you preserve a firm and constant mind,
'Tis here, 'tis everywhere.

J. H. WYNNE, History of Ireland.

VII—Happiness: Its Dangers

<sup>17</sup> What thing so good which not some harm may bring?

Even to be happy is a dangerous thing.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Darius: Chorus.

<sup>18</sup> Real happiness is cheap enough, yet how dearly we pay for its counterfeit.

HOSEA BALLOU, MS. Sermons.

<sup>19</sup>

There comes

For ever something between us and what
We deem our happiness.

BYRON, Sardanapalus. Act i, sc. 2.

1 He who talks much of his happiness summons grief.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

2 There is ev'n a happiness
That makes the heart afraid!

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Melancholy, l. 90.

3 Nothing is happy in every way. (Nihil est ab omni Parte beatum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 27.

4 You need never believe that anyone who depends upon happiness is happy. (Numquam credideris felicem quemquam ex felicitate suspensum.)

SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, l. 1.

5 O, how bitter a thing it is to look into happiness through another man's eyes!

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 2, 48.

6 A lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it: it would be hell on earth.

BERNARD SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i.

7 Happy, alas! too happy. (Felix, heu! nimium felix.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. iv, l. 657.

A man too happy for mortality.

WORDSWORTH, Vaudracour and Julia, l. 53.

8 Happiness is no laughing matter.

RICHARD WHATELY, Apotheams.

9 How sad a sight is human happiness,
To those whose thought can pierce beyond an hour!

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 307.

With anxious care they labour to be glad.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 226.

Beware what Earth calls happiness.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 341.

That the main harvest reaps.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 5,
l. 102.
- 4 You sunburnt sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow and be merry.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 134.
In harvest time, harvest-folk, servants and all,
Should make altogether good cheer in the hall.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: August's Husbandry.
- 5 And thus of all my harvest-hope I have Nought reaped but a weedy crop of care.
SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: December, l. 121.
- 6 Think, oh! grateful think
How good the God of Harvest is to you!
THOMSON, The Seasons: Autumn, l. 169.
- 7 Fancy with prophetic glance
Sees the teeming months advance; . . .
Sees the reddening orchard blow,
The harvest wave, the vintage flow.
THOMAS WARTON, The First of April, l. 97.
- 8 Once more the liberal year laughs out
O'er richer stores than gems of gold;
Once more with harvest song and shout
Is nature's boldest triumph told.
J. G. WHITTIER, Harvest Hymn.

HASTE

- 9 Haste is ever the parent of failure.
(Ἐπειχθῆναι μὲν οὖν πᾶν πρήγμα τίκει σφάλματα.)
ARTANABUS. (HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, 10.)
- 10 Make haste slowly. (Festina lente.)
CÆSAR AUGUSTUS. (SUETONIUS, Twelve Cæ-sars: Augustus, xxv, 4.) See also under PRU-DENCE.
- 11 Quickly enough, if done well enough. (Sat cito, si sat bene.)
CATO. Quoted by St. JEROME, Epistles, lxvi, 9.
Quickly enough if safely enough. (Sat cito si sat tuto.)
LORD ELDON, his favorite maxim. (TWISS, Life of Eldon. Vol. i, p. 46.)
- 12 There nis no workman, what-so-ever he be,
That may both worken well and hastily.
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 588.
- 13 He hasteth well that wisely can abide.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. i, l. 956.
- 14 For hasty man ne wanteth never care.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. iv, l. 1568.
(c. 1374)
The hasty person never wants woe.
CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605)
- 15 Whoever is in a hurry, shows that the thing he is about is too big for him. Haste and hurry are very different things.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 20 Aug., 1749.
He is invariably in a hurry. Being in a hurry is one of the tributes he pays to life.
ELIZABETH BIBESCO, Balloons.
Let us leave hurry to slaves.
EMERSON, Essays, Second Series: Manners.
Though I am always in haste, I am never in a hurry.
JOHN WESLEY, Letter, 10 Dec., 1777.
- 16 He that mounts him on the swiftest hope,
Shall often run his courser to a stand.
COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III (altered). Act i, l.
- 17 Sharp's the word!
COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act i.
- 18 With oars and sails. (Remis velisque.)
CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii,
ch. 11, sec. 25.
Add sails to your oars. (Remis adice vela tuis.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 790.
- 19 In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye.
New Testament: I Corinthians, xv, 52.
I'll take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling of an eye.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii,
sc. 2, l. 170.
- I'll be with you in the squeezing of a lemon.
GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i, sc. 2.
Instantly, in the twinkling of a bedstaff.
THOMAS SHADWELL, Virtuoso.
- 20 Nothing is more vulgar than haste.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.
Never lose your presence of mind, and never get hurried.
EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Books.
Nothing in haste but catching fleas.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.
- 21 Such persons as do make most haste in the beginning, have commonly worst speed toward the ending.
ERASMUS, Apothegms. (Udall, tr., 1542.)
When a man hath most haste he speedeth worst.
UNKNOWN, Jacke Jugeler. (c. 1560)
Her more than haste is mated with delays.
SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 909. (1593)

The more haste, the worse speed.

SAMUEL ROWLEY, Match at Midnight. Act i. (1633)

The greater hurry the worst speed.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. i, canto i, l. 23. (1705)

The more haste, ever the worst speed.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 1162. (1762)

1 I find this proverb true, that haste makes waste.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Gascoigne's Memories, iii, 7. (1575)

Haste makes waste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546); GREENE, Works, ii, 28. (1583); BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 1254. (1663); FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, May, 1753.

Haste makes waste, and waste makes want, and want makes strife between the good man and his wife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 151. (1678)

2 Haste and wisdom are things far odd.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2.

3 Ye make such tastings

As approve you to be none of the hastings.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

They are none of the hastings, who being slow and slack, go about business with no agility.

FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. iii, p. 243.

4 Man is created of hastiness.

The Koran. Ch. 21.

Haste is of the devil.

Alleged to be from the Koran, but not to be found there.

5 Hasty and adventurous schemes are at first view flattering, in execution difficult, and in the issue disastrous.

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxv, ch. 32.

Nothing can be done at once hastily and prudently.

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 557.

6 Back to thy punishment,
False fugitive, and to thy speed add wings.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 699.

Stand not upon the order of your going,
But go at once.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 118.

7 Too great haste leads us to error. (Le trop de promptitude à l'erreur nous expose.)

MOLIÈRE, Sganarelle. Sc. 12.

8 Stay a while, that we may make an end the sooner.

SIR AMYAS PAULET, when he saw too much haste in any matter. (FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 76.)

9 Ease and speed in doing a thing do not give the work lasting solidity or exactness of beauty.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Pericles.

10 Haste is slow. (Festinatio tarda est.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. ix, ch. 9, sec. 12.

11 Unless we hasten, we shall be left behind. (Nisi properamus, relinquemur.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, 24.

12 Celerity is never more admired

Than by the negligent.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 25.

13 This sweaty haste
Doth make the night joint-labourer with the day.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 1, l. 77.

14 Helter-skelter have I rode to thee,
And tidings do I bring.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act v, sc. 3, l. 99.

Then, horn for horn, they stretch an' strive;
Deil tak the hindmost, on they drive.

BURNS, Address to a Haggis. St. 4.

15 Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels
And fly, like thought, from them to me again.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 174.

Swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 101.

Bloody with spurring, fiery-red with haste.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 58.

As swift as swallow flies.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 172.

16 We must do something, and i' the heat.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 312.

Not so hot.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 66.

17 Haste still pays haste, and leisure answers leisure;

Like doth quit like, and measure still for measure.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act v, sc. 1, l. 415.

18 Yea, marry, that's the efastest way.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iv, sc. 2, l. 38.

The cause craves haste.

HAT

5 "So," he said, "by the same hat
I can know if my wife be bad
To me by any other man;

If my flowers ever fade or fall,
Then doth my wife me wrong with all,
As many a woman can.

ADAM OF COBSHAM, The Wright's Chaste Wife.

6 So Britain's monarch once uncovered sat,
While Bradshaw bullied in a broad-brimmed
hat.

JAMES BRAMSTON, Man of Taste. The reference is to John Bradshaw, who presided at the trial of Charles I.

It is the custom here for but one man to be allowed to stand covered.

CHARLES II, removing his hat when he saw that William Penn, during an audience, remained covered. Penn's reply is said to have been,
"Friend Charles, keep thy hat on!"

7 Here's your hat, what's your hurry?

BARTLEY C. COSTELLO. Title and refrain of popular song. (1904)

8 A hat not much the worse for wear.

COWPER, John Gilpin. St. 46.

Far happier is thy head that wears
That hat without a crown.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode: Clapham Academy.

9 "If I knew as little of life as that, I'd eat my hat and swallow the buckle whole," said the clerical gentleman.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 13.

10 Pull your hat on the windy side.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3978.

11 I live by pulling off the hat.

MATTHEW GREEN, On Barclay's Apology.

12 The hat is the ultimatum moriens of respectability.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Autocrat of the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 8.

Virtue may flourish in an old cravat,
But man and nature scorn the shocking hat.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 452.

13 It cannot be,—it is,—it is,—
A hat is going round.

O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders.

14 Come, my old hat, my steps attend!
However wags may sneer and scoff,
My castor still shall be my friend,
For I'll not be a caster off. . . .
Black, rusty grey, devoid of pelt,
A shocking shape or beaten flat,
Still there are joys that may be felt
All round my hat, all round my hat.

THOMAS HOOD, All Round My Hat. St. 1.

All round my hat I wore a green ribbon.

UNKNOWN, refrain of song, c. 1830. "Who's your hatter?" "What, the same old hat?"
"What a shocking bad hat!" were English jokes of the same period.

15 The Quaker loves an ample brim
A hat that bows to no salaam;
And dear the beaver is to him
As if it never made a dam.

THOMAS HOOD, All Round My Hat. St. 3.

It's odd how hats expand their brims as riper years invade,

As if when life had reached its noon it wanted them for shade!

O. W. HOLMES, Nux Postcænatia. St. 3.

16 A sermon on a hat: "The hat, my boy, the hat, whatever it may be, is in itself nothing —makes nothing, goes for nothing; but, be sure of it, everything in life depends upon the cock of the hat.' For how many men—we put it to your own experience, reader—have made their way through the thronging crowds that beset fortune, not by the innate worth and excellence of their hats, but simply, as Sampson Piebald has it, by 'the cock of their hats'? The cock's all."

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Romance of a Keyhole. Ch. 3.

17 As with my hat upon my head
I walk'd along the Strand,
I there did meet another man
With his hat in his hand.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Johnsoniana. A parody on Percy's Hermit of Warkworth.

18 bumped off the running board of existence to furnish plumage
for a lady's hat

DON MARQUIS, unjust.

1 Put your bonnet to its right use; 'tis for the head.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 95.

2 Their hats are pluck'd about their ears.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 73.

With your hat penthouse-like o'er the shop of your eyes.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 17.

3 If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signs: a' brushes his hat o' mornings; what should that bode?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 40.

An old hat and "the humour of forty fancies" prick'd in 't for a feather.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 69.

4 Where did you get that hat, that collar and that tie?

JOSEPH J. SULLIVAN, Where Did You Get that Hat? (1888)

5 I never saw so many shocking bad hats in my life.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, on seeing the first Reformed Parliament. (WILLIAM FRASER, Words on Wellington, p. 12.) The saying is attributed to the Duke of York, second son of George III, about 1817, by Gronow, in his Recollections.

6 All good hats are made out of nothing.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 17.

HAWTHORN

10 The hawthorn I will pu' wi' its lock o' siller grey,

Where, like an aged man, it stands at break
o' day.

BURNS, The Posie.

Tho' large the forest's monarch throws

His army-shade,

Yet green the juicy hawthorn grows,

Adown the glade.

BURNS, The Vision. Duan ii, st. 21.

11 Yet walk with me where hawthorns hide
The wonders of the lane.

EBENEZER ELLIOTT, The Wonders of the Lane.

12 The hawthorn bush with seats beneath the
shade,

For talking age and whispering lovers made.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 13.

13 And every shepherd tells his tale
Under the hawthorn in the dale.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 67.

Gives not the hawthorn-bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep

Than doth a rich embroider'd canopy

To kings that fear their subjects' treachery?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 5, l. 42.

14 In hawthorn-time the heart grows light.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. i.

HAWTHORNE, NATHANIEL

15 How paltry, how shrivelled and shrunken does the swallow-tail culture of the literary snob appear in contrast with the provinciality which invests the works of Hawthorne with the swift passion of New England summers.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS. (WIGGINS, Life, p.
148.)

16 There in seclusion and remote from men,
The wizard hand lies cold,

Which at its topmost speed let fall the pen,
And left the tale half told.

Ah, who shall lift that wand of magic power,
And the lost clew regain?

The unfinished window in Aladdin's tower

Unfinished must remain!

LONGFELLOW, Hawthorne. Hawthorne died with his last romance unfinished.

17 There is Hawthorne, with genius so shrinking and rare

That you hardly at first see the strength that is there;

A frame so robust, with a nature so sweet,
So earnest, so graceful, so lithe, and so fleet,
Is worth a descent from Olympus to meet.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 997.

His strength is so tender, his wildness so meek,

That a suitable parallel sets one to seek,— . . .
When Nature was shaping him, clay was not granted

For making so full-sized a man as she wanted,
So, to fill out her model, a little she spared
From some finer-grained stuff for a woman prepared,

And she could not have hit a more excellent plan
For making him fully and perfectly man.

J. R. LOWELL, A Fable for Critics, l. 1006.

21 Health and good estate of body are above all gold, and a strong body above infinite wealth.

Apocrypha; Ecclesiasticus, xl, 15.

<sup>1</sup> The first wealth is health. Sickness is poor-spirited, and cannot serve any one; it must husband its resources to live. But health or fulness answers its own ends, and has to spare, runs over, and inundates the neighborhoods and creeks of other men's necessities.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power.

<sup>16</sup> A man's own observation, what he finds good of and what he finds hurt of, is the best physic to preserve health.

BACON, Essays: Of Regimen of Health.

1 Men that look no further than their outsides, think health an appurtenance unto life, and quarrel with their constitutions for being sick; but I, that have examined the parts of man, and know upon what tender filaments that fabric hangs, do wonder that we are not always so.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 51.

2 The first was called Doctor Diet, the second Doctor Quiet, the third Doctor Merryman.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Government of Health. Fo. 51. (1558)

you don't like, and do what you'd druther
not."

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar.

The doctor is sure that my health is poor, he says that I waste away; so bring me a can of the shredded bran, and a bale of the toasted hay.

WALT MASON, Health Food.

IV—Health: The Valetudinarian

11 The life of the valetudinarian: Cf. the Italian epitaph of a person of this description: I was well; I would be better; and here I am.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 25.

12 Who lives medically lives miserably. (Qui medice vivit misere vivit.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy.
Quoted.

He that liveth by physic liveth miserably.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health: Dedication.
(1588)

13 When Health, affrighted, spreads her rosy wing,

And flies with every changing gale of spring.

BYRON, Childish Recollections, l. 3.

14 Some men employ their health, an ugly trick,
In making known how oft they have been sick.

COWPER, Conversation, l. 311.

15 And each imbibes his rations from a Hygienic Cup—

The Bunny and the Baby and the Prophylactic Pup.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Strictly Germ-Proof.

Oh, powerful bacillus,
With wonder how you fill us,

Every day!

While medical detectives,

With powerful objectives,

Watch your play.

W. T. HELMUTH, Ode to the Bacillus.

16 The most uninformed mind with a healthy body is happier than the wisest valetudinarian.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. vi, p. 167.

17 It is a grievous illness to preserve one's health by a regimen too strict. (C'est une ennuyeuse maladie que de conserver sa santé par un trop grand régime.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées.
No. 633.

'Tis an odious kind of remedy

To owe our health to a disease.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act iv, sc. 3.

He dies every day who lives a lingering life.
(Celuy meurt tous les jours, qui languit en vivant.)

PIERRARD POULLET, La Charité.

<sup>1</sup> No man can have a peaceful life who thinks too much about lengthening it. (Nulli potest secura vita contingere, qui de producenda nimis cogitat.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. iv, sec. 4.
Drinking and sweating—'tis the life of a dyspeptic. (Bibere et suadere vita cardiaci est.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. xv, sec. 3.

<sup>2</sup> It is better to lose health like a spendthrift than to waste it like a miser.

R. L. STEVENSON, Æs Triplex.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xii, l. 46.

<sup>4</sup> Health—silliest word in our language, and one knows so well the popular idea of health. The English country gentleman galloping after a fox—the unspeakable in full pursuit of the uneatable.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act i.

She is very much interested in her own health.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.

<sup>5</sup> Some reckon he killed himself with purgations.

CHARLES WRIOTHESLEY, Chronicle. Vol. i, p. 16. (1560)

A valetudinarian, who quacked himself to death.
JEREMY BENTHAM.

HEART

I—Heart: Definitions

<sup>6</sup> In each human heart are a tiger, a pig, an ass, and a nightingale. Diversity of character is due to their unequal activity.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary.

<sup>7</sup> The heart has such an influence over the understanding, that it is worth while to engage it in our interest. It is the whole of women, who are guided by nothing else: and it has so much to say, even with men, and the ablest men too, that it commonly triumphs in every struggle with the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

<sup>8</sup> The heart of the wise, like a mirror, should reflect all objects, without being sullied by any.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

For the human heart is the mirror

Of the things that are near and far;
Like the wave that reflects in its bosom
The flower and the distant star.

ALICE CARY, The Time to Be.

<sup>9</sup> The heart of a man is of itself but little, yet great things cannot fill it.

THOMAS DEKKER, Four Birds of Noah's Arke. (1609)

The heart is a small thing, but desireth great matters. It is not sufficient for a kite's dinner, yet the whole world is not sufficient for it.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems: Bk. i, Hugo de Anima. (1635)

<sup>10</sup> The heart asks pleasure first,
And then, excuse from pain;
And then, those little anodynes
That deaden suffering.

And then, to go to sleep;
And then, if it should be
The will of its Inquisitor,
The liberty to die.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 9.

<sup>11</sup> Who hath sailed about the world of his own heart, sounded each creek, surveyed each corner, but that there still remains therein much terra incognita to himself?

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State, p. 34.

<sup>12</sup> The alarum watch, your pulse.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 36.

My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,
And make as healthful music.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 140.

<sup>13</sup> The heart of man is made to reconcile contradictions.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Parties of Great Britain.

<sup>14</sup> The heart hath its own memory, like the mind,
And in it are enshrined

The precious keepsakes, into which is wrought
The giver's loving thought.

LONGFELLOW, From My Arm-Chair. St. 12.

<sup>15</sup> For all earth's width of waters is a span,
And their convulsed existence mere repose,
Matched with the unstable heart of man,
Shoreless in wants, mist-girt in all it knows,
Open to every wind of sect or clan,
And sudden-passionate in ebbs and flows.

J. R. LOWELL, Ode for the Fourth of July, 1876. Pt. iv, sec. 1.

The heart is like an instrument whose strings
Steal nobler music from Life's many frets:
The golden threads are spun thro' Suffering's fire,

Wherewith the marriage-robcs for heaven are woven:

And all the rarest hues of human life

Take radiance, and are rainbow'd out in tears.
GERALD MASSEY, Wedded Love.

<sup>1</sup>
The human heart is like a millstone in a mill:
when you put wheat under it, it turns and grinds and bruises the wheat to flour; if you put no wheat, it still grinds on, but then 'tis itself it grinds and wears away.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table Talk: Of Temptation and Tribulation.

A mill-stone and the human heart are driven ever round;

If they have nothing else to grind, they must themselves be ground.

LONGFELLOW, The Restless Heart.

Something the heart must have to cherish,
Must love, and joy, and sorrow learn;
Something with passion clasp, or perish,
And in itself to ashes burn.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion: Motto. Bk. ii. Longfellow states this to be a translation of a German poem, Forsaken, but does not give the author.

<sup>2</sup>
Two chambers hath the heart.
There dwelling, Live Joy and Pain apart.
(Zwei Kammern hat das Herz.
Drin wohnen, Die Freude und der Schmerz.) HERMANN NEUMANN, Das Herz. (Robinson, tr.)

<sup>3</sup>
Hearts have as many fashions as the world has shapes. (Pectoribus mores tot sunt, quot in orbe figuræ.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 759.

<sup>4</sup>
The heart is a free and a fetterless thing—
A wave of the ocean, a bird on the wing.

JULIA PARDOE, The Captive Greek Girl.

<sup>5</sup>
By every light, in every pose,
In God's Eternal Studios,
The human heart, with frown and laugh,
Is posing for its photograph.

PAUL SHIVELL, The Studios Photographic.

<sup>6</sup>
The hearts of men, which fondly here admire Fair seeming shows, and feed on vain delight,

Transported with celestial desire
Of those fair forms, may lift themselves up higher,
And learn to love, with zealous humble duty,
Th' Eternal Fountain of that heavenly
beauty.

SPENSER, Hymn in Honour of Beautie, l. 16.

II—Heart: Apothegms

<sup>7</sup>
The same heart beats in every human breast.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, The Buried Life, l. 23.

We have hearts within,
Warm, live, improvident, indecent hearts.
E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. iii. l. 462.

Every human heart is human.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha: Introduction, l. 91.

World-wide apart, and yet akin,
As showing that the human heart
Beats on forever as of old.

LONGFELLOW, *Tales of a Wayside Inn: Pt. iii,
The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth: Interlude*.

He fashioneth their hearts alike.

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiii, 15.

<sup>8</sup>
'Twas when young Eustace wore his heart
in's breeches.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Elder Brother.
Act v.

Thy heart is in thy hose!

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, 113. (c. 1410)

My heart's sunk down into my hose.

RABELAIS, Works. Bk. v, ch. 36. (1552)

My heart sank, as the saying is, into my boots.
R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 13.

<sup>9</sup>
It is now high time to take heart of grace.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism, 245. (1560)

Come, come, take heart of grace.

APHERA BEHN, Emperor of the Moon. Act ii,
sc. 2. (1687)

<sup>10</sup>
One can't tear out one's heart,
And show it, how sincere a thing it is!

ROBERT BROWNING, Strafford. Act i, sc. 2.

I will pluck it from my bosom, tho' my heart be at the root.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 66.

<sup>11</sup>
The heart ay's the part ay
That makes us right or wrang.

BURNS, Epistle to Davie. St. 5.

<sup>12</sup>
My heart is wax to be moulded as she pleases, but enduring as marble to retain.

CERVANTES, La Gitanilla.

His heart was one of those which most enamour
us,

Wax to receive, and marble to retain.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 34.

<sup>13</sup>
There are strings in the human heart which had better not be vibrated.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 22.

<sup>14</sup>
Futile the winds To a heart in port.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems, p. 141.

<sup>15</sup>
Their hearts are in the right place.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Infernal Marriage.
Pt. i, ch. 1.

<sup>16</sup>
Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 46.

<sup>17</sup>
The great conservative is the heart.

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 6 Jan., 1854.

1 Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

Old Testament: Lamentations, iii, 41. (Sursum corda.—Vulgate.)

2 Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

New Testament: Luke, xii, 34; Matthew, vi, 21.

Only where the heart is can the treasure be found.

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grizel. Ch. 1.

For his heart was in his work, and the heart Giveth grace unto every Art.

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 7.

3 Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way?

New Testament: Luke, xxiv, 32.

4 With most people the heart grows old with the body.

GUY DE MAUPASSANT, Julie Romain.

5 The beating of my own heart Was all the sound I heard.

MILNES, I Wandered by the Brookside.

6 Would I were as happy as my heart is clean! (Tam felix utinam quam pectore candidus essem!)

OWD, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 14, l. 43.

Brave hearts and clean! and yet—God guide them!—young.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivien, l. 29.

7 My heart is not made of horn. (Neque enim mihi cornea fibra est.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 47.

8 My heart was in my mouth. (Mihi anima in naso esse.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 62.

Having their heart at their very mouth for fear. ERASMUS, Paraphrase of Luke, xxiii. (Udall, tr., 1548.)

My heart was almost at my mouth.

DRYDEN, Love Triumphant. Act i, sc. 1. (1694)

The heart of the fool is in his mouth, but the mouth of the wise man is in his heart.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1733.

9 What takes our heart must merit our esteem.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. ii, l. 101.

10 My heart is fixed, O God, my heart is fixed.

Old Testament: Psalms, lvii, 7.

11 Even the very middle of my heart Is warm'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act i, sc. 6, l. 27.

In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 78.

The inmost cupboards of her heart.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Bk. i, ch. 28.

12 And let me wring your heart; for so I shall, If it be made of penetrable stuff.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 36.

13 But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve For daws to peck at.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64.

"Young Strephon wears his heart upon his sleeve,"

Thus Sardon spoke, with scoffing air;

Perhaps 'twas envy made the gray-beard grieve— For Sardon never had a heart to wear.

R. W. GILDER, Strephon and Sardon.

14 My heart is ever at your service.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act i, sc. 2, l. 76.

17 Heaven's sovereign saves all beings, but himself,

That hideous sight, a naked human heart.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night iii, l. 226.

18 We'll wait on you with all our hearts, and with a piece of my liver, too.

UNKNOWN, Mucedorus. Sig. F 4. (1598)

With all my heart and a piece of my liver.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

III—Heart: Eating the Heart

19 To eat thy heart through comfortless dispairs.

SPENSER [?], Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 904.

In the desert

I saw a creature, naked, bestial,

Who, squatting upon the ground,

Held his heart in his hand

And ate of it.

I said, "Is it good, friend?"

"It is bitter—bitter," he answered;

"But I like it

Because it is bitter,

And because it is my heart."

STEPHEN CRANE, The Heart.

20

Spread yourself upon his bosom publicly, whose heart you would eat in private.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act ii, sc. 2.

21

Eat not thy heart. (Καρδίην μὴ υπερβαλεῖν.)

PYTHAGORAS. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 17.)

Eat not thy heart; which forbids to afflict our souls, and waste them with vexatious cares.

PLUTARCH, Of the Training of Children.

IV—Heart: The Merry Heart

- <sup>1</sup> I have a heart with room for every joy.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Mountain
- So simple is the heart of man,
So ready for new hope and joy:
Ten thousand years since it began
Have left it younger than a boy.
STOPFORD A. BROOKE, The Earth and Man.
- <sup>2</sup> No sky is heavy if the heart be light.
CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 362.
- Oh! timely happy, timely wise,
Hearts that with rising morn arise!
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Morning.
- <sup>3</sup> A light heart and thin pair of breeches,
Go thro' the world, brave boys!
CHARLES COFFEY, Boarding-School. Act i.
- <sup>4</sup> The joy of the heart fairly colours the face.
SIR JOHN DAVIES, School of Folly, 46. (1611)
- The heart's mirth doth make the face fair.
UNKNOWN, Book of Merry Riddles. Prov. 54.
(1629)
- <sup>5</sup> He that is of a merry heart hath a continual feast.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 15.
- A merry heart doeth good like a medicine.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 22.
- <sup>6</sup> My heart is like a singing bird
Whose nest is in a water'd shoot;
My heart is like an apple-tree
Whose boughs are bent with thick-set fruit;
My heart is like a rainbow shell
That paddles in a halcyon sea;
My heart is gladder than all these,
Because my love is come to me.
CHRISTINA ROSSETTI, A Birthday.
- <sup>7</sup> My bosom's lord sits lightly in his throne.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet. Act v, sc. 1, 3.
- <sup>8</sup> Jog on, jog on, the foot-path way,
And merrily hent the stile-a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.
SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3,
l. 132.

V—Heart: The Sad Heart

- <sup>9</sup> My heart is sair, I daur na tell,
My heart is sair for Somebody.
BURNS, My Heart is Sair for Somebody.
- <sup>10</sup> No more—no more—Oh! never more on me
The freshness of the heart can fall like dew
BYRON, Don Juan, canto i, st. 214.
- <sup>11</sup> The heaviness of the heart breaketh

- strength. . . . Take no heaviness to heart.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 18, 20.

- A wounded heart is hard to cure.
GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 24.
- <sup>14</sup> There is an evening twilight of the heart,
When its wild passion-waves are lulled to rest.
FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Twilight.
- <sup>15</sup> Hearts, like apples, are hard and sour,
Till crushed by Pain's resistless power;
And yield their juices rich and bland
To none but Sorrow's heavy hand.
J. G. HOLLAND, Bitter-Sweet. Epis. i.
- <sup>16</sup> The whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint.
Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 5.
- <sup>17</sup> The long-lost ventures of the heart,
That send no answers back again.
LONGFELLOW, The Fire of Driftwood.
- <sup>18</sup> The heart knoweth its own bitterness.
Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 10.
- <sup>19</sup> This house is to be let for life or years,
Her rent is sorrow, and her income tears;
Cupid, 't has long stood void; her bills make known,
She must be dearly let, or let alone.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 10.
- <sup>20</sup> My heart is turn'd to stone: and while 'tis mine,
It shall be stony.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act v, sc. 2, l. 50.
- My heart is turned to stone; I strike it, and it hurts my hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 193.
- <sup>21</sup> My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered.
SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act v, sc. 7, l. 55.
- <sup>22</sup> Hearts live by being wounded.
WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii.
- <sup>23</sup> Out-worn heart, in a time out-worn,
Come clear of the nets of wrong and right.
W. B. YEATS, Into the Twilight.
- VI—Heart: The Broken Heart
- <sup>24</sup> An innocent heart is a brittle thing, and one false vow can break it.
BULWER-LYTTON, Last of the Barons. Bk. i, ch. 2.

1 And thus the heart will break, yet brokenly live on.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 32.

And long she pined—for broken hearts die slow!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 389.

As an egg, when broken, never
Can be mended, but must ever
Be the same crushed egg for ever—
So shall this dark heart of mine.

T. H. CHIVERS, To Allegra Florence in Heaven.

2 O hearts that break and give no sign
Save whitening lips and fading tresses.
O. W. HOLMES, The Voiceless.

3 No truer word, save God's, was ever spoken,
Than that the largest heart is soonest broken.
WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Epigram.

No:—life is a waste of wearisome hours,
Which seldom the rose of enjoyment adorns;
And the heart that is soonest awake to the flowers,
Is always the first to be touch'd by the thorns.
THOMAS MOORE, Oh! Think Not My Spirits.

4 And when she ceas'd, we sighing saw
The floor lay pav'd with broken hearts.
RICHARD LOVELACE, Gratiana Dancing.

5 Throw thy heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault;
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder.
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iv, sc. 9, l. 14.

Queen: O Hamlet! thou hast cleft my heart in twain.

Hamlet: O, throw away the worser part of it,
And live the purer with the other half.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 156.

6 Now cracks a noble heart. Good-night, sweet prince.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act v, sc. 2, l. 370.

My old heart is crack'd, is crack'd!
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 92.

His flaw'd heart,
Alack, too weak the conflict to support!
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief,
Burst smilingly.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act v, sc. 3, l. 196.

7 Never morning wore
To evening, but some heart did break.
TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. vi, st. 2.

How else but through a broken heart
May Lord Christ enter in?
OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.

VII—Heart: The Good Heart

8 To thee only God granted A heart ever new:
To all always open, To all always true.
MATTHEW ARNOLD, Parting, l. 79.

9 A heart at leisure from itself
To soothe and sympathise.

ANNA LETITIA WARING, Father, I Know that All My Life.

10 A heart to pity, and a hand to bless.
CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine, l. 178.

11 What outward form and feature are
He guesseth but in part;
But that within is good and fair
He seeth with the heart.
S. T. COLERIDGE, To a Lady Offended by a Sportive Observation.

12 His heart was as great as the world, but there was no room in it to hold the memory of a wrong.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Greatness.

13 Thy heart above all envy and all pride, Firm as man's sense, and soft as woman's
love.

JAMES HAMMOND, Elegies. No. 14.

14 'Tis the heart's current lends the cup its glow,
Whate'er the fountain whence the draught may flow.

O. W. HOLMES, A Sentiment.

15 A gen'rous heart repairs a sland'rous tongue.
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 432. (Pope, tr.)

Rich in deep hymns of gratitude and love.
THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson.

The incense of the heart may rise.
JOHN PIERPONT, Every Place a Temple.

17 Ye whose hearts are fresh and simple,
Who have faith in God and nature.
LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha: Introduction.

18 All that hath been majestical
In life or death, since time began,
Is native in the simple heart of all,
The angel heart of man.
J. R. LOWELL, An Incident in a Railroad Car.

19 Her heart is always doing lovely things,
Filling my wintry mind with simple flowers;
Playing sweet tunes on my untuned strings,
Delighting all my undelightful hours.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Her Heart.

20 Mine is a soft heart. (Molle cor esse mihi.)
OVID, Epistulae ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 32.
Bow, stubborn knees; and, heart with strings
of steel,
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe!
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 69.

1
A heart imbued with the noble sense of virtue. (Incoctum generoso pectus honesto.)
PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 74.

A good heart helps in misfortune. (In re mala, animo si bono utare, adjuvat.)
PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 202. (Act ii, sc. 1.)

3
Create in me a clean heart, O God; and renew a right spirit within me.
Old Testament: Psalms, li, 10.

4
A man 'at stands
And jest holds out in his two hands
As warm a heart as ever beat
Betwixt here and the Mercy Seat!
J. W. RILEY, Eugene Debs.
Far may we search before we find
A heart so manly and so kind!
SCOTT, Marmion: Canto iv, Introduction, l. 136.

For his heart is like the sea,
Ever open, brave, and free.
F. E. WEATHERLY, They All Love Jack.

5
A good heart's worth gold.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 34.

Steady of heart, and stout of hand.
SCOTT, Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto i, st. 21.
Stout heart, and open hand.
SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 10.

The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 147.

18
Your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act iii, sc. 1, l. 111.

19
The hearts that dare are quick to feel;
The hands that wound are soft to heal.
BAYARD TAYLOR, Soldiers of Peace.

20
One equal temper of heroic hearts,
Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.
TENNYSON, Ulysses, l. 68.

IX—Heart: The Humble Heart

21
My favoured temple is an humble heart.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Colonnade and Lawn.

22

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

23
A small heart hath small desires.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

24
The tumult and the shouting dies;
The Captains and the Kings depart:
Still stands Thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart.
RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional.

1 Th' Almighty, from his throne, on earth surveys
Nought greater, than an honest, humble heart.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 475.

12 Her o'erflowing heart, which pants
With all it granted, and with all it grants.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 195.

13 In sailing o'er life's ocean wide,
Your heart should be your only guide;
W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act i.

14 Bid me to live, and I will live
Thy Protestant to be:
Or bid me love, and I will give
A loving heart to thee.

A heart as soft, a heart as kind,
A heart as sound and free
As in the whole world thou canst find,
That heart I'll give to thee.

ROBERT HERRICK, To Anthea, Who May Command Him Anything.

When I was one-and-twenty
I heard a wise man say:
"Give crowns and pounds and guineas
But not your heart away."

A. E. HOUSMAN, A Shropshire Lad. No. 13.

15 A watchman's part compels my heart
To keep you off its beat,
THOMAS HOOD, I'm Not a Single Man.

16 My heart led me past and took me away;
And yet it was my heart that wanted to stay.
HELEN HOYT, In the Park.

17 But to her heart, her heart was voluble,
Paining with eloquence her balmy side;
JOHN KEATS, The Eve of St. Agnes. St. 23.

18 There's a girl in the heart of Maryland
With a heart that belongs to me.
BALLARD MACDONALD, There's a Girl in the Heart of Maryland. (1913)

21 My true-love hath my heart, and I have his,
By just exchange, one for the other given.
SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, My True Love Hath my Heart.

22 I prithee send me back my heart,
Since I cannot have thine:
For if from thine thou wilt not part,
Why then shouldst thou have mine?
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Song.

Maid of Athens, ere we part,
Give, oh, give me back my heart!
Or, since that has left my breast,
Keep it now, and take the rest!
Hear my vow before I go,
Ζών μου, σάς ἀγαπῶ.
BYRON, Maid of Athens, Ere we Part.

23 I thought to undermine the heart
By whispering in the ear.
SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Siege of a Heart.

24 Oh, ye gods, why should my poor, resistless heart

Stand to oppose thy might and power?

GEORGE WASHINGTON, My Poor Resistless Heart. (1748)

XII—Heart: The Wicked Heart

1 The heart of a man is the place the Devil's in.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 44.

2 A bitter heart that bides its time and bites.

ROBERT BROWNING, Caliban Upon Setebos.

3 His heart was form'd for softness, warp'd to wrong;

Betray'd too early, and beguiled too long.

BYRON, The Corsair. Canto iii, st. 23.

4 Thou hast a heart, though 'tis a savage one.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act ii, sc. 3.

5 He withers at his heart, and looks as wan,
As the pale spectre of a murder'd man.

DRYDEN, Palamon and Arcite. Bk. i, l. 528.

6 Look into any man's heart you please, and you will always find, in every one, at least one black spot which he has to keep concealed.

HENRIK IBSEN, Pillars of Society. Act iii.

7 The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked.

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xvii, 9.

8 His heart is as firm as a stone; yea, as hard as a piece of the nether millstone.

Old Testament: Job, xli, 24.

My idol fell down and was utterly broken,
The fragments of stone lay all scattered apart;
And I picked up the hardest to keep as a token—
Her heart.

GORDON CAMPBELL, My Idol.

9 The heart is hardest in the softest climes;
The passions flourish, the affections die.

WALTER SAVAGE LANDOR, Hellenics.

Worse than a bloody hand is a hard heart.

SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 2.

Oh the dullness and hardness of the human heart.
(O hebetudo et duritia cordis humani.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, sec. 23.

10 His heart I know, how variable and vain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xi, l. 92.

11 Your hearts are steeped in gall and biting vinegar. (Corda in felle sunt sita atque acerbo aceto.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus. Act i, sc. 2.

12 Bare the mean heart that lurks beneath a star.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 1, l. 108.

13

But your heart

Is cramm'd with arrogance, spleen, and pride.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 110.

14

Every heart, when sifted well,

Is a clot of warmer dust,

Mix'd with cunning sparks of hell.

TENNYSON, The Vision of Sin, l. 112.

15

The selfish heart deserves the pain it feels.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 300.

XIII—Heart: Want of Heart

16

Devotion's ev'ry grace, except the heart.

BURNS, The Cotter's Saturday Night. St. 17.

17

Some hearts are hidden, some have not a
heart.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough. Letter 17, l. 73.

18

He hath the sore which no man healeth,

The which is known as lack of heart.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iv, l. 334.

19

"With every pleasing, ev'ry prudent part, Say, what can Chloe want?"—She wants a
heart.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 159.

20

Ward has no heart, they say; but I deny
it;—

He has a heart, and gets his speeches by it.

SAMUEL ROGERS, On John William Ward.

Malebranche declares that not a soul is left;
We humbly think that there are still some hearts.

(Malebranche dirait qu'il n'y plus une âme;
Nous pensons humblement qu'il reste encor des cœurs.)

EDMOND ROSTAND, Chanticleer: Prelude.

XIV—Heart and Head

22

Can art, alas! or genius, guide the head

Where truth and freedom from the heart are fled?

Can lesser wheels repeat their native stroke,
When the prime function of the soul is broke?

MARK AKENSIDE, Epistle to Curio, l. 265.

23

A faithless heart betrays the head unsound.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 284.

24

The brave impetuous heart yields everywhere

To the subtle, contriving head.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Empedocles on Etna. Act
ii, l. 90.

25

My heart beat in my brain.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. i, l. 961.

1 A good heart is better than all the heads in the world.

BULWER-LYTTON, The Disowned. Ch. 33.

2 What hand and brain went ever paired?
What heart alike conceived and dared?

ROBERT BROWNING, The Last Ride Together.

3 His madness was not of the head, but heart.
BYRON, Lara. Canto i, sec. 18.

For his was error of head, not heart.

THOMAS MOORE, The Irish Slave, l. 45.

4 Men, as well as women, are much oftener led by their hearts than by their understandings.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 21 Jan., 1748.

Nine times in ten, the heart governs the understanding.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 May, 1749.

5 And a man may still lift up his head,
But nevermore his heart.

G. K. CHESTERTON, Ballad of the White Horse.

6 His heart runs away with his head.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Who Wants a Guinea. Act i, sc. 1.

7 Here the heart
May give a useful lesson to the head.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 85.

8 I love thee for a heart that's kind—
Not for the knowledge in thy mind.

W. H. DAVIES, Sweet Stay-at-Home.

9 Hearts may agree though heads differ.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2480.

10 The heart is wiser than the intellect.

J. G. HOLLAND, Kathrina. Pt. ii, st. 9.

11 Whatever comes from the brain carries the hue of the place it came from, and whatever comes from the heart carries the heat and color of its birthplace.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. vi.

12 Every one speaks well of his heart, but no one dares speak of his head. (Chacun dit du bien de son cœur, et personne n'en ose dire de son esprit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 98.

13 The head is always the dupe of the heart. (L'esprit est toujours la dupe de cœur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 102.

Monsieur de Rochefoucault, in his Maxims, says, that l'esprit est souvent la dupe du cœur. If he had said, instead of souvent, presque toujours [almost always], I fear he would have been nearer the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 March, 1748.

Chesterfield had the maxim wrong, for La Rochefoucauld wrote "toujours."

14 It is the heart, and not the brain,
That to the highest doth attain.

LONGFELLOW, The Building of the Ship, l. 124.

15 Where the mind is past hope, the heart is past shame.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 341. (1580)

16 Better to have the poet's heart than brain,
Feeling than song.

GEORGE MACDONALD, Within and Without. Pt. iii, sc. 9, l. 30.

17 The heart has its reasons, which reason does not know. (Le cœur a ses raisons que la raison connoit pas.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. iv, No. 277.

The heart has arguments with which the understanding is not acquainted.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. Quoted.

The heart has eyes that the brain knows nothing of.

CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: Coming to the Truth.

18 A brain of feathers, and a heart of lead.
POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 44.

19 The head is not more native to the heart,
The hand more instrumental to the mouth,
Than is the throne of Denmark to thy father.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 2, l. 47.

20 If wrong our hearts, our heads are right in vain.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vi, l. 281.

HEAVEN

See also Paradise. For Heaven in the sense of sky, see Sky

I—Heaven: Definition and Description

21 Where imperfection ceaseth, heaven begins.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Wood and Water.

Is Heaven a place where pearly streams
Glide over silver sand?
Like childhood's rosy dazzling dreams
Of some far faery land?

Is Heaven a clime where diamond dew
Glitter on fadeless flowers?

And mirth and music ring aloud
From amaranthine bowers?

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Alcove and Garden. The next line is, "Ah no; not such, not such is Heaven!"

22 Spend in pure converse our eternal day;
Think each in each, immediately wise;
Learn all we lacked before; hear, know, and say
What this tumultuous body now denies;

And feel, who have laid our groping hands
away;

And see, no longer blinded by our eyes.

RUPERT BROOKE, Sonnet.

<sup>1</sup>
Earth breaks up, time drops away,
In flows heaven, with its new day.

ROBERT BROWNING, Christmas-Eve. Sec. 10.

<sup>2</sup>
Heaven means to be one with God.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (FARRAR, Sermons: What Heaven Is.)

<sup>3</sup>
He showed me like a master
That one rose makes a gown;
That looking up to Heaven
Is merely looking down.

NATHALIA CRANE, My Husbands.

Hence, Heaven looks down on earth with all her
eyes.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1094.

<sup>4</sup>
I never spoke with God,
Nor visited in heaven;
Yet certain am I of the spot
As if the chart were given.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. iv, No. 17.

<sup>5</sup>
Who has not found the heaven below
Will fail of it above.

God's residence is next to mine,
His furniture is love.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 100.

The heaven of poetry and romance still lies around us and within us.

LONGFELLOW, Drift-Wood: Twice-Told Tales.

I know not where lies Eden-land;
I only know 'tis like unto
God's kingdom, ever right at hand—
Ever right here in reach of you.

JOAQUIN MILLER, With Love to You and Yours. Pt. iv, sec. 12.

<sup>6</sup>
And so upon this wise I prayed,—
Great Spirit, give to me
A heaven not so large as yours,

But large enough for me.

EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 39.

How vast is heaven? lo it will fit
In any space you give to it. . . .
So broad—it takes in all things true;
So narrow—it can hold but you.

JOHN RICHARD MORELAND, How Vast is Heaven.

<sup>7</sup>
Where billows never break, nor tempests roar.

SAMUEL GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iii, l. 226. (1699)

Where tempests never beat nor billows roar.
COWPER, On the Receipt of My Mother's Picture. (1798) Misquoting Garth.

<sup>8</sup>
I hear thee speak of the better land,
Thou callest its children a happy band;

Mother! oh, where is that radiant shore?
Shall we not seek it, and weep no more?

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Better Land.

<sup>9</sup>
Olympus, the abode of the gods, that stands fast forever. Neither is it shaken by winds nor ever wet with rain, nor does snow fall upon it, but the air is outspread clear and cloudless, and over it hovers a radiant whiteness.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. vi, l. 42.

<sup>10</sup>
Heaven is largely a matter of digestion, and digestion is mostly a matter of mind.

ELBERT HUBBARD, A Thousand and One Epigrams, p. 34.

<sup>11</sup>
There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest.

Old Testament: Job, iii, 17.

And the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest.

TENNYSON, The May Queen. Last line.

<sup>12</sup>
In my father's house are many mansions.

New Testament: John, xiv, 2.

Nearer my Father's house,
Where the many mansions be,
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the crystal sea.

PHEBE CARY, Nearer Home.

Therefore will I wait patiently,
Trusting, where all God's mansions be,
There hath been one prepared for me.

PHEBE CARY, Many Mansions. St. 46.

No, not cold beneath the grasses,
Not close-walled within the tomb;
Rather in our Father's mansion,
Living in another room.

ROBERT FREEMAN, In My Father's House.

When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,

I'll bid farewell to every fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes.

ISAAC WATTS, When I Can Read My Title Clear.

Great is the idleness which prevails in heaven.
(Magna otia cæli.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 394.

<sup>14</sup>
And when Booth halted by the curb for prayer

He saw his Master through the flag-filled air.
Christ came gently with a robe and crown
For Booth the soldier, while the throng knelt down.

He saw King Jesus. They were face to face,
And he knelt a-weeping in that holy place.
Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb?

VACHEL LINDSAY, General William Booth Enters into Heaven.

<sup>15</sup>
We see but dimly through the mists and vapors;

Amid these earthly damps
What seem to us but sad, funereal tapers
May be heaven's distant lamps.
LONGFELLOW, Resignation. St. 4.

1
Heaven to me's a fair blue stretch of sky,
Earth's jest a dusty road.
JOHN MASEFIELD, Vagabond.

2
What if Earth
Be but the shadow of Heav'n, and things therein
Each to other like, more than on earth is thought?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 574.

3
Heav'n open'd wide
Her ever-during gates, harmonious sound,
On golden hinges moving.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vii, l. 205.

God said, "Be light"—and light was on the
grave!

No more alone to sage and hero given,
Ope for all life the impartial gates of Heaven!
BULWER-LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. iv.
sec. 2.

When Christ ascended
Triumphantly, from star to star,
He left the gates of heaven ajar.
LONGFELLOW, The Golden Legend. Pt. ii, sc. 2.

4
There is a world above,
Where parting is unknown;
A whole eternity of love,
Form'd for the good alone;
And faith beholds the dying here
Translated to that happier sphere.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Friends.

A Persian's Heav'n is easily made,
'Tis but black eyes and lemonade.
THOMAS MOORE, Intercepted Letters. Letter
vi, l. 32.

6
There's nae sorrow there, John,
There's neither could nor care, John,
The day is aye fair,
In the land o' the leal.
CAROLINA NAIRNE, The Land o' the Leal.

7
A sea before
The Throne is spread;—its pure still glass
Pictures all earth-scenes as they pass.

We, on its shore,
Share, in the bosom of our rest,
God's knowledge, and are blest.
JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, A Voice from Afar.

8
To heaven's high city I direct my journey,
Whose spangled suburbs entertain mine eye.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. v, emb. 6.

9
And I saw a new heaven and a new earth:

for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away.

New Testament: Revelation, xxi, 1.

10
Heaven . . . The treasury of everlasting joy.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 17.

11
And is there care in Heaven? And is there
love

In heavenly spirits to these Creatures base?
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto 8, st. 1.

12
Could we but know
The land that ends our dark, uncertain travel.
E. C. STEDMAN, The Undiscovered Country.

For if, beyond the shadow and the sleep,
A place there be for souls without a stain,
Where peace is perfect, and delight more deep
Than seas or skies that change and shine
again,

There none of all unsullied souls that live
May hold a surer station.
SWINBURNE, In Memory of John William Inchbold. St. 24.

13
O world invisible, we view thee:
O world intangible, we touch thee,
O world unknowable, we know thee,
Inapprehensible, we clutch thee!
FRANCIS THOMPSON, In No Strange Land.

14
So all we know of what they do above
Is that they happy are, and that they love.
EDMUND WALLER, Upon the Death of My Lady Rich, l. 75.

For all we know
Of what the blessed do above
Is, that they sing, and that they love.
EDMUND WALLER, *While I Listen to Thy
Voice*, l. 10.

What know we of the blest above
But that they sing and that they love?
WORDSWORTH, Scene on the Lake of Brienz,
l. 1. Wordsworth puts this couplet in quotation marks as an acknowledgment of his indebtedness to Waller.

15
There is a land of pure delight,
Where saints immortal reign;
Infinite day excludes the night,
And pleasures banish pain.
ISAAC WATTS, There Is a Land.

16
As much of heaven is visible as we have eyes to see.

WILLIAM WINTER, The Actor and His Duty:
Address, 4 June, 1889.

17
Heaven lies about us in our infancy.
WORDSWORTH, Intimations of Immortality.
St. 5.

Not only around our infancy
Doth heaven with all its splendors lie;
Daily, with souls that cringe and plot,

We Sinais climb and know it not.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal:
Pt. i. Prelude.

The gates of heaven are so easily found when we are little, and they are always standing open to let children wander in.

J. M. BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy, p. 52.

It was a childish ignorance,

But now 'tis little joy,

To know I'm further off from heaven

Than when I was a boy.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember.

II—Heaven: Apothegms

The New Jerusalem, when it comes, will probably be found so far to resemble the old as to stone its prophets freely.

SAMUEL BUTLER THE YOUNGER, Note-Books,
p. 175.

He who offends against Heaven has none to whom he can pray.

CONFUCIUS, Analects.

The sword of heaven is not in haste to smite,
Nor yet doth linger.

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxii, l. 16.

Heav'n would no bargain for its blessings drive.

DRYDEN, Astrea Redux, l. 137.

Heaven is a cheap purchase, whatever it cost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

For a cap and bells our lives we pay,
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking:

'Tis heaven alone that is given away,

'Tis only God may be had for the asking.

J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal:
Prelude.

Heaven without good society cannot be
heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Heaven was not heaven if Phaon was not there.

R. M. MILNES, A Dream of Sappho.

Hello, Central! give me heaven,

For my mama's there.

CHARLES K. HARRIS, *Hello, Central! Give Me
Heaven*. (1901)

All this, and Heaven too!

PHILIP HENRY. (MATTHEW HENRY, Life of Philip Henry, p. 70.)

The net of Heaven has large meshes and yet nothing escapes it.

LAO-TSZE, The Simple Way. No. 73.

Struggle against it as thou wilt,
Yet Heaven's ways are Heaven's ways.

(Sperre dich, so viel du willst!
Des Himmels Wege sind des Himmels Wege.)

LESSING, Nathan der Weise. Act iii, sc. 1.

Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal.

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 20.

A heaven on earth.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 208.

I have been there, and still would go;

'Tis like a little heaven below.

ISAAC WATTS, For the Lord's Day Evening.

No man can resolve himself into Heaven.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, Heaven.

That they may be considered wise, they rail at heaven. (Ut putentur sapere, cœlum vitu-perant.)

PHÆDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 6, l. 26.

I shall see you in the next world. (Apud Or-cum te videbo.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 606. (Act iii, sc. 3.)

The blessed damozel leaned out
From the gold bar of Heaven.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The Blessed Damozel, l. 1.

Heaven wills our happiness, allows our doom.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 1301.

III—Heaven: Its Distance

All places are distant from heaven alike.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt.
ii, sec. ii, mem. 4.

The way to heaven out of all places is of like length and distance.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Utopia.

Nothing must part them whom God hath joined, and the way to Heaven is as near in the Holy Land (if not nearer) as in England or Spain.

QUEEN ELEANOR, wife of Edward I., insisting on accompanying her husband to the Holy Land. (CAMDEN, Remains, 283.)

The road to heaven lies as near by water as by land.

FRIAR ELSTON, when threatened with drowning by Henry VIII. (JOHN STOW, Chronicles of England. 1580.)

We are as near to Heaven by sea as by land.

SIR HUMPHREY GILBERT. There is a legend that these words, uttered by Gilbert, were heard on board his companion ship, the Hind, just before his own ship, the Squirrel, disappeared among the icebergs off the Azores in 1583.

He sat upon the deck,

The Book was in his hand;

"Do not fear! Heaven is as near,"

He said, "by water as by land!"

LONGFELLOW, Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

1
Heaven is far, the world is nigh.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis: Prologue,
l. 261.

2
God, to remove His Ways from human sense, Plac'd Heav'n from earth so far, that earthly sight

If it presume, might err in things too high,
And no advantage gain.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 119.

Heav'n is for thee too high
To know what passes there; be lowly wise:
Think only what concerns thee and thy being;
Dream not of other worlds, what creatures
there

Live, in what state, condition, or degree,
Contented that thus far hath been reveal'd
Not of earth only, but of highest Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 172.

IV—Heaven: Abraham's Bosom

3
Now he lives in Abraham's bosom. . . . For what other place is there for such a soul?

St. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. ix, sec. 6.

4
With whom there is no place of toil, no burning heat, no piercing cold, nor any briars there . . . this place we call the Bosom of Abraham.

JOSEPHUS, Discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades.

5
Nay, sure, he's not in hell: he's in Arthur's bosom, if ever man went to Arthur's bosom.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 10.

6
Sweet peace conduct his sweet soul to the bosom

Of good old Abraham!

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 103.

The sons of Edward sleep in Abraham's bosom.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 38.

7
Thou liest in Abraham's bosom all the year.

WORDSWORTH, Miscellaneous Sonnets. Pt. i,
No. 30.

8
Two or three old ladies, who are languishing to be in Abraham's bosom, as the only man's bosom to whom they can hope for admittance.

WALPOLE, Letter to John Chute, 3 Oct., 1765.

V—Heaven: Praise

9
Jerusalem the golden, with milk and honey
blest,

Beneath thy contemplation sink heart and voice oppressed.

(Urbs Syon aurea, patria lactea, cive decora,
Omne cor obruis, omnibus obstruis et cor et ora.)

BERNARD OF CLUNY, *Hora Novissima: Urbs
Syon Aurea*. (John Mason Neale, tr.)

Jerusalem the Golden!

I toil on day by day;
Heart-sore each night with longing,

I stretch my hands and pray,

That mid thy leaves of healing

My soul may find her nest;

Where the wicked cease from troubling,

And the weary are at rest!

GERALD MASSEY, Jerusalem the Golden.

10
Scatter the clouds that hide

The face of heaven, and show

Where sweet peace doth abide,

Where Truth and Beauty grow.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Morning Hymn.

11
But Heaven that brings out good from evil,

And loves to disappoint the Devil.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Job's Luck.

12

Like a bairn to his mither, a wee birdie to its nest,

I wud fain be ganging noo unto my Saviour's
breast;

For he gathers in his bosom witless, worthless lambs like me,

An' he carries them himsel' to his ain coun-
tree.

MARY LEE DEMAREST, My Ain Countree.

13

Heaven is most fair, but fairer He

That made that fairest Canopy.

ROBERT HERRICK, Heaven.

14

Know from the bounteous heaven all riches flow.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 26. (Pope, tr.)

Just are the ways of heaven.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 128. (Pope, tr.)

In man's most dark extremity

Oft succour dawns from Heaven.

SCOTT, The Lord of the Isles. Canto i, st. 20.

Heaven still guards the right.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 61.

15

Men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

Old Testament: Isaiah, lxiv, 4.

Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him.

New Testament: I Corinthians, ii, 9.

Eye hath not seen it, my gentle boy!

Ear hath not heard its deep songs of joy;

Dreams cannot picture a world so fair—

Sorrow and death may not enter there;

Time doth not breathe on its fadeless bloom,

For beyond the clouds, and beyond the tomb,

It is there, it is there, my child!

FELICIA DOROTHEA HEMANS, The Better Land.

16

Earth has no sorrow that Heaven cannot heal.

THOMAS MOORE, Come, Ye Disconsolate.

<sup>1</sup>
This world is all a fleeting show,
For man's illusion given;
The smiles of joy, the tears of woe,
Deceitful shine, deceitful flow,—
There's nothing true but Heaven!

THOMAS MOORE, This World is All a Fleeting Show.

<sup>2</sup>
A day in thy courts is better than a thousand.
I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxxiv, 10.

Take all the pleasures of all the spheres,
And multiply each through endless years,—
One minute of heaven is worth them all.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri.

<sup>3</sup>
All places that the eye of heaven visits,
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 3, l. 275.

The selfsame heaven
That frowns on me looks sadly upon him.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 285.

<sup>4</sup>
Heaven is lovelier than the stars,
The sea is fairer than the shore;
I've seen beyond the sunset bars
A color more.

TRUMBULL STICKNEY, Driftwood.

VI—Heaven: Winning Heaven

See also Aspiration

<sup>5</sup>
Lose who may—I still can say,
Those who win heaven, blest are they!
ROBERT BROWNING, One Way of Love.

<sup>6</sup>
Not scorned in heaven, though little noticed here.

COWPER, On the Receipt of my Mother's Picture, l. 73.

Perhaps those simple souls might teach
Lessons as high as we could set them,
And if they're striving heaven to reach
Their own strange road—by all means let them!
ROBERT CREWE-MILNES, Easter in Florence.

<sup>7</sup>
Nor can his blessed soul look down from
heaven,

Or break the eternal Sabbath of his rest.
DRYDEN, The Spanish Friar. Act v, sc. 2.
Heaven's eternal year is thine.

DRYDEN, To the Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew.

While yet a young probationer
And candidate of heaven.

DRYDEN, To the Memory of Mrs. Anne Killigrew.

<sup>8</sup>
Our heart is in heaven, our home is not here.
REGINALD HEBER, Hymns: Fourth Sunday in Advent.

<sup>9</sup>
Undaunted by the clouds of fear,
Undazzled by a happy day,
She made a Heaven about her here,
And took how much! with her away.
RICHARD MONCKTON MILNES, In Memoriam.

<sup>10</sup>
It were a journey like the path to heaven.
MILTON, Comus, l. 303.

<sup>11</sup>
Here in the body pent,
Absent from Him I roam,
Yet nightly pitch my moving tent
A day's march nearer home.
JAMES MONTGOMERY, At Home in Heaven.

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er;
I am nearer home to-day
Than I ever have been before.
PHEBE CARY, Nearer Home.

<sup>12</sup>
Joy, joy for ever!—my task is done—
The gates are pass'd, and Heaven is won!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri. Concluding lines.

<sup>13</sup>
The pleasing way is not the right:
He that would conquer Heaven must fight.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. ii, emb. 11.

<sup>14</sup>
Sir, fare you well:
Hereafter, in a better world than this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of
you.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act i, sc. 2, l. 295.

My hopes in heaven do dwell.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 459.
Look for me in the nurseries of Heaven.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, To My Godchild.

<sup>15</sup>
For we by conquest, of our sovereign might,
And by eternal doom of Fate's decree,
Have won the Empire of the Heavens bright.
SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. vii, canto vi, st. 33.

<sup>16</sup>
What matter it how heaven we gain
If at the last we really get to heaven?
WILLIAM WETMORE STORY, St. Peter's.

<sup>17</sup>
Far from mortal cares retreating,
Sordid hopes and vain desires,
Here, our willing footsteps meeting,
Every heart to heaven aspires.
JANE TAYLOR, Hymn.

<sup>18</sup>
Short arm needs man to reach to Heaven,
So ready is Heaven to stoop to him.
FRANCIS THOMPSON, Grace of the Way.

<sup>19</sup>
But I account it worth
All pangs of fair hopes crost—
All loves and honors lost,—

To gain the heavens, at cost
Of losing earth.

THEODORE TILTON, Sir Marmaduke's Musings.

Of this blest man let this just praise be given,

Heaven was in him before he was in heaven.

ISAAC WALTON, Written in Dr. Richard Sibbes' "Returning Backslider."

Earth is less fragrant now and heaven more sweet.

SIR WILLIAM WATSON, A Maiden's Epitaph.

How hardly, if she win not heaven,
Will our wild errors be forgiven!

N. P. WILLIS, Chamber Scene.

No man must go to heaven who hath not sent his heart thither before.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, 66.

One eye on death, and one full fix'd on
heaven.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night v, l. 838.

Jerusalem, my happy home,
Would God I were in thee!

Would God my woes were at an end,
Thy joys that I might see!

UNKNOWN, Song of Mary Mother of Christ.

VII—Heaven and Hell

As high as Heaven, as deep as Hell.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act iv, sc. 1.

There is no Heaven, there is no Hell; these be the dreams of baby minds;
Tools of the wily Fetisheer, to 'fright the fools his cunning blinds.

SIR RICHARD BURTON, Kasidah. Pt. viii, st. 1.

Deep in yon cave Honorius long did dwell,
In hope to merit heaven by making earth a hell.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 20.

'Tis not where we be, but whence we fell;
The loss of heaven's the greatest pain in
hell.

CALDERON, Adventures of Five Hours. Act v.
(Tuke, tr.)

To appreciate heaven well
'Tis good for a man to have some fifteen minutes of hell.

WILL CARLETON, Gone With a Handsomer Man.

Not less but more than Dante, we know for certain that there is a heaven and a hell—a heaven, when a good deed has been done, a hell, in the dark heart able no longer to live openly.

EDWARD DOWDEN, Studies in Literature, p.
117.

Here we may reign secure; and in my choice
To reign is worth ambition, though in Hell:
Better to reign in Hell, than serve in Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 261. (1663)

Now forasmuch as I was an Angel of Light, it was the Will of Wisdom to confine me to Darkness, and make me Prince thereof; so that I, that could not obey in Heaven, might command in Hell; and believe me, I had rather rule within my dark domain than to rehabilit Cælum Im-perium, and there live in subjection under check, a slave of the Most High.

ANTHONY STAFFORD, Niobe. (1611)

Beholding heaven, and feeling hell.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Fire-Worshippers.

Men have fiendishly conceived a heaven only to find it insipid, and a hell to find it ridiculous.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 278.

I'll follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love so well.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream.
Act ii, sc. 1, l. 243.

The fear of hell, or aiming to be blest,
Savours too much of private interest.
This moved not Moses, nor the zealous Paul,
Who for their friends abandoned soul and all.

EDMUND WALLER, Of Divine Love. Canto ii.

How do I pity those that dwell
Where ignorance and darkness reign!

They know no heaven—they fear no hell—
That endless joy—that endless pain.

ISAAC WATTS, Praise for Birth in a Christian Land.

Time flies, death urges, knells call, Heaven invites,
Hell threatens.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 292.

HELEN OF TROY

He flung the sword away,
And kissed her feet, and knelt before her
there,

The perfect Knight before the perfect Queen.

RUPERT BROOKE, Menelaus and Helen.

So Menelaus nagged; and Helen cried;
And Paris slept on by Scamander side.

RUPERT BROOKE, Menelaus and Helen.

And, like another Helen, fired another Troy.
DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 150.

Helen's lips are drifting dust;
Ilium is consumed with rust.

F. L. KNOWLES, Love Triumphant.

<sup>1</sup> Was this the face that launch'd a thousand ships,
And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?
Sweet Helen, make me immortal with a kiss.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Doctor Faustus, l. 1328.

The kisses of her lips
Must burn the towers, and must Still launch the thousand ships. . . .
O passion of wisdom, this (Helen held it for such):
You cannot unkick that kiss,
You cannot untouch that touch.
FRANCIS MEYNELL, Permanence.

<sup>3</sup> The fight for Helen still goes on;
There topple down to dust
A hundred Troys each day; that rose
Survives the gust.
LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE, Heredity.

<sup>4</sup> Helen's cheek, but not her heart.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iii, sc. 2, 153.
On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set.
SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. liii.

<sup>5</sup> The ravish'd Helen, Menelaus' queen,
With wanton Paris sleeps.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida: Prol., l. 8.
Is she worth keeping? why, she is a pearl,
Whose price hath launch'd above a thousand ships,
And turn'd crown'd kings to merchants.
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 81.

<sup>6</sup> You will never know what Helen said to Paris,
You have lost Egypt though you saved your ships.
MURIEL STUART, The Old Saint.

<sup>7</sup> A shudder in the loins engenders there
The broken wall, the burning roof and tower
And Agamemnon dead.
WILLIAM BUTLER YEATS, Leda. Helen was the daughter of Leda and Jupiter disguised as a swan.

I—Hell: Definition and Description

<sup>8</sup> Hell is the wrath of God—His hate of sin.
P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Hell, l. 194.

<sup>9</sup> A vast, unbottom'd, boundless pit,
Fill'd fou o' lowin' brunstane,
Wha's ragin' flame an' scorchin' heat,
Wad melt the hardest whunstone.
BURNS, The Holy Fair. St. 22.

When frae my mither's womb I fell,
Thou might hae plung'd me deep in Hell,
To gnash my gooms, and weep, and wail,
In burnin' lakes,
Whar damned devils roar and yell,
Chain'd to their stakes.
BURNS, Holy Willie's Prayer. St. 4.

<sup>10</sup> There is in hell a place stone-built through-out,
Called Malebolge, of an iron hue,
Like to the wall that circles it about.
(Loco è inferno detto Malebolge,
Tutto di pietra e di color ferrigno,
Come la cerchia che d' intorno il volge.)
DANTE, Inferno. Canto xviii, l. 1.

<sup>11</sup> Hell is no other but a soundless pit,
Where no one beam of comfort peeps in it.
ROBERT HERRICK, Hell.
Hell is the place where whipping-cheer abounds,
But no one jailor there to wash the wounds.
ROBERT HERRICK, Hell.

<sup>12</sup> Hell is a circle about the unbelieving.
The Koran.

<sup>13</sup> Into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not.
New Testament: Mark, ix, 43, 44.

<sup>14</sup> Hell hath no limits, nor is circumscrib'd
In one self-place; for where we are is hell;
And where hell is, there must we ever be;
And to conclude, when all the world dissolves,

And every creature shall be purified,
All places shall be hell that are not heaven.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Faustus, l. 553.

<sup>15</sup> A dungeon horrible on all sides round
As one great furnace flam'd yet from those flames

No light, but rather darkness visible,
Serv'd only to discover sights of woe,
Regions of sorrow, doleful shades, where peace

And rest can never dwell, hope never comes
That comes to all, but torture without end.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 61.

A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog
Betwixt Damiata and Mount Casius old,
Where armies whole have sunk: the parching air
Burns frore, and cold performs th' effect of fire.
Thither by harpy-footed Furies hal'd,
At certain revolutions, all the damn'd
Are brought, and feel by turns the bitter change
Of fierce extremes, extremes by change more fierce,

From beds of raging fire to starve in ice
Their soft ethereal warmth, and there to pine
Immovable, infix'd, and frozen round,
Periods of time, thence hurried back to fire.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 592.
O'er many a frozen, many a fiery Alp,

Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 620.

On a sudden open fly
With impetuous recoil and jarring sound
Th' infernal doors, and on their hinges grate
Harsh thunder, that the lowest bottom shook
Of Erebus.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 879.

1 Hell is both sides of the tomb, and a devil may be respectable and wear good clothes.

CHARLES H. PARKHURST, Sermons: The Pharisee's Prayer.

2 I see a brimstone sea of boiling fire,
And fiends, with knotted whips of flaming wire
Torturing poor souls, that gnash their teeth
in vain,
And gnaw their flame-tormented tongues for pain.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iii, emb. 14.

3 It doesn't matter what they preach,
Of high or low degree;
The old Hell of the Bible
Is Hell enough for me.

FRANK L. STANTON, Hell.

4 Hell itself may be contained within the compass of a spark.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 19 Dec., 1838.

5 In the deepest pits of 'Ell,
Where the worst defaulters dwell (Charcoal devils used as fuel as you require
'em),
There's some lovely coloured rays,
Pyrotechnical displays,
But you can't expect the burning to admire
'em!

EDGAR WALLACE, Nature Fails: L'Envoi.

6 There is a dreadful hell,
And everlasting pains;
Where sinners must with devils dwell
In darkness, fire, and chains.

ISAAC WATTS, Heaven and Hell.

7 Pale Disease dwells there, and sad Old Age, and Fear, and Famine persuading to evil,
and hateful Want. (Pallentesque habitant Morbi, tristisque Senectus, Et Metus, et malesuada Fames, ac turpis Egestas.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 275.

At Orcus' portal hold their lair
Wild Sorrow and avenging Care;
And pale Diseases cluster there,
And pleasureless Decay,
Dour Penury, and Fears that kill,
And Hunger, counsellor of ill.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 275. (Conington, tr.)

8 That's the greatest torture souls feel in hell,

In hell, that they must live, and cannot die.
WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 84.

9 For what, my small philosopher! is hell?
'Tis nothing but full knowledge of the truth,
When truth, resisted long, is sworn our foe,
And calls eternity to do her right.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ix, l. 2403.

10 Satan the envious said with a sigh:
Christians know more about their hell than I.
ALFRED KREYMBORG, Envious Satan.

II—Hell: Apothegms

11 Hell is more bearable than nothingness.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Heaven.

12 They order things so damnably in Hell.
HILAIRE BELLOC, To Dives.

13 The princess had all the virtues with which hell is filled.

JACQUES BOSSUET, Sermon on the Death of the Princess Palatine, 1684.

14 Now Hell has wholly boiled away
And God become a shade.

There is no place for him to stay

In all the world he made.

GAMALIEL BRADFORD, Exit God.

Hell's rather out of date.

ALFRED SUTRO, The Perfect Lover. Act i.

15 From Hell, Hull, and Halifax, good Lord deliver us.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits, etc., 112. (1594)

Hell, Hull and Halifax all begin with one letter;
Brag is a good dog, but hold-fast is a better.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Derbicisms, 137.

There is a proverb, and a prayer withal,
That we may not to three strange places fall
From Hull, from Halifax, from Hell, 'tis thus,
From all these three, good Lord, deliver us!

III—Hell: Its Pavement

<sup>9</sup> Hell is full of good intentions or desires.

(L'enfer est plein de bonnes volontés ou désirs.)

ST. BERNARD OF CLAIRVAUX. Attributed to him by St. Francis de Sales, Letters, Letter 74. (Blaise edition.) Bk. ii, letter 22. (Leonard edition.) The letter was written in 1605 to Madame de Chantal, and St. Francis says to her, "Do not be troubled by St. Bernard's saying that Hell is full of good intentions and desires."

Hell is full of good desires.

EDWARD HELLOWES, Guevara's Epistles, 205. (1574)

Hell is full of good meanings and wishes.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 176.

<sup>10</sup> Hell is paved with great granite blocks hewn from the hearts of those who said, "I can do no other."

HEYWOOD BROWN, Syndicate Column, 20 Jan., 1934. See under LUTHER.

The road to hell is paved with good intentions.

Quoted in this form by Archbishop Trench (Study of Words) as "perhaps the queen of all proverbs."

Hell is paved with good intentions, not with bad ones.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

It has been more wittily than charitably said that hell is paved with good intentions; they have their place in heaven also.

ROBERT SOUTHY, Colloquies on Society. Sec. v.

Hell is paved with good intentions and roofed with lost opportunities.

UNKNOWN. Proverb of Portuguese origin.

RICHARD BAXTER, Non-conformist divine, was almost stoned to death by the women of

Kidderminster for quoting this from the pulpit. (HAZLITT, Table Talk.)

Hell is paved with priests' skulls.

St. CHRYSOSTOM.

Hell is paved with the skulls of great scholars, and paved in with the bones of great men.

GILES FIRMIN, The Real Christian. (1670)

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 23.

The primrose path of dalliance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 50.

The lovely way that led
To the slimepit and the mire
And the everlasting fire.

A. E. HOUSMAN, Hell Gate.

14 So, while their bodies moulder here,
Their souls with God himself shall dwell,—
But always recollect, my dear,
That wicked people go to hell.

ANN AND JANE TAYLOR, About Dying.

15 The descent to hell is easy; the gates stand open night and day; but to re-climb the slope, and escape to the outer air, this indeed is a task. (Facilis descensus Averno: Noctes atque dies patet atri janua Ditis; Sed revocare gradum, superasque evadere auras, Hoc opus, hic labor est.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 126.

Smooth the descent and easy is the way;
(The Gates of Hell stand open night and day):
But to return, and view the cheerful skies,
In this the task and mighty labour lies.

VERGIL, Æneid, vi, 126. (Dryden, tr.)

16 One Hades receives all mortals alike. (Πάντας ὁμῶς ἑνῆροδος εἰς Ἅϊδος δέχεται.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, No. 342.)

V—Hell: The Fear of Hell

17 I thank God, and with joy I mention it, I was never afraid of Hell, nor never grew pale at the description of that place.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 59.

18 The fear o' Hell's a hangman's whip
To haud the wretch in order;

But where ye feel your honour grip,
Let that aye be your border.

BURNS, Epistle to a Young Friend. St. 8.

19 The devil is waiting for them, hell is gaping for them, the flames gather and flash about them. . . . When you come to be a firebrand of hell . . . you will appear as you are, a viper indeed. . . . Then will you as a serpent spit poison at God and vent your rage and malice in fearful blasphemies.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Men Naturally God's Enemies. (Works vii, 168.)

20 No hell will frighten men away from sin.

THOMAS HAWES, Speech in Season: Bk. i, Hell.

21 The dreadful fear of hell, which disturbs the life of man and renders it miserable, is to be driven out.

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 37.

1 Lives there who loves his pain?
Who would not, finding way, break loose
from Hell,

Though thither doom'd?

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 888.

2 The infliction of cruelty with a good conscience is a delight to moralists. That is why they invented Hell.

BERTRAND RUSSELL, Sceptical Essays, p. 16.

VI—Hell: The Hell Within

3 The heart of man is the place the devil dwells in: I feel sometimes a hell within myself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i,
sec. 51.

4 The Hell within him, for within him Hell
He brings, and round about him, nor from Hell

One step no more than from himself can fly
By change of place.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 20.

5 Which way I fly is Hell; myself am Hell;
And in the lowest deep a lower deep
Still threat'ning to devour me opens wide,
To which the Hell I suffer seems a Heav'n.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 75.

6 I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
Some letter of that After-life to spell:

And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
And answered, "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell."

OMAR KHAYYÁM, Rubáiyát. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

HERACLITUS

3 One told me, Heraclitus, of thy death, and brought me to tears, and I remembered how often we two in talking put the sun to rest. Thou, methinks, Halicarnassian friend, art ashes long and long ago; but thy nightingales live still, whereon Hades, snatcher of all things, shall not lay his hand.

(Εἰπέ τις, Ἡράκλειτε, τὸν μόνον, ἐς δ' ἐμὲ δάκρυ ἤγαγεν, ἐμνήσθην δ' ὁσσάκις ἀμφοτέρωι ἥλιον ἐν λέσχῃ κατεδύσαμεν· ἀλλὰ σὺ μὲν πον, ξεῖν' Ἀλικαρνασσεῦ, τετράπαλαι σποδῆ· αἱ δὲ τεαὶ ζώουσιν ἀηδόνες, ἥσιν ὁ πάντων ἀρπακτὴς Ἀΐδης οὐκ ἐπὶ χεῖρα βαλεῖ.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 2. Quoted by Diogenes Laertius, ix, 17, where he gives a list of the persons called Heraclitus.

They told me, Herakleitos, thou wast dead.
What tears I shed!

As I remembered how we two as one
Talked down the sun.

Well, Halicarnassian friend, long since thou must
Have turned to dust;

Yet live thy nightingales, and Hades, who Doth all subdue,

Shall never until Time itself shall close
Lay hand on those.

CALLIMACHUS. (Basil L. Gildersleeve, tr., American Journal of Philology. Vol. xxxiii, p. 111.)

They told me, Heraclitus, they told me you were dead,

They brought me bitter news to hear and bitter tears to shed.

I wept as I remembered how often you and I
Had tired the sun with talking and sent him down the sky.

And now that thou art lying, my dear old Carian guest,

A handful of grey ashes, long, long ago at rest,
Still are thy pleasant voices, thy nightingales, awake;

For Death, he taketh all away, but them he cannot take.

CALLIMACHUS. (William Johnson-Cory, tr.)

One told me, Heraclitus, of thy fate;
He brought me tears, he brought me memories;

Alas, my Carian friend, how oft, how late,
We twain have talked the sun adown the skies,

And somewhere thou art dust without a date!
But of thy songs death maketh not his prize,

In death's despite, that stealeth all, they wait,
The new year's nightingale that never dies.

CALLIMACHUS. (Andrew Lang, tr.)

They tell me, Heraclitus, thou art dead,
And many are the tears for thee I shed,
With memories of those summer nights oppress
When we together talked the sun to rest.
Alas! my guest, my friend! no more art thou;
Long, long ago wert ashes, and yet now
Thy nightingales live on, I hear them sing,
E'en death spares them, who spares not anything.
CALLIMACHUS. (Lilla Cabot Perry, tr., From the Garden of Hellas, p. 80.)

HERMIT

1 The hermit thinks the sun shines nowhere but in his cell.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

2 Hermit hoar, in solemn cell
Wearing out life's evening grey;
Smite thy bosom, Sage, and tell
What is bliss, and which the way.

Thus I spoke, and speaking sigh'd;—
Scarce repress'd the starting tear;—
When the smiling sage replied,
"Come, my lad, and drink some beer."

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, 18 Sept., 1777.)

3 Far in a wild, unknown to public view,
From youth to age a reverend hermit grew;
The moss his bed, the cave his humble cell,
His food the fruits, his drink the crystal
well:

Remote from man, with God he pass'd the
days,

Prayer all his business, all his pleasure praise.

I—Hero: Definitions

5 Heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh—that is to say, over fear. . . .
Heroism is the dazzling and glorious concentration of courage.

AMIEL, Journal, 1 Oct., 1849.

6 The hero is the world-man, in whose heart
One passion stands for all, the most indulged.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proëm, l. 114.

7 All actual heroes are essential men,
And all men possible heroes.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh. Bk. v, l. 151.

8 The Hero is he who lives in the inward sphere of things, in the True, Divine and Eternal, which exists always, unseen to most, under the Temporary, Trivial: his being is in that.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

There needs not a great soul to make a hero;
there needs a God-created soul which will be true to its origin; that will be a great soul.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Priest.

The Hero can be a Poet, Prophet, King, Priest or what you will, according to the kind of world
he finds himself born into.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Poet.

9 If Hero mean sincere man, why may not every one of us be a Hero?

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Priest.

Thou and I, my friend, can, in the most flunky world, make, each of us, one non-flunky, one hero, if we like; that will be two heroes to begin with.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. i, ch. 6.

10 I am convinced that a light supper, a good night's sleep, and a fine morning, have sometimes made a hero of the same man, who, by an indigestion, a restless night, and rainy morning, would have proved a coward.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 April, 1748.

11 He's of stature somewhat low—
Your hero always should be tall, you know.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 1029.

12 To believe in the heroic makes heroes.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iii, ch. 1.

13 There is no king nor sovereign state
That can fix a hero's rate.

R. W. EMERSON, Astræa.

The hero is not fed on sweets,
Daily his own heart he eats;
Chambers of the great are jails,
And head-winds right for royal sails.

R. W. EMERSON, Heroism.

The characteristic of genuine heroism is its persistency. All men have wandering impulses, fits and starts of generosity. But when you have resolved to be great, abide by yourself, and do not weakly try to reconcile yourself with the world. The heroic cannot be the common, nor the common the heroic.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

14 It is fortune (or chance) chiefly that makes heroes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

Nor deem that acts heroic wait on chance,
Or easy were as in a boy's romance;
The man's whole life precludes the single deed
That shall decide if his inheritance
Be with the sifted few of matchless breed,
Our race's sap and sustenance,
Or with the unmotivated herd that only sleep and feed.

J. R. LOWELL, Under the Old Elm.

15 Heroism is the self-devotion of genius manifesting itself in action.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

16 The greatest obstacle to being heroic is the doubt whether one may not be going to prove one's self a fool; the truest heroism is to resist the doubt, and the profoundest wisdom to know when it ought to be resisted, and when to be obeyed.

HAWTHORNE, The Blithedale Romance. Ch. 2.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 157. (Pope, tr.)

BRAVE MEN WERE LIVING BEFORE AGAMEMNON, see POETRY AND FAME.

14

The idol of to-day pushes the hero of yesterday out of our recollection; and will, in turn, be supplanted by his successor of to-morrow.

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch Book: Westminster Abbey.

15

The one cruel fact about heroes is that they are made of flesh and blood.

HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Liars. Act i.

16

Crowds speak in heroes.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. iv, ch. 3.

17

'Tis as easy to be heroes as to sit the idle slaves

Of a legendary virtue carved upon our father's graves.

J. R. LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 15.

18

Nothing is more depressing than the conviction that one is not a hero.

GEORGE MOORE, Ave, p. 35.

19

See the conquering hero comes!

Sound the trumpets, beat the drums!

DR. THOMAS MORELL. Morell furnished the libretto for Handel's Joshua, in which these lines appear. Also used in Nathaniel Lee's Alexander the Great. Act ii, sc. 1.

20

You cannot be a hero without being a coward.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface.

21

What a hero one can be without moving a finger!

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 July, 1838.

22

Such lapses from knowledge to faith are perhaps necessary that human heroism may be possible.

H. G. WELLS, Mr. Britling Sees It Through. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 1.

III—Heroes: Their Praise

23

A patriot hero or despotic chief, To form a nation's glory or its grief.

BYRON, The Island. Canto ii, st. 9.

24

Strike home, and the world shall revere us As heroes descended from heroes.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Song of the Greeks.

25

That subject for an angel's song,

The hero and the saint!

COWPER, Ode on Reading "Sir Charles Grandison".

26

The memory of a great name and the inheritance of a great example is the legacy of heroes.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 1 Feb., 1849.

1
Heroes of old! I humbly lay
The laurel on your graves again;
Whatever men have done, men may,—
The deeds you wrought are not in vain!
AUSTIN DOBSON, A Ballad of Heroes.

2
Heroism feels and never reasons and therefore is always right.
EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Heroism.

3
In death a hero, as in life a friend.
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 758. (Pope, tr.)

But to the hero, when his sword
Has won the battle for the free,
Thy voice sounds like a prophet's word;
And in its hollow tones are heard
The thanks of millions yet to be.
FITZ-GREENE HALLECK, Marco Bozzaris.

Like the day-star in the wave,
Sinks a hero in his grave,
'Midst the dew-fall of a nation's tears.
THOMAS MOORE, Before the Battle. See also SOLDIER: HOW SLEEP THE BRAVE.

4
Still the race of hero spirits pass the lamp
from hand to hand.
CHARLES KINGSLEY, The World's Age.

5
In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of Life,
Be not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a hero in the strife!
LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life.

6
Samson hath quit himself
Like Samson, and heroically hath finish'd
A life heroic.
MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1709.

7
For Witherington needs must I wail,
As one in doleful dumps;
For when his legs were smitten off,
He fought upon his stumps.
RICHARD SHEALE, attr., Ballad of Chevy Chase.
This is from a later version of the original ballad which was written c. 1475.

8
'Tis sweet to hear of heroes dead,
To know them still alive;
But sweeter if we earn their bread,
And in us they survive.
H. D. THOREAU, The Great Adventure.

9
Great-souled heroes, born in happier years.
(Magnanimi heroes, nati melioribus annis.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vi, l. 649.

10
Give honour to our heroes fall'n, how ill Soe'er the cause that bade them forth to die.
WILLIAM WATSON, The English Dead.

11
There's not a breathing of the common wind
That will forget thee; thou hast great allies;

Thy friends are exultations, agonies,
And love, and man's unconquerable mind.
WORDSWORTH, To Toussaint L'Ouverture.

IV—Hero-Worship

12
Worship of a hero is transcendent admiration of a great man.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Divinity*.

Society is founded on hero-worship.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Divinity*.

In all times and places the Hero has been worshipped. It will ever be so. We all love great men.
. . . Does not every true man feel that he is himself made higher by doing reverence to what is really above him? No nobler or more blessed feeling dwells in man's heart.

CARLYLE, *Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero
as Divinity*.

13
Hero-worship exists, has existed, and will forever exist universally among mankind.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus: Organic Filaments.

14 Hero-worship is healthy. It stimulates the young to deeds of heroism, stirs the old to unselfish efforts, and gives the masses models of mankind that tend to lift humanity above
the commonplace meanness of ordinary life.
DONN PIATT, *Memories of Men Who Saved
the Union: Preface*.

15
Hero-worship is strongest where there is least regard for human freedom.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iv, ch. 30,
sec. 6.

V—Hero and Valet

16
He who attends my close-stool sings me no such song.

ANTIGONUS I, King of Sparta, when addressed by Hermodotus as "Son of the Sun." (PLU-TARCH, Apothegms of Kings and Great Commanders: Antigonus.)

17
In short, he was a perfect cavaliero,
And to his very valet seemed a hero.

BYRON, Beppo. St. 33.

18
Heroes, it would seem, exist always, and a certain worship of them! We will also take the liberty to deny altogether that saying of the witty Frenchman, that no man is a hero to his valet-de-chambre. Or, if so, it is not the hero's blame, but the valet's: that his soul, namely, is a mean valet-soul.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters.

19
No man is a hero to his valet. (Il n'y a pas de grand homme pour son valet-de-chambre.)
MADAME DE CORNUEL (d. 1694); M<sup>lle</sup>. AÏSSÉ,

Lettres, p. 161. Also attributed to the Prince de Condé (d. 1686).

No man is a hero to his valet de chambre.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Patron. Act ii, sc. 1.

Each man is a hero and an oracle to somebody.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality.

To a valet no man is a hero. (Es gibt für den Kammerdiener keinen Helden.)

GOETHE, Wahlverwandschaften: Aus Ottilien's Tagebücher.

It is said that no man is a hero to his valet. That is only because a hero can be recognized only by a hero. The valet will probably be able to appreciate his like,—that is, his fellow-valet.

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. Vol. iii, p. 204.

The nearer we approach great men, the clearer we see that they are men. Rarely do they appear great before their valets.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. See also under SERVANTS.

HILLS

See also Mountains

Live thou upon hill as thou would live in hall.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Mirrouir of Good Manners, 25. (1570)

The hills, Rock-ribbed, and ancient as the sun.

BRYANT, Thanatopsis.

The hills are going somewhere;
They have been on the way a long time.
They are like camels in a line
But they move more slowly.

HILDA CONKLING, Hills.

The higher the hill the lower the grass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4593.

Ah, happy hills! ah, pleasing shade!

Ah, fields belov'd in vain,

Where once my careless childhood stray'd,
A stranger yet to pain!

I feel the gales, that from ye blow,
A momentary bliss bestow.

THOMAS GRAY, On a Distant Prospect of Eton College.

Praise be to you, O hills, that you can breathe

Into our souls the secret of your power!

RICHARD HOVEY, Comrades.

Every hill hath his dale.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotinus. Sig. U 2. (1583)

But on and up, where Nature's heart
Beats strong amid the hills.

MILNES, Tragedy of the Lac de Gaube. St. 2.

For we were nursed upon the self-same hill.

MILTON, Lycidas, l. 23.

Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 32.

To climb steep hills
Requires slow pace at first.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 1, l. 131.

What if the bridge men built goes down,
What if the torrent sweeps the town,
The hills are safe, the hills remain,
And hills are happy in the rain.

SARA TEASDALE, Even To-day.

Men climb tall hills to suffer and die.

NANCY BYRD TURNER, Hills.

Fly like a youthful hart or roe
Over the hills where spices grow.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns and Spiritual Songs. Bk. i, No. 79.

The hills are dearest which our childish feet
Have climbed the earliest; and the streams most sweet
Are ever those at which our young lips drank.

WHITTIER, Bridal of Pennacook: At Pennacook.

Come, heart, where hill is heaped upon hill:
For there the mystical brotherhood
Of sun and moon and hollow and wood
And river and stream work out their will.

W. B. YEATS, Into the Twilight.

II—Hills: Over the Hills and Far Away

Tom he was a piper's son,
He learned to play when he was young;
But all the tune that he could play
Was "Over the hills and far away."

UNKNOWN, The Distracted Jockey's Lamentation. (THOMAS D'URFEX, Pills to Purge Melancholy. 1661)

Our prentice Tom may now refuse
To wipe his scoundrel master's shoes;
For now he's free to sing and play—
Over the hills and far away.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act ii, sc. 3. (1706)

Over the hills, and over the main,
To Flanders, Portugal, or Spain:
The Queen commands, and we'll obey—
Over the hills and far away.

FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act ii, sc. 3.

1 And I would love you all the day,
Every night would kiss and play,
If with me you'd fondly stray
Over the hills and far away.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i, (1728)

2 The gauger walked with willing foot,
And aye the gauger played the flute;
And what should Master Gauger play
But Over the hills and far away.

R. L. STEVENSON, A Song of the Road.

3 And o'er the hills, and far away,
Beyond their utmost purple rim,
Beyond the night, across the day,
Thro' all the world she follow'd him.
TENNYSON, The Day-dream: The Departure.

HISTORY

I—History: Definitions

4 History is a pageant, not a philosophy.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: The Muse of History.

That great dust-heap called "history."

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: Carlyle.

5 History after all is the true poetry.

CARLYLE, Essays: Boswell's Life of Johnson.

6 History is the essence of innumerable Biographies.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

There is properly no history, only biography.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

All history resolves itself very easily into the biography of a few stout and earnest persons.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Self-Reliance.
See also under BIOGRAPHY.

7 History, as it lies at the root of all science, is also the first distinct product of man's spiritual nature; his earliest expression of what can be called Thought.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

8 All history . . . is an inarticulate Bible.

CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 8.

All history is a Bible—a thing stated in words by me more than once.

CARLYLE. (FROUDE, Early Life of Carlyle.)

9 History is only a confused heap of facts.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Feb., 1750.

10 History is Philosophy learned from examples. (ἱστορία φιλοσοφία ἐστὶν ἐκ παραδειγμάτων.)

DIONYSIUS OF HALICARNASSUS, Ars Rhetorica, xi, 2. A paraphrase from Thucydides, History. Bk. i, sec. 22.

I have read somewhere or other, in Dionysius of Halicarnassus, I think, that history is philosophy teaching by examples.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, On the Study and Use of History. Letter 2.

11 History is bunk.

HENRY FORD, on the witness stand at Mt. Clemens, Mich., in his libel suit against the Chicago Tribune, July, 1919.

12 History is but the unrolled scroll of prophecy.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, The Province of History.

13 History is the chart and compass for national endeavour.

ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 11.

14 History, by apprising [men] of the past, will enable them to judge of the future; it will avail them of the experience of other times and other nations.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. i, p. 207.

History, in general, only informs us what bad government is.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 223.

15 History teaches everything, even the future.

LAMARTINE, Speech, at Macon, 1847.

16 The history of the world is the record of a man in quest of his daily bread and butter.

H. W. VAN LOON, The Story of Mankind.

17 Old events have modern meanings; only that survives

Of past history which finds kindred in all hearts and lives.

J. R. LOWELL, Mahmood, l. 1.

18 The course of life is like the sea;
Men come and go; tides rise and fall;
And that is all of history.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Sea of Fire. Canto iv.

19 History is the crystallisation of popular beliefs.

DONN PIATT, Memories of Men Who Saved the Union: Abraham Lincoln.

20 We may gather out of history a policy no less wise than eternal; by the comparison and application of other men's forepassed miseries with our own like errors and ill deservings.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, History of the World: Preface.

21 History is a cyclic poem written by Time upon the memories of man.

SHELLEY. (BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta. Ser. ii, 203.)

II—History: Apothegms

22 You are called upon to remake history.

BERTRAND BARÈRE, to the Jacobins. (MARTIN, History of France, xvi.)

23 History, with all her volumes vast,
Hath but one page.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 108.

1 But that is ancient history. (Sed hæc et vetera.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74.

2 While we read history we make history.

G. W. CURTIS, The Call of Freedom.

Every great crisis of human history is a pass of Thermopylæ, and there is always a Leonidas and his three hundred to die in it, if they can not conquer.

G. W. CURTIS, The Call of Freedom.

3 This human mind wrote history, and this must read it. The Sphinx must solve her own riddle.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History.

In analysing history do not be too profound, for often the causes are quite superficial.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. iv, p. 160.

4 The use of history is to give value to the present hour and its duty.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

5 And read their history in a nation's eyes.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard. St. 16.

6 They who live in history only seemed to walk the earth again.

LONGFELLOW, The Belfry of Bruges. St. 9.

History casts its shadow far into the land of song.

LONGFELLOW, Outre-Mer: Ancient Spanish Ballads.

7 History, however it is written, always pleases. (Historia quoquo modo scripta delectat.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8.

8 [History] hath triumphed over Time, which besides it, nothing but Eternity hath triumphed over.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH, The History of the World: Preface.

9 The dignity of history.

HENRY SAINT-JOHN, LORD BOLINGBROKE, On the Study and Use of History. Letter 5. (1738)

The strange lady now laboured under a difficulty which appears almost below the dignity of history to mention.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. xi, ch. 2. (1749)

I shall cheerfully bear the reproach of having descended below the dignity of history.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 1. (1839)

10 The world's history is the world's judgment. (Die Weltgeschichte ist das Weltgericht.)

SCHILLER, Resignation.

11 Duke. And what's her history?

Viola. A blank, my lord.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 112.

12 Must not a great history be always an epic?

W. C. SMITH, Books Which Have Influenced Me.

13 And this is exactly how history is written. (Et voilà justement comme on écrit l'histoire.)

VOLTAIRE, Charlot. Act i, sc. 7. Voltaire's contempt for history was frequently expressed in nearly the same words.

What more can you ask? He has invented history. (Que voulez-vous de plus? Il a inventé l'histoire!)

MADAME DU DEFFAND, of Voltaire, when some one remarked that he lacked invention. (FOURIER, L'Esprit dans Histoire, p. 141.)

14 How history makes one shudder and laugh by turns!

WALPOLE, Letter to the Earl of Strafford, 1786.

Don't you begin to think, Madam, that it is pleasanter to read history than to live it? Battles are fought and towns taken on every page, but a campaign takes six or seven months to hear, and achieves no great matter at last. I dare say Alexander seemed to the coffee-houses of Pella a monstrous while about conquering the world.

WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Ossory, 8 Oct., 1777.

III—History: Its Truth

15 History indeed is the witness of the times, the light of truth. (Historia vero testis temporum, lux veritatis.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 9.

Who does not know that it is the first law of history that it shall not dare to state anything which is false, and consequently that it shall not shrink from stating anything that is true? (Quis nescit primam esse historiæ legem, ne quid falsi dicere audeat, deinde ne quid veri non audeat?)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 15.

16 To be ignorant of what happened before you were born is to be ever a child. For what is man's lifetime unless the memory of past events is woven with those of earlier times?

CICERO, Orator. Sec. 34.

17 One may cover secret actions, but to be silent concerning what all the world knows and things which have had effects which are public and of so much consequence, is an inexcusable fault. (On peut couvrir les actions secrètes; mais de taire tout ce que tout le monde sçait, et les choses qui ont tiré des effects publiques et de telle consequence, c'est un défaut inexcusable.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 10. Of the duty of historians.

1 I hold it a noble task to rescue from oblivion those who deserve to be eternally remembered. (Quia mihi pulchrum in primis videtur non pati occidere.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. v, epis. 8. History should be guided by strict truth, and worthy actions require nothing more.

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vii, epis. 33.

2 It is no great wonder if, in long process of time, while fortune takes her course hither and thither, numerous coincidences should spontaneously occur. If the number and variety of subjects be infinite, it is all the more easy for fortune, with such abundance of material, to effect this similarity of results.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Sertorius. Sec. 1.

3 The principal office of history I take to be this: to prevent virtuous actions from being forgotten, and that evil words and deeds should fear an infamous reputation with posterity.

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 65.

4 I shall be content if those shall pronounce my History useful who desire to give a view of events as they really happened, and as they are very likely, in accordance with human nature, to repeat themselves at some future time—if not exactly the same, yet very similar.

THUCYDIDES, Historia. Bk. i, sec. 2. Hence the phrase, "History repeats itself."

5 But I will trace the outlines of the chief events. (Sed summa sequar fastigia rerum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 342.

In due order I will describe the manners, the pursuits, the peoples, and the battles of the race. (Ordine gentis Mores et studia et populos, et prælia dicam.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 4.

6 In leaves, more durable than leaves of brass, Writes our whole history.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 275.

IV—History: Its Falsity

7 The vast Mississippi of falsehood.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays: History.

8 She was ever a notable wag at history.

APHRA BEHN, The Young King. Act i, sc. 1. Referring to Fame.

9

History

With the supernatural element,—you know. ROBERT BROWNING, Mr. Sludge "The Medium."

10 Where history's pen its praise or blame supplies,

And lies like truth, and still most truly lies. BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 11.

11 History, a distillation of Rumour.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. vii, ch. 5.

12 How many histories are there filled with these marvels?

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1.

13 History shows you prospects by starlight, or, at best, by the waning moon.

RUFUS CHOATE, New England History.

14 Some write a narrative of wars, and feats Of heroes little known, and call the rant An history: describe the man, of whom His own coevals took but little note, And paint his person, character and views, As they had known him from his mother's womb.

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 139.

15 Gossip which is written down is no more veracious than gossip which flies current. . . . Gossip is none the less gossip because it comes from venerable antiquity.

MANDELL CREIGHTON, Manuscript Notes.

16 Historians relate, not so much what is done, as what they would have believed.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

17 History fades into fable; fact becomes clouded with doubt and controversy; the inscription moulders from the tablet: the statue falls from the pedestal. Columns, arches, pyramids, what are they but heaps of sand; and their epitaphs, but characters written in the dust?

WASHINGTON IRVING, The Sketch-Book: Westminster Abbey.

18 Seldom any splendid story is wholly true.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ii, p. 281.

19 Such bickerings to recount, met often in these our writers, what more worth is it than to chronicle the wars of kites or crows flocking and fighting in the air?

MILTON, History of Britain. Bk. iv.

By this time, like one who had set out on his way by night, and travelled through a region of smooth or idle dreams, our history now arrives on the confines, where daylight and truth meet us with a clear dawn, representing to our view, though at a far distance, true colours and shapes.

MILTON, History of Britain. Bk. i.

20 So difficult a matter is it to determine the truth of anything by history.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles.

<sup>1</sup> Half-legend, half-historic.

TENNYSON, The Princess: Prologue, l. 30.

<sup>2</sup> Ancient histories, as one of our wits has said, are but fables that have been agreed upon. (Toutes les histoires anciens, comme le disoit un de nos beaux esprits, ne sont que des fables convenues.)

VOLTAIRE, Jeannot et Colin.

There are no other ancient histories except fables. (Il n'y a point d'autres histoires anciennes que les fables.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter.

What is history but a fable agreed upon?

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings.

<sup>3</sup> Anything but history, for history must be false.

ROBERT WALPOLE, when his secretary asked what he wished read to him as he lay on a sick-bed. (Walpoliana. No. 141.) Notes and Queries, No. 3, states that the correct version is, "Oh, do not read history, for that I know must be false."

<sup>4</sup> Those old credulities, to nature dear,
Shall they no longer bloom upon the stock
Of History, stript naked as a rock
'Mid a dry desert?

WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Italy: No. 4, Regrets. Alluding to Niebuhr and other modern historians.

V—History: A Record of Crime

<sup>5</sup> I pore on musty chronicles,
And muse on usurpations long forgot,
And other storied dramas of high wrong!

THOMAS HARDY, The Dynasts. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 8.

<sup>6</sup> Sin writes histories, goodness is silent.

GOETHE, Table-Talk, 1810.

<sup>7</sup> The long historian of my country's woes.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iii, l. 142. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>8</sup> The history of the great events of this world is scarcely more than the history of crimes. (L'histoire des grands évènements de ce monde n'est guère que l'histoire des crimes.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. (1753)

History is but a picture of crimes and misfortunes. (L'histoire n'est que le tableau des crimes et des malheurs.)

VOLTAIRE, L'Ingénu. Ch. 10. (1757)

On whatever side we regard the history of Europe, we shall perceive it to be a tissue of crimes, follies, and misfortunes.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 42. (1762)

History is, indeed, little more than the register of the crimes, follies, and misfortunes of mankind.

GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 3. (1776)

VI—History: Happy the Nation Whose Annals Are Blank

<sup>9</sup> Happy is the nation without a history.

BECCARIA, Trattato dei Delitti e Delle Pene: Introduction.

<sup>10</sup> Blest is that Nation whose silent course of happiness furnishes nothing for history to say.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xi, p. 180.

He is happiest of whom the world says least, good or bad.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1786.

<sup>11</sup> Happy the people whose annals are tiresome.

MONTESQUIEU, Maximes.

A paradoxical philosopher carrying to the utmost length that aphorism of Montesquieu's, "Happy the people whose annals are tiresome," has said "Happy the people whose annals are vacant."

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 1.

Happy the people whose annals are blank.

CARLYLE, Frederick the Great. Bk. xvi, ch. 1.

<sup>12</sup> How the best state to know?—it is found out

Like the best woman;—that least talked about.

SCHILLER, Votive Tablets: The Best Governed State.

The happiest women, like the happiest nations, have no history.

GEORGE ELIOT, The Mill on the Floss. Bk. vi, ch. 3.

VII—History: The Historian

<sup>13</sup> It is the true office of history to represent the events themselves, together with the counsels, and to leave the observations and conclusions thereupon to the liberty and faculty of every man's judgment.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

Cæsar, in modesty mixed with greatness, did for his pleasure apply the name of a Commentary to the best history of the world.

BACON, Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii.

<sup>14</sup> These gentle historians, on the contrary, dip their pens in nothing but the milk of human kindness.

EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord.

<sup>15</sup> Histories are as perfect as the Historian is wise, and is gifted with an eye and a soul.

CARLYLE, Cromwell's Letters and Speeches: Introduction.

In a certain sense all men are historians.

CARLYLE, Essays: On History.

<sup>16</sup> Historians ought to be precise, faithful, and unprejudiced; and neither interest nor fear, hatred nor affection, should make them swerve from the way of truth.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 9.

History owes its excellency more to the writer's manner than to the material of which it is composed.

GOLDSMITH, Life of Richard Nash.

The historian is a sort of talking ghost from out the past.

HOFFMAN, Doge and Dogaressa.

Every great writer is a writer of history, let him treat on almost any subject he may.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Diogenes and Plato.

To be a really good historian is perhaps the rarest of intellectual distinctions.

MACAULAY, Essays: History.

I regard the writing of history as one of the most difficult of tasks. (In primus arduum videtur res gestas scribere.)

SALLUST, Catilina. Sec. 3.

The historian is a prophet looking backwards. (Der Historiker ist ein rückwärts gekehrter Prophet.)

SCHLEGEL, Athenæum: Berlin, i, ii, 20.

Anybody can make history. Only a great man can write it.

OSCAR WILDE, Aphorisms, p. 52.

Deal not in history, often I have said;
'Twill prove a most unprofitable trade.

JOHN WOLCOT, Benevolent Epistle.

HOLIDAY

There were his young barbarians all at play,
There was their Dacian mother—he, their sire,

Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 141.

Still thou playest:—short vacation
Fate grants each to stand aside;

Now must thou be man and artist,—
'Tis the turning of the tide.

EMERSON, Holidays.

The red-letter days now become, to all intents and purposes, dead-letter days.

LAMB, Essays of Elia: Oxford in the Vacation.

The holiest of all holidays are those
Kept by ourselves in silence and apart;

The secret anniversaries of the heart,

When the full river of feeling overflows;—

The happy days unclouded to their close;

The sudden joys that out of darkness start

As flames from ashes; swift desires that dart

Like swallows singing down each wind that blows!

LONGFELLOW, Holidays.

On a sunshine holiday.

MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 98.

For now I am in a holiday humour.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 69.

If all the year was playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 227.

A perpetual holiday is a good working definition of hell.

BERNARD SHAW, Parents and Children.

Is this a holiday?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 1, l. 2.

The yearly course that brings this day about
Shall never see it but a holiday.

SHAKESPEARE, King John. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 82.

He speaks holiday.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 69.

Monday is parson's holiday.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 3 March, 1711.

Time for work,—yet take

Much holiday for art's and friendship's sake.
GEORGE JAMES DE WILDE, On the Arrival of Spring.

HOLINESS

See also Goodness

Things sacred should not only be untouched with the hands, but unviolated in thought. (Res sacros non modo manibus attingi, sed ne cogitatione quidem violari fas fuit.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. ii, sec. 4.

Holiness appeared to me to be of a sweet, pleasant, charming, serene, calm nature; which brought an inexpressible purity, brightness, peacefulness, and rapture to the soul. In other words, that it made the soul like a field or garden of God, with all manner of pleasant flowers.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Holiness.

We believe that holiness confers a certain insight, because not by private, but by our public force can we share and know the nature of things.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

Ascending thorough just degrees

To a consummate holiness,

As angel blind to trespass done,

And bleaching all souls like the sun.

EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 29.

3
But all his mind is bent to holiness,
To number Ave-Maries on his beads;
His champions are the prophets and apostles,
His weapons holy saws of sacred writ,
His study is his tilt-yard, and his loves
Are brazen images of canonized saints.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI. Act i, sc. 3, l. 58.

4
What thou wouldst highly
That wouldst thou holily.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 22.

Our holy lives must win a new world's crown.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act v, sc. 1, l. 24.

5
Holiness is the architectural plan upon which God buildeth up His living temple.
C. G. SPURGEON, Holiness.

HOLLAND AND THE HOLLANDERS

6
A country that draws fifty foot of water,
In which men live as in the hold of Nature,
And when the sea does in upon them break,
And drowns a province, does but spring a leak. . . .

That feed, like cannibals, on other fishes,
And serve their cousin-germans up in dishes:
A land that rides at anchor, and is moor'd,
In which they do not live, but go aboard.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Description of Holland.

7
That water-land of Dutchmen and of ditches.
BYRON, Don Juan. Canto x, st. 63.

8
Well may they boast themselves an ancient nation,
For they were bred ere manners were in fashion.

DRYDEN, Satire on the Dutch, l. 31.

9
Embosom'd in the deep where Holland lies,
Methinks her patient sons before me stand,
Where the broad ocean leans against the land.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 282.

Then we upon our globe's last verge shall go
And see the ocean leaning on the sky.
DRYDEN, On the Royal Society.

10
The Scotch may be compared to a tulip planted in dung; but I never see a Dutchman in his own house but I think of a magnificent Egyptian temple dedicated to an ox.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Letter to Thomas Con-tarine, 1753.

11
Holland . . . lies so low, they're only saved
by being dammed.

THOMAS HOOD, Up the Rhine.

12 Holland, that scarce deserves the name of
land,
As but the off-scouring of the British sand;
And so much earth as was contributed
By English pilots, when they heaved the lead.
ANDREW MARVELL, The Character of Holland,
l. 1.

Who best could know to pump an earth so leak,
Him they their lord and country's father speak;
To make a bank was a great plot of state;—
Invent a shovel, and be a magistrate.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Character of Holland,
l. 45.

13
Adieu, canals, ducks, rabble! (Adieu, canaux, canards, canaille!)

VOLTAIRE, when leaving Holland, summing up his impressions of the country.

I—Home: Definitions

14
Home,—the nursery of the infinite.
W. E. CHANNING, Note-Book: Children.

Home interprets heaven. Home is heaven for beginners.

CHARLES PARKHURST, Sermons: The Perfect Peace.

15
My idea of a home is a house in which each member of the family can on the instant kindle a fire in his or her private room.

EMERSON, Journals.

16
Home is the place where, when you have to go
there,
They have to take you in.

ROBERT FROST, The Death of the Hired Man.

17
Home, in one form or another, is the great object of life.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home.

No genuine observer can decide otherwise than that the homes of a nation are the bulwarks of personal and national safety.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home.

18
A house full of books and a garden of flowers.
ANDREW LANG, Ballade of True Wisdom.

19
Home is where the heart is.

Attributed to PLINY. Claimed by ELBERT HUB-BARD, One Thousand and One Epigrams, p.
73.

Where we love is home,
Home that our feet may leave, but not our hearts.

O. W. HOLMES, Homesick in Heaven. St. 5.

<sup>1</sup> Home is the girl's prison and the woman's workhouse.

BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists.

<sup>2</sup> The modern idea of home has been well expressed as the place one goes from the garage.

GEORGE W. WICKERSHAM. "I am sorry to say that sentence . . . is not original."—Letter to Compiler.

MY HOUSE MY CASTLE, see under HOUSE.

II—Home Sweet Home

<sup>3</sup> Nor has the world a better thing,
Though one should search it round,
Than thus to live one's own sole king,
Upon one's own sole ground.

WILFRID SCAWEN BLUNT, The Old Squire.

<sup>4</sup> But what on earth is half so dear—
So longed for—as the hearth of home?

EMILY BRONTË, A Little While.

<sup>5</sup> Fare you well, old house! you're naught that can feel or see,
But you seem like a human bein'—a dear old friend to me;

And we never will have a better home, if my opinion stands,
Until we commence a-keepin' house in the house not made with hands.

WILL CARLETON, Out of the Old House, Nancy.

<sup>6</sup> Old homes! old hearts! Upon my soul forever Their peace and gladness lie like tears and laughter.

MADISON CAWEIN, Old Homes.

<sup>7</sup> Whom God loves, his house is sweet to him.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

<sup>8</sup> Wherever smoke wreaths Heavenward curl—
Cave of a hermit, Hovel of churl,
Mansion of merchant, princely dome—
Out of the dreariness,
Into its cheeriness,
Come we in weariness
Home.

STEPHEN CHALMERS, Home.

<sup>9</sup> No place is more delightful than one's own fireside. (Nullus est locus domestica sede jucundior.)

CICERO, Epistolæ ad Familiares. Bk. iv, epis. 8.

<sup>10</sup> When the flower is i' the bud and the leaf is on the tree,
The lark shall sing me hame in my ain coun-
tree;

Hame, hame, hame, hame fain wad I be,
O hame, hame, hame, to my ain countree!

ALLAN CUNNINGHAM, Hame, Hame, Hame.

<sup>11</sup> Blest be that spot, where cheerful guests retire

To pause from toil, and trim their ev'ning fire;

Blest that abode, where want and pain repair,

And every stranger finds a ready chair.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 13.

<sup>12</sup> Of a' roads to happiness ever were tried,
There's nane half so sure as ane's ain fireside.

ELIZABETH HAMILTON, My Ain Fireside.

My ain fireside, my ain fireside,
O, there's naught to compare wi' ane's ain fireside.

ELIZABETH HAMILTON, My Ain Fireside.

Pleasant are one's own brands.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hending. St. 14. (c.
1300)

<sup>13</sup> Sweet is the smile of home; the mutual look
When hearts are of each other sure.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: First Sunday in Lent.

<sup>14</sup> His home, the spot of earth supremely blest,
A dearer, sweeter spot than all the rest.

MONTGOMERY, West Indies. Pt. iii, l. 67.

<sup>15</sup> Round the hearth-stone of home, in the land of our birth,

The holiest spot on the face of the earth.

GEORGE POPE MORRIS, Land Ho!

A bleezing ingle, and clean hearth-stane.

ALLAN RAMSAY, The Gentle Shepherd. Act i,
sc. 2.

<sup>16</sup> To fireside happiness, to hours of ease,
Blest with that charm, the certainty to please.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Human Life, l. 355.

<sup>17</sup> A comfortable house is a great source of happiness. It ranks immediately after health and a good conscience.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord Murray, 29
Sept., 1843.

<sup>18</sup> I read within a poet's book

A word that starred the page,
"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

Yes, that is true, and something more:

You'll find, where'er you roam,
That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.

But every house where Love abides

And Friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home, sweet home;
For there the heart can rest.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Home Song.

<sup>19</sup> Type of the wise, who soar, but never roam—

True to the kindred points of Heaven and Home!

WORDSWORTH, To a Skylark.

1 Let us make resound the sweet song of "Home." (Dulce domum resonemus.)

UNKNOWN, Concinamus, O sodales (Comrades, Let us Sing Together). The song sung at Winchester and other English schools on the eve of the holidays. "Dulce domum" is sometimes improperly used for "sweet home."

III—Home: Be It Never so Homely

2 Hame's hame, be it never so hamely.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Law a Bottomless Pit. Pt. iii, ch. 4. (1712)

Home is home, be it never so homely.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 35. (1848)

3 For home, though homely 'twere, yet it is sweet.

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto xxxix, st. 61. (Harington, tr., 1591.)

Though home be homely, it is more delightful than finer things abroad.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains. Vol. ii, p. 285. (1680)

Home is homely, though it be poor in sight.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 4. (1546)

4 Is not a small house best? Put a woman into a small house, and after five years she comes out large and healthy.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 47.

5 My house, my house, though thou art small, Thou art to me the Escorial.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

God oft hath a great share in a little house.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Perhaps from the French proverb, "En petite maison a Dieu grand part."

I've read in many a novel, that unless they've souls that grovel—

Folks prefer in fact a hovel to your dreary marble halls.

C. S. CALVERLEY, In the Gloaming.

6 Joy dwells beneath a humble roof; Heaven is not built of country seats But little queer suburban streets.

CHRISTOPHER MORLEY, To the Little House.

7 'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,

Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE, Home, Sweet Home. From the opera, Clari, The Maid of Milan.

The banishment was overlong,
But it will soon be past;

The man who wrote home's sweetest song
Is coming home at last.

WILL CARLETON, Coming Home at Last. John

Howard Payne, the author of Home, Sweet Home, died in Tunis, 9 April, 1852, and was buried there. Thirty years later, the body was exhumed, shipped to the United States, and re-buried in the chapel of Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D. C., on the ninety-second anniversary of his birth, 9 June, 1883.

8 A little house well fill'd, a little land well till'd, and little wife well will'd, are great riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

9 Just the wee cot—the cricket's chirr—
Love and the smiling face of her.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, Ike Walton's Prayer.

10 Though home be but homely, yet huswife is taught

That home hath no fellow to such as have aught.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry: Housewifery.

IV—Home: East, West, Hame's Best

11 Now will I to home and household hearth
Move on, and first give thanks unto the Gods,

Who led me forth and brought me back again.

ÆSCHYLUS, Choëphori, l. 824. (Plumptre, tr.)

He who is truly happy should bide at home
(and he who fares ill, he too should bide at home.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 177.

12 But wheresoe'er I'm doomed to roam,
I still shall say—that home is home.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxvi.

For the whole world, without a native home,
Is nothing but a prison of larger room.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, To the Bishop of Lincoln.

13 If solid happiness we prize,
Within our breast this jewel lies,
And they are fools who roam.

The world has nothing to bestow;

From our own selves our joys must flow,
And that dear hut, our home.

NATHANIEL COTTON, The Fireside. St. 3.

14 Cleave to thine acre; the round year
Will fetch all fruits and virtues here.
Fool and foe may harmless roam,
Loved and lovers bide at home.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way.

Who bides at home, nor looks abroad,
Carries the eagles, and masters the sword.

EMERSON, Destiny.

That each should in his house abide,
Therefore was the world so wide.

EMERSON, Fragments: Life. Frag. 37.

Stay at home. The way to have large occasional views is to have large habitual views.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk.

<sup>1</sup> Oh, to be home again, home again, home again!

Under the apple-boughs, down by the mill!

J. T. FIELDS, In a Strange Land.

<sup>2</sup> Way down upon de Swanee ribber,
Far, far away,
Dere's wha my heart is turning ebber,
Dere's wha de old folks stay.

All up and down de whole creation,

Sadly I roam,
Still longing for de old plantation,
And for de old folks at home.

STEPHEN COLLINS FOSTER, Old Folks at Home.

<sup>3</sup> However we toil, or wherever we wander, our fatigued wishes still recur to home for tranquillity.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. No. 103.

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er we roam,
His first, best country ever is at home.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 73.

<sup>4</sup> What strong, mysterious links enchain the heart

To regions where the morn of life was spent.

JAMES GRAHAME, The Sabbath, l. 404.

<sup>5</sup> He that doth live at home, and learns to know
God and himself, needeth no farther go.

CHRISTOPHER HARVEY, Travels at Home.

<sup>6</sup> And for their birthplace moan, as moans the ocean-shell.

FELICIA HEMANS, The Forest Sanctuary.

<sup>7</sup> A man is always nearest to his good when at home, and farthest from it when away.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Home.

<sup>8</sup> His native home deep imag'd in his soul.
(Δὴ γὰρ μετέαινε νέεσθαι.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiii, l. 30. (Pope, tr.)

<sup>9</sup> Peace and rest at length have come,
All the day's long toil is past;

And each heart is whispering, "Home, Home at last!"

THOMAS HOOD, Home At Last.

<sup>10</sup> To be happy at home is the ultimate result of all ambition.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68.

Goethe once said, "He is happiest, king or peasant, who finds his happiness at home." And Goethe knew—because he never found it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams.

<sup>11</sup> And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree.

Old Testament: I Kings, iv, 25.

And then eat ye every man of his own vine, and every one of his fig tree, and drink ye every one of the waters of his cistern.

Old Testament: II Kings, xviii, 31.

They shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree.

Old Testament: Micah, iv, 4.

<sup>12</sup> Cling to thy home! If there the meanest shed Yield thee a hearth and shelter for thy head,
And some poor plot, with vegetables stored,
Be all that Heaven allots thee for thy board,
Unsavoury bread, and herbs that scatter'd grow

Wild on the river-brink or mountain-brow;
Yet e'en this cheerless mansion shall provide More heart's repose than all the world beside.

LEONIDAS, Cling to Thy Home.

<sup>13</sup> Over the hills of home, laddie, over the hills of home.

LILLIAN LEVERIDGE, A Cry from the Canadian Hills.

<sup>14</sup> Stay, stay at home, my heart, and rest;
Home-keeping hearts are happiest,
For those that wander they know not where
Are full of trouble and full of care;

To stay at home is best.

LONGFELLOW, Song. St. 1.

<sup>15</sup> He never cares to wander from his own fire-
side,

He never cares to wander or to roam.

With his baby on his knee,

He's as happy as can be,

For there's no place like home, sweet home.

FELIX MCGLENNON, *He Never Cares to Wan-

<sup>17</sup> Who has not felt how sadly sweet
The dream of home, the dream of home,

Steals o'er the heart, too soon to fleet,

When far o'er sea or land we roam?

THOMAS MOORE, The Dream of Home.

<sup>18</sup> The bird, let loose in eastern skies,
When hast'ning fondly home,

Ne'er stoops to earth her wing, nor flies

Where idle warblers roam;

But high she shoots through air and light,

Above all low delay,

Where nothing earthly bounds her flight,

Nor shadow dims her way.

THOMAS MOORE, The Bird, Let Loose.

<sup>19</sup> So sung he joyously, nor knew that they Must wander yet for many an evil day

Or ever the dread gods should let them come Back to the white walls of their long-left home.

WILLIAM MORRIS, Life and Death of Jason.
Bk. ix, l. 330.

chamber*. (Citizen of the World. No. 30.
1760.)

The white-wash'd wall, the nicely sanded floor,
The varnish'd clock that click'd behind the door;
The chest contriv'd a double debt to pay,
A bed by night, a chest of drawers by day.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 227.

What if in Scotland's wilds we veil'd our head,
Where tempests whistle round the sordid bed;
Where the rug's two-fold use we might display,
By night a blanket, and a plaid by day.
EDWARD BURNABY GREENE, The Satires of Juvenal Paraphrastically Imitated. (1764)

15
At night returning, every labour sped,
He sits him down, the monarch of a shed:
Smiles by his cheerful fire, and round surveys
His children's looks, that brighten at the blaze;

While his lov'd partner, boastful of her
hoard,
Displays her cleanly platter on the board.
GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 191.

1 How small, of all that human hearts endure,
That part which laws or kings can cause or cure!

Still to ourselves in every place consign'd,
Our own felicity we make or find:

With secret course, which no loud storms annoy,

Glides the smooth current of domestic joy.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH AND SAMUEL JOHNSON,
The Traveller, l. 429. Johnson indicated to Boswell that he had written the last ten lines of the poem with the exception of the last couplet but one. (BOSWELL, Life, Feb., 1766.)

2 Home and a pleasing wife. (Domus et placens Uxor.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 14, l. 21.

A house and a woman suit excellently.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

3 The happiness of the domestic fireside is the first boon of mankind; and it is well it is so, since it is that which is the lot of the mass of mankind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiii, p. 220.

4 The many make the household,
But only one the home.

J. R. LOWELL, The Dead House. St. 9.

It takes a hundred men to make an encampment,
but one woman can make a home.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Woman.

What is the fireside if it warm but one?

R. U. JOHNSON, O Made for Love.

5 No more shall thy family welcome thee home
Nor around thee thy wife and sweet little ones
come,

All clamorous joyous to snatch the first kiss,
Transporting thy bosom with exquisite bliss.
(Nam jam non domus accipiet te læta, neque
uxor

Optima, nec dulces occurrent oscula nati
Præripere, et tacita pectus dulcedine tangent.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 907.
(King, tr.)

For them no more the blazing hearth shall burn,
Or busy housewife ply her evening care;
No children run to lisp their sire's return,
Or climb his knees the envied kiss to share.

THOMAS GRAY, *Elegy Written in a Country
Church-yard*, l. 21.

6 Subduing and subdued, the petty strife,
Which clouds the colour of domestic life;
The sober comfort, all the peace which springs
From the large aggregate of little things;
On these small cares of daughter, wife or
friend,

The almost sacred joys of home depend.

HANNAH MORE, Sensibility.

7 The eagle nestles near the sun;
The dove's low nest for me!—
The eagle's on the crag; sweet one,
The dove's in our green tree!
For hearts that beat like thine and mine
Heaven blesses humble earth;—
The angels of our Heaven shall shine
The angels of our Hearth!
JOHN JAMES PIATT, A Song of Content.

8 We have wrought for glory and for beauty and for pleasure,
And have builded little houses for the women
we hold dear.

VICTOR STARBUCK, The Little Houses.

9 God looks down well pleased to mark
In earth's dusk each rosy spark,
Lights of home and lights of love,
And the child the heart thereof.

KATHERINE TYNAN, A Night Thought.

10 Meantime his sweet children hang upon his kisses: his pure home preserves its sanctity.
(Interea dulces pendent circum oscula nati:
Casta pudicitiam servat domus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 523.

His little children, climbing for a kiss,
Welcome their father's late return at night;
His faithful bed is crowned with chaste delight.
VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 523. (Dryden, tr.)

VI—Home: Its Drawbacks

11 The largest part of mankind are nowhere greater strangers than at home.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk.

I am now no more than a mere lodger in my own house.

GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act i.

12 Be thou thine own home, and in thyself dwell;
Inn anywhere, continuance maketh hell.

And seeing the snail, which everywhere doth room,

Carrying his own house still, still is at home,
Follow (for he is easy-paced) this snail,
Be thine own palace, or the world's thy jail.

JOHN DONNE, To Sir Henry Wotton, l. 47.

13 Every spirit makes its house, but afterwards
the house confines the spirit.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

A man builds a fine house; and now he has a master, and a task for life: he is to furnish, watch, show it, and keep it in repair, the rest of his days.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days.

14 Who hath not met with home-made bread,
A heavy compound of putty and lead—
And home-made wines that rack the head,

And home-made liqueurs and waters?
Home-made pop that will not foam,
And home-made dishes that drive one from
home, . . .

Home-made by the homely daughters?

Home-made physic that sickens the sick;
Thick for thin and thin for thick;—
In short each homogeneous trick

For poisoning domesticity?

And since our Parents, called the First,
A little family squabble nurst,
Of all our evils, the worst of the worst
Is home-made infelicity.

THOMAS HOOD, Miss Kilmansegg: Her Misery.

1 There's no place like home, and many a man is glad of it.

F. M. KNOWLES, A Cheerful Year Book.

2 Three things there be that doth a man by strength

For to flee his own house as Holy Writ sheweth,

That one is a wicked wife that will not be chasted;

Her husband fleeth from her for fear of her tongue.

And if his house be untiled and rain on his bed,

He seeketh and seeketh till he sleep dry.

And when smoke and smoulder smite in his
sight,

It doth him worse than his wife or wet to sleep.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. xvii, 315.

(1377) The Latin original of this saying, which is a combination of Proverbs x, 26,
xix, 13, and xxvii, 15, will be found in De
Contemptu Mundi, i, 18.

Three things drive a man out of his house: that is to say, smoke, dropping of rain, and wicked wives.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 15. (c. 1386)

3 It is for homely features to keep home,
They had their name thence; coarse complexions

And cheeks of sorry grain will serve to ply
The sampler and to tease the huswife's wool.
What need a vermeil-tinctur'd lip for that,
Love-darting eyes, or tresses like the morn?

MILTON, Comus, l. 748.

4 I find by all you have been telling,
That 'tis a house, but not a dwelling.

POPE, On the Duke of Marlborough's House.

5 Such wind as scatters young men through the world

To seek their fortunes further than at home
Where small experience grows.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act
i, sc. 2, l. 50.

6 Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits.
Were 't not affection chains thy tender days
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd love,
I rather would entreat thy company
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dully sluggardized at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act i, sc. 1, l. 2.

He that lives always at home, sees nothing but
home.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works. Vol. ii, ch. 7. (1618)

How much a dunce, that has been sent to roam,
Excels a dunce that has been kept at home.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 415.

7 Our lives are domestic in more senses than we think. From the hearth, the field is a great distance. It would be well, perhaps, . . . if the poet did not speak so much from under a roof, or the saint dwell there so long. Birds do not sing in caves, nor do doves cherish their innocence in dovescotes.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1.

8 One rubber plant can never make a home,
Not even when combined with brush and comb,

And spoon, and fork, and knife,

And graphophone, and wife—

No! Something more is needed for a home.

UNKNOWN, Home.

VII—Home: Homelessness

9 The earth is all the home I have,
The heavens my wide roof-tree.

W. E. AYTOUN, The Wandering Jew, l. 49.

Any old place I can hang my hat is home, sweet home to me.

JEROME-SCHWARTZ. Title of popular song.
(1901)

10 Oh, it was pitiful!

Near a whole city full

Home she had none.

THOMAS HOOD, The Bridge of Sighs.

11 The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

New Testament: Matthew, viii, 20.

12 Horses, oxen, have a home

When from daily toil they come;

Household dogs, when the wind roars,

Find a home within warm doors;

Asses, swine, have litter spread,

And with fitting food are fed;

All things have a home but one—

Thou, O Englishman, hast none!

SHELLEY, The Masque of Anarchy. St. 50.

1 And homeless near a thousand homes I stood.
WORDSWORTH, Guilt and Sorrow. St. 41.

HOMER

I—Homer: His Birthplace

2 As to Homer's native city, there is a very great divergence of opinion. Some say that he was from Colophon, some from Smyrna; others assert that he was an Athenian, still others, an Egyptian; and Aristotle declares that he was from the island of Ios.

AULUS GELLIIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, epis. 11, sec. 6.

3 Colophon asserts that Homer is her citizen, Chios claims him for her own, Salamis appropriates him, while Smyrna is so confident that he belongs to her that she has dedicated a shrine to him. (Homerum Colophonii civem esse dicunt suum, Chii suum vindecant, Salaminii repetunt, Smyrnæi vero suum esse confirmant, itaque etiam delubrum ejus in oppido dedicaverunt.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 8, sec. 19.

4 Seven cities warred for Homer, being dead, Who, living, had no roof to shroud his head.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, On Homer's Birthplace. (1546)

5 Great Homer's birthplace seven rival cities claim,

Too mighty such monopoly of Fame.

THOMAS SEWARD, On Shakespeare's Monument at Stratford-upon-Avon.

Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead, Through which the living Homer begged his bread.

THOMAS SEWARD, On Homer.

Homer himself must beg if he wants means, as by report he sometimes did "go from door to door and sing ballads, with a company of boys about him."

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 6.

6 Seven cities strive for the learned root of Homer:

Smyrna, Chios, Colophon, Ithaca, Pylos, Argos, Athens.

(Ἐπὶ τὰ πόλεις μάρναντο σοφὴν διὰ ῥίξαν Ὀμήρου, Σμύρνα, Χίος, Κολοφών, Ἰθάκη, Πύλος, Ἄργος, Ἀθηναί.)

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 298. Epigrams 295–299 are concerned with Homer's birthplace.)

7 Thou askest me that which is unknown to thee, the parentage and country of the ambrosial Siren. A certain Ithaca was the seat of Homer, Telemachus was his father, and his mother Nestor's daughter, Polycaste.

Spoken by the Pythian oracle to the Emperor

Hadrian. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xiv, epig. 102.)

II—Homer: His Greatness

8 O fortunate youth, who found a Homer to proclaim thy valor! (O fortunate adolescens, qui tuæ virtutis Homerum præconem inveneris!)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, at the tomb of Achilles, at Sigeum. (CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 10, sec. 24.) Plutarch tells the story in his life of Alexander, ch. 15, sec. 4.

9 After your song the world could say it possessed eleven Pierian sisters.

ANTIPELUS OF BYZANTIUM, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 192.)

10 A man who has not read Homer is like a man who has not seen the ocean. There is a great object of which he has no idea.

WALTER BAGEHOT, Literary Studies, i, 225.

11 Here Homer, with a broad suspense Of thunderous brows, and lips intense Of garrulous god-innocence.

E. B. BROWNING, A Vision of Poets, l. 295.

12 Or list'ning to the tide, with closèd sight, Be that blind bard, who on the Chian strand By those deep sounds possessed with inward light, Beheld the Iliad and the Odyssee Rise to the swelling of the voiceful sea.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Fancy in Nubibus.

The blind old man of Scio's rocky isle.

BYRON, The Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, st. 2.

13 Strongly it bears us along in swelling and limitless billows, Nothing before and nothing behind but the sky and ocean.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Homeric Hexameter. An adaptation of Schiller.

They hear like Ocean on a western beach The surge and thunder of the Odyssey.

ANDREW LANG, The Odyssey.

14 I can no more believe old Homer blind, Than those who say the sun hath never shin'd:

The age wherein he liv'd was dark, but he Could not want sight who taught the world to see.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, Progress of Learning.

15 Every novel is a debtor to Homer. EMERSON, Representative Men: Uses of Great Men.

16 I, too, am indignant when the worthy Homer nods, but in a long work it is allowable to snatch a little sleep. (Et idem Indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus, verum operi longo fas est obrepere somnum.)

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 358.

While e'en good Homer may deserve a tap,
If, as he does, he drop his head and nap,
Yet, when a work is long, 'twere somewhat hard
To blame a drowsy moment in a bard.

HORACE, Ars Poetica, l. 358. (Conington, tr.)

In longer works sleep will sometimes surprise;
Homer himself hath been observed to nod.

WENTWORTH DILLON, Art of Poetry.

Homer himself, in a long work, may sleep.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 95.

Those oft are stratagems which errors seem,
Nor is it Homer nods, but we that dream.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 179.

<sup>1</sup> [Homer tells] that which is excellent, that which is base, that which is useful, that which is not. (Quid sit pulchrum, quid turpe, quid utile, quid non.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis, 2, l. 3.

By his praises of wine Homer is proved a wine-bibber. (Laudibus arguitur vini vinosus Homerus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 19, l. 6.

<sup>2</sup> Much have I travell'd in the realms of gold,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen;
Round many western islands have I been
Which bards in fealty to Apollo hold.
Oft of one wide expanse had I been told
That deep brow'd Homer ruled as his demesne:

Yet did I never breathe its pure serene
Till I heard Chapman speak out loud and bold:

Then felt I like some watcher of the skies
When a new planet swims into his ken;
Or like stout Cortez when with eagle eyes
He star'd at the Pacific—and all his men
Look'd at each other with a wild surmise—
Silent, upon a peak in Darien.

JOHN KEATS, On First Looking Into Chapman's Homer.

<sup>3</sup> As he could speak of the rich and royal without envy, so he could deal with the poorest of the poor without a touch of slight or contempt.

JOHN KEBLE, Lectures on Poetry. Lecture 14. Referring to Homer.

<sup>4</sup> As the burning sun, rolling his chariot-wheels, dims the stars and the holy circle of the moon, so Homer, holding on high the Muses' brightest torch, dims the glory of all the flock of singers.

LEONIDAS OF TARENTUM, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 24.)

<sup>5</sup> Envy belittles the genius even of the great

Homer. (Ingenium magni livor detractat Homeri.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 365.

<sup>6</sup> Heaven shall sooner quench its stars and the sun make bright the face of night . . . than oblivion rob us of the gracious name of Homer.

PHILIPPUS, Epigram. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 575.)

<sup>7</sup> Led by the light of the Mæonian star.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 89. Referring to Homer.

<sup>8</sup> Old Homer's theme Was but a dream,
Himself a fiction too.

SCOTT, The Monastery: Answer to Introductory Epistle.

<sup>9</sup> Read Homer once, and you can read no more,
For all books else appear so mean, so poor,
Verse will seem prose; but still persist to read,

And Homer will be all the books you need.

JOHN SHEFFIELD, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAMSHIRE, An Essay on Poetry, l. 323.

<sup>10</sup> As learned commentators view
In Homer more than Homer knew.

SWIFT, On Poetry.

<sup>11</sup> It was Homer who inspired the poet. It was Homer who gave laws to the artist.

FRANCIS WAYLAND, The Iliad and the Bible.

<sup>12</sup> The song is divine, but divine Homer wrote it down.

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 455.)

I, Phœbus, sang those songs that gained so much renown;

I, Phœbus, sang them; Homer but wrote them down.

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology.)

<sup>13</sup> By telling the burnt city's story, Homer, thou hast caused unsacked cities to envy her fate.

UNKNOWN. (Greek Anthology. Bk. xvi, epig. 304.)

III—Homer: Epitaphs

<sup>14</sup> The poet whom not one country honors as its own, but all the lands of two countries.

ALPHEIUS OF MITYLENE, Epitaph on Homer. (Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 97.)

<sup>15</sup> Here the earth covers the sacred head of divine Homer, the glorifier of hero-men. (Ἐνθάδε τὴν ἱερὴν κεφαλὴν κατὰ γαῖα καλύπτει, ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων κοσμήτορα, θεῖον Ὅμηρον.)

HOMER, his own epitaph. (Contest of Homer and Hesiod, fin.) See also under RIDDLE.

<sup>1</sup> This snow-white kid the tomb of Homer marks,

For such the Ietæ offer to the dead.

(Capella Homeri candida hæc tumulus indicat, Quod hæc Ietæ faciunt sacra.)

MARCUS VARRO, De Imaginibus. Bk. i. (AULUS GELLUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, epis. 11, sec. 7.) The Ietæ were the inhabitants of Ios, which Aristotle (Fragment 76) declares to have been Homer's birthplace.

<sup>2</sup> Wayfarer, though the tomb be small, pass me not by, but pour on me a libation, and venerate me as thou dost the gods. For I hold the divine Homer, the poet of the epic, honored exceedingly by the Pierian muses.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 2b.)

<sup>3</sup> Here the earth covereth the sacred man, divine Homer, marshaller of the heroes. (Ἐνθάδε τὴν ἱερὴν κεφαλὴν κατὰ γαῖα καλύπτει, ἀνδρῶν ἡρώων κοσμήτορα, θεῖον Ὅμηρον.)

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on Homer. (Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 3.)

HONESTY

For Honest in the Sense of Chaste, see Chastity

I—Honesty: Apothegms

<sup>4</sup> One deserves no praise for being honest when no one tries to corrupt. (Nulla est laus ibi esse integrum, ubi nemo est qui conetur rumpere.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. ii, sec. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Too much honesty did never man harm.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia. No. 213.

No honest man ever repented of his honesty.

A man never surfeits of too much honesty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs.

<sup>6</sup> Honesty is not greater where elegance is less.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. ix, p. 38.

Cottages have them [falsehood and dissimulation] as well as courts, only with worse manners.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 April, 1748.

Hearts just as pure and fair,

May beat in Belgrave Square,

As in the lowly air

Of Seven Dials.

W. S. GILBERT, Iolanthe. Act i.

If he were

To be made honest by an act of parliament
I should not alter in my faith of him.

BEN JONSON, The Devil Is an Ass. Act iv, sc. 1.

<sup>8</sup> He that loseth his honesty, hath nothing else to lose.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues: Euphues and Eubulus.

The measure of life is not length, but honesty.

EDWIN SANDYS, Europa Speculum, 102. (1599)

Honesty is the best policy.

DAVID TUVILL, Vade Mecum, 27. (1638)

<sup>17</sup> I am afraid we must make the world honest before we can honestly say to our children that honesty is the best policy.

BERNARD SHAW, Radio Address, 11 July, 1932.

Let none of us delude himself by supposing that honesty is always the best policy. It is not.

DEAN W. R. INGE. (MARCHANT, Wit and Wisdom of Dean Inge. No. 171.)

<sup>18</sup> It should seem that indolence itself would incline a person to be honest; as it requires infinitely greater pains and contrivance to be a knave.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners, 78.

<sup>19</sup> Integrity is better than charity. The gods approve of the depth and not of the tumult of the soul.

SOCRATES. (EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion.)

<sup>1</sup> "Honesty is the best policy," but he who acts on that principle is not an honest man.

ARCHBISHOP RICHARD WHATELY, Thoughts and Apothegms. Pt. ii, ch. 18.

III—Honesty: The Honest Man

<sup>2</sup> As honest a man as any in the cards when the kings are out.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 286. (1639)

<sup>3</sup> An honest man, close-button'd to the chin, Broadcloth without, and a warm heart within.

COWPER, Epistle to Joseph Hill, l. 62.

Than ever king did, when he made a lord.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Jane Shore. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 261.

A prince can mak a belted knight,

A marquis, duke, an' a' that;

But an honest man's aboon his might,

Guid faith, he mauna fa' that!

BURNS, For a' That and a' That.

<sup>16</sup> An honest man, look you, . . . a marvellous good neighbour, faith, and a very good bowler.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost. Act v, sc. 2, l. 587.

An old man, sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were; but, in faith, honest as the skin between his brows.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 11.

I am as true, I would thou knew, as the skin between thy brows.

JOHN STILL, Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2.

<sup>17</sup> I thank God I am as honest as any man living that is an old man and no honestest than I.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 17.

<sup>18</sup> An honest soul . . . as ever broke bread.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing. Act iii, sc. 5, l. 42. (1600)

An honest maid as ever broke bread.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor. Act i, sc. 4, l. 161.

As good a man . . . as ere broke bread.

HENRY PORTER, Two Angry Women of Abington. Sc. 11. (1599)

As good natur'd a man as ever broke bread.

JOHN O'KEEFFE, World in a Village. Act i, l. 19

I do proclaim

One honest man—mistake me not—but one;
No more, I pray—and he's a steward.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 504.

His heart as far from fraud as heaven from earth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona. Act ii, sc. 7, l. 78.

<sup>1</sup> Barring that natural expression of villainy which we all have, the man looked honest enough.

MARK TWAIN, A Mysterious Visit.

<sup>2</sup> I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an "Honest Man."

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Moral Maxims.

<sup>3</sup> Were there no heaven nor hell
I should be honest.

JOHN WEBSTER, Duchess of Malfi. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> Such was our friend. Formed on the good old plan,
A true and brave and downright honest man!
WHITTIER, Daniel Neall.

An upright downright honest man.

UNKNOWN, Epitaph on John James, Ripon Cathedral, 1707.

IV—Honesty: Its Virtues

<sup>5</sup> Wicked mirth never true pleasure brings,
But honest minds are pleased with honest things.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle: Prologue.

<sup>6</sup> An honest man may like a glass,
An honest man may like a lass,
But mean revenge, an' malice fause,
He'll still disdain.

BURNS, Epistle to the Rev. John M'Math.

<sup>7</sup> The modest front of this small floor,
Believe me, reader, can say more
Than many a braver marble can,—
"Here lies a truly honest man."

RICHARD CRASHAW, Epitaph upon Mr. Ashton.

<sup>8</sup> Man is his own star; and that soul that can
Be honest is the only perfect man.

JOHN FLETCHER, An Honest Man's Fortune.

<sup>9</sup> Though honesty be no puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 3, l. 97.

<sup>10</sup> There is no terror, Cassius, in your threats;
For I am arm'd so strong in honesty
That they pass by me as the idle wind.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 66.

<sup>11</sup> The man who consecrates his hours
By vig'rous effort and an honest aim,
At once he draws the sting of life and death;
He walks with nature; and her paths are peace.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night ii, l. 185.

V—Honesty: Its Faults

<sup>12</sup> 'Tis my opinion every man cheats in his way, and he is only honest who is not discovered.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, The Artifice. Act v.

<sup>13</sup> Honesty is ill to thrive by.

JOHN CLARKE, Paræmiologia, 30. (1639)

The honestest man the worse luck.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 117. (1670)

<sup>14</sup> Fools out of favour grudge at knaves in place,
And men are always honest in disgrace.

DANIEL DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman: Introduction, l. 7.

<sup>15</sup> Honest men and knaves may possibly wear the same cloth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2525.

He that resolves to deal with none but honest men must leave off dealing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2530.

Honesty is a fine jewel but much out of fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2533.

<sup>16</sup> A man who only does what every one of the society to which he belongs would do, is not a dishonest man.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, ii, 176.)

<sup>17</sup> Integrity without knowledge is weak and useless, and knowledge without integrity is dangerous and dreadful.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 41.

<sup>18</sup> Integrity is praised and starves. (Probitas laudatur et alget.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 74.

<sup>19</sup> To strictest justice many ills belong,
And honesty is often in the wrong.

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. viii, l. 657. (Rowe, tr.)

<sup>20</sup> Honest men

Are the soft easy cushions on which knaves
Repose and fatten.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>21</sup> It is annoying to be honest to no purpose. (Gratis pœnitet esse probum.)

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 3, l. 14.

<sup>22</sup> Rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house; as your pearl in your foul oyster.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act v, sc. 4, l. 62.

<sup>23</sup> Ay, sir; to be honest, as this world goes, is to be one man picked out of ten thousand.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 178.

Hamlet: What's the news?

Rosencrantz: None, my lord, but that the world's grown honest.

Hamlet: Then is doomsday near.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 240.

1 I am myself indifferent honest.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 124.

Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 733.

There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 155.

2 Take note, take note, O world,
To be direct and honest is not safe.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 377.

Honesty's a fool, And loses that it works for.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 382.

3 Every man has his fault, and honesty is his.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 29.

4 Ha, ha! what a fool Honesty is! and Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman!

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 606.

HONOR

I—Honor: Definitions

5 Honour's a fine imaginary notion,
That draws in raw and unexperienced men
To real mischiefs, while they hunt a shadow.

ADDISON, Cato. Act ii, sc. 5.

The sense of honour is of so fine and delicate a nature, that it is only to be met with in minds which are naturally noble, or in such as have been cultivated by good examples, or a refined education.

ADDISON, The Guardian. No. 161.

6 Honor is like an island, rugged and without a beach; once we have left it, we can never return.

(L'honneur est comme une île escarpée et sans bords;

On n'y peut plus rentrer dès qu'on en est dehors.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. x, l. 167.

7 Honour was but ancient riches.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Court and Country, 190.

8 Honour's but a word

To swear by only in a Lord.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 389.

Honour's a lease for lives to come,
And cannot be extended from
The legal tenant.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1043.

HONOUR IS LIKE A WIDOW WON, see WIDOW:
WOONG.

9 What is fitting is honorable, and what is honorable is fitting. (Quod decet honestum est, et quod honestum est, decet.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 27, sec. 94.

It is beyond question that expediency can never conflict with honor. (Dubitandum non est, quin numquam possit utilitas cum honestate contendere.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 11.

10 Honor nourishes the arts, and all are incited to study by the desire of glory. (Honos alit artes, omnesque incenduntur ad studia gloria.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 4.

Sayeth not the proverb, Honours nourish arts?

FRANCIS THYNNE, Pride and Lowliness, 22. (1570)

11 Honour is a public enemy, and conscience a domestic; and he that would secure his pleasure, must pay a tribute to one, and go halves with t'other.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act iii, sc. 14.

12 As to honour—you know—it's a very fine medieval inheritance, which women never get hold of. It wasn't theirs.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Chance. Ch. 2.

13 Honour but an empty bubble.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 100.

Honour is a baby's rattle.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, The Muses' Looking Glass. Act iii, sc. 2.

14 Some things the honorable man cannot do, never does. He never wrongs or degrades a woman. He never oppresses or cheats a person weaker or poorer than himself. He never betrays a trust. He is honest, sincere, candid and generous.

CHARLES W. ELIOT, The Durable Satisfaction of Life, p. 6.

15 Purity is the feminine, truth the masculine of honor.

A. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. See also under CHASTITY.

16 Honour is but an itch in youthful blood
Of doing acts extravagantly good.

SAMUEL HOWARD, The Indian Queen.

17 Honour is the very breath in our nostrils.

JEFFREY HUDSON, page to Queen Henrietta Maria, on the occasion of a duel.

18 What is most honorable is also safest. (Quod pulcherrimum idem tutissimum est.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 14.

19 Honour is purchas'd by the deeds we do;
. . . Honour is not won

Until some honourable deed be done.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Hero and Leander.
Ses. i, l. 276.

Nobody can acquire honor by doing what is wrong.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 444.

<sup>1</sup> Honour, the spur that pricks the princely mind.

GEORGE PEELE, The Battle of Alcazar. Act i.

<sup>2</sup> Honour and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part: there all the honour lies.
POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 193.

<sup>3</sup> Without money honor is nothing but a malady.
(Sans argent l'honneur n'est qu'une maladie.)
RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1.

<sup>4</sup> Honour, the darling but of one short day.
SIR WALTER RALEIGH, A Farewell to the Vanities of the World.

<sup>5</sup> Be noble-minded! Our own heart, and not other men's opinions Forms our true honor.
SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. (Coleridge, tr.)

<sup>6</sup> Abroad in arms, at home in studious kind,
Who seeks with painful toil, shall Honour soonest find.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. ii, canto iii, st. 40.

<sup>7</sup> I sent to know from whence, and where These hopes and this relief?
A spy inform'd, Honour was there,
And did command in chief.

"March, march," quoth I; "the word straight give,

Let's lose no time, but leave her;
That giant upon air will live,
And hold it out for ever."

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, The Siege of a Heart.

<sup>8</sup> Honour's a mistress all mankind pursue;
Yet most mistake the false one for the true:
Lured by the trappings, dazzled by the paint,
We worship off the idol for the saint.

PAUL WHITEHEAD, Honour.

II—Honor: Apothegms

<sup>9</sup> All honor's wounds are self-inflicted.
ANDREW CARNEGIE. (HENDRICK, Life.)

<sup>10</sup> Seek Honour first, and Pleasure lies behind.
THOMAS CHATTERTON, The Tournament.

<sup>11</sup> He that hath no honour hath no sorrow.
THOMAS DRAXE, Biblio. Scholas. Instruc., 91.

Where there is no honour, there is no grief.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>12</sup> Leave not a stain in thine honour.
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxiii, 22.

<sup>13</sup> The louder he talked of his honor, the faster we counted our spoons.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship.

<sup>14</sup> Costar: Pray now, what may be that same bed of honour?

Kite: Oh, a mighty large bed! bigger by half than the great bed at Ware: ten thousand people may lie in it together and never feel one another.

FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act i, sc. 1.

If he that in the field is slain,
Be in the bed of honour lain,
He that is beaten may be said
To lie in honour's truckle-bed.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1047.

Although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night. Act iii, sc. 2, 49.

<sup>15</sup> All is lost save honor. (Tout est perdu fors l'honneur.)

FRANCIS I OF FRANCE, in a letter to his mother, the morning after the disastrous battle of Pavia, accompanying a safe conduct given to the Viceroy of Naples for the Commander Penalosa. Tradition has altered Francis's words to the form given above, but what he really wrote was: "Nothing remains to me save honor and life." (De toutes choses ne m'est demeuré que l'honneur et la vie.) The letter is printed in Dulaure's Histoire de Paris. (See also Sismondi, xvi, 241.) Napoleon is said to have quoted this epigram to Caulaincourt after Waterloo; and Louis XVIII repeated it in reply to a proposal that he renounce his claim to the French throne. (BOURRIENNE, Memoirs of Napoleon, ii, 25.)

And all at Worcester but the honour lost.

DRYDEN, Astræa Redux, l. 74.

We have lost all, yet life is still left. (Omnia perdidimus, tantummodo vita relicta est.)

OVID, Epistula ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 16, l. 49.

<sup>16</sup> It is a worthier thing to deserve honour than to possess it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

<sup>17</sup> To those whose god is honour, disgrace alone is sin.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth.

<sup>18</sup> I could not love thee, Dear, so much Lov'd I not Honour more.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Lucasta, Going to the Wars.

<sup>19</sup> How many sacrifice honor, a necessity, to glory, a luxury!

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest.
Pt. iv, No. 38.

<sup>20</sup> I am myself the guardian of my honour.

NICHOLAS ROWE, Fair Penitent. Act iii, sc. 1.

1 To few is honor dearer than gold. (Paucis carior fides quam pecunia fuit.)

SALLUST, Jugurtha. Ch. 16, sec. 5.

2 The depths and shoals of honour.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 436.

To plainness honour's bound,

When majesty stoops to folly.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act i, sc. 1, l. 150.

3 As the sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honour peereth in the meanest habit.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 176.

4 Honour should be concerned in honour's cause.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act iii, sc. 3.

5 The shackles of an old love straiten'd him,
His honour rooted in dishonour stood,
And faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 870.

Upon this fatal quest

Of honour, where no honour can be gain'd.

TENNYSON, Geraint and Enid, l. 702.

III—Honor: Greater Than Life

6 Better to die ten thousand thousand deaths,
Than wound my honour.

ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 4.

7 When honour's lost, 'tis a relief to die;
Death's but a sure retreat from infamy.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto v, l. 321.

8 Honour alone we cannot, must not lose;
Honour, that spark of the celestial fire,
That above nature makes mankind aspire;
Ennobles the rude passions of our fame
With thirst of glory, and desire of fame:
The richest treasure of a generous breast,
That gives the stamp and standard to the rest.

LORD HALIFAX, The Man of Honour.

9 Count it the greatest of infamies to prefer life to honor, and to lose, for the sake of living, all that makes life worth having. (Summum crede nefas animam præferre pudori, Et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 83.

10 This day beyond its term my fate extends,
For life is ended when our honour ends.

LABERIUS, Prologue. (Goldsmith, tr. from the Latin of Macrobius.)

11 Who loses honor can lose nothing else. (Fidem qui perdit, ultra perdere nil potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiæ. No. 265.

If I lose mine honour, I lose myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 22.

12 Set honour in one eye and death i' the other,
And I will look on both indifferently;
For let the gods so speed me as I love
The name of honour more than I fear death.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 86.

Mine honour is my life; both grew in one;
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then, dear my liege, mine honour let me try:
In that I live, and for that will I die.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act i, sc. 1, l. 182.

For honour travels in a strait so narrow,
Where one but goes abreast.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 154.

Life every man holds dear; but the brave man
Holds honour far more precious-dear than life.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act v, sc. 3, l. 27.

13 When faith is lost, when honor dies,
The man is dead!

WHITTIER, Ichabod. St. 8.

IV—Honor: The Man of Honor

14 Lo, one who loved true honour more than fame.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, EARL OF STIRLING,
Doomsday: The Eighth Hour. St. 100.

15 There may be danger in the deed,
But there is honour too.

W. E. AYTOUN, The Island of the Scots.

He that is valiant and dares fight
Though drubbed, can lose no honour by't.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 1041.

16 Thine is the self-approving glow
Of conscious honour's part.

BURNS, To Chloë.

17 If honour calls, where'er she points the way,
The sons of honour follow and obey.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, l. 67.

18 Here honor binds me, and I wish to satisfy
it. (Ici l'honneur m'oblige, et j'y veux satisfaire.)

CORNEILLE, Polyeucte. Act iv, sc. 3.

19 Godlike erect, with native honour clad.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 289.

In native worth and honour clad.

BARON VAN SWIETEN. (HAYDN, The Creation: Libretto.)

20 Wronged me! in the nicest point—
The honour of my house.

THOMAS OTWAY, Venice Preserved. Act i, sc. 1.

21 A Quixotic sense of the honorable—of the chivalrous.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, Letter to Mrs. Whitman, 18 Oct., 1848.

1 Let us do what honor demands. (Faisons ce que l'honneur exige.)

RACINE, Bérénice. Act iv, sc. 4.

2 See that you come
Not to woo honour, but to wed it.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 14.

The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honour.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 67.

3 By heaven, methinks it were an easy leap
To pluck bright honour from the pale-faced moon,

Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where fathom-line could never touch the ground,

And pluck up drowned honour by the locks.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 201.

4 The fewer men, the greater share of honour.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 22.

By Jove, I am not covetous for gold,
Nor care I who doth feed upon my cost;
It yearns me not if men my garments wear;
Such outward things dwell not in my desires:
But if it be a sin to covet honour,
I am the most offending soul alive.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 24.

5 Thou art a fellow of a good respect;
Thy life hath had some smatch of honour in it.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act v, sc. 5, l. 45.

6 I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Than you should such dishonour undergo.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 26.

7 Worth, courage, honor, these indeed
Your sustenance and birthright are.

E. C. STEDMAN, Beyond the Portals. Pt. x.

8 A true man, pure as faith's own vow,
Whose honour knows not rust.

SWINBURNE, The Tale of Balen. Pt. i, st. 1.

9 Thy honor, thy name and thy praises shall endure for ever. (Semper honos, nomenque tuum, laudesque manebunt.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. No. v, l. 78; Æneid. Bk. i, l. 609.

10 Thou great Commander! leading on Through weakest darkness to strong light;
By any anguish, give us back
Our life's young standard, pure and bright.
O fair, lost Colors of the soul!
For your sake storm we any height.

ELIZABETH PHELPS WARD, The Lost Colors.

V—Honor: Its Faults

11 Honour and ease are seldom bedfellows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2540.

Honour and profit lie not all in one sack.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

Honour will buy no beef.

THOMAS SHADWELL, Sullen Lovers. Act v, sc.

3. Cited as "the excellent proverb."

12 Honour pricks me on. Yea, but how if honour prick me off when I come on? how then? Can honour set to a leg? no: or an arm? no: or take away the grief of a wound? no. Honour hath no skill in surgery, then? no. What is honour? a word. What is in that word honour?
what is that honour? air. A trim reckoning!
Who hath it? he that died o' Wednesday.
Doth he feel it? no. Doth he hear it? no. 'Tis insensible, then? Yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? no. Why? detraction will not suffer it. Therefore I'll none of it.
Honour is a mere scutcheon: and so ends my catechism.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 1, l. 130.

13 In whose cold blood no spark of honour bides.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act i, sc. 1, l. 184.

For Brutus is an honourable man;

So are they all, all honourable men.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 87.

14 Well, honour is the subject of my story.

I cannot tell what you and other men

Think of this life; but, for my single self,

I had as lief not be as live to be

In awe of such a thing as I myself.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Cæsar. Act i, sc. 2, l. 92.

15 I, I myself sometimes, leaving the fear of God on the left hand and hiding mine honour in mine necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge and to lurch; and yet you, rogue, will ensconce your rags, your cat-a-mountain looks, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating oaths, under the shelter of your honour!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 23.

But why should honour outlive honesty?

SHAKESPEARE, Othello. Act v, sc. 2, l. 245.

Honour sits smiling at the sale of truth.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iv, l. 218.

16 Don't you think we may as well leave honour out of the argument?

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 3.

VI—Honors

17 When vice prevails and impious men bear sway,

The post of honour is a private station.

ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4.

Give me, kind heav'n, a private station,

A mind serene for contemplation,

Title and profit I resign;
The post of honour shall be mine.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Vulture and Sparrow.

1 Patricius, the consul, stains the honors which he sells; still more he stains those which he himself bears. (Patricius consul maculat quos vendit honores; Plus maculat quos ipse gerit.)

4 To fish for honour with a silver hook.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Honour of Valour.

To exchange one's freedom for a little gain,
... I count it fishing with a golden hook.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Miscellanies, p. 126.

Be not with honour's gilded baits beguiled.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Gondibert.-Bk. i, canto v, st. 75.

5 Posts of honor are evermore posts of danger and of care.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: Every Man Has His Place.

6 With all its beauteous honours on its head.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 557. (Pope, tr.)

7 Since all must life resign,
Those sweet rewards, which decorate the brave,

'Tis folly to decline,
And steal inglorious to the silent grave.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lines Added to an Ode by Sir William Jones.

8 Great honours are great burdens, but on whom They are cast with envy, he doth bear two loads.

His cares must still be double to his joys,
In any dignity.

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 1.

Honours and great employments are great burthens.

MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 3.

9 I am now past the craggy paths of study, and come to the flowery plains of honour and reputation.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act ii, sc. 2.

10 An honor won is surety for more. (L'honneur acquis est caution de celui qu'on doit acquérir.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 270.

11 No honor shall make thee worthy of Cæsar's wrath. (Dignum te Cæsaris ira Nullus honor faciet.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. iii, l. 137.

12 The blind longing for honors. (Honorum cæca cupido.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iii, l. 59.

13 When he counted up his honors, he fancied himself an old man. (Dum numerat palmas, credidit esse senem.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, ep. 53.

14 Honours never fail to purchase silence.

MASSINGER, The Duke of Milan. Act ii, sc. 1.

15 When honor comes to you be ready to take it; But reach not to seize it before it is near.

JOHN BOYLE O'REILLY, Rules of the Road.

16 It is the fashion to seek honor for disgraceful conduct. (Petere honorem pro flagitio more fit.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 28.

17 He died full of years and honors, as illustrious for those he refused as for those he accepted. (Et ille quidem plenus annis abiit, plenus honoribus, illis etiam, quos recusavit.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1.

A studious decliner of honours and titles.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary: Introduction.

18 Honours thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Than our foregoers: the mere word's a slave
Debosh'd on every tomb; on every grave,
A lying trophy, and as oft is dumb
Where dust and damn'd oblivion is the tomb
Of honour'd bones indeed.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 142.

19 And all the budding honours on thy crest
I'll crop, to make a garland for my head.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act v, sc. 4, l. 72.

And bears his blushing honours thick upon him.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 354.

20 New honours come upon him,
Like our strange garments, cleave not to their mould,

But with the aid of use.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 3, l. 144.

Now, while the honour thou hast got
Is spick and span new.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto iii, l. 397.

21 Let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity.
O, that estates, degrees and offices

Were not derived corruptly, and that clear honour

Were purchased by the merit of the wearer!
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act ii, sc. 9, l. 39.

An outward honour for an inward toil.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act i, sc. 4, l. 79.

<sup>1</sup> Honors change manners. (Honores mutant mores.)
POLYDORE VERGIL, Proverbiorum Libellus. No. 202.

So they verify the saying, Honores mutant mores.
HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 437. (1552)

Lord Rutland said to my father [Sir Thomas More], in his acute sneering way: "Ah, ah, Sir Thomas, Honores mutant Mores;" to which my father replied, "Not so, in faith, but have a care lest we translate the proverb and say, "Honours change Manners."

MARGARET MORE, Diary, October, 1524. The point of the jest will be better appreciated when it is remembered that Manners was Lord Rutland's family name.

This good creature is resolved to show the world, that great honour cannot at all change his manners; he is the same civil person he ever was.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 259.

I—Hope: Definitions

<sup>2</sup> Hope is a waking dream. ('Ελπίς, ἐγρηγορότος ἐνύπνιον.)

ARISTOTLE. (DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Sec. 18.) Ascribed to Plato by Ælian, and to Pindar by Stobæus.

The hopes of men have been justly called waking dreams.

BASIL, BISHOP OF CÆSAREA, Letter to Gregory of Nazianzus. (c. 370) Quoted in Humboldt's Cosmos.

For hope is but the dream of those that wake!
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World. Bk. iii, l. 102.

The hopes that lost in some far distance seem,
May be the truer life, and this the dream.

ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER, A Legend of Provence.
Vain hopes, like certain dreams of those who wake. (Spes inanes, et velut somnia quædam, vigilantium.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutione de Oratoria. Bk. vi, ch. 2, sec. 27.

<sup>3</sup> Hope is the parent of faith.
C. A. BARTOL, Radical Problems: Hope.

<sup>4</sup> Hope! thou nurse of young desire.
BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 1, l. 1.

<sup>5</sup> Hope! of all ills that men endure,
The only cheap and universal cure.
ABRAHAM COWLEY, For Hope.

Hope, the patent medicine
For disease, disaster, sin.
WALLACE RICE, Hope.

The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope.
SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 2.

<sup>6</sup> Hope is the thing with feathers
That perches in the soul.
EMILY DICKINSON, Poems. Pt. i, No. 32.

<sup>7</sup> Hope is the second soul of the unhappy.
GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa.

<sup>8</sup> Hope is the poor man's bread.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

<sup>9</sup> Things past belong to memory alone;
Things future are the property of hope.
JOHN HOME, Agis: Lysander. Act ii.

<sup>10</sup> Hope—that star of life's tremulous ocean.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (BOSWELL, Life, i, 368.)
When there is no hope, there can be no endeavour.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 110.
<sup>12</sup> It is hope which maintains most of mankind.
('Ἐστ' ἐλπίς ἡ βόσκουσα τοὺς πολλοὺς βροτῶν.)
SOPHOCLES, Fragment.

<sup>13</sup> Hope in action is charity, and beauty in action is goodness.

MIGUEL DE UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 203.

<sup>14</sup> That blessed mood,
In which the burthen of the mystery,
In which the heavy and the weary weight
Of all this unintelligible world,
Is lightened.

WORDSWORTH, Lines Composed a Few Miles Above Tintern Abbey, l. 37.

Hope, the paramount duty that Heaven lays,
For its own honour, on man's suffering heart.
WORDSWORTH, Poems Dedicated to National Independence. Pt. ii, No. 33.

II—Hope: Apothegms

<sup>15</sup> Unhappy, hope; happy, be cautious. (Sperate, miseri; cavete, felices.)

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, closing advice in final paragraph.

<sup>16</sup> Better a good hope than a bad holding.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

<sup>17</sup> But now of hope the calends begin.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 8.

1 And Hope enchanted smil'd, and wav'd her golden hair.

WILLIAM COLLINS, The Passions, l. 38.

2 Abandon hope, all ye who enter here. (Lasciate ogni speranza, voi ch'entrate.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 9. (Cary, tr.)
Dante states that he beheld these words "written in sombre colors," on the gate through which he entered Hell. Longfellow's translation of the line is: All hope abandon, ye who enter in.

Quick, open, open wide this gate of hell;
For I in truth can count it nothing less.
No one comes here who has not lost all hope
Of being good.

(Pandite atque aperite propere januam hanc
Orci, obsecro!

Nam equidem haud aliter esse duco, quippe quo
nemo advenit,

Nisi quem spes reliquere omnes, esse ut frugi possiet.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 368. (Act iii, sc. 1.
Thornton, tr.)

3 We ought neither to fasten our ship to one small anchor nor our life to a single hope. (Οὔτε ναῦν ἐξ ἐνὸς ἀγκυρίου οὔτε βίον ἐκ μιᾶς ἐλπίδος ἀρμυστέον.)

EPICETUS [?], Fragments. Frag. 30.

4 Hope never leaves a wretched man that seeks her.

superest, bene est.)

MÆCENAS, Fragments. No. 1. (SENECA, Epis-tulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 11.)

13 All things, said an ancient saw, may be hoped for by a man as long as he lives. (Toutes choses, disoit un mot ancien, sont esperables à un homme, pendant qu'il vit.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3.

14 Hope travels thro', nor quits us when we die.
POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 274.

15 A man may hope for anything while he has life. (Homini, dum vivit, speranda sunt.)

TELESPHORUS OF RHODES. (SENECA, Epistolæ ad Lucilium. Epis. lxx, sec. 7. Seneca adds that he considers these words as most unmanly: "effeminatissimam.")

16 There is hope for the living, but none for the dead. (Ἐλπίδες ἐν ζῶοισιν, ἀνελπίστοι δὲ θανόντες.)

THEOCRITUS, Idylls. No. iv, l. 42.

17 Ere now I would have ended my miseries in death, but fond Hope keeps the spark alive, whispering ever that tomorrow will be better than today.

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 6, l. 19.

18 Hope, and reserve yourself for better times.

(Sperate, et vosmet rebus servate secundis.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 207.

IV—Hope: Living on Hope

19 Hope is a good breakfast, but an ill supper.

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. No. 95.

Ah! he was a wise man who said Hope is a good breakfast but a bad dinner. It shall be my supper, however, when all's said and done.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI. (HAYWARD, Autobiography, Vol. ii, p. 188.)

20 Hope is a poor salad To dine and sup with.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Custom of the Country. Act ii, sc. 1.

21 I live on hope and that I think do all
Who come into this world.

ROBERT BRIDGES, Sonnets. No. 83.

22 He that lives upon hope will die fasting.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1758.

He that lives on hope has but a slender diet.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2220.

He that liveth in hope danceth without a fiddle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2224.

He who lives on hope makes a thin belly.

WODROEPHE, Spared Houres, 302. (1623)

V—Hope: Its Virtues

23 Know then, whatever cheerful and serene
Supports the mind, supports the body too:
Hence, the most vital movement mortals feel
Is hope, the balm and lifeblood of the soul.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 310.

24 Hope keeps the heart whole.

ANTONY BREWER, The Love-Sick King. Act ii.

Hope—the only tie which keeps the heart from breaking.

FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. i, p. 40.

If hope were not, heart would break.

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum. Tale 51. (c. 1375)

1 Sweet Hope,
Bearer of dreams, enchantress fond and kind.
ROBERT BRIDGES, Prometheus, l. 75.

2 Hope and patience are two sovereign remedies for all, the surest reposals, the softest cushions to lean on in adversity.

ROBERT BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 3.

3 When Peace and Mercy, banish'd from the plain,

Sprung on the viewless winds to Heaven again;
All, all forsook the friendless guilty mind,
But Hope, the charmer, linger'd still behind.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 37.

Auspicious Hope! in thy sweet garden grow
Wreaths for each toil, a charm for every woe.
CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 45.

Congenial Hope! thy passion-kindling power,
How bright, how strong, in youth's untroubled hour!

On yon proud height, with Genius hand in hand,
I see thee light, and wave thy golden wand.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 121.

Cease, every joy, to glimmer on my mind,
But leave, oh! leave the light of Hope behind.

CAMPBELL, The Pleasures of Hope. Pt. ii, l. 375.

4 Hope, like the short-lived ray that gleams awhile, . . .

Cheers e'en the face of misery to a smile.

WILLIAM COWPER, Despair at His Separation.

5 Hope is worth any money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

A good hope is better than a bad possession.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

6 Great hopes make great men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia.

The mighty hopes that make us men.

TENNYSON, In Memoriam. Pt. lxxxv, st. 15.

7 Hope, like the glimmering taper's light,
Adorns and cheers our way;
And still, as darker grows the night,
Emits a brighter ray.

GOLDSMITH, The Captivity. Act ii, sc. 1.

8 'Tis hope supports each noble flame,
'Tis hope inspires poetic lays;

Our heroes fight in hopes of fame,
And poets write in hopes of praise.

She sings sweet songs of future years,
And dries the tears of present sorrow;
Bids doubting mortals cease their fears,

And tells them of a bright to-morrow.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, To Ellen. In his Literary Bible.

9 In all the wedding cake, hope is the sweetest of the plums.

VI—Hope: Its Illusions

The Promised Land is the land where one is not.

AMIEL, Journal, 10 Feb., 1853.

If things then from their end we happy call, 'Tis Hope is the most hopeless thing of all.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Against Hope.

That very popular trust in flat things coming round!

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 20.

Too much hope deceiveth.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruits. Fo. 33.

Hope deceives, enjoyment undeceives.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Joy. No. 9.

And thus Hope me deceived, as she deceiveth all.

SCOTT, Harold the Dauntless. Canto iii, st. 1.

Hope is a kind of cheat: in the minute of our disappointment we are angry; but upon the whole matter there is no pleasure without it.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 236.

Reflected on the lake, I love

To see the stars of evening glow;

So tranquil in the heavens above,

So restless in the wave below.

Thus heavenly hope is all serene,

But earthly hope, how bright so'er,

Still fluctuates o'er this changing scene,

As false and fleeting as 'tis fair.

REGINALD HEBER, On Heavenly and Earthly Hope.

It is natural to man to indulge in the illusions of hope. We are apt to shut our eyes against a painful truth, and listen to the song of that siren, till she transforms us into beasts.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, Virginia House of Delegates, 23 March, 1775. (Arranged by William Wirt, 1818.)

Put aside trifling hopes. (Mitte levis spes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 8.

He that raises false hopes to serve a present purpose, only makes a way for disappointment and discontent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Patriot.

Ye who listen with credulity to the whispers of fancy, and pursue with eagerness the phantoms of hope; who expect that age will perform the promises of youth, and that the deficiencies of the present day will be supplied by the morrow,—attend to the history of Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 1.

Hopers go to hell.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs.

I write nil ultra to my proudest hopes.

Where peace

And rest can never dwell, hope never comes, That comes to all.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 65.

Vain hopes, vain aims, inordinate desires.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 808.

Hope, once conceived, is long-lived; a treacherous goddess is she, but a timely one. (Spes tenet in tempus, semel est si credita, longum: Illa quidem fallax, sed tamen apta dea est.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 445.

Hope, great deceiver as she is, at least serves to carry us to the end of life by a pleasant road.

(L'espérance, toute trompeuse qu'elle est, sert au moins à nous mener à la fin de la vie par un chemin agréable.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 168.

Hope is generally a wrong guide, though it is very good company by the way.

LORD HALIFAX, Works, p. 236.

Careless of things which are near, we pursue eagerly things which are far away. (Proxi-morum incuriosi, longinqua sectamur.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. viii, epis. 20.

Many a hopeful man has hope beguiled. (Qui speraverint spem decepisse multos.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 401. (Act ii, sc. 3.)

Our hopes, like towering falcons, aim At objects in an airy height.

MATTHEW PRIOR, To Charles Montague.

I cultivated hope, and see it wither day by day. What serves it, alas! to water the leaves when the tree is severed at the root? (Je cultivais l'espérance, et la vois flétrir tous les jours. Que sert, hélas! d'arroser le feuillage quand l'arbre est coupé par le pied?)

ROUSSEAU, Julie. Pt. i. Letter 25.

The hour when you too learn that all is vain,
And that Hope sows what Love shall never reap.

D. G. ROSSETTI, The House of Life. Sonnet xlv.

The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon Turns Ashes—or it prospers; and anon,
Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face,
Lighting a little hour or two—is gone.

OMAR KHAYYÂM, Rubâiyât. St. 16. (Fitzgerald, tr.)

What madness to plot out far-reaching hopes!
(Quanta dementia est spes longas inchoan-tium!)

SENECA, Epistulae ad Lucilium. Epis. ci, sec. 4.

Lined himself with hope,
Eating the air on promise of supply.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV. Act i, sc. 3, l. 27.

Cozening hope: he is a flatterer,
A parasite, a keeper back of death,
Who gently would dissolve the bands of life,
Which false hope lingers in extremity.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 69.

Hope is the fawning traitor of the mind,
while, under colour of friendship, it robs it of its chief force of resolution.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. iii.

When we have discovered a continent, or crossed a chain of mountains, it is only to find another ocean or another plain upon the further side. . . O toiling hands of mortals! O wearied feet, travelling ye know not whither! Soon, soon, it seems to you, you must come forth on some conspicuous hill-top, and but a little way further, against the setting sun, descry the spires of El Dorado.

R. L. STEVENSON, Virginibus Puerisque: El Dorado.

Races, better than we, have leaned on her wavering promise,
Having naught else but Hope.

ESAÍAS TEGNER, The Children of the Lord's Supper, l. 230. (Longfellow, tr.)

Hope doubtful of the future. (Spes incerta futuri.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. viii, l. 580.

You feed an idle hope. (Spes pascis inanes.)
VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. x, l. 627.

Is Man
A child of hope? Do generations press

On generations, without progress made?

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk. v, l. 465.

Confiding tho' confounded; hoping on,
Untaught by trial, unconvinc'd by proof,
And ever looking for the never-seen.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 126.

Hopes, what are they?—Beads of morning
Strung on slender blades of grass;

Or a spider's web adorning
In a strait and treacherous pass.

WORDSWORTH, Inscriptions. No. 10.

Restless hope, for ever on the wing.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 133.

Hope told a flattering tale
That joy would soon return;

Ah, naught my sighs avail
For love is doomed to mourn.

UNKNOWN, Hope Told a Flattering Tale. (Universal Songster. Vol. i, p. 320.) The song was introduced by John Wolcot into the opera Artaxerxes.

Hope tells a flattering tale,
Delusive, vain and hollow.

Ah! let not hope prevail,
Lest disappointment follow.

MARY WROTHER, Hope. (Universal Songster. Vol. ii, p. 86.)

Hope told a flattering tale,
Much longer than my arm,

That love and pots of ale
In peace would keep me warm.

WILLIAM BARNES RHODES, Bombastes Furioso.

VII—Hope and Fear

Our greatest good, and what we least can spare,

Is hope: the last of all our evils, fear.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, Art of Preserving Health.
Bk. iv, l. 318.

1
Far greater numbers have been lost by hopes,
Than all the magazines of daggers, ropes,
And other ammunitions of despair,
Were ever able to dispatch by fear.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l.

2
Entertaining hope Means recognising fear.

ROBERT BROWNING, Two Poets of Croisic, l.
158.

3
He has no hope who never had a fear.

COWPER, Truth, l. 299.

For where no hope is left, is left no fear.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iii, l. 206.

But I strode on austere;

No hope could have no fear.

JAMES THOMSON, The City of Dreadful Night.
Pt. iv.

So farewell hope, and with hope farewell fear.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 108.

4
Cease to hope and you will cease to fear.
(Desines timere, si sperare desieris.)

HECATO, Fragments. Frag. 25. (SENECA, Epis-tulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 7.)

5
Hope and fear are inseparable; there is no fear without hope, no hope without fear.
(L'espérance et la crainte sont inséparables, et il n'y a point de crainte sans espérance, ni d'espérance sans crainte.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes.
No. 515.

6
Let the fearful be allowed to hope. (Liceat sperare timenti.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 14.

7
Yet, where an equal poise of hope and fear
Does arbitrate th' event, my nature is
That I incline to hope, rather than fear.

MILTON, Comus, l. 410.

8
Hope and fear bring trust and mistrust by turns. (Alternant spesque timorque fidem.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vi, l. 38.

9
Fear made her devils, and weak hope her gods.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iii, l. 256.

10
Hope is brightest when it dawns from fears.

SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto iv, st. 1.

Her hopes, her fears, her joys were all
Bounded within the cloister wall.

SCOTT, Marmion. Canto ii, st. 3.

As hope and fear alternate chase
Our course through life's uncertain race.

SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto vi, st. 2.

11
Just as the same chain fastens the prisoner and the soldier who guards him, so hope and fear keep step together: fear follows hope.

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. v, sec. 8.

12
Most wretched 'tis to fear when you can hope for naught. (Miserrimum est timere, cum speres nihil.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 425.

13
And other hopes and other fears
Effaced the thoughts of happier years.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, To Mary.

14
The kind wise word that falls from years that fall—

"Hope thou not much, and fear thou not at all."

A. C. SWINBURNE, Hope and Fear.

VIII—Hope and Despair

15
It is to hope, though hope were lost.

ANNA LETITIA BARBAULD, Song: Come Here, Fond Youth.

16
The heart bowed down by weight of woe
To weakest hope will cling.

ALFRED BUNN, The Bohemian Girl: Song.

17
Work without Hope draws nectar in a sieve,
And Hope without an object cannot live.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Work Without Hope.

18
Still desiring, we live without hope. (Senza speme vivemo in desio.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iv, l. 42.

19
Hope is cheap as despair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2542.

It is better to hope than to despair. (Ist besser hoffen als verzweifeln.)

GOETHE, Torquato Tasso. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 197.

Like strength is felt from hope and from despair.

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 852. (Pope, tr.)

20
Homely phrases, but each letter
Full of hope and yet of heart-break.

LONGFELLOW, Hiawatha: Introduction.

21
The setting of a great hope is like the setting of the sun. The brightness of our life is gone.

LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Bk. i, ch. 1.

22
Our dearest hopes in pangs are born,
The kingliest Kings are crown'd with thorn

GERALD MASSEY, The Kingliest Kings.

23
What re-inforcement we may gain from hope,
If not, what resolution from despair.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. i, l. 190.

24
Do not hope without despair, nor despair without hope. (Nec speraveris sine desperatione nec desperaveris sine spe.)

SENECA, Epistulæ ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, l. 12.

He who can hope for nothing, let him despair of nothing. (Qui nil potest sperare, desperet nihil.)
SENECA, Medea, l. 163.

1 Our hap is loss, our hope but sad despair.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 3, l. 9.

2 Worse than despair,
Worse than the bitterness of death, is hope.
SHELLEY, The Cenci. Act v, sc. 4.

3 It's best to hope the best, though of the worst affrayd.

SPENSER, Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto 6, st. 37.

4 Though sick with weighty cares, he feigns hope in his face. (Curisque ingentibus æger Spem voltu simulat.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. i, l. 208.

5 We did not dare to breathe a prayer
Or to give our anguish scope!
Something was dead in each of us,
And what was dead was Hope.
OSCAR WILDE, The Ballad of Reading Gaol.
Pt. iii, st. 31.

6 Hope, eager hope, th' assassin of our joy,
All present blessings treading under foot,
Is scarce a milder tyrant than despair.
YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii, l. 107.

HORACE

7 Then farewell, Horace; whom I hated so,
Not for thy faults, but mine.
BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 77.

8 Serene and clear, harmonious Horace flows,
With sweetness not to be expressed in prose.
WENTWORTH DILLON, Essay on Translated Verse, l. 41.

9 But, oh, the echoes of those songs
That soothed our cares and lulled our hearts!

Not to that age nor this belongs
The glory of what heaven-born arts
Speak with the old distinctive charm
From yonder humble Sabine farm!
EUGENE FIELD, Epilogue.

10 Then finish, dear Chloe, this pastoral war;
And let us, like Horace and Lydia, agree:
For thou art a girl as much brighter than her,
As he was a poet sublimer than me.
MATTHEW PRIOR, To Chloe Jealous.

HORSE

I—Horse: Apothegms

11 That man has the horse of Sejanus. (Ille homo habet equum Sejanum.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, ch. 9,

sec. 6. Referred to as a proverb, which originated from the misfortunes which befel the owners of a famous horse which had belonged originally to Gnæus Sejanus.

12 They are manifest asses, but you, good Leech, you are a horse of another colour.
R. H. BARHAM, Leech of Folkestone.

Farmer Gripper thinks we can live upon nothing, which is a horse of another colour.
C. H. SPURGEON, Ploughman's Pictures, 51.

13 A horse misused upon the road
Calls to Heaven for human blood.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence.

14 A true Philip, a lover of horses.
JOHN BROWN, Horæ Subsecivæ: Presence of Mind. A reference to the Greek meaning of Philip, or Phil-hippos.

15 The seat on a horse makes gentlemen of some and grooms of others.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43.

16 Ride not a free horse to death.
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71.

Spur a free horse, he'll run himself to death.
BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub, iii, 4.

A pair of good spurs to a borrowed horse is better than a peck of haver [oats].
GEORGE MERITON, Praise of Yorkshire Ale, 83.

LOOK NOT A GIFT HORSE IN THE MOUTH, see under GIFT.

17 Noblest of the train
That wait on man, the flight-performing horse.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. vi, l. 425.

18 'Orses and dorgs is some men's fancy. They're wittles and drink to me.
CHARLES DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 19.

19 I know the gall'd horse will soonest wince.
RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias.

There is a common saying that when a horse is rubbed on the gall, he will kick.
HUGH LATIMER, Sermon on St. Andrew's Day, 1552.

Let the galled jade wince, our withers are unwrung.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 253.

20 A good horse should be seldom spurred.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 156.

A good horse oft needs a good spur.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, 105.

It is the bridle and spur that makes a good horse.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3021.

21 Altogether upon the high horse.
DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence. Vol. i, p. 205.

1 O barbarous Men! your cruel breasts assuage;
Why vent ye on the generous steed your rage?

Does not his service earn your daily bread?
Your wives, your children, by his labours fed!
JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. ii, l. 233.

2 Yet if man, of all the Creator planned,
His noblest work is reckoned,
Of the works of His hand, by sea or by land,
The horse may at least rank second.
A. L. GORDON, Hippodromania. Pt. i, st. 3.

3 Good horses make short miles.
GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

4 A short horse is soon curried.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546);
JOHN FLETCHER, Valentinian. Act ii, sc. 1.

5 When the steed is stolen, shut the stable door.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. See also WISDOM: AFTER THE EVENT.

6 Folk call on the horse that will carry always.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

All lay the load on the willing horse.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 532.

7 Be wise in time, and turn loose the ageing horse, lest at the last he stumble amid jeers and break his wind. (Solve senescentem mature sanus equum, ne Peccet ad extremum ridendus et ilia ducat.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 8.

8 The ear of a bridled horse is in his mouth.
(Equi frenato est auris in ore.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 13.

9 A four white-foot horse is a horse for a fool;
A three white-foot horse is a horse for a king;
And if he hath but one, I'll give him to none.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, 13 (1659)

One white foot, buy a horse;
Two white feet, try a horse;
Three white feet, look well about him;
Four white feet, do without him.
UNKNOWN, Old Rhyme. (Notes and Queries.
Ser. 5, vol. vii, p. 64.)

10 Hast thou given the horse strength? hast thou clothed his neck with thunder?
Old Testament: Job, xxxix, 19.

11 They say Princes learn no art truly, but the art of horsemanship. The reason is, the brave beast is no flatterer. He will throw a Prince as soon as his groom.

BEN JONSON, Discoveries: Illiteratus Princeps.

12 Eaten up by horses. (Præda caballorum.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 193. By the expense of keeping horses.

13 Here were we fallen in a great question of the law, whether the grey mare may be the better horse or not.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Dialogue. Bk. ii, ch. 5.
(1528)

The grey mare is the better horse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546) Used by Butler, Fielding, Prior, Steele, and many others.

The vulgar proverb, that the grey mare is the better horse, originated, I suspect, in the preference generally given to the grey mares of Flanders over the finest coach horses of England.

MACAULAY, History of England. Bk. i, ch. 3, note.

14 The valiant horse races best, at the barrier's fall, when he has others to follow and o'er-pass. (Tum bene fortis equus reserato car-cere currit, Cum quos prætereat, quosque sequatur, habet.)

OVID, Ars Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 595.

Competition makes a horse-race.
OVID, Ars Amatoria, iii, 595. (Young, tr.)

The spirited horse, which will of its own accord strive to win the race, will run still more swiftly
if encouraged.

OVID, Epistulæ ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 21.

15 You have set spurs to a willing horse. (Ad-didisti calcaria sponte currenti.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 8.

16 An horse is a vain thing for safety.
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxiii, 17.

17 Who wishes to travel far spares his steed.
(Qui veut voyager loin ménage sa monture.)
RACINE, Les Plaideurs. Act i, sc. 1.

18 The blind horse is hardiest.
JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish.

The blind horse is fittest for the mill.
THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Maid's Last Prayer. Act
iii, sc. 1.

19 Woe worth the chase, woe worth the day,
That costs thy life, my gallant grey.
SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto i, st. 9

Dear to me is my bonny white steed;
Oft has he helped me at pinch of need.
SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto
iv, st. 10.

20 Spur not an unbroken horse.
SCOTT, The Monastery. Ch. 25.

21 O for a horse with wings!
SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 49

Give me another horse: bind up my wounds.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 3, l. 177

A horse! a horse! my kingdom for a horse!
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III. Act v, sc. 4, l. 7.

Villain, a horse—

Villain, I say, give me a horse to fly,
To swim the river, villain, and to fly.

GEORGE PEELE, Battle of Alcazar. Act v, l. 104.

1 I wish your horses swift and sure of foot;
And so I do command you to their backs.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 39.

2 He doth nothing but talk of his horse.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act i,
sc. 2, l. 44.

Whose only fit companion is his horse.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 412.

Whose laughs are hearty, tho' his jests are coarse,
And loves you best of all things—but his horse.

POPE, *Epistle to Mrs. Teresa Blount on Her
Leaving Town*, l. 29.

He will hold thee, when his passion shall have spent its novel force,

Something better than his dog, a little dearer than his horse.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 49.

3 Go anywhere in England where there are natural, wholesome, contented, and really nice English people; and what do you always find? That the stables are the real centre of the household.

BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii.

4 It is a good horse that never stumbles.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 10.

5 A horse thou knowest, a man thou dost not know.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 453.

6 Trust not the horse, ye Trojans. (Equo ne credite, Teucri.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. ii, l. 48. Referring to the wooden horse, by which the Greeks got into Troy.

7 And the hoofs of the horses as they run shake the crumbling field. (Quadrupedumque putrem cursu quatit ungula campum.)

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. xi, l. 875. A famous example of onomatopœia.

8 There is no good horse of a bad color.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler. Pt. i, ch. 5. Quoted as a proverb.

9 Who is he that may water the horse and not drink himself?

UNKNOWN, Old English Homilies. Ser. i, p. 9.
(c. 1175.)

A man may lead a horse to the water, but he'll choose to drink.

UNKNOWN, Jack Drum. Act i. (1616)

A man may well bring a horse to the water,
But he cannot make him drink without he will.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

One man may lead a horse to the water, but twenty cannot make him drink.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (HILL, Boswell, i, 427.)

II—Horse: Descriptions

10 This horse was of extraordinary size, with a lofty neck, bay in color, with a thick, glossy mane; but that same horse was of such a fate or fortune that whoever possessed it came to utter ruin, as well as his whole house and all his possessions.

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticæ. Bk. iii, ch. 9,
sec. 3.

11 Cob was the strongest, Mob was the wrongest, Chittabob's tail was the finest and longest!

R. H. BARHAM, The Truants.

12 She was iron-sinew'd and satin-skin'd,
Ribb'd like a drum and limb'd like a deer,
Fierce as the fire and fleet as the wind—
There was nothing she couldn't climb or clear.

ADAM LINDSAY GORDON, The Romance of Britomarte. St. 6.

13 Gamarra is a dainty steed,
Strong, black, and of a noble breed,
Full of fire, and full of bone,
With all his line of fathers known;
Fine his nose, his nostrils thin,
But blown abroad by the pride within!
His mane is like a river flowing,
And his eyes like embers glowing
In the darkness of the night,
And his pace as swift as light.

BRYAN WALLER PROCTER, The Blood Horse.

14 Hurrah, hurrah for Sheridan!
Hurrah, hurrah for horse and man!
And when their statues are placed on high,
Under the dome of the Union sky,—
The American soldier's Temple of Fame,—
There with the glorious General's name
Be it said in letters both bold and bright:
"Here is the steed that saved the day
By carrying Sheridan into the fight,
From Winchester,—twenty miles away!"

THOMAS BUCHANAN READ, Sheridan's Ride.

15 I will not change my horse with any that treads but on four pasterns. Ça, ha! he bounds from the earth, as if his entrails were hairs, le cheval volant, the Pegasus, chez les narines de feu! When I bestride him, I soar, I am a hawk: he trots the air; the earth sings when he touches it; the basest horn of his hoof is more musical than the pipe of Hermes. . . .
He is pure air and fire . . . the prince of palfreys; his neigh is like the bidding of a monarch and his countenance enforces homage.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 11.

It is a most absolute and excellent horse.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 28.

1 Round-hoof'd, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,

Broad breast, full eye, small head and nostril wide,

High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,

Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:

Look, what a horse should have he did not lack,

Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

SHAKESPEARE, Venus and Adonis, l. 295.

2 I saw them go; one horse was blind,

The tails of both hung down behind,

Their shoes were on their feet.

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, The Baby's Début.

Parody of Wordsworth.

3 Steeds decked with purple and with tapestry,
With golden harness hanging from their necks,

Champing their yellow bits, all clothed in gold.

VERGIL, Æneid. Bk. vii, l. 277. Describing the gifts sent by King Latinus to Æneas.

4 His neck is high and erect, his head replete with intelligence, his belly short, his back full, and his proud chest swells with hard muscle. (Ardua cervix, Argumtumque caput, brevis alvos, obesaque terga, Luxuriatque toris animosum pectus.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iii, l. 79.

HORSEMANSHIP

5 Men will keep going on their nerve or their head,

But you cannot ride a horse when he's dead.

LEONARD BACON, Colorado Morton's Ride.

6 So that his horse, or charger, hunter, hack,
Knew that he had a rider on his back.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 32.

7 A canter is the cure for every evil.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. ii, ch. 11.

8 If you ride a horse, sit close and tight,
If you ride a man, sit easy and light.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1734.

9 A jolly wight there was, that rode
Upon a sorry mare.

THOMAS HOOD, The Epping Hunt.

10 A horseman better than Bellerophon himself.
(Eques ipso melior Bellerophonte.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 12, l. 7. Bellerophon was the rider of Pegasus.

11

The driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously.

Old Testament: II Kings, ix, 20. Hence "Jehu" for a fast driver; used especially of drivers of hansom cabs and other public vehicles.

I like, my dear Lord, the road you are travelling, but I don't like the pace you are driving; too similar to that of the son of Nimshi. I always feel myself inclined to cry out, Gently, John—gently down hill. Put on the drag.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to Lord John Russell.

Spark the lash, my boy, and hold the reins more firmly! (Parce, puer, stimulus, et fortius utere loris!)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 127.

12 Lord Ronald said nothing; he flung himself from the room, flung himself upon his horse and rode madly off in all directions.

STEPHEN LEACOCK, Nonsense Novels: Gertrude the Governess.

13

He grew unto his seat;

And to such wondrous doing brought his horse,

As he had been incorpsed and demi-natured
With the brave beast.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act iv, sc. 7, l. 86.

I saw young Harry, with his beaver on,
His cuisses on his thighs, gallantly arm'd,
Rise from the ground like feather'd Mercury,
And vaulted with such ease into his seat
As if an angel dropp'd down from the clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegasus
And witch the world with noble horsemanship.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act iv, sc. 1, l. 104.

Well could he ride, and often men would say
"That horse his mettle from his rider takes."

SHAKESPEARE, A Lover's Complaint, l. 106.

14

A rider unequalled—a sportsman complete,
A rum one to follow, a bad one to beat.

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, Hunting Song.

I—Hospitality: Apothegms

15

The merry, but unlook'd for guest,
Full often proves to be the best.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax's Tour in Search of Consolation. Canto xxix.

16

Hospitality consists in a little fire, a little food, and an immense quiet.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1856.

For whom he means to make an often guest,
One dish shall serve; and welcome make the rest.

JOSEPH HALL, Come Dine with Me.

1
Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unaware.

2
'Tis equal wrong if a man speed on a guest who is loath to go, and if he keep back one that is eager to be gone. One should make welcome the present guest, and send forth him that would go.

(Ἴσον τοι κακὸν ἔσθ', ὅς τ' οὐκ ἐθέλοντα νέεσθαι ξείνον ἐποτρύνει καὶ ὃς ἐσσύμενον κατερύκει.
χρὴ ξείνον παρεόντα φιλεῖν, ἐθέλοντα δὲ πέμπειν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 72.

Alike he thwarts the hospitable end
Who drives the free, or stays the hasty friend:
True friendship's laws are by this rule express'd,
Welcome the coming, speed the parting guest.

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 81. (Pope, tr.)

For I, who hold sage Homer's rule the best,
Welcome the coming, speed the going guest.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Satires. Bk. ii,
sat. 2, l. 159.

To the guests that must go, bid God's speed and brush away all traces of their steps.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE, The Gardener. No. 45.

3 Wherever the storm carries me, I go a willing guest. (Quo me cumque rapit tempestas, deferor hospes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 15.

As drives the storm, at any door I knock,
And house with Montaigne now, or now with Locke.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, i, 1, 25.

4
There is room for several uninvited guests.
(Locus est et pluribus umbris.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5, l. 28. The "umbræ" were the uninvited guests who came with a man of high station.

Unbidden guests

Are often welcomest when they are gone.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry VI. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 55.

5
A host is like a general: mishaps oft reveal his genius. (Sed convivoris, uti ducis, in-genium res adversæ nudare solent.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73.

6
As welcome as flowers in May.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters. Bk. i, No. 60. (1645)

You are as welcome as the flowers in May.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 8.

7
In good company you need not ask who is the master of the feast. The man who sits in the lowest place, and who is always industrious in helping every one, is certainly the man.

DAVID HUME, Essays: Rise and Progress of Arts.

Sometimes, when guests have gone, the host remembers

Sweet courteous things unsaid.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Faithful.

8
Oh that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of wayfaring men!

Old Testament: Jeremiah, ix, 2.

HOUSE BY THE SIDE OF THE ROAD, see under PHILANTHROPY.

It is more disgraceful to turn out a guest than not to admit him. (Turpius ejicitur, quam non admittitur hospes.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 6, l. 13.

10
Given to hospitality.

New Testament: Romans, xii, 13.

A lover of hospitality, a lover of good men, sober,
just, holy, temperate.

New Testament: Titus, i, 8.

He kept no Christmas-house for once a year,
Each day his boards were fill'd with Lordly fare:
He fed a rout of yeomen with his cheer,
Nor was his bread and beef kept in with care;
His wine and beer to strangers were not spare,
And yet beside to all that hunger grieved,
His gates were ope, and they were there relieved.

ROBERT GREENE, A Maiden's Dream, l. 232.

11
No guest is so welcome that he will not become a nuisance after three days in a friend's house. (Nam hospes nullus tam in amici hospitium devorti potest, Quin, ubi triduum continuum fuerit, jam odiosus siet.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 741. (Act iii, sc.
1.)

The first day a man is a guest, the second a burden, the third a pest.

LABOULAYE, Abdallah. Ch. 9.

Fish and guests in three days are stale.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues, p. 307. (1580)

Like some poor nigh-related guest,
That may not rudely be dismissed;
He hath out-stayed his welcome while,
And tells the jest without the smile.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Youth and Age.

12
My master is of churlish disposition
And little recks to find the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 80.

13
I am your host;
With robbers' hands my hospitable favours
You should not ruffle thus.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 7, l. 39.

Reward not hospitality
With such black payment as thou hast pretended.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 575.

14
Bear Welcome in your eye,
Your hand, your tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act i, sc. 5, l. 65.

Be bright and jovial among your guests to-night.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 28.

You do not give the cheer: the feast is sold
That is not often vouch'd, while 'tis a-making,
'Tis given with welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 4, l. 33.

See, your guests approach:

Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 52.

A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece, l. 1125.

<sup>1</sup> Macbeth: Here's our chief guest.

Lady Macbeth: If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 11.

His worth is warrant for his welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona.
Act ii, sc. 4, l. 102.

<sup>2</sup> Hospitality sitting with Gladness.

TEGNÉR, BISHOP OF WEXIÖ, Fritiof's Saga. Pt.
i. (Longfellow, tr.)

II—Hospitality: Its Praise

<sup>3</sup> Stay is a charming word in a friend's vocabulary.

A. B. ALCOTT, Concord Days: June.

The courteous host, and all-approving guest.

BYRON, Lara. Canto i, st. 29.

<sup>4</sup> When friends are at your hearthside met,
Sweet courtesy has done its most
If you have made each guest forget
That he himself is not the host.

T. B. ALDRICH, Hospitality.

If my best wines mislike thy taste,
And my best service win thy frown,
Then tarry not, I bid thee haste;
There's many another Inn in town.

T. B. ALDRICH, Quits.

<sup>5</sup> Come in the evening, or come in the morning, Come when you're looked for, or come without warning,

Kisses and welcome you'll find here before
you,

And the oftener you come here the more I'll adore you.

THOMAS O. DAVIS, The Welcome.

There's an organ in the parlor, to give the house
a tone,

And you're welcome every evening at Maggie
Murphy's home.

EDWARD HARRIGAN, Maggie Murphy's Home.
The song hit of Reilly and the 400, which opened at Harrigan and Hart's Theatre, December, 1890.

<sup>6</sup> "God save all here!" my comrade cries,
And rattles on the raised latch-pin;

"God save you kindly!" quick replies
A clear sweet voice, and asks us in.

SAMUEL FERGUSON, The Pretty Girl of Loch Dan.

<sup>7</sup> Hail Guest! We ask not what thou art:
If Friend, we greet thee, hand and heart;
If Stranger, such no longer be;
If Foe, our love shall conquer thee.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Old Welsh Door Verse.

<sup>8</sup> A stone jug and a pewter mug,
And a table set for three!
A jug and a mug at every place,
And a biscuit or two with Brie!
Three stone jugs of Cruiskeen Lawn,
And a cheese like crusted foam!
The Kavanagh receives to-night!
McMurrough is at home!

RICHARD HOVEY, The Kavanagh.

For 't is always fair weather
When good fellows get together
With a stein on the table and a good song ringing clear.

RICHARD HOVEY, Spring.

<sup>9</sup> So saying, with despatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hospitable thoughts intent.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. v, l. 331.

<sup>10</sup> A hundred thousand welcomes: I could weep,
And I could laugh; I am light and heavy:
Welcome.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 200.

Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all: . . . he would have all as merry
As first good company, good wine, good welcome
Can make good people.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII. Act i, sc. 4, l. 1.

Sir, you are very welcome to our house:
It must appear in other ways than words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesy.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act v,
sc. 1, l. 139.

From heart of very heart, great Hector, welcome!
SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida. Act iv, sc.
5, l. 171.

<sup>11</sup> I charge thee, invite them all: let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens. Act iii, sc. 4,
l. 118.

<sup>12</sup> You maust come home with me and be my guest;

You will give joy to me, and I will do
All that is in my power to honour you.

SHELLEY, Hymn to Mercury. St. 5.

<sup>13</sup> The lintel low enough to keep out pomp and
pride;

The threshold high enough to turn deceit
aside;

The doorband strong enough from robbers to defend;

This door will open at a touch to welcome every friend.

HENRY VAN DYKE, Inscription for a Friend's House.

<sup>1</sup>
A genial hearth, a hospitable board,
And a refined rusticity.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. iii, No. 18.

All losses; and although it could not heal
All griefs, yet laid them for awhile to rest.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, Roderick. Pt. xviii, l. 39.

<sup>18</sup>
Let each as likes him best his hours employ.

THOMSON, Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 28.

1 Six hours to sleep, as many to righteous law;
Four to your prayers, and two to fill your
maw;

The rest bestow upon the sacred Muses.
(Sex horas somno, totidem des legibus æquis,
Quatuor orabis, des epulisque duas;
Quod superest ultra sacris largire Camoenis.)

UNKNOWN. These "ancient verses" were introduced by Sir Edward Coke into his In- stitutes of the Laws of England. Bk. ii, ch.
1, sec. 85.

Six hours in sleep, in law's grave study six,
Four spend in prayer, the rest on nature fix.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Paraphrase, of the "ancient verses" given above.

Seven hours to law, to soothing slumber seven,
Ten to the world allot, and all to heaven.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, An Ode in Imitation of Alceus. (See TEIGNMOUTH, Memoirs of the Life of Sir William Jones, p. 251.)

Six hours in sleep is enough for youth and age;
Seven for the lazy, but eight are allowed to none.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum.

9 He that hath no house must lie in a yard.

JOHN LYL, Endymion, iv, 2. (1591)

10 And the rain descended, and the floods came,
and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 25.

And the rain descended, and the floods came,
and the winds blew, and beat upon that house;
and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 27.

11 A house built by the wayside is either too high or too low.

JOHN RAX, English Proverbs, 106. (1670)

12 He that has a house to put 's head in has a good head-piece.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 25.

13 You take my house when you do take the prop
That doth sustain my house; you take my life
When you do take the means whereby I live.

14 Like a fair house, built on another man's ground.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor.
Act ii, sc. 2, l. 224.

II—House: My House Is My Castle

15 No outward doors of a man's house can in general be broken open to execute any civil process; though in criminal cases the public safety supersedes the private.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England. Vol. iv, p. 108. (ed.
1880)

16 My whinstone house my castle is,
I have my own four walls.

CARLYLE, My Own Four Walls.

17 The house is a castle which the King cannot enter.

EMERSON, English Traits: Wealth.

1 Public laws favor the privacies of a house.
(Jura publica favent privata domus.)

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. (1546) Heywood comments, "This is a kind of Law Proverb."

2 I in my own house am an emperor,
And will defend what's mine.

MASSINGER, The Roman Actor. Act i, sc. 2.

3 The poorest man may in his cottage bid defiance to all the force of the Crown. It may be frail, its roof may shake; the wind may blow through it; the storms may enter, the rain may enter,—but the King of England cannot enter; all his forces dare not cross the threshold of the ruined tenement!

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, on the Excise Bill.

I think some orator said that though the winds of heaven might whistle around an Englishman's cottage, the King of England could not.

JOHN J. INGALLS, Speech, U. S. Senate. 10 May, 1880.

4 My house is to me as my castle, since the law has not the art to destroy it. (Ma meason est a moy come mon castel, hors de quel le ley ne moy arta a fuer.)

SIR WILLIAM STAUNFORD, Plees del Coron. (1567)

Our law calleth a man's house his castle, meaning that he may defend himself therein.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, Eirenarcha. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1581)

His house . . . is his castle.

JOHN MANNINGHAM, Diary, 21. (1602)

The house of every one is to him his castle and fortress, as well for his defence against injury and violence, as for his repose.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Semayne's Case, 1605. (3 Rep. 186.)

A man's house is his castle.

SIR EDWARD COKE, Institutes. Pt. iii, p. 162.

My lodging, as long as I rent it, is my castle.

DRYDEN, Wild Gallant. Act i, sc. 1. (1663)

Masters of families are much favoured in our law, for their houses are termed their castles.

DUDLEY NORTH, Observation and Advice, 72. (1669)

My house is my castle, gentlemen, and nobody must offer violence here.

ARTHUR MURPHY, School for Guardians. Act iii, sc. 5. (1767)

Mrs. MacStinger immediately demanded whether an Englishwoman's house was her castle or not.

17 Humble things become the humble. (Parvum parva decent.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 44.

18 God hath sworn to lift on high
Who sinks himself by true humility.

JOHN KEELE, At Hooker's Tomb.

19 Humble because of knowledge, mighty by sacrifice.

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Islanders.

20 Humility is often only a pretended submission, an artifice of pride, which abases itself in order to exalt itself. (L'humilité n'est souvent qu'une feinte soumission, . . . un artifice de l'orgueil qui s'abaisse pour s'élever.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 254. See also PRIDE: APOTHEGMS.

Humility is the altar upon which God wishes us to offer him sacrifices. (L'humilité est l'autel sur lequel Dieu veut qu'on lui offre des sacrifices.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posthumes. No. 537.

1 Whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.
New Testament: Luke, xiv, 11; Matthew, xxiii, 12.

2 Courage, brother! do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble,
Trust in God and do the Right.

NORMAN MACLEOD, Trust in God.

3 Whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 39; Luke, vi, 29.

Wisdom has taught us to be calm and meek,
To take one blow, and turn the other cheek;
It is not written what a man shall do,
If the rude caitiff smite the other too!

O. W. HOLMES, Non-Resistance.

Turning the other cheek is a kind of moral jiu-jitsu.

GERALD STANLEY LEE, Crowds. Bk. iv, ch. 9.

4 No man will learn anything at all,
Unless he first will learn humility.

OWEN MEREDITH, Vanini, l. 328.

5 Nearest the throne itself must be
The footstool of humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

Fairest and best adorned is she
Whose clothing is humility.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Humility.

Humility, that low, sweet root,
From which all heavenly virtues shoot.

THOMAS MOORE, Loves of the Angels: Third Angel's Story.

6 No more lessen or dissemble thy merit, than overrate it; for though humility be a virtue, an affected one is not.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude.

Humility is to make a right estimate of one's self. It is no humility for a man to think less of himself than he ought, though it might rather puzzle him to do that.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings Among the Sheaves: Humility.

7 Let not this weak unknowing hand

Presume thy bolts to throw,
And deal damnation round the land
On each I judge thy foe.

If I am right, thy grace impart
Still in the right to stay;
If I am wrong, oh teach my heart
To find that better way!

POPE, Universal Prayer. Sts. 7, 8.

8 She should be humble, who would please,
And she must suffer, who can love.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Chloe Jealous. St. 5.

9 There is no humiliation for humility.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest. Pt. iv, No. 5.

10 Humility is a virtue all men preach, none practise, and yet everybody is content to hear. The master thinks it good doctrine for his servants, the laity for the clergy, and the clergy for the laity.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Humility.

11 And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well. Act i, sc. 2, l. 43.

As if Olympus to a molehill should
In supplication nod.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus. Act v, sc. 3, v, 3, l. 30.

12 In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V. Act iii, sc. 1, l. 3.

An humble gait.

13 The virtuous man,
Who, great in his humility, as kings
Are little in their grandeur.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 150.

14 The higher a man is in grace, the lower he will be in his own esteem.

C. H. SPURGEON, Gleanings Among the Sheaves: The Right Estimate.

15 True humility,
The highest virtue, mother of them all.

TENNYSON, The Holy Grail, l. 445.

16 Make way for your betters. (Da locum melioribus.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 522.

17 Humble thyself in all things. (Humilia te in omnibus.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iii, ch. 24.

1 Humility like darkness reveals the heavenly lights.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion.

2 The lowly heart doth win the love of all.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, To Piero: Of Pride.

3 A fault which humbles a man is of more use to him than a good action which puffs him up.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety.

4 Rather to bow than break is profitable; Humility is a thing commendable.

UNKNOWN, The Moral Proverbs of Cristyne, translated from the French by Richard Woodville, Earl Rivers. (1390)

5 To kiss the rod.

UNKNOWN, Roman de Renart. (c. 1200) (William Caxton, tr.)

HUMMINGBIRD

6 And all it lends to the eye is this—
A sunbeam giving the air a kiss.

HARRY KEMP, The Hummingbird.

7 Jewelled coryphée
With quivering wings like shielding gauze outspread.
